A custom of the city of London, that no person not being free may sell or put to sale any wares within the city or liberties by retail, or keep any shop or other place for show, sale, or putting to sale, of wares by retail, or for use of any art, trade, or mystery, within the city, liberties, or suburbs, is sufficient ground for a by-law forbidding any non-freeman to show, sell, or put to sale wares by retail within the city, liberties, or suburbs, or to use any art, trade, or mystery within the same. Clarke v. Denton, 1 B. & Ad. 92; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 333.

Where a municipal council had power to make by-laws for regulating and governing hawkers, a by-law prohibiting hawkers from plying their trade at all in part of the city was ultra vires. Toronto Corporation v. Virgo, 73 L. T. 449—P. C.

—— Closing Cemetery.] — A by-law of a municipal council in New South Wales, empowered to make by-laws for regulating the interment of the dead, prohibiting interment altogether in a particular cemetery is not ultra vires because it takes away from owners of burial places therein the only use of their property. Slattery v. Naylor, 57 L. J., P. C. 73; 13 App. Cas. 446; 59 L. T. 41; 36 W. R. 897.

—— Betting in Streets.]—A by-law made by a borough council, that any person who shall frequent or use any street or other public place for the purpose of bookmaking and betting shall be liable to a penalty, is not ultra vires, being aimed at persons standing on the pavement with books in their hands lying in wait for customers, and it has no application to a person happening to be in the street and casually making a bet. Strickland v. Hayes (65 L. J., M. C. 55; [1896] 1 Q. B. 290) commented on. Burnett v. Berry, 65 L. J., M. C. 118; [1896] 1 Q. B. 641; 74 L. T. 494; 44 W. R. 512; 60 J. P. 375; 18 Cox, C. C. 325.

The power of a borough council to make by-laws under section 23 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, is not wholly restricted to offences for which a summary method of punishment already exists. Ib.

—— Roundabouts, &c., on Land adjoining Street or Public Place.]—A by-law made under s. 23 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, providing that "no person shall, to the annoyance or disturbance of residents or passengers, keep or manage a shooting gallery, swingboat, roundabout, or other like thing, in any street or public place, or on land adjoining or near to such street or public place, provided always that this by-law shall not apply to any fair lawfully held," is not bad by reason that it extends to land adjoining or near to a street or public place. Teale v. Harris, 60 J. P. 744.

—— Erection of Booths.]—A by-law of a borough, which provides that no person shall erect any booth, or place any caravan for the purpose of any show or public entertainment in any public place within the borough, without the licence of the mayor, and that any such licence given at any other time than fair-time should be revoked by the mayor, if three inhabitant householders, residing within one hundred yards of the place for which it was granted, should memorialise the mayor to revoke it, is an unreasonable by-law, and therefore bad. Elwood v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383; 13 L. J., Q. B. 330; 8 Jur. 1044.

—— Against Keeping Swine.]—A by-law, made by a town council, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 90, imposing a fine upon every person "who shall keep, or suffer to be kept, any swine within the borough from the 1st day of May to the 31st day of October inclusive in any year," is a bad by-law. Everett v. Grapes, 3 L. T. 669.

—— Ordinance of Burgesses — Pecuniary Benefits.]—An act of parliament passed for dividing and inclosing open lands in a borough over which a corporation immemorially exercised the sole right of pasturage, enacted that those lands should be divided between and allotted to the lord of the manor and the corporation, and that the corporation should have power to make leases of their allotments, as the burgesses in common hall assembled should think proper. A rule, order or ordinance of the burgesses in common hall assembled, ordered that no lease should be made to one burgess of more than fifty or less than five acres; and it being the desire and opinion of the burgesses that every burgess residing within the borough should receive a benefit from the inclosure, it was further ordered that the rents arising from the inclosure should be paid and distributed yearly, by the common attorneys of the borough, among twelve senior burgesses residing within the borough, and that no burgess who should take a lease should be entitled to receive any of these rents:—Held, that the ordinance was a valid by-law, and that an action was maintainable on it at common law by the parties to whom pecuniary benefits were granted by it. Swansea Corporation v. Hopkins, 8 M. & W. 901—Ex. Ch. Affirming 8 L. J., Ex. 121.

Against Exposing for Sale Provisions unfit for Food.]—By the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 90, it is lawful for the council of a borough to make by-laws for the prevention and suppression of all such nuisances as are not already punishable in a summary manner by virtue of any act in force in such borough. A town council of a borough made a by-law, "that if any butcher or dealer in meat, or any fishmonger, poulterer or other person, shall expose or offer for sale on his premises, or have in his possession with intent to sell or expose for sale, any meat, fish, poultry, or other victuals or provisions unfit for the food of man, he shall be subject to a penalty, to be recovered before justices, who shall decide on the unfitness." A grocer exposed for sale on his premises cheese which the justices held was unfit for food, and convicted him accordingly: — Held, that to expose for sale, or to have possession of with intent to sell, things unfit for food, was a nuisance at common law, that consequently the by-law was within the powers of s. 90, and that the grocer was within the by-law. Shillito v. Thompson, 45 L. J., M. C. 18; 1 Q. B. D. 12; 33 L. T. 506; 24 W. R. 57.

—— Enlarging or Limiting Class from which Officers chosen.]—A by-law, enlarging or limiting the class of persons from whom a corporate officer is to be selected beyond the number or class described by the charter, is bad. Rex v. Barnstead, 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321; 2 B. & Ad. 699; Tucker v. Rex, 2 Bro. P. C. 304; Lee v. Wallis, 1 Ld. Ken. 292.

—— Limiting Electoral Body.]—See Vol. vi., ELECTION LAW, B. Municipal, col. 158.

—— Limiting Number of Attorneys of Sheriff's Court.]—In a city which was incorporated before time of memory, there had been a court from very ancient times, held first before the mayor and bailiffs, and, after a charter of Richard 2, before the mayor and sheriffs. By a by-law made in 3 & 4 Philip and Mary, by a select body of the corporation, who had immemorially made rules and regulations as to the practice of the court, and who had, at their discretion, selected the persons admitted to practise as attorneys there, it was ordered, that thenceforth there should be no more than four persons admitted to be attorneys of the sheriff's court; and from that time it did not appear that any more than that number had ever been allowed to practise:—Held, that the by-law was reasonable. Rex v. York (Sheriffs), 3 B. & Ad. 770; 1 L. J., K. B. 211.

Against Temporary Obstructions — What Erections not within.]—Under a by-law made in pursuance of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 90, the causing of a temporary obstruction in the streets was made punishable by fine. A. was convicted under this by-law for erecting a front to his house which encroached upon the footway. A case, stated by consent of the parties, found that this erection was substantially built, and formed the front of A.'s house, but submitted the question to the court:—Held, that, the offence not being within the by-law, the conviction must be quashed. Reg. v. Dickenson, 7 El. & Bl. 831; 26 L. J., M. C. 204; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1076; 5 W. R. 654.

Sufficient Compliance with.]—Though a by-law of a corporation required an indenture of apprenticesh p to be inrolled; yet, if it had been exhibited to the town clerk, who marked it as being inrolled, it was sufficient, notwithstanding it was not inrolled in the corporation books Rex v. Cambridge, 2 Chit. 144.

Evidence of Breach — Annoyance of Inhabitants.]—In a prosecution under a by-law which prohibits any person from making a violent noise in the streets to the annoyance of the inhabitants, it is sufficient to prove that one inhabitant has been annoyed. Innes v. Newman, 63 L. J., M. C. 198; [1894] 2 Q. B. 292; 10 R. 348; 70 L. T. 689; 42 W. R. 573.

Mandamus.]—In the absence of any precedent, the court refused a rule nisi for a mandamus calling on the mayor of a town to propose a resolution to the burgesses in guild assembled, for repealing certain by-laws, though it was alleged that by-laws and ordinances might by charter be made, and had formerly been made at such guilds Garrett v. Newcastle, 3 B. & Ad. 252.

—— "Shall be Lawful"—Optional.]—The words "shall be lawful," when found in the by-laws of a corporation, are not to be construed as obligatory. Therefore, where a by-law ordained that under certain circumstances it should be lawful for bailiffs to admit to the freedom of the town certain persons:—Held, that this by-law was only optional, and that the admission of such persons to the freedom of the borough could not be enforced by a mandamus. Rex v. Eye, 2 D. & R. 172; 1 B. & C. 85; 4 B. & Ald. 271.

As to the Right of Free Trading in Boroughs, notwithstanding any By-Law.]—See 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 247.

XI. BOROUGH BOUNDARIES.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 228, 229.

Liability to Repair.]—A borough incorporated by charter with a non-intromittent clause was enlarged under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 35, and 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 7, by the addition of a parish in the same county, containing a bridge which until that time that county had repaired. There was no evidence that the borough had been used to maintain any bridges:—Held, that the transfer of the new district did not render the borough liable to repair the bridge. Reg. v. New Sarum Borough, 7 Q. B. 941; 2 New Sess. Cas. 133; 15 L. J., M. C. 15; 10 Jur. 176.

Effect of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 103.]—By a charter of Edw. 3, the men of the villa of Coventry, tenants of the queen mother of the manor of Chilesmore, in Coventry, were incorporated. The corporation consisted of the mayor, bailiffs, and men or commonalty of the villa of Coventry. By that and subsequent charters (some of the king, some of Isabel, the queeen of Edward 3, and others of the Black Prince), various franchises within the villa of Coventry, and throughout the view of frankpledge of the manor of Chilesmore and elsewhere, were granted to the mayor and bailiffs of Coventry. By a charter of Hen. 6, the villa of Coventry, with Radford, Keresley and other specified places, were made into a distinct county, called the county of the city of Coventry. By a charter of Jac. 1, regulating the government of the corporation, the aldermen of Coventry were made justices of the peace of the county of the city. There were ten aldermen of Coventry, being one alderman for each of ten wards; and the limits of the wards did not appear far to exceed the continuous lines of streets and houses, popularly known as the city of Coventry:—Held, that, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 103, places being within the county of the city of Coventry, and through which the mayor and bailiffs of Coventry had a coroner, and other franchises, under the above charters, but being beyond the lines of such streets and houses, and not within any of the wards of Coventry, were not part of the city of Coventry. Coventry Corporation v. Lythall, 10 M. & W. 773; 12 L. J., Ex. 409.

Under previous Statutes.]—In boroughs, the limits of which for the purposes of parliamentary representation have been fixed by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 35, Schedule O., and which are included in the 1st section of Schedules A. and B. to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 7, all places within the limits so fixed are, by s. 8 of the latter act, parts of the borough for all purposes; and an ancient borough market may be lawfully held within such limits, although outside the limits of the old municipal borough. Dorchester Corporation v. Ensor, 39 L. J., Ex. 11; L. R. 4 Ex. 335.

XII. BOROUGH PRISONS.

County Gaol—Expenses.]—A borough sending its prisoners to the county gaol, without any special contract, is liable under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 18, to pay a proportion of the expenses of the enlargement of the prison necessary in order to conform to the requirements of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126. Reg. v. Wigan Corporation, 39 L. J., M. C. 68; L. R. 5 Q. B. 267; 21 L. T. 715; 18 W. R. 455.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 18, where no special contract shall be subsisting between the borough and county relative to the prisoners sent from the borough to the county prison, the borough shall pay to the county a proportionate share of the expenses of the conveyance, transport and maintenance of such prisoners, including therein repairs, alterations and additions to the prison. This provision refers to special contracts made, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 85, between the magistrates of boroughs and of counties for the support and maintenance of borough prisoners in county gaols. Reg. v. New Sarum Corporation, 2 El. & Bl. 654; 22 L. J., M. C. 155; 17 Jur. 934.

—— Borough Prisoners.]—Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 114, the treasurer of a county may make an order upon the council of a borough, having a separate court of quarter sessions, for the costs arising out of the punishment and maintenance of offenders committed for trial to the county assizes from the borough:—Held, that this clause applied to prisoners committed, in the first instance, to the borough gaol before trial, and, after trial at the assizes, committed to the county prison in execution of their sentences: and that the council was liable, although there was no contract in force, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 85, between the county and borough justices for the maintenance of such prisoners:—Held, also, that the council was made liable not only for the expenses of food, clothing and punishment of such prisoners, but for a proportionate share of the general expenses of the county gaol. Reg. v. Johnson, 2 P. & D. 610; 10 A. & E. 740; 8 L. J., M. C. 99.

—— 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 18—Special Contracts.]—The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 18, which enacts that where no special contract shall be subsisting between the borough and county relative to the prisoners sent from the borough to the county prison, the borough shall pay to the county a proportionate share of the expenses of the conveyance, transport and maintenance of such prisoners, including therein repairs, alterations and additions to the prison, refers to special contracts made under the 5 Geo. 4, c. 85. Bramston v. Colchester Corporation, 6 El. & Bl. 246; 25 L. J., M. C. 73; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 809; 4 W. R. 491.

The council of a borough having a grant of a separate court of quarter sessions, and having no gaol, entered into a contract with the county, that all prisoners who should be committed, or removed to, or confined in, the gaol of the county from the borough, should be supported and maintained therein during the agreement, at 7*s.* a head:—Held, that the agreement, while in force, exempted the borough from contribution to the county in respect of those things contracted for, but no further; that the words support and maintenance, used in the contract, included the expenses of keeping up the prison, and the borough was not liable to contribute in respect of those, but that the borough was liable to contribute in respect of the expenses of the conveyance of prisoners upon summary convictions, in respect of offences committed in the borough (but none other), and of prosecutions at assizes and sessions of borough offenders, and of lock-up houses for the county. Reg. v. Gravesend Borough Council, 5 El. & Bl. 459; 24 L. J., M. C. 141; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 878.

XIII. MUSEUMS AND LIBRARIES.

Establishment of.]—In 1864, a municipal corporation, as local board of health, purchased under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 74, a piece of land of about ten acres to be added to a public garden of fifteen acres. In 1875 the corporation determined to appropriate about a quarter of an acre at one extremity of this piece of land as a site for the erection of town buildings, and of a museum, public library and school of art, and conservatory:—Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that no portion of the land could be appropriated for any of these objects, except the museum and conservatory. But held, on appeal, that the erection of a free library was also allowable, as being conducive to the better enjoyment of the public walks and grounds as such. Att.-Gen. v. Sunderland Corporation, 45 L. J., Ch. 839; 2 Ch. D. 634; 34 L. T. 921; 24 W. R. 991.

B. CORPORATIONS GENERALLY.

I. CHARTER.

See also cases ante, A. II. (col. 570.)

Prescription presumes a charter. Anon., Lofft, 556.

Power to Bind Members.]—Although the charter of the Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Company may be inadequate to bind all the tobacco-pipe makers in the kingdom, it is sufficient to bind such of them as become members of the corporate company. Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Co. v. Woodroffe, 7 B. & C. 838; 5 D. & R. 530; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 301.

Power to Exclude Part.]—A corporation has no power to exclude an integral part of the body, where a charter gives them a right of election. Rex v. Head, 4 Burr. 2513.

Right to a Livery.]—A company's right to have a livery must be founded on charter or custom: the court cannot presume they have it. Vintners' Co. v. Passy, 1 Burr. 235; 1 Ld. Ken. 500.

Consistency—Usage.]—A charter of Jac. 2 granted to the corporation of the master pilots and seamen of Newcastle-upon-Tyne primage, described in the charter as an ancient duty upon goods brought by ship into the Tyne, or any of the creeks of Newcastle, of which Sunderland was to be rated and accounted, in manner and form following, that is to say, aliens and strangers born, and all other persons arriving with ships in Newcastle within any of the creeks, and not belonging to the same, to pay before they departed with their ships, and every free merchant and inhabitant of Newcastle arriving in the Tyne with a ship within ten days after landing the goods. The charter also granted to the corporation all other perquisites, ancient duties and profits which they had heretofore lawfully had and enjoyed; and also provided that the sums granted by the charter should be in lieu of all other duties theretofore received:—Held, first, that the charter was not inconsistent with the claim of primage in respect of goods imported into Sunderland by merchants resident there. Bradley v. Newcastle Pilots, 2 El. & Bl. 427: 23 L. J., Q. B. 35; 18 Jur. 240; 1 W. R. 394—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that evidence of usage was admissible in support of the claim. Ib.

Where a charter of Edw. 6 granted to the governors of a corporation the right of nominating and appointing, una cum assensu majoris partis inhabitantium of the vill of S., a chaplain to perform divine service in the vill:—Held, that a usage for the governors to nominate a chaplain, and to give notice to the inhabitants to meet at a future day and to assent to or dissent from the nomination so made, was not inconsistent with the words of the charter. Rex v. Sandford Governors, 1 N. & P. 328; W. W. & D. 177; 6 A. & E. 374; 6 L. J., K. B. 126.

Construction of.]—Where the words of a charter are doubtful, they may be explained by long usage. Blankley v. Winstanley, 3 Term Rep. 279; 1 R. R. 704. S. P., Gape v. Handley, 3 Term Rep. 288, n.; Rex v. Osborne, 4 East, 327; Rex v. Varlow, Cowp. 250. And see Rex v. Tate, 4 East, 337.

Ancient charters, if ambiguous, are to be explained by the usage under them; and the jury, in that case, may interpret the charter by the usage. Newcastle Pilots v. Bradley, 2 El. & Bl. 428, n.; 16 Jur. 494.

Contemporaneous documents, proceedings in causes relating to a charter, and parol testimony, may be resorted to in order to explain and give to the charter a construction, but not to contradict it. Luxton School v. Scarlett, 2 Y. & J. 330.

A by-law cannot explain a doubtful charter; if there is any ambiguity on the face of the charter, it is the province of the court to expound it. Rex v. Tucker, 2 Selw. N. P. 1141.

Where a company was incorporated by charter on a petition referring to 1 Vict. c. 73, but the charter did not mention the act:—Held, that the personal liability of individual members authorised by the act to be imposed in any charter of incorporation, either by reference to that act or otherwise, was not imposed by the mere fact that powers were granted by the charter which could not have been granted apart from the act, in the absence of any reference to the particular section. Finnis v. Young, 6 W. R. 577.

The charter of a corporation created for the purpose of regulating the trade of masonry in and about the city of London, provided that "there shall or may be four-and-twenty or more of the said company according to the discretion of the master and wardens for the time being, in manner and form hereafter in these presents expressed, to be named and chosen, which shall be, and shall be called the assistants," and in case of vacancies in the post of assistants the charter provided that "then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the master and wardens, and the remaining part of the assistants which shall then survive or remain, or any eight of them, at their wills and pleasures from time to time to choose and name one or more other or others of the said company, to be assistant or assistants:—Held, that it was obligatory on the corporation to always have at least twenty-four assistants. Wells v. Masons' Co. of London, 1 Cab. & E. 521.

Some forms prescribed for the government of a corporation may be imperative, and others directory only. Foss v. Harbottle, 2 Hare, 461.

Supplemental, when Invalid.]—In order to stop the sealing of a supplemental charter granted to an existing corporation, it must in general be shown that the proposed charter is contrary to law, or that no proper authority for the application has been given, or that some personal right of a member of the society would be wrongly interfered with. Society of Attorneys, Ex parte, L. R. 8 Ch. 163.

Grant of Revival.]—The proclamation of James 2, in the fourth year of his reign, for restoring corporations to their ancient charters, operated (when accepted) as a grant of revival to such of the old corporations as had surrendered their corporate franchises to Charles 2 (but which surrenders were not inrolled), who had granted new charters; and overturned such new charters. Newling v. Francis, 3 Term Rep. 189; 1 R. R. 687.

Acceptance.]—The constitution of a corporation, as settled by an act of parliament, cannot be varied by the acceptance of any charter inconsistent with it. Rex v. Miller, 6 Term Rep. 268; 3 R. R. 172.

A charter granted by the crown to a corporation cannot be partially accepted, whether it is a charter of creation, or granted to a pre-existing corporation. Rex v. Westwood, 2 Dow & Clark, 21; 4 Bligh (N.S.) 213; 7 Bing. 1; 7 D. & R. 267; 4 B. & C. 781.

Unless it should appear to be the intention of the crown that the grantee should have the option to accept in part and reject in part. Ib.

Where a person has been admitted a member of a corporate company, and has acted as such, it is not competent to him, in an action for infringing by-laws, to dispute the acceptance of the charter by a majority of those whom it incorporated. Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Co. v. Woodroffe, 5 D. & R. 530; 7 B. & C. 838; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 301.

If a corporation by prescription will accept a charter limiting the corporation to a less number than existed by custom, the corporation will be bound by that acceptance, and no subsequent vicious custom departing from the charter can avail. Page v. Rex, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 502.

Surrender of.]—The surrender of a charter is void for want of inrolment. Rex v. Osbourne, 4 East, 327.

Valid, until Impeached.]—Where the charter of a corporation has been granted with certain terms or provisions, and the charter is subsisting and unimpeached, notwithstanding it might be open to the attorney-general or the crown to take proceedings for setting it aside, the court will still deal with the corporation as having all the rights and powers of an existing body. Robinson v. London Hospital Governors, 10 Hare, 19; 22 L. J., Ch. 754.

II. CORPORATE BODY.

Who are.]—The commissioners of the treasury are not a corporation. Williams v. Admiralty Lords Commissioners, 11 C. B. 424.

A charity was founded in the twelfth century, and was commonly called "The master, brethren and sisters of the Hospital of St. John the Baptist." In the time of Charles 2, the mastership of the hospital, and the lands belonging to it, were granted to a corporation. The leases of the hospital lands had never been granted by the corporation under the common seal, but in the lease the corporation was described as being the master of the hospital, and the rents were reserved to the master, brethren and sisters. An information was filed against the corporation, and the parties appointed trustees of the estates, under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, to ascertain the charity lands, and to have a scheme for the regulation of the charity; to which information the master, brethren and sisters of the hospital were not made parties as a corporate body:—Held, that they did not form a corporate body; and, consequently, an objection, that they ought to have been made parties to the information as a corporation, was not sustained. Att.-Gen. v. Chester Corporation, 1 Hall & Tw. 46.

See Salford Corporation v. Lancashire County Council, 59 L. J., Q. B. 576; 25 Q. B. D. 384; 63 L. T. 409.

Where by the statutes under which river conservators acted, they were to take land by succession:—Held, that they were created a corporation by implication. Tone Conservators v. Ash, 10 B. & C. 349; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 226.

Where a statute vests property in commissioners and their successors, they are a corporation by implication. Bower v. Griffith, 16 W. R. 540, Ir.

A question was raised in this case upon petition whether certain trustees, appointed under an act of parliament for inclosing a piece of land, were to execute conveyances in their own names, or as a corporate body. The court held that, although the act did not expressly constitute them a corporation, yet, as the trusts to be executed were to continue for an unlimited time, the trustees must, by the very constitution of the body, and the powers given them, be taken to be a corporation. Newport Marsh Trustees, Ex parte, 16 Sim. 346; 18 L. J., Ch. 49; 12 Jur. 932.

Guardians of the poor held, by reason of the provisions in the act appointing them, to constitute a corporation, at all events for the purpose of being sued in the name of their treasurer for the time being in respect of a liability incurred by their predecessors in office. Jefferys v. Gurr, 2 B. & Ad. 833; 1 L. J., K. B. 23.

Semble, that churchwardens and overseers, having no corporate seal, have no power to execute a power of attorney, authorising a party to continue to receive the dividends of stock, notwithstanding fluctuations in the number and identity of the members of the corporation. Annesley, Ex parte, 2 Y. & Coll. 350; 6 L. J. Ex. Eq. 81.

See Furnival v. Coombs, col. 656.

Rights by Prescription.]—A company by prescription may have more than one corporate name. Shrewsbury v. Hart, 1 Car. & P. 113.

A company by prescription and by custom may compel all of their trade to become members. Ib.

As to what is sufficient primâ facie evidence that a corporation is immemorial. Jenkins v. Harvey, 5 Tyr. 871; 1 Gale, 454.

Misdescription.]—A misdescription of a corporation, in omitting the name of the founder, in a conveyance of part of its estate for the redemption of the land tax, is immaterial; and if it had been material, it would have been cured by 54 Geo. 3, c. 173, s. 12. Croydon Hospital v. Farley, 2 Marsh. 174; 6 Taunt. 467.

Name.]—Where a corporation, declaring in an action by their modern name, stated that the citizens, &c., were from time immemorial incorporated by divers names of incorporation, and at the time of making the indenture by A., declared on, were known by a certain other name, by which A. granted to them a certain water-course, and covenanted for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that the deed granting the water-course to them by such name was evidence as against the defendant, who claimed under that grantor, that the corporation was known by that name at the time, upon an issue taken on that fact. Carlisle v. Balmire, 8 East, 487; 9 R. R. 491.

Judicial Cognizance.]—Where a corporation declares in an action in the name by which it is incorporated by act of parliament, the court is bound, even after verdict, to notice that it is a corporation. Church v. Imperial Gaslight and Coke Co., 3 N. & P. 35; 6 A. & E. 846; 1 W. W. & H. 137; 7 L. J., Q. B. 118.

Proof of Aggregate Corporation.]—To prove the existence of an aggregate corporation, consisting of different trades, entries of admission into the separate trades, as "into the company of carpenters, into the company of plasterers," are evidence to be left to the jury. Carpenters' Co. v. Hayward, 1 Dougl. 374.

Powers enjoyed by.]—In our opinion the power of a corporation established for certain specified purposes must depend on what those purposes are, and except so far as it has express powers given to it, it will have such powers only as are necessary for the purpose of enabling it in a reasonable and proper way to discharge the duties or fulfil the purposes for which it was constituted. Per cur. Reg. v. Reed, 49 L. J., Q. B. 600; 5 Q. B. D. 483, 488; 42 L. T. 835; 28 W. R. 787; 44 J. P. 633—C. A.

A lay corporation may incorporate new members if it do not abuse its power. Att.-Gen. v. Talbot, 1 Ves. 78.

A corporation having accepted a charter, empowering the body thereafter to elect persons in the room of such members as should die or be disfranchised, cannot elect any persons except there be vacancies by such events. Page v. Rex, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 445.

As to the Construction of Powers to make and levy Rates given to Commissioners incorporated under Drainage Acts.]—See Reg. v. Selby Dam Commissioners, and Reg. v. Tramore Drainage Board, col. 633.

How Powers exercised.]—Where a certain number are incorporated a major part of them may do any corporate act, though nothing be mentioned in the charter. Att.-Gen v. Davy, 2 Atk. 212; West's Rep. t. Hardwicke, 121.

It is not necessary that every corporate act should be under the seal of the corporation. Ib.

Whether a corporation consisting of numerous governors would be bound by the acquiescence of some, standing by, permitting expenditure, &c., quære. Macher v. Foundling Hospital, 1 Ves. & B. 188.

The act of the majority of a corporation is in general considered as the act of the whole. Therefore, where an act of parliament empowered a corporate body "at any meeting at which not less than thirteen should be present, by writing under their hands, to appoint a treasurer":—Held, that an appointment signed by twelve, at a meeting of seventeen, was valid. Cortis v. Kent Waterworks Co., 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 106; 7 B. & C. 316.

Where a power of doing corporate acts is not specially delegated to particular members, the general mode is for the members to meet on the charter days, and the major part who are present to do the act. Rex v. Varlo, Cowp. 248.

The crown, by letters patent, granted full power to the master and wardens of the corporation of bakers (there being four wardens), by themselves and their deputy or deputies, to overlook and correct the trade of baking:—Held, that the master and one warden could not justify entering the house of a baker to overlook bread; for if they acted as principals, they did not amount to a majority of persons to whom the power was given; and, if they acted as deputies, they were bound to show that they were appointed by the majority. Cook v. Loveland, 2 B. & P. 31; 5 R. R. 533.

In general, where the advowson of a vicarage is in a corporate body, the right of nomination is in the whole body; and, in cases of dispute, the majority will bind the whole. Reg. v. Kendall, 1 Q. B. 366; 10 L. J., Q. B. 137.

Where certain acts of a corporation are to be performed at a special meeting of the members of that corporation, all the persons entitled to be present thereat must be summoned, if they are within a reasonable summoning distance. Smyth v. Darley, 2 H. L. Cas. 789.

The omission to summon any one so entitled renders the acts done at such a meeting, in his absence, invalid. Ib.

When duly met, corporate acts may be done by the majority of those constituting the meeting. Rex v. Monday, Cowp. 530.

III. CORPORATE PROPERTY.

Misapplication of Funds.]—A corporation can act in any ordinary matter of business in the manner in which an individual conducting the same kind of business can act, and there is therefore nothing illegal or ultra vires in an association incorporated by royal charter defending their servant in an action for libel in respect of matter published by the servant, if the matter complained of was published in the usual course of their business, and such an application of their funds is not forbidden by their charter. Breay v. Royal British Nurses Association, 66 L. J., Ch. 587; [1897] 2 Ch. 272; 76 L. T. 735; 46 W. R. 86—C. A.

The governing body of a corporation which is in fact a trading partnership, cannot in general use the funds of the community for any purpose other than those for which they are constituted; whether that governing body is exclusively directors, or a council general, or the majority at the general meeting of the company. Pickering v. Stephenson, 41 L. J., Ch. 493; L. R. 14 Eq. 322; 26 L. T. 608; 20 W. R. 654.

Therefore the special powers given either to the directors or to a majority by the statutes or other constituent documents of the association, are always to be construed as subject to a paramount and inherent restriction, that they are to be exercised in subjection to the special purposes of the original bond of association. That is not a mere canon in the English municipal law, but a great and broad principle, which must be taken (in the absence of proof to the contrary) as part of any given system of jurisprudence. Ib.

Copyhold.]—A corporation cannot hold land by copy of court roll. Att.-Gen. v. Lewin, C. P. Cooper, 54.

On Dissolution.]—If lands are given to a corporate body, and it is dissolved, they will revert to the donor, and not escheat. Att.-Gen. v. Gower (Lord), 9 Mod. 226.

Devise.]—Estate devised to a body corporate, which cannot take by the Statute of Mortmain, in trust to sell land and apply the proceeds for persons competent to take; though the devise of the legal estate is void at law, yet the trusts shall not be defeated; the heir-at-law therefore considered as a trustee for the purpose. Sonley v. Clockmakers' Co., 1 Bro. C. C. 81.

A devise to a corporation for its own purposes, although void at law, is good in equity. Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; Sau. & Sc. 559.

Where a person gives a debt by will to a corporation, it vests in them in law, and they may recover it in the ecclesiastical court. Att.-Gen. v. Pyle, 1 Atk. 435.

Commissioners Incorporated under Drainage

Act—Power to make Rate to satisfy Judgment.]—Certain commissioners were incorporated under a Drainage Act (48 & 49 Vict. c. 185), for the purpose of executing and maintaining certain drainage works. By s. 38 of the act, the costs of and incidental to the taking over and enlarging, repairing, renewing, or cleansing in the first instance of any drains and works incident to drainage works, were to be borne by the owners of lands in certain specified proportions, provided that the total amount to be expended under the powers of the act should not exceed 15,000*l.* Section 40 provided that fourteen days before every annual general meeting the commissioners were to have estimates prepared of all the moneys required to meet the claims for the ensuing year, such estimates to show in separate items, among others, the amount, if any, for constructing new works, and also the costs of carrying out the objects of the act; and s. 41 provided that to provide for so much of the "expenses aforesaid" as were properly chargeable out of the rates for the current year, the commissioners were to make, within a month after such meeting, one rate for the owners and another for the occupiers of lands in accordance with such estimates. The plaintiff obtained judgment in an action brought against the commissioners for damages for injury caused to his property by the negligence of their servants in constructing certain new works. The commissioners had raised and expended the whole of the 15,000*l.* which they were authorised under the act to expend on the initial execution of the drainage works, and had no goods on which execution could be levied to satisfy the plaintiff's judgment:—Held, that s. 38 did not limit the provisions of ss. 40 and 41, and that the plaintiff's claim being in respect of the construction of new works within s. 40, the commissioners had power, under ss. 40 and 41, to make and levy a rate to satisfy the judgment which had been obtained against them. Reg. v. Selby Dam Commissioners, 61 L. J., Q. B. 372; [1892] 1 Q. B. 348; 66 L. T. 17; 56 J. P. 356—C. A.

A contractor who obtained a judgment against a drainage board for extra works, executed by him under agreement with the board, applied for a mandamus to compel the board to levy a rate to satisfy the amount of the judgment:—Held, that the mandamus should be refused, as rates were leviable by the board for the maintenance of works only, and not for their construction. Reg. v. Tramore Drainage Board, 30 L. R., Ir. 329.

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF CORPORATORS.

A member of an incorporated company, entering into a contract with the company, must be deemed, in respect of that contract, a stranger. Hill v. Manchester Waterworks Co., 2 N. & M. 573; 5 B. & Ad. 866; 3 L. J., K. B. 19.

Corporators are not individually answerable for acts done in their corporate capacity, from which detriment happens; at least not without proof of malice. Harman v. Tappenden, 1 East, 555; 3 Esp. 278; 6 R. R. 340. S. P., Rex v. Wadham College, 1 East, 560, n.

The court will not grant a criminal information against the members of a corporation for the misapplication of the corporation money. Rex v. Watson, 2 Term Rep. 199; 1 R. R. 461.

The individual members of a corporation at common law, which is seised in fee simple of freehold lands, have no estate, either legal or equitable, in those lands or any part of them, so as to confer the franchise for a county, albeit their individual shares in the profits derived by the corporation from and out of such lands exceed 40*s.* annually. Acland v. Lewis, 1 K. & G. 334; 9 C. B. (N.S.) 32; 30 L. J., C. P. 29; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 21; 3 L. T. 472; 9 W. R. 123.

Where a company was incorporated by charter on a petition referring to 1 Vict. c. 73, but the charter did not mention the act:—Held, that the personal liability of individual members authorised by the act to be imposed in any charter of incorporation, either by reference to the act or otherwise, was not imposed by the mere fact that powers were granted by the charter which could not have been granted apart from the act, in the absence of any reference to the act itself Finnis v. Young, 6 W. R. 577.

Contract by Churchwardens—Proviso negativing personal Liability void.]—See Furnival v. Coombs, col. 656.

V. AMOTION OF CORPORATORS.

See cases, ante, A. III. (col. 581.)

By-law giving Power of Amotion for Just Cause, good.]—See Rex v. Richardson, col. 649.

A corporation, whether eleemosynary or otherwise, has power to amove a member for sufficient cause, and will not be restrained by injunction from holding an inquiry into the conduct of a member, and expelling him if it thinks fit. The remedy of a member aggrieved by such proceeding is by visitation or mandamus in the respective cases of eleemosynary and civil corporations. Rex v. Richardson (1 Burr. 537) followed. The same principle applies where the amoved person is also an officer of the corporation. O'Grady v. Mercers' Hospital, 19 L. R. Ir. 350.

As to Removing a Member without Hearing him.]—See Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 404, post, cols. 650, 651.

VI. RIGHT TO SUE.

For Penalties—Common Informer.]—A corporation cannot sue for penalties as a common informer unless expressly authorised by statute. St. Leonards, Shoreditch, Guardians v. Franklin, 47 L. J., C. P. 727; 3 C. P. D. 377; 39 L. T. 122; 26 W. R. 882.

Where, therefore, by a local act penalties were imposed for selling one sort of coal for another within twenty-five miles of the General Post Office, and the penalty was recoverable by the "person or persons who shall inform or sue for the same":—Held, that a corporation could not sue for the penalty. Ib.

—— For Half of Penalty Recovered—Proof.]—By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 48, an overseer neglecting to sign the burgess list of a borough is liable to a penalty of 50*l.*, to be recovered by any person suing within three calendar months; and the money so recovered, after payment of the costs and expenses attending the recovery, is to be paid and apportioned, one moiety to the person suing, the other moiety to the treasurer of the borough. The defendant recovered a penalty against an overseer, with taxed costs as between party and party, and received the amount:—Held, that, in an action against the defendant by the corporation for money had and received, it was sufficient, primâ facie, for the corporation to prove the recovery and receipt of the penalty and the taxed costs; and that, in default of proof by the defendant of extra expenses, the corporation was entitled to a verdict for half the penalty. Harwich Corporation v. Gant, 5 El. & Bl. 182; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 708; 3 W. R. 493.

To Support Members' Rights.]—A corporation may join in a suit to establish a claim of exemption on behalf of its individual members. London City v. Liverpool Corporation, 3 Anstr. 738.

Abatement of Suit.]—A suit by a corporation does not become defective on the death of some of the members; otherwise of a suit by the members in their individual character. Blackburn v. Jepson, 3 Swan. 138.

To set aside Acts done in its Name.]—A corporation may institute a suit for setting aside transactions fraudulent against it, although carried into effect in its name by members of the governing body; and that right is not affected by the attorney-general having also power to call in question such transactions. Att.-Gen. v. Wilson, Cr. & Ph. 1; 10 L. J., Ch. 53; 4 Jur. 1174. And see 9 Sim. 30; 7 L. J., Ch. 76; 1 Jur. 890.

For Loss of Monopoly of Granting Degrees—Suit must be by Corporation.]—A member of a corporation cannot institute a suit against the governing body of the corporation unless there is also an infringement of a personal or a proprietary right, or an injury to him as an individual. It must be by the corporation itself, or by information by the attorney-general if it is for an injury to the public. McCormac v. Queen's University, 15 W. R. 733. And see Prestney v. Colchester Corporation, 51 L. J., Ch. 805; 21 Ch. D. 111.

The loss of a monopoly of university degrees is not a personal injury. Ib.

For Libel.]—A corporation may maintain an action of libel in respect of a statement reflecting on its character in the conduct of its business without proof of special damage. South Hetton Coal Co. v. North-Eastern News Association, 63 L. J., Q. B. 293; [1894] 1 Q. B. 133; 9 R. 240; 69 L. T. 844; 42 W. R. 322; 58 J. P. 196—C. A.

A municipal corporation cannot maintain an action for libel in respect of a letter charging the corporation with corruption, for it is only the individuals, and not the corporation in its corporate capacity, who can be guilty of such an offence. Manchester Corporation v. Williams, 60 L. J., Q. B. 23; [1891] 1 Q. B. 94; 63 L. T. 805; 39 W. R. 302; 54 J. P. 712.

A company incorporated under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, may maintain an action for a libel calculated to injure the company; and it is no answer that the defendant is a shareholder in the company. Metropolitan Saloon Omnibus Co. v. Hawkins, 4 H. & N. 87; 28 L. J., Ex. 201; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 226; 7 W. R. 265.

The governing body of a corporation, which is in fact a trading partnership, cannot in general use the funds of the community for any purpose other than those for which they are constituted. The costs therefore of a prosecution for libel are not properly payable out of the assets of the company. Pickering v. Stephenson, 41 L. J., Ch. 493; L. R. 14 Eq. 322; 26 L. T. 608; 20 W. R. 654.

In Names of Individual Members.]—Upon a bill filed originally in the individual names of a corporation, adding their corporate character, and in abatement a bill of revivor in their corporate name only, demurrer for want of privity overruled; the naming of individuals, where the proceedings purport to be in a corporate character, and the corporate names are added, is mere surplusage. Walker v. Warden Christ's College, 1 Bli. (N.S.) 9.

Of Foreign Corporation in Corporate Name.]—A corporation instituted by foreigners in accordance with the laws of their country may sue in this country by their corporate name. And if the name by which they have declared be not directly consistent with the one specified in the charter, proof that they are the same company is a sufficient answer to the objection. National Bank of St. Charles v. De Bernales, 1 R. & M. 193; 1 Car. & P. 569.

Action by Company in Name of Treasurer referred—Non-Performance by Company of Award—Attachment against Treasurer refused—Mandamus to pay.]—See Corpe v. Glyn, 1 L. J., K. B. 272, ante, col. 593.

VII. LIABILITY TO BE SUED.

For Libel.]—A count against a railway company, being a corporation aggregate, for a malicious libel, is good, for a corporation aggregate may well, in its corporate capacity, cause the publication of a defamatory statement under such circumstances as would imply malice in law sufficient to support the action. Whitefield v. S. E. Ry., El. Bl. & El 115; 27 L. J., Q. B 229; 4 Jur. (N. S.) 688; 6 W. R. 545.

Quære, whether a corporation can, through its servants, be guilty of actual malice. Nevill v. Fine Arts and General Insurance Co., 64 L. J., Q. B. 681; [1895] 2 Q. B. 156; 14 R. 587; 72 L. T. 525; 59 J. P. 371—C. A.

For Acts Contrary to Law.]—A corporation is not liable for acts contrary to law, of which their attorney may be guilty in conducting legal proceedings. Eggington v. Lichfield Corporation, 5 El. & Bl. 100; 24 L. J., Q. B. 360; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 908.

For Misfeasance by Servants.]—A corporation aggregate may be liable to an action for intentional acts of misfeasance by its servants, provided the acts are sufficiently connected with the scope and action of its incorporation. Green v. London General Omnibus Co., 7 C. B. (N.S.) 290; 29 L. J., C. P. 13; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 228; 1 L. T. 95; 8 W. R. 88.

Therefore, in an action against a company established for conveying passengers by omnibuses in the streets of London, charging that the company by its servants, wrongfully, vexatiously and maliciously did certain acts (describing them) with a view to, and which in the result did, obstruct and annoy the plaintiff in the conduct of a similar trade:—Held, that, as the acts complained of were connected with the object and purpose for which the company was incorporated, the company was responsible. Ib.

For fraudulently Trading in Name of Another.]—Quære, if an action will lie against a trading corporation for fraudulently carrying on a business under the same name as that under which another traded, in order to induce persons to believe that the business of both was the same. Lawson v. Bank of London. 18 C. B. 84; 25 L. J., C. P. 188; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 716; 4 W. R. 481.

For Acts of Agents—Scienter.]—With respect to questions of scienter, there is no difference between a corporation and an individual; and whatever is notice to a person competent to receive it is notice to the corporation. Stiles v. Cardiff Steam Navigation Co., 33 L. J., Q. B. 310; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1199; 10 L. T. 844; 12 W. R. 1080.

A person, innocently and without negligence, went on to the premises belonging to a corporation, where he was bitten by a dog which was chained in a place in which it could not be seen, the dog had previously bitten a person, as was known to some of the servants of the corporation, but those servants had no control over its affairs, or over the dog:—Held, that, assuming the corporation knew the dog was a mischievous one, and accustomed to bite, the corporation would be liable in an action brought by the person bitten; but that there was no evidence to show that the corporation had such knowledge, and that, in the absence of such evidence, the action was not maintainable. Ib.

For False Imprisonment.]—A railway company, though a corporation, is liable in an action for false imprisonment, if that imprisonment is committed by its authority; such authority need not be under seal, but it lies upon the plaintiff to give evidence justifying the jury in finding that the persons actually imprisoning him, or some of them, had authority from the company to do so. Goff v. G. N. Ry., 3 El. & El. 672; 30 L. J., Q. B. 148; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 3 L. T. 850. See Eastern Counties Ry. v. Brown, infra.

For Malicious Prosecution.]—An action for a malicious prosecution cannot be brought against a corporation, as such an action requires the existence of malice, and a corporation cannot have malice. Per Alderson, B.: Stevens v. Midland Counties Ry. 10 Ex. 352; 2 C. L. R. 1300; 23 L. J., Ex. 328; 18 Jur. 932. But see, as to this case, Bank of New South Wales v. Owston, 48 L. J., P. C. 25; 4 App. Cas. 270; 40 L. T. 300; and Edwards v. Midland Ry., infra.

A man was arrested on a warrant issued on the sworn information of an officer employed by an incorporated railway company on a charge of theft; he was taken before a magistrate and remanded for a week at the request of an attorney employed by the company; he was ultimately discharged. At the trial of an action for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff denied that he was guilty of the theft; and the judge nonsuited. The company was a corporation aggregate:—Held (per Kelly, C.B., and Cleasby, B.), that the nonsuit was wrong; and per Bramwell, B., that the nonsuit was right; and that no action for malicious prosecution would lie against the railway company, for a corporation aggregate is in law incapable of acting maliciously. Henderson v. Midland Ry., 24 L. T. 881; 20 W. R. 23.

An action for malicious prosecution does not lie against a corporation aggregate, a corporation aggregate being incapable of malice or motive. Abrath v. North-Eastern Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 457; 11 App. Cas. 247; 55 L. T. 63; 50 J. P. 659—Per Bramwell, Lord.

An action for a malicious prosecution will lie against a corporation. Stevens v. Midland Counties Ry. (supra) not followed. Edwards v. Midland Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 281; 6 Q. B. D. 287; 43 L. T. 694; 29 W. R. 609; 45 J. P. 374. S. P., Kent v. Courage & Co., 55 J. P. 264, per Pollock, B.

For Breach of Trust.]—A municipal corporation was trustee of a charity. It permitted its town clerk to receive and retain the trust moneys, instead of applying them to the purposes of the trust:—Held, that the corporation and the town clerk were liable for the breach of trust. Att.-Gen. v. Leicester Corporation, 7 Beav. 176.

For Frauds.]—A corporation of itself cannot be guilty of fraud, but where it can only accomplish the object for which it was formed through the agency of individuals who act fraudulently, the corporation stands in the same situation with respect to the conduct of its agents as a private person would have stood, had his agent so misconducted himself. Ranger v. G. W. Ry., 5 H. L. Cas. 72.

An action for deceit will lie against a corporation for the fraud of its agent, acting within the scope of his authority, where the corporation takes any benefit from such fraud. Mackay v. Commercial Bank of New Brunswick, 43 L. J., P. C. 31: L. R. 5 P. C. 394; 30 L. T. 180; 22 W. R. 473.

For Distress.]—A corporation is liable in tort for the tortious act of its agent, though not appointed by seal, if such act is an ordinary service, such as a distress, professedly made under a statute for a debt due to the corporation; and a jury may infer the agency from an adoption of the act by the corporation, as from having received the proceeds of the seizure. Smith v. Birmingham Gas Co., 1 A. & E. 526; 3 N. & M. 771; 3 L. J., K. B. 165.

For Trespass.]—An action of trespass lies against a corporation aggregate for an act done by its agent within the scope of his authority; and it is not necessary to show the appointment or authority of the agent under the seal of the corporation. Maund v. Monmouthshire Canal Co., 4 Man. & G. 452; 3 Railw. Cas. 159; Car. & M. 606; 2 D. (N.S.) 113; 5 Scott (N.R.) 457; 11 L. J., C. P. 317; 6 Jur. 932.

For Assault.]—If a servant of a corporation aggregate commits an assault by the authority of the corporation, an action of trespass for assault and battery may be maintained against the corporation. Eastern Counties Ry. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314; 20 L. J., Ex. 196; 15 Jur. 297—Ex. Ch.

If an assault is committed on behalf and for the benefit of a corporation aggregate, the corporation may ratify the act of the agent; and if they do so they render themselves liable to an action of trespass for the assault. Ib.

If a servant of a railway company, acting on behalf of the company, assaults and imprisons a passenger to compel him to pay his fare for riding in a carriage of the company, the act of the servant is one which may be for the benefit of the company, and may be ratified by them. Ib.

For Conversion.]—Trover lies against a corporation; and if it is essential to their conversion of the property, as the detainer of bank-notes by the Bank of England, that they should have authorised it under their seal, such authority will be presumed after verdict. Yarborough v. Bank of England, 16 East, 6; 14 R. R. 272.

Trover for quicks and plants against a railway company. On the trial the judge ruled that there was sufficient evidence of a conversion by the company. To this ruling the company excepted. Verdict for the plaintiff. A bill of exceptions set forth the whole evidence. By this it appeared that the plaintiff was a contractor, planting hedges for the company at one of their stations, and was owner of live thorns which had been by leave of F., who was the general superintendent of the company, placed in a piece of ground belonging to the company, and close to the station. The plaintiff demanded these thorns from the stationmaster, and was referred to F., who, professing to act for the company, refused to let the plaintiff remove them. It did not appear when or under what circumstances the thorns were brought to the station:—Held, that it is the duty of a company carrying on trade to have on the spot an officer with authority to do for the company all that, in the ordinary exigencies of their business, might require to be done promptly; that in this respect there is no difference between an ordinary partnership and a corporation; that there was sufficient evidence that F. had authority to this extent from the company; and that it was not necessary to show any authority under seal. Giles v. Taff Vale Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 822—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that to give up, or refuse to give up, on demand, goods left with the company, in the course of their trade as carriers, was an act within the scope of such authority; and that these thorns were so left, and therefore there was evidence of a conversion by the company. Ib.

For Money Wrongfully Received.]—An action lies against an aggregate corporation to recover money which has been wrongfully received by the corporation. Hall v. Swansea Corporation, 5 Q. B. 526; D. & M. 475; 13 L. J., Q. B. 107; 8 Jur. 213.

—— Penalties—Merchant Seamen Society.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, relating to merchant seamen, is an act relating to trade or navigation, therefore all penalties recovered under it are by virtue thereof payable to the Merchant Seamen Society, and are within the proviso of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 126, which disentitles certain boroughs to penalties recovered under any act relating to trade or navigation. Seamen's Hospital Society v. Liverpool Corporation, 4 Ex. 180; 18 L. J., Ex. 371.

For Maintenance.]—A corporation in liquidation, as distinct from the liquidator thereof, is incapable of maintenance. Metropolitan Bank v. Pooley, 54 L. J., Q. B. 449; 10 App. Cas. 210; 53 L. T. 163; 33 W. R. 709; 49 J. P. 756—H. L. (E.)

For Negligence.]—The Trinity House was incorporated by charter in the reign of Henry 8, for the purpose, inter alia, of ordering and erecting lighthouses, beacons, and buoys. Its powers were extended by several charters and statutes, until it became the general lighthouse authority for England and Wales. By the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 389, the superintendence and management of all lighthouses, buoys, and beacons in England and Wales, and certain other places, were, with certain objections, vested in the Trinity House:—Held, that the Trinity House was not a department of State, so as to be exempt from liability for negligence of its servants. Gilbert v. Trinity House Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 85; 17 Q. B. D. 795; 35 W. R. 30.

A beacon erected by and vested in the Trinity House, having been nearly destroyed, a stranger applied to the Trinity House, and obtained leave to remove the remains of it. He removed part of the remains, but left an iron stump standing up above a rock under the water. A vessel struck against the iron stump and was lost:—Held, that the Trinity House was liable. Ib.

The R., which was anchored in F. outer-harbour, having to be beached in the inner harbour, S., the harbour-master, directed the master of the R. where to beach her. Before the R. left the outer harbour, S. came on board, although a Trinity House pilot was in the vessel, and when she had arrived near the place where she was to be beached gave directions as to the lowering of her anchor. The R. overran her anchor and grounded on it, sustaining damage. In an action against the harbour commissioners and S., the court found as a fact that there was negligence on the part of S., and that the place where the R. grounded was outside the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners:—Held, that the duties of the harbour-master comprised directions as to the mooring and beaching of vessels; that by giving directions when he went on board, S. had resumed his functions as harbour-master, and that he and the commissioners were therefore liable for the damage done to the R. The Rhosina, or Edwards v. Falmouth Harbour Commissioners, 54 L. J., P. 72; 10 P. D. 131; 53 L. T. 30; 33 W. R. 794; 5 Asp. M. C. 460—C. A.

By act of parliament, 26 & 27 Vict. c. 89, the harbour of B. was vested in the defendants, the limits were defined, and the defendants had jurisdiction over the harbour of P. and the channel of P. beyond those limits, for the purpose of, inter alia, buoying "the said harbour and channel," but they were not to levy dues or rates beyond the harbour of B. By 42 & 43 Vict. c. 146, a moiety of the residue of light duties to which ships entering or leaving the harbour of P. contributed, was to be paid to the defendants, and to be applied by them in, inter alia, buoying and lighting the harbour and channel of P. A vessel was wrecked in the channel of P., which under the Wrecks Removal Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 16), s. 4, the defendants had power to, and did partially remove. The wreck not removed was not buoyed, and the plaintiff's vessel was in consequence wrecked:—Held, that the statutes imposed upon the defendants an obligation to remove the wreck from the channel, or to mark its position by buoys, and that, not having done so, they were liable in damages to the plaintiff. Dormont v. Furness Ry., 52 L. J., Q. B. 331; 11 Q. B. D. 496; 49 L. T. 134; 5 Asp. M. C. 127; 47 J. P. 711. See also Reg. v. Williams, 53 L. J., P. C. 64; 9 App. Cas. 418; 51 L. T. 546.

A municipal corporation employing workmen to lay down gas pipes in the borough is responsible for the negligence of the persons employed. Scott v. Manchester Corporation, 1 H. & N. 59; 26 L. J., Ex. 132. Affirmed on appeal, 2 H. & N. 204; 26 L. J., Ex. 406; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 590; 5 W. R. 598—Ex. Ch.

A corporation of a town caused a washhouse to be erected, with a wringing machine, under the Baths and Washhouses Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 74), which vests such houses in the corporation, the actual management being in the council, the members of which are not to be personally liable. The wringing machine was originally intended to be worked by hand, and being worked by steam, a projecting handle was needlessly retained, which went round with great rapidity, and had no protection. Those who used the washhouse paid for the use of it, and a female using the machine, without negligence on her part, was caught by the handle when thus revolving, and was injured:—Held, that the corporation was liable to an action for the injury. Cowley v. Sunderland Corporation, 6 H. & N. 565; 30 L. J., Ex. 127; 4 L. T. 720; 9 W. R. 668.

The principle on which a private person or a company is liable for damages occasioned by the neglect of servants, applies to a corporation which has been intrusted by statute to perform certain works, and to receive tolls for the use of those works, although those tolls, unlike the tolls received by the private person or the company, are not applicable to the use of the individual corporators or to that of the corporation; but are devoted to the maintenance of the works, and, in case of any surplus existing, the tolls themselves are to be proportionably diminished. Mersey Docks v. Gibbs, 11 H. L. Cas. 686; 35 L. J., Ex. 225; L. R. 1 H. L. 93, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 571; 14 L. T. 677; 14 W. R. 872.

For Nuisance on Highway.]—The municipality of B., incorporated under New South Wales Acts, No. 13 of 1858 and No. 12 of 1867, and having thereunder the care, construction, and management of the roads and streets within their municipality, constructed therein a barrel drain into which ran an open drain, the brickwork of which having broken away, and not having been repaired, a hole was caused, into which the plaintiff's horse fell. In an action claiming damages against the municipality (a) for negligence in constructing the street; (b) for negligence in keeping and maintaining the street, and not repairing the drain, gutter, or sewer in the said street (plea the general issue), the chief justice directed the jury that the defendants, under their act of incorporation, were not liable for the result of any mere nonfeasance; that if they thought fit to construct a sewer, and did the work in so negligent a manner as to bring about the accident, they were liable for that misfeasance; but if they constructed the sewer properly in the first instance and it became defective afterwards they were not bound to repair it; and further, that if the defective state in which the drain was, arose from the operation of the weather, or wear and tear, it having been properly constructed originally, they were not liable. Verdict for defendants:—Held, on the motion for a new trial, that as regards (b) there was misdirection. The barrel drain was not only made by the defendants, but the sole control and management of it were by the statute vested in them. By reason of their construction of that drain and their neglect to repair it, whereby, as an indirect but natural consequence, the dangerous hole was formed, which was left open and unfenced, they caused a nuisance in the highway for which, whatever their statutory obligation to repair may have been, they were liable to an indictment, and also to an action by the plaintiff, who had sustained direct and particular damage from their breach of duty. Bathurst Borough v. Macpherson, 48 L. J., P. C. 61; 4 App. Cas. 256; 41 L. T. 773—P. C.

For Non-Repair.]—If a party sustain damage from the overflowing of the sea, in consequence of the non-repair of sea-walls which, by the terms of their charter, a corporation is bound to repair, he may maintain an action against the corporation for compensation. Henly v. Lyme Regis Corporation, 5 Bing. 91; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 222; 30 R. R. 542.

An action lies against a corporation for not repairing a creek into which the tide of the sea flowed and reflowed (but not saying it was a navigable river), as from time immemorial they had been used; and saying "as from time immemorial they had been used," is well enough, without alleging that they were bound, ratione tenuræ, or other special cause. Lynn v. Turner, Cowp. 86.

Prescription.]—A corporation may be liable to repair the banks of a river by prescription. Anon., Lofft, 556.

Statute of Limitation.]—A corporation shall have the benefit of the Statute of Limitation as well as any private person. Wych v. East India Co., 3 P. W. 310.

Foreign Attachment.]—A corporation carrying on business within the city of London is not liable to the process of foreign attachment issuing out of the mayor's court. London Joint Stock Bank v. London Corporation, 1 C. Attachment.]—An attachment does not lie against a corporation for non-performance of an award. Mackenzie v. Sligo and Shannon Ry., 9 C. B. 250.

Where a company was authorised by statute to sue and be sued by their treasurer, who was to incur no personal liability, and two actions against and by the treasurer had been referred to arbitration, a motion for attachment against the treasurer for non-payment of the damages and costs awarded was refused, but a mandamus to him to pay was granted. Corpe v. Glyn, 1 L. J., K. B. 272.

In Name of Treasurer for time being.]—Where a former treasurer of guardians of the poor had been compelled to pay money which the then guardians ought to have paid, it was held that the private act under which the guardians acted constituted them a corporation for some purposes, and that such former treasurer could sue the guardians who had succeeded to office in the name of their present treasurer for money paid. Jefferys v. Gurr, 2 B. & Ad. 833; 1 L. VIII. DISSOLUTION.

The King may, at his discretion, seize the franchise of a corporation guilty of an offence amounting to a forfeiture. Rex v. Ironsonby, 1 Ves. J. 8; 5 Bro. P. C. 287. And see Bagg's case, 11 Cob. 93.

The King cannot by his prerogative destroy a corporation. Rex v. Amery, 2 Term Rep. 515; 1 Term Rep. 575; 2 Bro. P. C. 336; 1 Anstr. 178; 1 R. R. 306, 533. But see S. C., 4 Term Rep. 122.

What Amounts to.]—When an integral part of a corporation is gone, and the corporation has no power of restoring it, or of doing any corporate act, the corporation is so far dissolved that the crown may grant a new charter. Rex v. Pasmore, 3 Term Rep. 199; 1 R. R. 688.

The major part of an integral part of a corporation whose attendance is required at the election of officers being gone, it operates as a dissolution of the whole corporation, which has thereby lost the power of holding corporate assemblies for the purpose of filling up vacancies, and continuing itself. Rex v. Morris, 3 East, 213; 4 East, 17.

A right of free fishery was granted to a borough, by a charter of Richard I., which recited a previous enjoyment of the franchise by the borough. In 1740, by reason of judgment of ouster against all the existing members of the corporation, it became incapable of continuing itself, and there was no mayor or alderman till 1763, when a new charter of incorporation was granted to the borough, by which all the former rights, liberties, and fisheries were ratified, confirmed, and restored to the new corporation:—Held, that there had been no entire dissolution of the corporation, and that, by virtue of the new charter of incorporation, the revived one became owner of all the former franchises, and were entitled to the fishery. Colchester Corporation v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339; 15 L. J., Q. B. 173; 10 Jur. 610.

IX. BY-LAWS.

And see ante, A. X. col. 619.

a. POWER OF MAKING.

Inconsistent with Charter.]—A corporation by charter cannot make by-laws inconsistent with the intention, or counteracting the directions of the charter. Rex v. Cutbush, 4 Burr. 2204.

A company without any power by its charter may of course make by-laws: but if it has a particular power to make by-laws for the management of its trade, it cannot make by-laws for carrying on projects foreign to the affairs of the company. Child v. Hudson's Bay Co, 2 P. W. 207.

All by-laws made by corporations must be consistent with, and subordinate to, their constitution by charter. Hoblyn v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 329.

See also Rex v. Tucker, col. 628; and Reg. v. Darlington School, col. 647.

To incur a Forfeiture.]—A corporation created by letters-patent, with a power of making by-laws, cannot make any laws to incur a forfeiture. Kirk v. Nowill, 1 Term Rep. 118; 1 R. R. 160.

Neither can a corporation created by an act of parliament, unless such a power is expressly given. Ib.

Incident to whole Body.]—The power to make by-laws is incident to the whole body of every corporation; and, therefore, if a charter gives to a select body a power to make by-laws touching certain matters therein specified, that does not take away from the body at large their incidental power to make by-laws touching other matters not specified in the charter. Rex v. Westwood, 2 Dow & Cl. 21; 4 Bligh (N.S.) 213; 7 Bing. 1; 7 D. & R. 267; 4 B. & C. 781.

Repeal.]—Every by-law may be repealed by the same body which made it. Rex v. Ashwell, 12 East, 22.

The rule is that a corporation has power to make by-laws; it is strange, therefore, to go into equity, to execute the private statutes of a foundation under a charter. Where such statutes do not appear to have been observed in any one instance, a court of law will presume a subsequent by-law to repeal and alter them. Att.-Gen. v. Myddleton, 3 Ves. 330.

mission had issued under the great seal to inspect the management of the governors of a free grammar school, and power was given to the commissioners to make by-laws, it was held that such power must be taken to be to make by-laws for the better regulating and preserving the charity; and that, if the commission gave any larger power, it would be void only pro tanto. Eden v. Foster, 2 P. W. 325.

Where two Governing Bodies — Regulation making an absolute Privilege Conditional— Notice.]—When in any trading corporation by prescription there is one governing body which has been used to make general orders, and another which has been used to regulate the business of the corporation, but which does not appear to have exercised the power of making general orders, it is questionable whether the latter body has power to make a general order imposing on their members conditions under which they are to hold advantages secured to them by general orders made by the other governing body. Semble, that the one has rather a legislative and the other an executive province; the latter having only power to regulate in particular cases, not to make a general regulation. Hills v. Hunt, 2 C. L. R. 1781; 15 C. B. 1.

If by such a general order a regulation is made, laying down a condition on which the members are to enjoy an advantage they possess under general rules of the corporation, and on breach of which they are no longer to enjoy it, although it may be doubtful whether such a case is governed by all the principles of law which apply to by-laws imposing penalties or forfeiture, the order or rule will be invalid, because unreasonable and unjust, unless distinct notice of its terms is given by the governing body which issues it, to all the members of the corporation who are affected by it. Ib.

Under Seal.]—A gas-light company was incorporated by an act of parliament, which provided that eighteen shareholders should be directors, and, as such, should use the common seal, manage the affairs of the company, lay out money, purchase lands, and make contracts for lighting, and for the sale of materials. The company was empowered to make by-laws under seal for its government, and for regulating the proceedings of the directors, officers, servants, &c. At a meeting of the company, a resolution was passed, not under seal, that a remuneration should be allowed to every director for his attendance on courts:—Held, that a director who had attended courts could not maintain an action for payments according to the resolution; for that it was not a by-law within the statute, nor a contract (if such could have been available) to pay the directors, or any of them, for their attendances, and the directors could not be considered as servants to the company, and, as such, entitled to remuneration for their labour according to its value. Dunston v. Imperial Gas Co., 3 B. & Ad. 125; 1 L. J., K. B. 49.

How to be Exercised.]—By-laws made under statutory powers held not to be binding until made, confirmed, and published as by-laws in the manner prescribed by the statute. London Association of Shipowners v. London and India Docks, 62 L. J., Ch. 294; [1892], 3 Ch. 242; 67 L. T. 238—C. A.

b. VALIDITY.

Providing Dinners.]—In a company constituted by letters patent, with power to make reasonable by-laws, a by-law for the steward to provide a dinner for certain members of the company on Lord Mayor's day, with an allowance for so doing, or to pay a fine of 20*l.*, or excuse himself by swearing he is not worth 300*l.*, is a bad by-law. Carter v. Sanderson, 5 Bing. 79; 2 M. & P. 164; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 232.

So a by-law made by a prescriptive company of the city of London (with power under letters patent to make by-laws and fine for breach of them), that on the day of the election of the master and wardens of the company, in which the freemen had no voice, two of the freemen should provide a dinner for all the members of the company, and pay out of their own pockets such expenses as should be incurred beyond a sum allowed for the purpose, or be fined in default, is a bad by-law. Scriveners' Co. v. Brooking, 2 G. & D. 419; 3 Q. B. 95; 11 L. J., Q. B. 169; 6 Jur. 835.

Imposing Fines.]—Where the master, wardens and assistants of a corporation were authorised by their charter to make by-laws with penalties to the use of the corporation, a by-law imposing a fine on anyone of the livery refusing to take upon himself a certain office, and reserving the penalty to the master and wardens only for the time being, for the use of the corporation, is valid. Graves v. Colby, 1 P. & D. 235; 9 A. & E. 356; 1 W., W. & H. 705; 8 L J., Q. B. 57.

A by-law of a company incorporated by royal charter may be enforced by a penalty of "5*l.* to the use of the company, or less, at the pleasure and discretion of the company, so it be not under 40*s.*" Piper v. Chappell, 14 M. & W. 624; 9 Jur. 601.

A by-law imposing a fine must be clear and unambiguous. Foster v. Moore, 4 L. R., Ir. 670.

A by-law of a corporation founded on a custom to exclude foreigners, and authorising a distress for a penalty in case of a breach of the by-law, without a previous demand or refusal of such penalty, was bad. Davies v. Morgan, 1 C. & J. 587; 1 Tyr. 457; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 153.

For Forfeiture on Non-Payment of Calls.]—Hudson's Bay Company might by its by-laws make restrictions upon its stock, viz. that such stock shall first be liable to pay the debts due to the company from its own members, or answer calls upon the stock. Child v. Hudson's Bay Co., 2 P. W. 207.

So a by-law of the company to seize a member's stock for a debt due from a member to the company, is good; but if the debt be not due to the company, but to its trustees, then the by-law will not extend to it. Ib.

A by-law of an incorporated company for water works provided that the members, after notice of default in paying a call, should pay in ten days from a service of such notice, or incur a forfeiture. Plaintiff made default, alleging his ignorance of the call and absence from town when the notice was sent:—Held, that he shall not be relieved against this forfeiture. Sparks v. Liverpool Waterworks Co., 13 Ves. 428.

Limiting Discretion given by Charter to remove Master of School.]—Queen Elizabeth, by a charter, founded and endowed a grammar school, and incorporated certain persons and their successors as governors, and granted them for ever power and authority from time to time of electing, nominating and appointing a master of the school, and of removing him from the school, according to their sound discretion, and of placing or appointing another more fit in his stead. The governors were empowered by the charter to make by-laws, and they enacted a by-law requiring certain qualifications in the future masters, and ordaining (for the encouragement of well-qualified persons to accept the office) that no master should be displaced, removed, or removable, unless some sufficient cause of complaint should be exhibited in writing against such master, and signed by the governors or their successors, and the same cause of complaint be first allowed of and declared by them to be a sufficient cause:—Held, that the governors had no right thus to limit the discretion by the charter, and that the by-law was void. Reg. v. Darlington School Governors, 6 Q. B. 682; 14 L. J., Q. B. 67—Ex. Ch.

Navigation Company—Sunday Navigation.]—An act empowered a navigation company to make by-laws for the government of the company, and for the good and orderly using the navigation; and also for the governing of the bargemen, watermen, and boatmen carrying goods, wares, or merchandise upon the navigation, and to impose and inflict on all persons offending against the same reasonable fines and forfeitures, not exceeding 5*l*. A by-law made by the company, that the navigation should be closed on every Sunday throughout the year, and that no business should be transacted during such time, works of necessity only excepted; and that no person should navigate any boat or vessel along any part of the navigation on any Sunday, except for a reasonable distance for the purpose of mooring, or of going to, or returning from, divine worship, under a penalty of 5*l*., is void. Calder and Hebble Navigation Co. v. Pilling, 3 Railw. Cas. 735; 14 M. & W. 76; 14 L. J., Ex. 223; 9 Jur. 377.

Regulating Boats in Harbour — Harbour Commissioners.]—Harbour commissioners were empowered by statute to make by-laws for regulating and fixing the conduct and hire or fare of all boats or ferry boats plying in the harbour, and for regulating the conduct of boatmen, ferrymen, and others plying in the harbour:—Held, that a by-law, requiring the owners of boats carrying passengers within the port to take out an annual licence from the commissioners under a penalty, was ultra vires. Londonderry Harbour Commissioners v. Londonderry Bridge Commissioners, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 384.

Thames Watermen.]—A by-law of the Thames Watermen's Company, forbidding the employment by freemen of non-freemen in working barges, boats, &c., is valid, and within the powers conferred by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 75. Reg. v. Edmonds, 3 C. L. R. 902; 24 L. J., M. C. 124; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 727; 3 W. R. 408.

Snow—11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 55.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 55, empowers the local board of health to make by-laws for the removal by the occupier of dust, ashes, rubbish, filth, manure, dung, and soil in or by the side of any street. A by-law required all occupiers within the district to remove all snow or other obstructions from the footpath opposite their premises before 9 A.M.:—Held, that snow was not within the terms of s. 55, and therefore the by-law was invalid. Reg. v. Rose, 24 L. J., M. C. 130; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 802. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Wood, 5 El. & Bl. 49; 3 W. R. 419.

Railway Company—Penalty or Forfeiture.]—An act of parliament empowered a railway company to make by-laws for the government of its affairs, and of its officers and servants, and to impose and inflict fines and forfeitures on all persons offending against the same, not exceeding 5*l*. A section empowered the company to make orders and regulations for the travelling upon the railway, and relating to the travellers or carriages passing upon it; such orders and regulations to be binding upon the company and passengers, on pain of forfeiting a sum not exceeding 5*l*. The act then inflicted penalties for different offences prohibited by it; and directed that all penalties and forfeitures inflicted or imposed by the act, or any by-laws, might be recovered in a summary way, half the penalty to go to the informer and the other half to the company. The act also enacted, that any officer or agent of the company might seize or detain without warrant any person, whose name and residence might be unknown, who should commit an offence against the act, and convey him before a justice of the peace. The company made a by-law, that every passenger should, on booking his place, be furnished with a ticket; and that every passenger who should not produce or deliver up his ticket when required, should pay the fare from the place from which the train originally started. C., who had paid for a ticket at an intermediate station on the line, lost the ticket, and refused to pay any fresh fare except for the distance he had actually come, whereupon the company, acting by their officer, at the arrival station took him into custody:—Held, that, assuming the by-law to be reasonable and valid, the arrest was illegal, as the by-law that a passenger should under such circumstances pay the entire fare, was not a by-law inflicting a penalty or forfeiture. Chilton v. London and Croydon Ry., 16 M. & W. 212; 16 L. J., Ex. 89; 11 Jur. 119.

Part Good and Part Bad.]—One of the by-laws made by the pasture masters of the common pastures of a borough under a local act, passed to provide for the proper regulation thereof, provided that "if any person should stock or depasture a vicious horse on any part of the common pastures, then, and in every such case, the person or persons so offending, and the owner or owners of the stock and cattle, shall respectively forfeit and pay for every such offence 5*l*.:"—Held, that so much of the by-law as referred to the infliction of the fine upon the person actually transgressing the same was divisible from that portion which referred to the owner of the stock; that the former part of the by-law was reasonable and good, and might stand independently of the latter, which, if bad, might be rejected. Reg. v. Lundie, 31 L. J., M. C. 157; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 640; 5 L. T. 830; 10 W. R. 267.

A by-law may be good in part and bad in part, if the two parts are distinct from each other and separately entire. Rex v. Faversham, 8 Term Rep. 352; 4 R. R. 691.

Apprentices.]—A by-law, altering the qualification of persons to be taken as apprentices by the members of a corporation, in order to acquire their freedom by a certain servitude, is not warranted by a custom in such body, which claimed by prescription to make by-laws regulating the number of persons to be taken as apprentices. Rex v. Toppenden, 3 East, 186.

A by-law, made by a company in a corporation to restrain the number of apprentices to be taken by any of the members, is void. Rex v. Coopers' Co. of Newcastle-on-Tyne, 7 Term Rep. 543.

A by-law, which directed that a sum of money should be paid for the use of a corporation, on inrolling indentures of apprenticeship to one of its members, was bad. Neresby v. Webster, 1 Ld. Ken. 243.

Power of Amotion.]—A by-law to give power of amotion for just cause is a good by-law, though the corporation that made it had no power of amotion expressly given by charter, or claimed by prescription. Rex v. Richardson, 1 Burr. 519; 2 Ld. Ken. 85.

Regulating Admission of Freemen.]—A by-law to prevent any person from being made free of a company, until he shall have been called at three several meetings of the mayor and certain aldermen of the city, and the wardens and stewards of the several companies in it, before his admittance, and to be approved of by them, or a majority of them, is good. Rex v. Durham, 1 Burr. 127; 1 Ld. Ken. 512.

Freemen of City—Livery of Company.]—The company of poulters comprises all poulters in London and within seven miles thereof, and no one can be of the livery of a company unless he is a freeman of the city of London:—Held, that a by-law authorising the company to admit into the livery of the company any freeman of the company was a valid by-law, and must be intended to imply any freeman of the company who was also free of the city. Poulters' Co. v. Phillips, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 314; 8 Scott, 593; 9 L. J., C. P. 190; 4 Jur. 124.

Penalties for Non-attendance.]—By-laws for compelling, by means of pecuniary penalties, the attendance of members of a corporation at corporate meetings, and the acceptance of corporate offices, are reasonable, and may be enforced by action. Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Co. v. Woodroffe, 7 B. & C. 838; 5 D. & R. 530; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 301.

But a by-law, imposing a tax on the members of a corporation by the name of a quarterage of money, cannot be supported, unless it is shown that the necessities of the company require such contributions, and that the latter are commensurate with the former. Ib.

Election of Officers.]—By a charter, the company of patten-makers was made a corporation, having a master, two wardens, and twelve assistants, and the company was to elect yearly one of the two wardens to be master. By a by-law afterwards made and agreed to by the whole company, the master was thenceforth to be elected by the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, in a particular mode (not prescribed by the charter) out of two or three meet and sufficient persons, being of the number of the master, wardens and assistants, and selected by the master and wardens. In case of an equality of voices, the master was to have a double vote:—Held, that the by-law was bad, because it extended the number of persons eligible by the charter to the office of master. Rex v. Bumstead, 2 B. & Ad. 699.

Where a charter of incorporation authorises the corporation to elect a master de seipsis, a by-law narrowing the body of electors is valid. Rex v. Attwood, 1 N. & M. 286; 4 B. & Ad. 481; 2 L. J., K. B. 57.

The existence of such a by-law may, without the intervention of a jury, be judicially inferred from an ancient usage for the election to be so conducted. Ib.

Though the by-law would be void if it also lessened the numbers of persons eligible to the office, such a view in the presumed by-law will not be inferred from the circumstance of the election by the limited body having almost uniformly fallen upon members of the limited body. Ib.

By a charter of Richard 2, the commonalty of company of mercers, which was one of the ancient guilds of the city of London, was to elect every year four wardens out of the commonalty. The practice from 1391 to 1463 had been for the out-going wardens to appoint their successors. From 1463 a select body had existed under the name of the court of assistants, who held their offices for life, and supplied vacancies in their own body by self-election out of the whole commonalty. The court of assistants had since 1463 always elected the wardens from the commonalty, and of late years exclusively out of their own court. On a quo warranto against the wardens so elected:—Held, that the usage was sufficient to warrant the presumption of a by-law, delegating to the court of assistants the power of electing wardens; and that such by-law would be valid, notwithstanding it limited the right of election to a select and self-elected portion of the whole body. Reg. v. Powell, 3 El. & Bl. 377; 23 L. J., Q. B. 199; 18 Jur. 771.

Bankrupts.]—A by-law of a corporate company declared that "no person who has become a bankrupt, or otherwise insolvent, shall hereafter be admitted a member of the court, unless it be proved that such person after his bankruptcy or insolvency has paid his debts, or shall have established a fair and honourable character for seven years subsequent to his bankruptcy or insolvency:—Held, that these words must be taken to mean not mere inability to pay debts in full, but inability proved by some outward act, a notorious or an avowed insolvency, such as a public stoppage in business, or the calling together of his creditors, and obtaining time, or terms of indulgence, or entering into a deed of composition, so as to mark, as a distinct fact, a period of time from which the insolvency, like the bankruptcy, might be computed. Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 404; 32 L. J., Q. B. 337; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1081; 9 L. T. 60; 11 W. R. 1004. Reversing the judgment of the Exchequer Chamber, 30 L. J., Q. B. 186; and affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench, 3 El. & El. 42.

Where, therefore, a person duly qualified as a freeman, was elected a member of the court, being at that time in insolvent circumstances, and was admitted to office, and was afterwards declared a bankrupt:—Held, that he did not come within the meaning of the by-law. Ib.

After election, but before admission, the person elected was asked by the clerk of the company whether he was solvent, to which he answered that he was as solvent as any member of the court, and could pay 20*s.* in the pound. This representation was false, and was afterwards made the ground of a resolution of the court, passed without notice to him, to remove him from office: —Held, that the insolvency was not within the meaning of the by-law; that the false representation was not one which affected his eligibility; and, consequently, that having been duly elected and admitted to the office, his removal without being heard in his defence was erroneous, and he was entitled to a peremptory mandamus. Ib.

c. In Restraint of Trade.

A by-law in restraint of trade was bad, unless there was a custom to support it. Hesketh v. Braddock, 3 Burr. 147.

A custom to exclude foreigners in a corporation, and a by-law made to support it, were good, but the penalty given by a by-law cannot be to a stranger. Bodwic v. Fennell, 1 Wils. 233.

A by-law, that no person not being free of the pewterers' company should exercise the trade of a pewterer within the city of London, was a by-law in restraint of trade, and was void without proof of a special custom to support it. London Chamberlain v. Compton, 7 D. & R. 597; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 49. S. P., Clark v. Le Cren, 9 B. & C. 52; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 186.

There is no instance of a by-law restraining individual members of a corporation from being concerned, either in any other place or within given limits, in the same trade as that of the corporation. Adley v. Whitstable Co., 17 Ves. 322; 11 R. R. 87.

By-law even in restraint of trade to certain extent, which would not have been good under authority of charter, may be good by custom. Distinction between charter and contract. Ib.

That which may be subject of contract between different interests in partnership, might not be good as a by-law; for instance, an agreement among citizens of London not to sell except in markets of London, would be good, though a by-law to that effect has been declared bad by legislature. Ib.

As to validity of a by-law of a corporation (the company of Whitstable fishermen) that any freemen engaging in any other oyster fishery on the coast of Kent should forfeit 10*l.*, and until payment should be excluded from all share of the profits which should in the meantime be derived, as if he had wholly ceased to be a freeman; and whether such suspension is open to a mandamus as a temporary disfranchisement, quære. Ib. See also 19 Ves. 304; 1 Meriv. 107; 11 R. R. 87.

A power of making by-laws for good government does not authorise a by-law making it unlawful to carry on a lawful trade in a lawful manner. Toronto Corporation v. Virgo, 73 L. T. 449.

As to the Right of Free Trading in Boroughs, notwithstanding any Custom or By-law.]—See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 247.

d. Suing for Breach.

When Action Lies.]—For the breach of a duty imposed by a by-law made under the authority of a statute, the only remedy is that specifically prescribed by the statute. Norton v. Kearon, Ir. R., 6 C. L. 126.

Averments in Declaration.]—When, in a by-law of a corporation, making certain regulations, for breach of which parties are to be liable to be sued for a penalty, there is a separate proviso, making certain exceptions, a party suing for breach of the by-law need not aver, in the declaration, that the case was not within the exception in the proviso; but such fact, if it exists, must be shown by the defendant by way of excuse. Shaw v. Poynter, 4 N. & M. 290; 2 A. & E. 312; 4 L. J., K. B. 16.

A company was incorporated by an ancient charter, and empowered to make by-laws. The company made a by-law that the master and wardens might call, choose, and admit into the livery of the company such person free of the art or mystery of plumbing, as they should think fit; and that every person chosen should, immediately upon notice, prepare himself to serve the same place, at the next meeting of the master and wardens, in such seemly and decent manner as formerly had been used; and that every person chosen into the livery, and accepting the same, should use, wear, and keep the same livery according to the usage and warning given him for that purpose; and that he should bring in and pay at the next meeting, unto the master and wardens, to the use, maintenance, and relief of the company, and to the officers of the company, for entering the same, and for the warning given, such fees as formerly had been paid in like cases; "and which of them so-ever called and chosen into the livery refuseth to pay the fees, or what person or persons called and chosen to be of the same livery refuseth the same, shall forfeit and pay to the master and wardens for the time being, for every such default, 5*l.* or less, at the discretion and pleasure of the master and wardens, so it be not less than 40*s.*" In a declaration on this by-law, against a person who had been elected into the company, and taken the oath to obey the by-law:—Held, first, that the declaration was not bad for not showing that the company was a company that had a livery, a livery being mentioned in the charter and by-law. Piper v. Chappell, 14 M. & W. 624; 9 Jur. 601.

Held, secondly, that it was not bad for not showing that the party was a freeman of the city of London; for that the court could not take notice that none but freemen of the city were admissible into the livery of a company, unless it had been certified to the court by the recorder of London. Ib.

The breach alleged was, that the defendant, although requested, and a reasonable time had elapsed, and he was and continued such freeman, did not nor would attend or serve the place to which he had been chosen, and did not nor would attend and serve the place at the next meeting, or at any subsequent meeting of the master and wardens, but made default, and refused to prepare himself to serve the place:—Held, that the breach was well assigned; for that one refusal, to which by the by-law the penalty was attached, was the refusal to prepare to serve, and to serve at the next court. Ib.

Parties.]—Held, further, that the master and wardens alone might sue for the penalty, though it was reserved to the use of the company generally. Ib.

The master, wardens, and commonalty of a company cannot sue for a penalty forfeited to the master and wardens, for the use of the master, wardens, and company. Feltmakers' Co. v. Davis, 1 Bos. & P. 98.

A company was incorporated by a royal charter and empowered to make by-laws for the government of the society. They made a by-law that every freeman of the company should pay yearly to the company 8*s.*, to be paid quarterly, and that every person refusing should pay twice that sum:—Held, that an action on this by-law was rightly brought in the name of the company. Tobacco-pipe Makers' Co. v. Loder, 14 Q. B. 765; 20 L. J., Q. B. 414; 15 Jur. 1194.

Penalty—Previous Demand.]—A penalty of 20*s.* having been imposed by one of the by-laws of the butchers' company on all persons selling meat on a Sunday within their jurisdiction, it was declared by a subsequent clause that if any offender should deny, refuse, or neglect to pay the penalty, he should be liable to an action of debt:—Held, that it was not necessary to prove a previous demand in order to maintain such action. Butchers' Co. v. Bullock 3 Bos. & P. 434.

—— Statute of Limitations.]—An action for a penalty incurred under a by-law, made by virtue of a royal charter under the great seal, is "an action of debt grounded upon a contract without specialty," within 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, and therefore is barred by that statute if not commenced within six years after the penalty is incurred. Tobacco-pipe Makers' Co. v. Loder, supra.

Proof of By-law.] — Sixty years' usage has been considered as evidence of a by-law. Perkin v. Cutlers' Co., 1 Selw. N. P. 1145.

Evidence of a practice in contravention of a by-law is not receivable. Sells v. Brown, 9 Car. & P. 601.

X. CONTRACTS BY AND WITH.

a. Principles of Validity.

See also cases under COMPANY—CONTRACTS BY AND WITH.

When Ultra Vires.]—Primâ facie all corporate bodies are bound by contracts under their common seal, but this primâ facie power to contract cannot be insisted on as to matters where from the nature of the corporate body or the object of its incorporation, it is expressly or implicitly, by reasonable inference, prohibited from contracting. A contract as to such matters is ultra vires. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 H. L. Cas. 113; 26 L. J., Ch. 482; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

There can be no doubt that a corporation is fully capable of binding itself by any contract except when the statutes by which it is created or regulated, expressly or by necessary implication, prohibit such contract between the parties. Scottish North-Eastern Ry. v. Stewart, 3 Macq. H. L. 382; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 697; 7 W. R. 458. See also Taylor v. Chichester and Midhurst Ry., 39 L. J., Ex. 217; L. R. 4 H. L. 628; 23 L. T. 657. Preston v. Liverpool, Manchester and Newcastle Junction Ry., 5 H. L. Cas. 605; 25 L. J., Ch. 421; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 241; 4 W. R. 383.

Where a corporation is created by an act of parliament for particular purposes, with special powers, their contract will bind them, unless it appears by the express provisions of the statute creating the corporation, or by necessary and reasonable inference, from its enactments, that the contract was ultra vires, or that the legislature meant that such a contract should not be made. Bateman v. Ashton-under-Lyne Corporation, 3 H. & N. 323; 27 L. J., Ex. 458; 6 W. R. 829.

A company was incorporated by an act of parliament for the supply of a district with water from certain sources within the district and empowered to break up highways and place pipes within the district, and to do all other acts which the company should deem necessary for supplying water to the inhabitants, according to the true intent of the act; and penalties were imposed on the company not supplying water to the inhabitants of dwelling-houses within the district. The members of the company were entitled to the net profits to be divided amongst them, except a surplus above seven per cent., which was to go in the reduction of the water rents. In consequence of the increase of population the supply of water within the district became insufficient both in quantity and quality. The company employed an engineer, who reported that a sufficient supply could not be obtained from existing sources, and recommended that a supply should be obtained from a brook beyond the district, which would be sufficient not only for the district but also for some adjoining populous villages. The company then determined to apply to parliament for powers to enlarge their works, so as to make the brook available for the entire district, which it was capable of supplying, and to increase their capital:—Held, that the company might lawfully take steps to apply to parliament for such extension of the undertaking, it being for the benefit of the corporate body; and that the contracts made by the company for the supply of plans, essential to the application to parliament, were not necessarily illegal or void, or otherwise incapable of being enforced against the company in a court of law. Ib.

A municipal corporation, having power by a local act to construct waterworks for supplying the borough with water, entered into an agreement under seal to refer to valuers the amount of compensation money, to be then paid for the damage which the owner, for the time being of a mill and premises, might sustain by the abstraction of the whole of the streams, springs, and waters which the corporation was authorized to take. The corporation at the time did not require, and had not since required, to divert more than a small portion of the streams for completing the waterworks, although they had given the owner notice of their intention to divert the whole:—Held, that such an agreement was not ultra vires of the corporation, as against the ratepayers. Stone v. Yeovil Corporation, 46 L. J., C. P. 137; 2 C. P. D. 99; 36 L. T. 279; 25 W. R. 240—C. A.

By a statute incorporating a gas-light company, it was enacted, that the directors should have the custody of the common seal, and power to use it for the affairs of the company, who were empowered to make orders under seal at their meetings for the government of the company, and for regulating the proceedings of the directors. No power was expressly given by the act to grant annuities. At a special meeting of the company, a committee, previously appointed for certain purposes, reported that it was expedient that the then clerk, whose health was bad, should be invited to retire upon a pension, on condition of abstaining from acts prejudicial to the company ; that such proposal had been made to him, and that he had accepted it. The meeting moved that the report should be received and entered on the minutes, and that the directors should carry into effect the committee's recommendation. No order to this effect was made under seal. The directors, by a deed, in the name of the company, granted an annuity to the clerk on his retirement, subject to conditions of the nature above stated, and they put the corporate seal to it :—Held, that the seal was properly affixed by the directors ; that the granting of such annuity was warranted by the statute ; that it was a concern of the company, within the first-mentioned clause ; and that no order of the company under seal was necessary to authorise it. Clarke v. Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co., 4 B. & Ad. 315 ; 1 N. & M. 206 ; 2 L. J., K. B. 30.

Breach of Covenant.]—Where a corporation is created for certain purposes with power to sue and be sued, and to borrow money for the completion of those purposes, and to secure the repayment of such money by an instrument which on its face imports a covenant for repayment, if money is so borrowed and so secured, and not duly repaid, an action may be maintained against the corporation on the breach of the covenant, although there are no specific statutory provisions enabling the corporation to bind itself by such a covenant. Eastern Union Ry. v. Hart (in error), 8 Ex. 116 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 20 ; 17 Jur. 89—Ex. Ch.

Bill of Exchange.]—An action will lie on a bill of exchange against a trading corporation, whose power of drawing and accepting bills is recognised by statute. Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 294 ; 24 R. R. 325. And see Broughton v. Manchester Waterworks, 3 B. & Ald. 1 ; 22 R. R. 278.

But a railway company incorporated by a special act of parliament containing the usual clauses, cannot draw, accept or indorse bills of exchange. Bateman v. Mid-Wales Ry., 1 H. & R. 508 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 205 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 499 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 453 ; 14 W. R. 672.

Effect of Sealing.]—"Generally speaking, all corporations are bound by a covenant under their corporate seal, properly affixed, which is the legal mode of expressing the will of the entire body, and are bound as much as an individual is by his own deed, . . . and as much as all the members of a partnership would be by a contract in which all concurred."—Per Parke, B. South Yorks. Ry. v. G. N. Ry., 9 Ex. 55.

The contracts of corporations with the proper seal affixed are in like position to those of private persons ; so that where a contract with their common seal affixed is sent by a corporation to the other party to the agreement to be signed and is so signed ; or having been first signed by the other party an alteration is made in its terms by the corporation which is assented to by the other party, and the corporation seal is subsequently affixed, such contract is good. Dartford Union v. Trickett, 59 L. T. 754 ; 53 J. P. 277.

Though affixing the common seal to a deed of conveyance of a corporation is sufficient to pass the estate without a formal delivery, if done with that intent : yet it has no such effect if the order for affixing the seal is accompanied with a direction to their clerk to retain the conveyance in his hands till accounts were adjusted with the purchaser. Derby Canal Co. v. Wilmot, 9 East, 360 ; 9 R. R. 577.

In an action on a bond against a corporate company, where it is shown that the bond has been sealed with the seal of the company by the proper officer, it is competent to the defendant, under the plea of non est factum, to prove that several of the requisitions of the act necessary to the validity of the execution have not been complied with. Hill v. Manchester Waterworks Co., 2 N. & M. 573 ; 5 B. & Ad. 866 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 19.

A contract under the seal of an incorporated company is not valid unless the seal was affixed with the authority of the directors meeting together as a board. D'Arcy v. Tamar, Kit-hill and Callington Ry., 36 L. J., Ex. 37 ; L. R. 2 Ex. 158 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 548 ; 14 L. T. 626 ; 14 W. R. 968 ; 4 H. & C. 463.

Therefore, where by the special act of an incorporated company three directors were a quorum, and the secretary obtained at one time the authority of two directors to seal a bond for money due to the engineer of the company, and at another time the authority of another director :—Held, that the bond was not the deed of the company. Ib.

Contract by Churchwardens—No Common Seal.]—A., B., C., D., E., and F., churchwardens and overseers, contracted with G. for themselves and their successors, churchwardens and overseers. Proviso, that nothing should be construed to extend to any personal covenant, or in anywise to affect them in their private capacity :—Held, that although the churchwardens and overseers might be a corporation, yet, having no common seal of office, they could not bind their successors ; that the contract therefore constituted a personal covenant ; that the proviso was repugnant to it, and therefore void. Furnival

v. Coombs, 6 Scott (N.R.) 522 ; 5 Man. & G. 736 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 265 ; 7 Jur. 399.

Contracts as Board of Health.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 12, the municipal corporation of a borough is constituted a local board of health, and by s. 85 power is given to such board to enter into contracts for works, with a proviso that, before contracting, an estimate is to be obtained from the surveyor of the board ; and by s. 140, the expenses incurred by the board are to be borne and be paid out of the rates authorised by the act to be levied for that purpose :—Held, that a corporation may be sued on contracts entered into in their character as a board of health, and that the proviso in s. 85 is only directory, and not a condition precedent to the right to contract, although its non-observance might affect the right of the board to levy a rate for the purpose of such a contract. Nowell v. Worcester Corporation, 9 Ex. 457 ; 2 C. L. R. 981 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 139 ; 18 Jur. 64.

The Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 24 (repealed), which enacts, that in corporate boroughs the local boards "shall be the mayor, aldermen and burgesses acting by the council"—does not make the local board a new and separate body, but in substance enacts that in corporate boroughs the corporation shall be the local board ; and if in making contracts the name and style of the corporation "acting as the local board" are used, the corporation is the essential body and contracting party, and may be sued as such on the contracts. Andrews v. Ryde Corporation, L. R. 9 Ex. 302 ; 43 L. J., Ex. 174 ; 23 W. R. 58.

Restrictive Covenant—Building Scheme—Approval of Treasury.]—Although, in ordinary cases, where the conditions of sale, subject to which a sale, whether by auction or by private contract, is made, state that every purchaser shall enter into certain restrictive covenants limiting, for the benefit of the adjoining land, his right of user of the land conveyed to him, such conditions constitute a scheme enforceable by any purchaser against the vendor and any other purchaser with notice ; yet, if the vendor be a municipal corporation, ss. 108 & 109 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, make it necessary that the approval of the Treasury (or, since the Local Government Act, 1888, of the Local Government Board) should be obtained not only to the conveyance to the purchaser, but also to the restrictive covenants on the vendor's part which are to be implied from the conditions. If, therefore, the Treasury has consented only to the conveyance and not to the implied covenants, such covenants cannot be enforced against the corporation, or against other purchasers from them even with notice. Semble (per Kay, L. J.), to establish that the Treasury have approved of such a scheme, it is not enough to show that, having had constructive notice of it, they have approved the sale ; it must appear that they have had full knowledge, and have deliberately signified their approval of the scheme. Davis v. Leicester Corporation, 63 L. J., Ch. 440 ; [1894] 2 Ch. 208 ; 7 R. 609 ; 70 L. T. 599 ; 42 W. R. 610—C. A.

Contract to teach a Trade.]—An apprenticeship deed, entered into with a corporation, is binding. Burnley Equitable Co-operative Society v. Casson, 60 L. J., M. C. 59 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 75 ; 63 L. T. 652 ; 39 W. R. 124 ; 55 J. P. 166.

Contract entered into before Incorporation.]—An incorporated company will be bound by the agreement of the members acting on its behalf before incorporation, if it has received the benefit of the agreement. Edwards v. Grand Junction Ry., 7 Sim. 337 ; 1 Myl. & Cr. 650 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 47.

Purchase by Municipality from Hospital in connection with it—Void in Equity.]—A hospital, having a corporate character, was established in close connection with a municipal corporation. The ex-mayor was to be the governor, the masters and assistants were elected from the corporation, and the mayor and aldermen were visitors :—Held, that the corporation and hospital were in equity incapable of contracting, and a purchase by the corporation of property belonging to the hospital was set aside. Att.-Gen. v. Plymouth Corporation, 9 Beav. 67 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 109.

b. WHERE SEALING UNNECESSARY.

Executed Contract.]—In the case of a contract entered into with a corporation, which is executed before action brought, and under which the defendant has received the whole benefit of the consideration for which he bargained, it is no answer to an action by the corporation, that the corporation itself was not originally bound by the contract, by reason of its not having been made under their common seal. Fishmongers' Co. v. Robertson, 6 Scott (N.R.) 56 ; 5 Man. & G. 131 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 185.

A steamship corporation bought by a parol contract of the defendant a quantity of ale for the use of the passengers on board the corporation's steam vessel, and paid the defendant for the same. The ale proved unfit for use :—Held, that the contract, although not under seal, being executed, the defendant was liable to the corporation in damages. Australian Royal Mail Steam Navigation Co. v. Marzetti, 11 Ex. 228 ; 3 C. L. R. 1179 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 273.

To enforce an executory contract against a corporation, it may be necessary to shew that it was by deed ; but where the corporation has acted as upon an executed contract, it is to be presumed against them that everything has been done that was necessary to make it a binding contract upon both parties, they having had all the advantage they would have had if the contract had been regularly made. Doe d. Pennington v. Taniere, 12 Q. B. 998 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 49 ; 13 Jur. 119.

An official assignee in bankruptcy verbally agreed with a corporation, who were mortgagees of the insolvent, to release to them the equity of redemption in consideration of their not proving their debt, which exceeded the value of the mortgaged property :—Held, that, after the assignee had released the equity of redemption, the corporation were precluded from proving the debt, notwithstanding that the agreement was not under seal, and, therefore, that the consideration for the release had not failed. Melbourne Banking Corporation v. Brougham, 48 L. J., P. C. 12 ; 4 App. Cas. 156 ; 48 L. T. 1.

An action is maintainable against a corporation aggregate on an executed parol contract. Beverley v. Lincoln Gaslight and Coke Co., 2 N. & P. 283; 6 A. & E. 829; W. W. & D. 519; 7 L. J., Q. B. 113.

By a private act of parliament, three railway companies were consolidated into one company, but the provisions of this act were not to take effect till the commissioners of railways had certified that half the capital had been paid up and expended on the railways. The plaintiff served the company with burning oil and carriage oil for their carriages, and colours for their carriage department, under orders not under their common seal:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover against the company in an action for goods sold, without proof that the commissioners of railways had certified, and although the company had not contracted by any instrument under their common seal. Denton v. East Anglian Ry., 3 Car. & K. 16.

—— Use and Occupation.]—A corporation may maintain an action on an executed contract; therefore they may sue for use and occupation, where the tenant has held premises under them and paid rent. Stafford Corporation v. Till, 4 Bing. 75; 12 Moore, 260; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 77.

So a corporation aggregate may maintain an action for the use and occupation of tolls, although they did not grant the tolls to the occupier by any instrument under their common seal. Carmarthen Corporation v. Lewis, 6 Car. & P. 608.

Where a corporation has actually used and occupied land, for a corporate purpose, by permission of the owner, it is liable for use and occupation, though there is no contract under seal for such occupation. Lowe v. North-Western Ry., 7 Railw. Cas. 524; 18 Q. B. 632; 21 L. J., Q. B. 361; 17 Jur. 375.

Where a corporation so occupying was a railway company, within the provision of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16 (Companies Clauses Act), s. 97, that any contract which, if made between private persons, would be valid, though made by parol only, may be made by parol on behalf of the company by the directors, and shall bind the company, such parol contract may be presumed against the company in an action for use and occupation, in the absence of direct evidence to the contrary, upon proof of actual occupation by the corporation or its agent. Ib.

Ancillary to Purposes of Corporation.]—A trading corporation may make a binding contract, not under seal, relating to matters necessarily incident to the purposes and objects for which the corporation was created. Henderson v. Australian Royal Mail Steam Navigation Co., 5 El. & Bl. 409; 24 L. J., Q. B. 322; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 830; 3 W. R. 571.

Whether any commercial or trading corporation can contract without seal or not depends, not upon the magnitude or the insignificance of the subject-matter, but upon whether or not the contract is for a purpose connected with the objects of the incorporation. South of Ireland Colliery Co. v. Waddle, 37 L. J., C. P. 211; L. R. 3 C. P. 463; 18 L. T. 405; 16 W. R. 756. Affirmed, 38 L. J., C. P. 338; L. R. 4 C. P. 617; 17 W. R. 896—Ex. Ch.

A company incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862, for the working of collieries, contracted with an engineer for the erection of a pumping-engine and machinery for that purpose, and paid him part of the price. In an action by the company against the engineer for a breach of contract in refusing to deliver the engine and machinery:—Held, that the action was maintainable, though the contract was not under seal. Ib.

By the articles of association of the company it was provided that the business thereof should be carried on under the management of the board of directors; and that the board, in addition to the powers and authorities by the statute and by the articles of association expressly conferred upon them, might execute all such agreements, and generally do all such acts and things as were by the statute and the articles of association directed or authorised to be executed or done by the company in meeting:—Held, that the contract in question was warranted by the articles of association, and that there was nothing in them or in the statute requiring it to be under seal. Ib.

An action is maintainable by a trading corporation on an executory contract for the supply of goods, for the manufacturing and supply of which the company was incorporated. Church v. Imperial Gaslight and Coke Co., 3 N. & P. 35; 6 A. & E. 846; 1 W. W. & H. 137; 7 L. J., Q. B. 118.

Where the guardians of a union gave a verbal order for iron gates for the union workhouse; and the gates were supplied accordingly, and adopted by them:—Held, that this was a contract incident to the purposes for which they were incorporated, and therefore within the exceptions to the general rule, requiring contracts by corporations to be under seal. Sanders v. St. Neots' Union Guardians, 8 Q. B. 810; 15 L. J., M. C. 104; 10 Jur. 566.

Wherever the purposes for which a corporation is created render it necessary that work should be done or goods supplied to carry such purposes into effect, and such work is done or such goods are supplied and accepted by the corporation, and the whole consideration for payment is executed, the corporation cannot refuse to pay, upon the ground that the contract was not under seal. Clarke v. Cuckfield Union Guardians, 1 B. C. C. 81; 21 L. J., Q. B. 349; 16 Jur. 686.

Where, therefore, at a meeting of a board of the guardians of a poor-law union (which board was regularly constituted), a contract was entered into, not under seal, for the erecting of water-closets in the union, and they were accordingly put up:—Held, that the guardians were liable upon the contract for work and labour, and goods sold and delivered. Ib.

See Smart v. West Ham Union, 10 Ex. 867; 24 L. J., Ex. 201.

Guardians of a poor-law union, suspecting fraud by their clerk in the union accounts, employed the plaintiff to investigate them, and during the progress of such investigation, and after the appointment of a new clerk, also employed the plaintiff to make up the union accounts for the last half-year, which involved a fresh investigation by him of the old accounts. The plaintiff was employed under three several resolutions of the board of guardians, entered in their minute-book, but no contract was made under the seal of the board. In an action against the board for work and labour:—Held, by Erle, J. (dubitante Crompton, J.), that as the work done was incidental and necessary to the purposes for which the board of guardians was created, and had been performed by the plaintiff at the request of the board, he was entitled to recover, though the contract was not under seal. Haigh v. North Bierley Union Guardians, El. Bl. & El 873; 28 L. J., Q. B. 62; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 511; 6 W. R. 679.

A. supplied coals from time to time to the guardians of a poor-law union, for the use of the workhouse, under articles of agreement executed by A., but not under the seal of the guardians. The guardians received and used some of the coals. In an action for the price of the coals delivered:—Held, that as the coals had been accepted by the guardians, and were such as must necessarily be from time to time supplied for the very purposes for which the guardians were incorporated, they were liable to pay for the coals although the contract was not under seal. Nicholson v. Bradfield Union Guardians, 7 B. & S. 747; 35 L. J., Q. B. 176; L. R. 1 Q. B. 620; 14 L. T. 830; 14 W. R. 731.

Where an act of parliament, creating a corporation, casts upon them the duty of paying a sum of money, debt will lie against them to recover that sum, although there is no contract under seal. Tilson v. Warwick Gaslight Co., 4 B. & C. 982; 7 D. & R. 575; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 53; 28 R. R. 529.

Ratification.]—The deed of settlement of an electric telegraph company, incorporated by royal charter, empowered the directors to manage the affairs of the company, and to exercise all the powers of the company at large; but contracts, the consideration for which did not exceed 50*l.*, were required to be signed by at least three individual directors, or sealed with the seal of the company, under the authority of a special meeting, or a resolution of the directors. The chairman of the company made a parol agreement with the plaintiff, by which he was to be allowed 50*l.* per cent. on messages sent and received through the company's lines, and with his own hand entered a memorandum of the agreement in the minute-book of the company. The agreement was afterwards referred to and recognised in a correspondence between the plaintiff and the secretary of the company, and accounts were rendered and payments received by the plaintiff under the agreement by cheques; but there had not been a contract signed by three directors, or under the seal of the company:—Held, that assuming the agreement to be ultra vires of the chairman, it had been ratified and adopted by the company, so as to render them liable. Reuter v. Electric Telegraph Co., 6 El. & Bl. 346; 26 L. J., Q. B. 46; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1245; 4 W. R. 564.

If the mayor of a town order weights and measures, and, when supplied, they are examined at a full meeting of the corporation, this is such a recognition of the contract as will make the corporation liable to pay for them, although the order for them was not under the common seal of the corporation; and the fact that the mayor was afterwards ousted from his office by a judgment of the court makes no difference. De Grave v. Monmouth Corporation, 4 Car. & P. 111.

Contracts of Constant Occurrence and Urgency.]—A municipal corporation was possessed of a dock of which it allowed the use to ships needing repairs, under certain printed regulations. The plaintiff entered into a parol agreement with the corporation for the use of the dock, upon the terms of such regulations. By these regulations it was provided that the dock should be let to parties requiring the same for the repair of vessels at such rates as the council of the borough should from time to time sanction, and that vessels entered in a book kept by the borough treasurer should be allowed to enter the dock, as far as possible, according to the order of entry in the book. The regulations contained provisions that the corporation should be entitled to detain the vessel in the dock until the dockage was paid: that the corporation foreman should open and shut the dock gates; and various other provisions tending to show that the corporation intended to retain possession of and control over the dock while in use by vessels. The corporation did not admit the plaintiff's vessel into the dock in her turn:—Held, in an action for breach of contract by him against the corporation, that the contract was not for an interest in land within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, and therefore need not be in writing; and, secondly, that the contract need not be under the seal of the corporation, being in respect of a matter of frequent ordinary occurrence, and often of urgency. Wells v. Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation, 44 L. J., C. P. 257; L. R. 10 C. P. 402; 32 L. T. 615; 23 W. R. 562.

Specific Performance of Agreement—Acquiescence.]—A corporation passed a resolution in 1860, agreeing to let to the plaintiff the flat part of the beach opposite to his field, for 300 years, at a nominal rent. He claimed all the beach comprised between lines drawn in prolongation of the sides of his field, and he built a wall and terrace along the part so claimed. In 1864 the corporation gave him notice to quit, and, after much negotiation, in 1869 brought an ejectment against him, and thereupon he filed a bill for specific performance:—Held, that though the agreement was not under seal the corporation was bound by acquiescence, and must perform the agreement to grant a lease. Crook v. Seaford Corporation, L. R. 6 Ch. 551; 25 L. T. 1; 19 W. R. 938.

If a regular corporate resolution has been passed, and upon faith of it expenditure has been incurred, the court will compel corporation to make legal grant in pursuance of resolution, although not under corporate seal. Marshall v. Queensborough Corporation, 1 Sim. & S. 520.

Appointment of Solicitor.]—Where, by an act incorporating a railway company, the directors were empowered to appoint and displace any of the officers of the company, the appointment of an attorney to the company need not be under seal. Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., 5 Railw. Cas. 332; 5 D. & L. 431; 17 L. J., Q. B. 102; 12 Jur. 1025.

An attorney authorised to appear for a party to a suit, has, incidentally, authority to refer it, without any fresh authority to that effect; and an attorney having appeared for a corporation in an action, to the knowledge of the directors, the corporation is bound by his acts as their attorney, though he was not authorised to appear under seal. Faviell v. Eastern Counties Ry., 2 Ex. 344; 6 D. & L. 54; 17 L. J., Ex. 297.

As to the Validity of an Appointment not under Seal of an Architect by a School Board, and the Liability of the Board to pay for Plans prepared by him under Orders not under Seal.] —See Scott v. Great Clifton School Board, 14 Q. B. D. 500, post, sub School.

Seal affixed when Contract partly performed.] —By s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, every contract made by an urban authority whereof the value or amount exceeds 50*l*. shall be in writing and sealed with the common seal of such authority. The defendants, an urban authority, by contract not under seal employed the plaintiffs as engineers to perform certain work. The plaintiffs performed part of the work exceeding in value 50*l*., and then required the defendants to affix their seal to the contract. This the defendants did, believing that it was for the benefit of the ratepayers of the district that the contract should be completed :—Held, that as part of the work was unperformed when the seal was affixed, and there was consideration for affixing it in the plaintiff's promise to complete the work, it was competent for the defendants to constitute the contract a good contract under seal, within s. 174, in respect of the work already done, and therefore that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain their action for the value of that work. Mellis v. Shirley Local Board, 54 L. J., Q. B. 408 ; 14 Q. B. D. 911 ; 52 L. T. 544.

c. NECESSITY OF SEALING.

Additional Works—Quantum meruit.] —A builder covenanted with a corporation to do certain specified work for a sum of money, and that if their architects should require any alterations or additions in the progress of the works, the architects should give to the builder written instructions signed by them, and that he should not be considered as having authority for the same without such written instructions. The corporation covenanted to pay him the agreed sum and the value of the additional work, if any. The plaintiff executed all the works to be done for the specified sum ; and the architects required him to make certain additions, by means of written instructions, signed by them ; and he executed all the additional works, and the corporation took possession of all the works :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to be paid on a quantum meruit in respect of the additional works, as the corporation was incapable of making a new contract by parol. Lamprell v. Billericay Union, 3 Ex. 283 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 282. See Clark v. Cuckfield Union Guardians, 1 B. C. C. 81 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 349 ; 16 Jur. 686.

Extra Work.] —An incorporated company entered into a contract under seal with A. for the execution of works, according to the terms of a specification annexed, which contained provisions for extra work. He entered upon the work under the superintendence of the company's engineer, and also under such superintendence, and with the approbation of the engineer, executed extra works, which, however, could not be considered within the provisions of the contract under seal. He afterwards made a claim upon the company to a much larger amount than that specified by the contract, and the directors paid him a sum generally on account. By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, s. 97, the directors of such a company may make parol contracts without the same being reduced into writing where such contracts would, if entered into between private persons, be valid, and by s. 98, the directors are bound to enter minutes of such contracts in a book, and by a clause of the special act of the company, three directors constituted a quorum :—Held, that as there was not any evidence that the company had contracted for this extra work under seal, or that they had entered into a contract for the same under the terms of the special act, or of any general act authorising the same, they were not liable to A. for the extra work so performed by him. Homersham v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 6 Railw. Cas. 790 ; 6 Ex. 137 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 193.

Agreement for Certain Work—Dismissal.]—A railway company incorporated by act of parliament entered into an agreement, not under seal, with a contractor, that he should execute certain works upon the railway for the purpose of changing the system of locomotion which they then employed, the rope and stationary engine system, to the ordinary locomotive principle. The contractor, in pursuance of the agreement, entered upon the works, and performed a portion of them ; but before they were completed he was dismissed by the company :—Held, that he could not recover the value of this work. Diggle v. London and Blackwall Ry., 6 Railw. Cas. 590 ; 5 Ex. 442 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 308 ; 14 Jur. 937.

Contract under Seal—Extras verbally ordered by Surveyor—Liability.]—By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 24, burial boards appointed under that act are incorporated and have a common seal ; and by s. 31 a board may enter into contracts with any person for building chapels and other premises, and doing any other works, which contracts must specify the work to be done, the prices to be paid, the time within which the work is to be done, and the penalty the contractor is to pay for non-performance ; the contracts are also to be entered in a book to be kept by the board for that purpose. The plaintiff contracted to do certain repairs to the chapels and premises of the defendants for 38*l*. The contract was accepted by the defendants, and the seal of the board was affixed to it. During the work the surveyor of the defendants verbally ordered the plaintiff to do many extra small repairs which were not included in the contract. The plaintiff sought to recover 13*l*. the cost of these extras, from the defendants, who denied their liability on the ground that they had not been contracted for under the seal of the board : —Held, by Fry, L.J., that the board was not liable, as they were bound to contract for such work as the plaintiff had executed strictly in accordance with the terms of s. 31. By Mathew, J., that the board was liable, as the extras were each of trivial importance, and the board could not be expected to affix their seal to every order for small matters as they were required. Stevens v. Hounslow Burial Board, 61 L. T. 839 ; 38 W. R. 236 ; 54 J. P. 309.

Local Improvements.]—A municipal corporation cannot enter into a contract to pay a sum of money out of the corporate funds, for the making of improvements within the borough, except under the common seal. Ludlow Corporation v. Charlton, 6 M. & W. 815 ; 8 Car. & P. 242 ; 10 L. J. Ex. 75 ; 4 Jur. 657.

Under Public Health Act.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, which establishes local boards, and gives them the power to make contracts binding on the district rates, requires, in the case of non-corporate districts, that the board shall cause a seal to be made for the use of such board in the execution of the act, and s. 85 requires that all contracts above 10*l.* shall be in a certain form in writing; and, in the case of a non-corporate district, sealed with the seal of the board, and signed by five or more members thereof:—Held, that s. 85 is not merely directory, but creates a condition, and therefore that a contract not under seal is void. Frend v. Dennett, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 576; 27 L. J., C. P. 314; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 897; 5 L. T. 73.

Section 85 of the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63) and s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55) enact (without any words of prohibition) that "every contract made by a local board or by an urban authority, whereof the value or amount exceeds [10*l.*] 50*l.*, shall be in writing, and sealed with the common seal of such authority." A local board and an urban authority under these acts verbally directed their surveyor to employ the plaintiff to prepare plans for new offices. The plans were prepared and submitted to and approved and used by the local board, but the proposed offices were never erected. There was no contract under the corporate seal, nor any ratification under seal of the act of the surveyor in procuring the plans; nor was there any resolution of the board authorising their preparation:—Held, that, by reason of the non-compliance with the statutory requirements, the contract could not be enforced, notwithstanding that the jury found that the board authorised their surveyor to procure the plans and ratified this act, that new offices were necessary for the purposes of the board, and that the plans were necessary for the erection of them. Hunt v. Wimbledon Local Board, 47 L. J., C. P. 540. Affirmed, 48 L. J., C. P. 207; 4 C. P. D. 48; 39 L. T. 35; 27 W. R. 123—C. A.

Not Incidental to Purposes of Corporation.]—The guardians of a union, who are, by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, s. 7, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27, s. 16, a corporate body, by direction of the poor law commissioners, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 3, entered into an agreement, under seal, with a party for making a survey and a map of one of the parishes comprised in the union. A reduced plan being also required, a verbal order for it was given to the surveyor. In an action for the price of the reduced plan:—Held, that this was not a contract incident to the purposes for which the guardians were incorporated, and therefore not within the exceptions to the general rule, requiring contracts by a corporation to be made under seal. Paine v. Strand Guardians, 8 Q. B. 326; 15 L. J., M. C. 89; 10 Jur. 308.

—— Copper Miners—Contract for Rails.]—In an action for breach of a contract to purchase from the plaintiffs iron rails, it was proved that the plaintiffs were incorporated by a charter for the purpose of carrying on the business of copper miners, and the contract in question, which was not under seal, had been made by an agent on behalf of the plaintiffs with the defendant:—Held, first, that the action could not be maintained by the corporation as the contract was not under seal, and did not fall within any of the exceptions to the general rule that a corporation can only bind itself by deed. Copper Miners' Co. v. Fox, 16 Q. B. 229; 20 L. J., Q. B. 174; 15 Jur. 703.

Held, secondly, that the contract was not incidental or ancillary to carrying on the business of copper miners, and was therefore not binding on the corporation. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that no other charter authorising the company to deal in iron could be presumed to exist, the charter which was given in evidence not supporting such an authority. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that as the corporation could not be sued on this contract, and as the alleged promise by them formed the consideration for the defendant's promise, the corporation could not sue upon the contract. Ib.

—— Scavenging Docks.]—Action by a corporation incorporated as a dock company, by a statute containing no express provisions as to the manner in which the corporation might be bound by contracts. The action was on an agreement to execute a contract under seal for scavenging the docks for a year. Plea, that the agreement on behalf of the corporation was by parol only, and not authorised under its seal:—Held, that though a corporation, incorporated for trading purposes, has impliedly power to contract by parol for purposes necessary to carry on the trade, the subject of this contract was not of that nature; that the corporation, therefore, was not bound; and therefore the defendant was not liable; and the plea was good. London Dock Co. v. Sinnott, 8 El. & Bl. 347; 27 L. J., Q. B. 129; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 70; 6 W. R. 165.

—— To Supply Water-Pipes.]—A corporation cannot sue on an executory contract not under seal, unless empowered by its act of incorporation. An act of parliament empowered the directors of a water company to make "contracts, agreements, and bargains with the workmen, agents, undertakers, and other persons engaged in the undertaking":—Held, that an agreement for the fabrication and supply of pipes at certain stated periods, was not valid unless under seal. East London Waterworks Co. v. Bailey, 4 Bing. 283; 12 Moore, 533; 5 L. J. (O S) C. P. 175. See remarks on this case in Church v. Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co., 6 A. & E. 246; ante, col. 660.

Appointment of Officers—Medical Officer to Corporation.]—The appointment by a corporation, such as a board of poor-law guardians, of a person to be medical officer to the corporation for any fixed or definite period of time, ought to be under seal. Dyte v. St. Pancras Board of Guardians, 27 L. T. 342.

—— Engineer.]—A municipal corporation, by a contract not under its common seal, employed an engineer to perform services for the promoting of a bill in parliament to enable the corporation to purchase certain gasworks and to become manufacturers and vendors of gas not only within, but also outside, the municipal boundaries:—Held, that the corporation acted ultra vires in so employing the engineer, and that he could not recover for his services. Clemenshaw v. Dublin Corporation, Ir. R. 10, C. L. 1; Cf. Bateman v. Ashton-under-Lyne, col. 654.

—— Clerk.]—The contract for the engagement of a clerk to the master of a workhouse by a board of guardians must in order to bind the guardians, be under their seal Austin v Bethnal Green Guardians 43 L J C P 100, L R 9 C P 91, 29 L T 807, 22 W R 406

Trustees were created by statute a body corporate, for the management of the navigation of a river, with a common seal and a perpetual succession The statute empowered them to levy tolls, and enacted that it should be lawful for them to allow to any officer or servant an annuity or allowance Their clerk removable at their will and pleasure, for forty years having in 1865 resigned, owing to ill health the trustees duly passed a resolution (not sealed) that his resignation "be accepted and that a retiring pension of 300*l* per annum, free of income tax, be granted to him during the remainder of his life The pension was duly paid quarterly for some years until the defendants, who had meanwhile been substituted by statute for the trustees with all their powers, and subject to all their liabilities duly passed a resolution to reduce the pension to 150*l* per annum, to be paid during their pleasure and made the first quarterly payment on the reduced scale The clerk having brought an action to recover the difference —Held, that the resolution of 1865 was revocable, and that he could not recover Marchant v Lea Conservancy Board, 43 L J, Ex 44, L R 9 Ex 60, 30 L T 367—Ex Ch

—— Solicitor]—A corporation cannot make a valid appointment of an attorney to conduct suits, or manage the affairs of the corporation, except under its common seal And such attorney, if such appointment has not been under the common seal, cannot recover for business done, although the council of the borough has passed a resolution, directing that the business should be done by him, and was cognizant of its progress Arnold v Poole Corporation, 5 Scott (N R) 741 2 D (N S) 574, 4 Man & G 860, 12 L J, C P 97, 7 Jur 653

The Corporation of London, which by custom appoints in each year an attorney by warrant, without sealing or signing, is estopped by matter of record to say that his act is not their act Ib

A municipal corporation is not liable for the costs of an attorney conducting on their behalf an opposition to a bill in parliament affecting their privileges, unless the retainer is under the common seal Sutton v Spectaclemakers Co, 10 L T 411, 12 W R 742

A highway board passed a resolution directing their clerk to take the necessary steps to oppose, on behalf of the board, a bill in parliament which contained provisions contrary to the Railway Clauses Acts, and which would prejudicially affect certain of the highways within the district In pursuance of such resolution the clerk to the board instructed the plaintiffs, a firm of solicitors, to oppose the bill In an action by the plaintiffs to recover their costs of such opposition from the board —Held, that the purpose for which they had been retained was not incidental to the purpose for which the highway board was incorporated, and that as they had not been retained under the seal of the board they had no right of action against the board Phelps v. Upton Snodsbury Highway Board, 1 Cab &. E 524, 49 J P 408 Cf Reg v. Cumberland, and Favrell v Eastern Counties Ry., col. 662

—— Coal Meter]—In a declaration, it was alleged that a corporation had, by persons appointed by them, the sole and exclusive privilege of measuring and weighing all coals imported into the port of London and also the right and privilege of appointing to perform such work a sufficient number of fit and proper persons and of fixing a reasonable rate of payment for such work such payment to be made to the persons who should do the work and to be for their use and benefit And the declaration charged the defendant with importing coals without paying for the weighing of them, and that the plaintiff had been appointed meter, to whom such payment ought to be made In proof of the plaintiff's appointment as meter, he gave in evidence an entry, not under seal, in the corporation books stating that he was so appointed The plaintiff had ever since acted as a coal-meter —Held that payment in respect of the measurement was for the benefit of the meter only that he was an officer and not a mere servant of the corporation and therefore in appointment under seal was necessary Smith v Cartwright, 6 Ex 927, 20 L J, Ex 401

—— Agent]—A corporation was established by act of parliament, one section of which enacted that the court of directors should have power to use the common seal on behalf of the company, and all contracts relating to its affairs, which should be signed by any three of the directors, in pursuance of a resolution of a court of directors, should be binding on the company and all parties Another section enacted that the directors should have full power to employ the workmen, and regulate the traffic on the line and the rates and tolls, and appoint and displace the bankers and solicitors of the company, and all such managers officers, agents, clerks, workmen and servants as they should think proper By a resolution made at a court of directors, and signed by the chairman the plaintiff was appointed agent to the company, to negotiate with the London and North Western Railway Company or any other railway company, for the lease of the line of the company —Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover for his service in respect of such negotiation, the resolution not having been sealed by the corporate seal or signed by three directors Cope v Thames Haven Dock and Ry, 6 Railw Cas 83, 3 Ex 841, 18 L J, Ex 345

—— Director]—At a general meeting of a company, incorporated by act of parliament, a resolution was agreed to and entered in their books, but not under seal, that a remuneration of one guinea should be allowed to each director for every attendance at a committee or a court — Held, that there was no contract upon which a director could maintain an action against the company for such remuneration, as, even if, in the absence of a sealed contract, a clerk or servant could have sued, the directors did not occupy an analogous position Dunstan v. Imperial Gas Light Co, 3 B & Ad 125, 1 L J, K B 49

Increase of Salary]—An agreement by a corporation with one of its officers for an increase of the salary of an office retained by him, as a compensation for the loss of an office of which he has been deprived under 5 & 6 Will 4, c 75, though upon an executed consideration, is not binding upon the corporation, if the contract is not under the common seal of the corporation Reg v Stamford Corporation, 6 Q B 433, 8 Jur 909

Use and Occupation]—Although a corporation may be liable for use and occupation of premises, it can only be so for the period of actual occupation, and a continuous occupation for several years will not render the corporation tenants from year to year Finlay v Bristol and Exeter Ry, 7 Ex 409, 7 Railw Cas 449, 21 L J, Ex 117

A railway company, through their solicitor hired rooms from the 16th December, 1846, for one year, but occupied them until the 16th December, 1848, previously to which time they removed their furniture and effects, left the keys in the doors, and paid the rent up to this day, but gave no notice to quit —Held, that the company was not liable in an action for use and occupation for rent subsequently to 16th December, 1848 Ib

Verbal Agreement to pay for Buildings Confirmed by Resolution]—The agent of a railway company made a verbal agreement with the contractor for the line, that if he would build on land of the company certain cottages more substantially than would be required for his own purposes and would leave them for the use of the company, then the company would pay him 5,000*l* The cottages were accordingly built and when the railway was completed the contractor left them on the land, and the agent of the company made an agreement with the contractor that he should be paid 500*l* a year for the cottages by way of rent, with an option to the company to purchase them for 5 000*l* This agreement was confirmed by a resolution of the board of directors The company paid the 500*l* a year for some years, and then refused to pay —Held, that the claim of the contractor being simply for payment of money could not be enforced in the Court of Chancery, and that though the contractor was unable to sue at law because the agreement was not under seal, he did not thereby obtain an equity to enforce a claim for money Crampton v Varna Ry 41 L J Ch 817, L R 7 Ch 562 20 W R 713

Held, also, that inasmuch as the contractor did not act in ignorance of the rights of the company, he could not claim compensation for having been induced to build on the land of the company Ib

Specific Performance]—A court of equity will not compel a corporation to execute a legal assurance of corporate property, in pursuance of a contract not under seal, unless valuable consideration for the contract be expressly proved, or evidence be given of acts done or omitted by the contracting party, on the faith of the expressed legal assurance Quere, whether a corporation can borrow money except under seal Wilmot v Coventry Corporation, 1 Y & Coll 518

Letting Tolls]—A municipal corporation and local board, on the 17th of July, caused certain tolls to be put up for letting by auction, under conditions by which the purchaser was immediately on the fall of the hammer to pay a month's rent in advance, and to produce two sureties, who were forthwith to sign the conditions and a draft lease The highest bidder at the auction was declared the purchaser, and he paid a month's rent in advance, and signed an agreement to become lessee indorsed on the conditions, but he did not then, nor at any subsequent time, produce two sureties, and the corporation ultimately, in pursuance of the conditions, determined the contract and sold the tolls at a loss. The contract was not executed by the corporation under its common seal, nor signed on its behalf by any person authorised under seal to do so After the sale the corporation, on the 7th of August, by resolution, which was entered on the minutes under seal adopted the report of a committee, to the effect that the tolls had been put up to auction, and that the defendant had become a purchaser at a rent of 350*l*, and had paid a deposit of 29*l* 3*s* 4*d* Before this, however the defendant had on the 4th of August, written to the corporation saying that he could not carry out his contract, and asking for a return of the sum paid In an action against the defendant to recover damages for the breach of his agreement to take the tolls —Held, that the contract was one that required to be made under the common seal of the corporation, that not having been sealed nor signed by any person authorised under seal by them to do so the defendant was not bound by it that the payment of a month's rent in advance was not such a part performance as would have bound the corporation in equity specifically to perform their agreement and that the resolution of the 7th of August (even assuming it to be a ratification under seal of the contract) came too late Kidderminster Corporation v Hardwick, 43 L J, Ex 9, L R 9 Ex 13, 29 L T 612, 22 W R 160

Agreement by Tenant to Surrender Lease]—In order to render an agreement to surrender a lease granted by a municipal corporation enforceable against the tenant, the agreement must be under the seal of the corporation, or the committee appointed by the corporation to negotiate with the lessee must be appointed under seal, or the agreement must have been ratified by the corporation under seal or must have been performed in part or acted upon Kidderminster Corporation v Hardwick (L R 9 Ex 13), followed Oxford Corporation v Crow, [1893] 3 Ch 535, 8 R 279, 69 L J 228, 42 W R 200.

Entry in Books Signed by Majority]—An entry in the books of a corporation of the terms of an agreement entered into by it, does not bind it, although it is signed by a majority of the members Carter v Ely (Dean), 7 Sim 211, 4 L J, Ch 132, 241

Ecclesiastical Corporation.]—An ecclesiastical corporation is not bound by any agreement, unless it can be manifested by deed Ib

d Leases by

Power to Make.]—Where a corporation has by a private act of parliament power to sell and exchange land, a power to lease the land and give the option of purchase to the lessee is implied Female Orphan Asylum, In re, 17 L T 59 15 W R 1056

An act authorised a corporation to construct a market-place, and place for a fair, and all necessary buildings and works for the sale of commodities, and a market-place for the sale of cattle, with power to provide slaughter-houses, and, after various provisions, authorising the levying and taking of stallages, rents and tolls, enacting that the moneys arising from such stallages, rents and tolls, should be applied, first, in paying the expenses of obtaining the act and incident thereto; and, secondly, in making and maintaining the market or fair, and works connected therewith, and the slaughter-houses to be established or constructed, and in payment of the interest and repayment of the principal of all moneys borrowed on the security of the works, stallages, rents and tolls, and that the residue of such moneys (if any) should be retained by the corporation, to be applied by them as they should think fit:—Held, that, assuming the corporation to be entitled to grant leases of the market, market-place, and slaughter-houses, they were not entitled to demise the property at diminished rents upon payment of fines, the rents being devoted to the maintenance of the property. Att.-Gen. v. Avon or Aberavon Corporation, 3 De G. J. & S. 637.

—— Lands held upon Trust—Lease at an Undervalue—Violation of Charter.] — Where lands were held by a corporation aggregate upon certain trusts, and they granted a lease thereof to one of their own body, at a great undervalue, and in derogation of the trust, the lease was decreed to be set aside, and an account of the mesne profits of the lands directed to be taken from the time of the granting of the lease being less than twenty years. Att.-Gen. v. Cashel Corporation, 3 Dr. & War. 294; 2 Con. & L. 1.

A right of pasture over certain of his lands was granted by an archbishop of C. to the corporation of C., for the use of the corporation and the inhabitants of C. The corporation subsequently, by some means unexplained, became seised absolutely of part of these lands:—Held, that they were so seised in trust for the town of C., and that therefore a lease for ninety-nine years, made by them at a gross undervalue, should be set aside, and that though the absolute ownership might have been acquired by usurpation, the trusts would nevertheless have attached:—Held, also, that the lessee was entitled to an issue as to the identity of the lands in possession with those, or part of those, over which the right of pasture had been granted. Ib.

Charles I., subsequently to the acquisition of the absolute ownership, granted to the corporation a charter conferring on them certain privileges, directing the appointment of certain officers, and specifying the oaths to be taken on appointment. The mayor was to be bound by his oath not to permit any estate of inheritance in the lands in question to be parted with, or the rents to be assigned, for more than one year. Semble, the corporation adopting this charter, was bound by the restrictions of the oath, though the lands were not derived from the Crown; also that the lease in question was in violation of the oath. Ib.

Letting and Notice to Quit, not under Seal, by Agents not Appointed under Seal—Ejectment.]—On an ejectment upon the demise of a corporation, it appeared from the defendant's admissions that he had taken the land by permission of a servant of the corporation, and that another servant of the corporation had given him notice to deliver up possession. No lease, nor notice, nor appointment of the servants as agents, under seal, was produced:—Held, that the jury was rightly directed to find for the plaintiff if they thought the servants were authorised by the company to act. Doe d. Birmingham Canal Co. v. Bold, 11 Q. B. 127; 12 Jur. 350.

Lease Purporting to be by Corporation—Action for Breach by Individuals as Lessors.]—Action by A. and B. against the lessee, on an indenture of lease, which appeared to be made between D., therein described as master; and A., B., and two other persons, described as governors of a hospital; and the lessee. The demise was by the master and governors, and the covenants to and by the lessors were to and for the "master and governors and their successors." "In witness whereof the master and governors have hereunto affixed their common seal." One seal was affixed as the common seal of the lessors, none of whom signed the indenture, and the execution by the lessee was under his hand and seal. The declaration stated that he entered under the demise and enjoyed during the whole term. Breach, non-repair at the expiration of the term. Plea, that the indenture was not signed by the lessors or their agent, nor was there any demise so signed:—Held, that the seal affixed on the lessors' part, was not the seal, and the deed was not the deed of the individual lessors; that the want of execution by them was not, under the circumstances stated on the record, such a failure of consideration as to be an answer to the action; but that the lessee was entitled to judgment, because it appeared by the record that the demise was by a corporation, and the court could not judicially notice the fact, that no such corporation existed. Cooch v. Goodman, 2 G. & D. 159; 2 Q. B. 580; 11 L. J., Q. B. 225; 6 Jur. 779. See Swatman v. Ambler, 8 Ex. 72; 22 L. J., Ex. 81.

Acceptance of Rent.]—A lease, voidable by a corporation, may be set up merely by acceptance of rent, without evidence of any deed executed under their seal in that behalf. Doe d. Pennington v. Taniere, 12 Q. B. 998; 18 L. J., Q. B. 49; 13 Jur. 119.

Payment and receipt of rent are evidence against a corporation of a demise by them from year to year. Ib.

One who enters upon, occupies and pays rent for corporate property under a demise for a term of years, made on behalf of the corporation, but not sealed with its common seal, becomes tenant from year to year of the corporation, on such terms of the demise as are applicable to a yearly tenancy. Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England and Wales v. Merral, 38 L. J., Ex. 93; L. R. 4 Ex. 162; 20 L. T. 573; 17 W. R. 676.

—— Distress.]—By an indenture between A., B., and C., bailiffs, and D., E., and F., aldermen, with the assent of the burgesses of the borough of M., of the one part, and S., of the other part, the bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses, demised lands to S. for years, to be holden of the bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses; and the deed was executed by A., B., and C. and D., E., and F., but not sealed with the corporation seal; S. having paid rent to the bailiffs as chief officers of the borough:—Held, that their servant might make cognizance for taking a distress under a demise by the corporation, notwithstanding a notice had been given by the aldermen (one of whom was a party to the indenture) to pay the rent to them: for the payment of rent to the bailiffs admitted a tenancy from year to year under the corporation. Wood v. Tute, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 247; 9 R. R. 645. See Doe d. Carlisle (Earl) v. Woodman, 8 East, 228; 9 R. R. 422.

Agreement for Lease—Specific Performance—Entry of Resolution—Erasure.]—The entry of a resolution in the minute book of a corporation, accepting a proposal for a lease of part of the corporate property, was partially erased. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the erasure is to be presumed to have been made before the book was signed by the chairman of the meeting at which the resolution was passed. Steevens' Hospital v. Dyas, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 405.

If there has been part performance of a contract for a lease by a corporation, a court of equity will decree a specific performance of it, though the contract was not under the seal of the corporation. Ib.

A corporation, empowered by statute to make leases of the corporate property, under its common seal, for a certain term in possession, and at the highest rent; and the statute providing that all leases made in any other manner should be null and void, is not precluded by the statute from entering into an agreement for a lease, provided it is carried into effect without delay, by the execution of leases in compliance with the statute. Ib. See Crook v. Seaford Corporation, L. R. 6 Ch. 551; 25 L. T. 1; 19 W. R. 938.

Bailiffs of corporation not compellable to make lease. Strainger v. Derby (Bailiffs of), Cary, 102.

Time is of the essence of a contract for the granting of a lease by a corporation, where part of the consideration is a fine which is to be divided amongst the existing members of the corporation. Carter v. Ely (Dean), 4 L. J., Ch. 132.

Void Lease — Prior Contract — Sufficiency of Resolution of Common Council.] — The Limerick Regulation Act (Local and Personal) enacted that the corporation property should be disposed of only for the public uses and charities of the city, and subject to certain control and formalities mentioned in the act, and that it should take effect from the 1st September, 1823. It received the royal assent on the 18th July, 1823. At a corporate meeting on the 30th August, certain property was leased to a member of the body, not for public purposes, and without the control or formalities required by the act:—Held, that notwithstanding the clause deferring its operation, the act was binding on the corporate property from the date of its passing, and the lease was therefore void. Att.-Gen. v. Ball, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 146. And see Drogheda Corporation v. Holmes, 5 H. L. Cas. 460.

A lease void under the act was attempted to be supported by a prior contract, which was not under the corporate seal, but was a resolution of the common council, who were in the habit of managing the corporate property. The proof that the property had been held for public trusts was defective, but the profits had been applied to public purposes for many years. The resolution was made in favour of the chamberlain of the corporation by the common council, which consisted of persons under his influence, and the rent, though fixed by valuators appointed by the common council, was under the value:—Held, that although equity might enforce a contract or resolution not under seal or binding at law against a corporation under circumstances, yet this resolution could not be enforced, and would not support the lease. Ib.

Lease made under Void Charter.] — A corporation by charter made a reversionary lease to J. of some lands. The charter being declared void by 1 Will. & M., sess. 2, c. 9, the lease is void also. Peppard v. Drogheda Corporation, 2 Bro. P. C. 321.

Sufficiency of Resolution of Corporation as to Renewal of Leases.]—By the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 100 (passed in August, 1836), no conveyance of lands in certain corporations (of which Drogheda was one) was to be made, unless in pursuance of a covenant, contract, or agreement made, or a resolution of the corporation duly entered in the corporate books, before the 16th February, 1836. This provision was continued by successive statutes, and incorporated into the 3 & 4 Vict. cc. 108 and 109. The corporation of Drogheda had from time to time passed resolutions as to the granting of leases of the corporate property, and on the 20th April, 1801, passed a resolution (which was duly entered in the corporate books), directing that "the auditors and viewers should, on reporting on petitions for the renewals of leases, take into consideration the value of the premises, and value the same at the full value between man and man, and that the petitioner so applying shall be then entitled to a renewal," on certain terms therein mentioned, "and that all reports shall hereafter be received at one assembly, and taken into consideration not sooner than the then following quarter assembly." A lease had been granted in 1785 for sixty-one years; in 1841 a petition was presented for its renewal: the petition was referred to the auditors and viewers, whose report was presented on the 7th of January, 1842, and on the same day a resolution ordering the renewal was passed:—Held, that this was not a resolution which brought the case within the exceptions in the statute; for it merely bound the corporation to receive the report, and afterwards to consider the propriety of acting upon it. The resolution need not be a contract. Drogheda Corporation v. Holmes, 5 H. L. Cas. 460.

Semble, this resolution was insufficient, although it might not be necessary that the resolution should be such as would form a binding contract, enforceable in a court of equity; and, further, the resolution, such as it was, had not been complied with, for the lease was granted at the same meeting at which the report of the auditors and viewers was presented. Ib.

Renewal of Leases.]—The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 95, which enables municipal corporations to renew leases on a fine, in cases where sanctioned by ancient usage, or by custom or practice, at a fine certain, or where they have ordinarily made renewal upon an arbitrary fine, is to be construed liberally. Att.-Gen. v. Great Yarmouth Corporation, 21 Beav. 625.

The word renewal in 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 95, does not mean a mere custom to let on lease at different rents; and though the renewals need not be on precisely the same terms, there must be such a uniformity as to show that the same lease has been renewed Ib.

Leases were granted by a corporation of the same property in 1778, 1798, and 1824, to the same lessee and his assigns, for twenty-one years, at a rent of 5*s.* In the two last instances alone, a fine of 7*s.* 6*d.* had been taken. The covenants varied, and there was an interval of six years between the second and third, during which there was a yearly tenancy.—Held, that the case did not come within 5 & 6 Will 4, c. 76, s. 95, and that a renewal could not be granted at an undervalue, and on a fine. Ib.

Mistake in Name — Rectification.] — Where corporation mistake their name in granting leases, help given in chancery. Anon., Cary, 31.

CORPSE.

Giving Bodies to Hospitals.]—A master of a workhouse was indicted for disposing of the dead bodies of paupers for the purpose of dissection and for gain to himself. On the death of the paupers he had caused their bodies to be shown to their relatives in coffins, and every appearance of regular funerals to be gone through; whereas, just before the funeral, other coffins had been substituted, and the bodies were afterwards taken to a hospital for dissection. The relatives had not, in accordance with the proviso in s. 7 of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 75, required that the bodies should be interred without anatomical examination; but the jury found that he had caused the appearance of funerals to be gone through with a view to prevent the relatives making such requirement, and that they would have so required but for the supposed funerals:—Held, that as, in fact, the relatives had not made the requirement which they had a right to make, the master of the workhouse was protected as a person having the lawful custody of the bodies, and was not therefore guilty of the offence charged Reg. v. Feist, Dears. & B. C. C. 59; 27 L. J., M. C. 164; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 541; 6 W. R. 546; 8 Cox, C. C. 18.

Property—Right to Possession of Body.]—There is no property in a dead body, but the executors have a right to the possession of the body, and their duty is to bury it, although there is a direction in the will that some other person should cause the body to be burnt. Williams v. Williams, 51 L. J., Ch. 385; 20 Ch. D. 659; 46 L. T. 275; 30 W. R. 438; 15 Cox, C. C. 39; 46 J. P. 726.

Cremation, whether a Misdemeanour.]—To burn a dead body, instead of burying it, is not a misdemeanour, unless it is so done as to amount to a public nuisance. If an inquest ought to be held upon a dead body, it is a misdemeanour so to dispose of the body as to prevent the coroner from holding the inquest. Reg. v. Price, 53 L. J., M. C. 51; 12 Q. B. A. GENERALLY.

Implied Repeal of Statutes by Order LXV.]—The effect of the Judicature Act, 1875, Ord. LV. of the Rules of Court, 1875, is to repeal the previous statutes as to costs with the exception of such of the provisions of the County Courts Act, 1867, as are expressly preserved by s. 67 of the Judicature Act. 1873. Garnett v. Bradley, 48 L. J., Ex. 186; 3 App. Cas. 944; 39 L. T. 261; 26 W. R. 698. S. P., Parsons v. Tinling, 46 L. J., C. P. 230; 2 C. P. D. 119; 35 L. T. 851; 25 W. R. 255.

The combined effect of the Judicature Act and Ord. LV. of the Rules of Court, 1875, giving the judges of the High Court of Justice a discretion as to costs in all cases, with certain exceptions specified in the order, is to repeal all previous enactments directing costs to follow certain rules. Mercers' Co., Ex parte, 48 L. J., Ch. 384; 10 Ch. D. 481; 27 W. R. 424.

But Order LXV. r. 1 (1883), does not apply to costs which are specially given by statute to a particular individual as a matter of right. Reeve v. Gibson, 60 L. J.. Q. B. 451; [1891] 1 Q. B. 652; 39 W. R. 420—C. A. S. P.. Hasker v. Wood, 54 L. J.. Q B. 419; 33 W. R. 697.

Section 9 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, which enacts that persons taking proceedings in a superior court, which they might under s. 3 of that act have taken in a county court, shall not be entitled to costs, unless the judge before whom the cause was tried shall certify that it was a proper cause to be tried in a superior court, is inconsistent with and is repealed by Order LV. r. 1, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1875, and Order LXV. r. 1, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883. Tenant v. Ellis (6 Q. B. D. 46) approved. Rockett v. Clippingdale, 60 L. J., Q. B. 782; [1891] 2 Q. B. 293; 64 L. T. 641—C. A.

Section 7 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, which deprived the plaintiff of, and also rendered him liable to be condemned in costs, where in an action brought in a superior court, which might by that act be tried by a county court having admiralty jurisdiction, he did not recover a sum exceeding what a county court had by that act jurisdiction to try without agreement, is repealed by the effect of Ord. LV. of the Judicature Act, 1875. Tenant v. Ellis, 50 L. J., Q. B. 143; 6 Q. B. D. 46; 43 L. T. 506; 29 W. R. 121.

Where Provision as to Costs omitted in Act.]—The court has now, under the Judicature Act, 1875, and Ord. LV. of Rules of Court, 1875, a discretion as to directing payment of costs where a provision as to costs is omitted in any public or private act. St. Katharine's Hospital, Ex parte, 17 Ch. D. 378.

Where a previous statute is silent as to the costs of particular proceedings under it, the combined effect of the Judicature Act and Ord. LV. of the Rules of Court, 1875, giving the judges of the High Court of Justice a discretion as to costs in all cases, supplies the omission. Mercers' Co., Ex parte, 48 L. J., Ch. 384; 10 Ch. D. 481; 27 W. R. 424.

The Commissioners of Works and Public Buildings compulsorily took, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 87, and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 34, certain lands, and paid the purchase-money or compensation into court. Neither of these acts contained any provision for the payment by the commissioners of the costs of applications for payment out. Upon a petition for payment out of a fund by the persons entitled thereto:—Held, that the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, was not incorporated in the Acts 3 & 4 Vict. c. 87, and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 34, and that r. 1 of Ord. LXV. did not give the court power to order the payment of costs where before the Judicature Act it would not have had jurisdiction to do so. Mercers' Co., Ex parte (10 Ch. D. 481) questioned; Garnett v. Bradley (3 App. Cas. 944) distinguished; Foster v. G. W. Ry. (8 Q. B. D. 515) followed; and dicta in Wood's Estates, In re (31 Ch. D. 607) dissented from. Mills' Estate, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 60; 34 Ch. D. 24; 55 L. T. 465; 35 W. R. 65; 51 J. P. 151—C. A. S P., Cherry's Settled Estates, In re, 4 De G. F. & J. 332; 31 L. J., Ch. 351; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 446; 6 L. T. 31; 10 W. R. 305.

The court has power, by virtue of the general discretionary powers conferred by Ord. LXV., to order that the costs of a petition for the payment out of the court, to a person absolutely entitled, of a fund paid into court by a company in respect of lands taken under the compulsory powers of a special act, be paid by the company, although the special act is prior to the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and contains no provision as to such costs. Lee and Hemingway, In re, 24 Ch. D. 669; 49 L. T. 155; 32 W. R. 226.

In proceedings under statutes it is the settled rule of the court that no costs can be awarded, except such as are authorised by the particular act. A proceeding under a statute is not a proceeding in equity. St. Dunstan-in-the-West Schools, In re, L. R. 12 Eq. 537; 19 W. R. 887.

—— Effect of Judicature Act, 1890, s. 3.]—Section 5 of the Judicature Act, 1890, confers a jurisdiction which did not previously exist, and gives the court a discretion as to the costs of payment out of court of money in a case where the special act, under which the money is paid in, is silent as to them. Mills' Estate, In re (34 Ch. D. 24) superseded. Fisher, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 235; [1894] 1 Ch. 450; 7 R. 97; 70 L. T. 62; 42 W. R. 241—C. A.

Action to enforce Legal Right.]—Where an action is brought to enforce a legal right, such as an action to restrain the infringement of a very small part of the plaintiff's copyright, the court will not, as a matter of course, order the defendant to pay the costs of the action. Cooper v. Whittingham (15 Ch. D. 501), and Upmann v. Forester (24 Ch. D. 231), observed on. Walter v. Steinkopff, 61 L. J., Ch. 521; [1892] 3 Ch. 489; 67 L. T. 184; 40 W. R. 599.

When an action is brought to enforce a legal right, and there is no misconduct on the part of the plaintiff, the court has no discretion to refuse him costs. Cooper v. Whittingham, 49 L. J., Ch. 752; 15 Ch. D. 501; 43 L. T. 16; 28 W. R. 720.

Defendants bought from E. at a cost of 17*s.* 6*d.*, a box of 500 cigarettes bearing a label which was a very close imitation of the registered trade mark used by the plaintiffs upon the boxes in which they sold the cigarettes made by them. The defendants bought the cigarettes under the belief that they were made by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs served the defendants with a writ and notice of motion for an injunction to restrain them from infringing their trade mark or selling the cigarettes. The defendants at once returned to E. the greater part of the cigarettes, and, by their affidavit, submitted to abide by any order the court should make, but contended that they ought not to be made to pay the costs:—Held, that there ought to be no order as to costs. Upmann v. Forester (24 Ch. D. 231) discussed. American Tobacco Co. v. Guest, 61 L. J., Ch. 242; [1892] 1 Ch. 630; 66 L. T. 257; 40 W. R. 364.

The defendant purchased abroad for his own private use cigars consigned to him at the docks here in cases bearing a spurious brand purporting to be that of the plaintiffs; he was not aware that the brand was spurious, nor, except from seeing it on the invoice, that any such brand was in use. On the issue of the writ for an injunction to restrain the defendant from selling the cigars, he stated that he had no intention of selling them, and offered all the relief asked for, he also gave an undertaking to the same effect on motion for an injunction:—Held, that the defendant must pay all the costs of the action. Upmann v. Forester, 52 L. J., Ch. 946; 24 Ch. D. 231; 49 L. T. 122; 32 W. R. 28.

Writ issued without Notice.]—Where plaintiffs in an action for infringement of copyright issued their writ without notice, and the defendant, as soon as he understood the circumstances, tried his best to undo the injury caused by the infringement:—Held, that the defendant must submit to the injunction and pay the costs. Wittmann v. Oppenheim, 54 L. J., Ch. 56; 27 Ch. D. 260; 50 L. T. 713; 32 W. R. 767.

The fact that an action has been brought without a previous application to the defendant does not prevent the plaintiff from getting his costs of the action. Goodhart v. Hyett, 25 Ch. D. 182; 50 L. T. 95.

Court wrongly put in Motion.]—By the Bombay Civil Fund Act, 1882, jurisdiction was given to the Court of Appeal to determine questions arising between any subscriber to the Bombay Civil Fund and the Secretary of State for India as to any liability of the fund, nothing being said as to costs. P. took proceedings to enforce a claim against the fund, which the court held to be not made out:—Held, that however the case might have stood if the question had been whether the court could give P. the costs of a successful claim, the court had inherent jurisdiction to order him to pay the costs of wrongly putting the court in motion, there being nothing in the act to show that the legislature intended the court not to have such jurisdiction. Pringle v. Secretary of State for India, 58 L. J., Ch. 815; 40 Ch. D. 288; 60 L. T. 796—C. A.

Ex parte Application.]—No one can be ordered to pay the costs of an ex parte application. Nokes v. Gibbon, 26 L. J., Ch. 208; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 282; 5 W. R. 216.

An absent party cannot be ordered to pay costs upon an ex parte application. Cast v. Poyser, 26 L. J., Ch. 93, 353; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 38.

Discretion of Court—Delegation of.]—Where a court or judge is expressly given a discretion as to costs, the exercise of such discretion cannot be delegated. Lambton v. Parkinson, 35 W. R. 545.

A judge cannot delegate to a master the discretionary power of allowing costs on the higher or lower scale. Corticene Floor Covering Co. v. Tull, 27 W. R. 373—C. A.

Where a defence had been admitted, the judge, under Order XXVI. r. 1, ordered that all proceedings should be stayed, each party to bear his own costs, except such as the master found were occasioned by any proceedings unnecessarily taken by the plaintiff:—Held, no delegation of the judge's discretion to the master. Musman v. Boret, 66 L. T. 171; 40 W. R. 352. Cp. Leigh, In re, Rowcliffe v. Leigh, 26 W. R. 729.

—— "Proceedings in the High Court."]—The term "the costs of and incident to all proceedings in the High Court" (Ord LV. 1875) means the costs of and incident to all proceedings that have actually come into the High Court. Brandrath, In re, 9 Ch. D. 618; 27 W. R. 281.

The court has no jurisdiction to order an unsuccessful applicant for registration of a trade mark to pay the costs incurred by the opponent before the comptroller. Australian Wine Importers' Trade Mark, In re, Golden Fleece Trade Mark, In re, 58 L. J., Ch 380: 41 Ch. D. 278; 60 L. T. 436; 37 W. R. 578—C. A.

—— Double Costs.]—Ord. LXV. r. 1, does not apply to costs which are given by a statute as a matter of right. Thus, in an action brought for anything done in pursuance of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, a successful defendant is entitled to double costs as a matter of right. Hasker v. Wood, 54 L. J., Q. B. 419; 33 W. R. 697—C. A.

—— Administration Action by Residuary Legatee.]—A married woman who was one of the executors of a testator and also tenant for life of the residue, filed a bill for administration of the estate. Upon the accounts being taken it turned out that the residuary estate was insufficient for payment of debts and costs, and that it would be necessary to resort to specifically bequeathed property. The vice-chancellor, on further consideration, refused to give the plaintiff any costs of the suit, and ordered the next friend to pay the costs of taking an account of what, if anything, was due from another of the executors on an account current between him and the testator. The plaintiff appealed:—Held, that as a residuary legatee or executor filing a bill for administration is entitled to costs out of the estate, unless some special grounds are shown for depriving him of them, the costs in question were not costs in the discretion of the court within the meaning of s. 49 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, and that an appeal would lie. Farrow v. Austin, 18 Ch. D. 58; 45 L. T. 227; 30 W. R. 50.

Ord. LXV. r. 1, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, directing that the costs of all proceedings in the Supreme Court, including the administration of estates and trusts, shall be in the discretion of the court or a judge, applies, in the case of causes and matters pending on the 24th of October, 1883, when those rules came into operation, only to the costs of proceedings taken on and after that day; and the costs incurred in proceedings taken in such causes and matters before that day, although not adjudicated upon until afterwards, are not within that rule. In an action for administration by one of several residuary legatees, all the proceedings except those on subsequent further consideration were taken before Ord. LXV. r. 1, came into operation, though the costs were not adjudicated upon until the order on further consideration, which was made afterwards:—Held, that an appeal would lie as to the costs of such prior, though not as to the costs of such subsequent, proceedings. Farrow v. Austin (18 Ch. D. 58) followed. McClellan In re, McClellan v. McClellan, 54 L. J., Ch. 659; 29 Ch. D. 495; 52 L. T. 741; 33 W. R. 888—C. A.

—— Action dismissed for want of Prosecution.]—The statutable right of a defendant to the costs of an action in the Chancery Division which had been dismissed for want of prosecution was repealed by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, which repeals so much of 4 & 5 Anne, c. 3, as gives such costs, and though the practice in accordance with such statutable right, and as regulated by Ord. XXXIII. r. 10, of the Chancery Consolidation Orders of 1860, was preserved by s. 4 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, yet Ord. LXV. r. 1, of the rules of 1883, has changed such practice, so that the costs of a defendant where such action has been dismissed for want of prosecution are now in the discretion of the judge, and therefore his order as to such costs is by s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, not subject to appeal. Snelling v. Pulling, 29 Ch. D. 85; 52 L. T. 335; 33 W. R. 449—C. A.

—— Interpleader Issue.]—A summons was taken out, after verdict, for the costs of an interpleader issue. The judge at chambers referred the summons to the judge before whom the trial took place; the latter judge made an order on the summons at Westminster:—Held, that he had jurisdiction to make such order, and no appeal would lie. Hartmont v. Foster, 51 L. J., Q. B. 12; 8 Q. B. D. 82; 45 L. T. 429; 30 W. R. 129—C. A.

—— After Trial by Jury.]—See infra, col. 690.

—— Discovery—Viva Voce Examination.]—Where, in consequence of the party interrogated answering insufficiently, an order was made by the master for his examination viva voce before a special examiner:—Held, that there was power under Ord. XXXI. r. 10, and Ord. LV. r. 1, or the general practice of the court to make it a term of the order that the costs of, and occasioned by, the application should be paid by the party interrogated "in any event." Vicary v. G. N. Ry., 51 L. J., Q. B. 462; 9 Q. B. D. 168.

—— Inspection of Property.]—A judge at chambers, on making an order for the inspection of the defendant's property, has discretion to order the plaintiff to pay the costs. Mitchell v. Darley Main Colliery Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 394; 10 Q. B. D. 457; 31 W. R. 549.

—— Action remitted to County Court for Trial.]—An action was brought in the superior court and sent down for trial in the county court under 19 & 20 Vict, c. 108, s. 26, when the plaintiff obtained a verdict for 6*l.* 15*s.* above the amount of 15*l.* paid into court:—Held, that the county court had no jurisdiction over the costs, and had no power to certify for costs, but the Queen's Bench Division, in the exercise of their discretion, allowed the plaintiff his costs under Ord. LV. Farmer v. May, 50 L. J., Q. B. 295; 44 L. T. 148; 29 W. R. 612.

Where an action has been ordered to be tried in a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, and has been so tried there, the High Court retains its power under Ord. LXV. r. 1, of dealing with the costs of the action, notwithstanding r. 4 of that order, and the absence in the registrar's certificate of any expression of opinion by the county court judge as provided for by that rule. Emeny or Emery v. Sandes, 54 L. J., Q. B. 82; 14 Q. B. D. 6; 51 L. T. 641; 33 W. R. 187—C. A.

—— Petition under Trustee Act.]—Whether under the Judicature Acts and the Orders of 1883, Ord. LXV. r. 1, the court has jurisdiction to order a respondent to a petition under the Trustee Act, 1850, to pay costs, quære. Knight's Will or Trusts, In re, 26 Ch. D. 82; 50 L. T. 550; 32 W. R. 417—C. A. S. C., cor. Pearson, J., 53 L. J., Ch. 223.

—— Payment out of Fund in Court—Costs disallowed by Master.]—Where a contributory of a company was ordered to pay a certain sum of money to the liquidator, the contributory took out a summons to stay execution pending an appeal, and a stay of execution was ordered upon the terms of his paying the money and 50*l.* for costs into court, no order being made as to the costs of the summons to stay. The appeal was dismissed with costs, but no reference was made as to the costs of the summons to stay, and the taxing-master disallowed the costs of that summons. On summons to review the taxation:—Held, that the contributory was ordered to pay the 50*l.* into court to satisfy such costs as the court should think he ought to pay, and that the costs of the summons to stay, being caused by the appeal, must be paid out of the 50*l.* in court, and that the court had jurisdiction at any time to make such order. Brighton Livery Stables Co., In re, 52 L. T. 745.

—— Out of Fund — Costs of ascertaining Share.]—By articles of partnership between three partners, on the death of any partner the survivors were entitled to take his share at a valuation. One of the partners having died, his executrix brought her action to have it declared that the goodwill was to be included in the valuation, and to have the value of the deceased partner's share in the assets ascertained. A decree was made declaring that the goodwill must be valued as part of the assets, and directing accounts. The chief clerk made his general certificate, finding (inter alia) that two specified leaseholds belonging to the partnership were of no value. The plaintiff took out a summons to vary the certificate by estimating these leaseholds as worth a considerable sum. The summons was adjourned into court, and Bacon, V.-C., refused to vary the certificate, but ordered the costs of both parties to be paid out of the estate. The defendants appealed:—Held, that it was within the discretion of the court to order all costs reasonably incurred in ascertaining the sum to be paid out of the fund, and that an appeal would not lie. Butcher v. Pooler, 52 L. J., Ch. 950; 24 Ch. D. 273; 49 L. T. 573; 32 W. R. 305—C. A.

—— Interim Investment.]—Section 32 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, does not take away the absolute discretion of the court respecting costs conferred by Ord. LV. Hanbury's Trusts, In re, 31 W. R. 784.

—— Winding-up of Company.]—A bill of sale holder who claims the chattels of the company under his security and opposes the landlord's application in the winding-up for leave to realise his distress, may be ordered to pay all the costs of the application under Ord. LV. r. 1. Carriage Co-operative Supply Association, In re, Clemence, Ex parte, 48 L. T. 308.

—— Caused by Mistake of Court.]—The rule that costs are seldom, if ever, allowed where there has been a mistake of the master, is no longer applicable since the Judicature Act, 1873. Sparrow v. Hill, 7 Q. B. D. at p. 368.

Extra costs occasioned by a mistake of the master allowed to a creditor proving his debt against a lunatic's estate. Buckle, In re, 1 Russ. & M. 363.

The plaintiff held entitled, on motion, to have his bill dismissed without costs, and without prejudice to a new bill, as he had been misled by the act of the court. Lister v. Leather, 1 De G. & J. 361; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 433; 5 W. R. 666.

—— Certiorari — "Civil Proceeding."]—A rule for a certiorari to bring up and quash an order of justices made under s. 158 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is a "civil proceeding" on the crown side of the Queen's Bench Division within Ord. LXII. r. 2; and the costs are in the discretion of the court under Ord. LV. Reg. v. Morris, 31 W. R. 609.

—— Habeas Corpus.]—The court has jurisdiction, since the Judicature Act, 1890, to give costs to the successful party in proceedings for a writ of habeas corpus. Reg. v. Jones, 63 L. J., Q. B. 656; [1894] 2 Q. B. 382; 10 R. 287; 70 L. T. 845; 42 W. R. 607; 58 J. P. 733.

—— Case stated by Sessions.]—Where a case is stated by sessions upon appeal against a poor-rate, the proceeding is a civil proceeding on the crown side of the Queen's Bench Division, within the rules of 1880, Ord. LXII. r. 2, and the costs are in the discretion of the court under Ord. LV. Clark v. Fisherton-Angar Overseers or Alderbury Union, 50 L. J., M. C. 33; 6 Q. B. D. 139; 29 W. R. 334; 45 J. P. 358.

Ord. LVII. does not enable the court to give costs in criminal proceedings on the crown side of the Queen's Bench Division on appeal from sessions. So that where the appeal was from a conviction under the Weights and Measures Act, the court was unable to make any order as to costs. Reg. v. Buxendale, 50 L. J., M. C. 35, n.; 6 Q. B. D. 144, n.; 29 W. R. 335.

A successful appellant in a case stated by justices is entitled to his costs though the respondent does not appear to support the judgment of the justices. Shepherd v. Folland, 49 J. P. 165. S. P., Greenbank v. Sanderson, 49 J. P. 40.

A case having been stated by justices under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, and remitted to them for an amended statement, but not returned within the proper time, and therefore abandoned:—Held, that the court still had jurisdiction to order the appellant to pay the respondent's costs. Crowther v. Boult, 13 Q. B. D. 680; 32 W. R. 150; 49 J. P. 135.

A case having been stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, the case was lodged, but no notice was given to the respondent of the appeal:—Held, that though the appeal could not be heard, costs could be given against the appellant. South Dublin Union Guardians v. Jones, 12 L. R. Ir. 358.

And see JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

—— County Palatine Court—Particulars of Objections.]—In an action in the court of the county palatine to restrain infringement of a patent, the defendants delivered particulars of objection. At the trial the judge held the patent invalid for an objection appearing on the face of it, and dismissed the action with costs, stating his opinion that the defendants ought to have the costs of the witnesses brought up to support their particulars of objection, though they had not been called, as the plaintiffs virtually had been nonsuited. On taxation the registrar disallowed these costs, but the vice-chancellor held that they must be allowed. The plaintiffs appealed:—Held, that neither Lord Cairns' Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 27) nor Sir J. Rolt's Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 42) made it obligatory on a court of equity to follow the rule as to costs of particulars of objections laid down by the Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 83), s. 43, and that the rule which applied to courts having no discretion as to costs ought not to be followed by analogy by a court which had discretion as to costs; that the vice-chancellor had therefore power to give these costs, and that they must be allowed. Parnell v. Mort, 29 Ch. D. 325; 53 L. T. 186; 33 W. R. 481—C. A.

New Rule of Court.]—On a fair question upon new orders on which there has been no decision, the parties, in point of costs, are entitled to indulgence. Watts v. Penny, 11 Beav. 435; 18 L. J., Ch. 150; 13 Jur. 578.

Order for Payment whether Condition Precedent.]—Where, after a demurrer, an order was made, that upon payment of costs the plaintiff should be at liberty to amend his declaration, and he delivered an amended declaration, but did not tender the amount of the costs, as ascertained by the master's allocatur:—Held, that an interlocutory judgment, signed by him for want of a plea, was irregular, as the payment of costs was a condition precedent to his right to amend. Lery v. Drew, 5 D. & L. 307; 2 B. C. Rep. 142; 12 Jur. 119.

When a nonsuit is set aside upon payment of costs, such payment is made a condition precedent to the setting aside the nonsuit; and without it the plaintiff cannot proceed to another trial. Nichols v. Bozon, 13 East, 185.

Certain issues having been tried, and verdicts found for the plaintiffs, the defendants moved for a new trial, upon which it was ordered that the plaintiff's costs of the trial should be taxed, and that, upon the defendants paying those costs, a new trial should be had:—Held, that the defendants were not compellable to pay the costs under the order, unless they thought fit to proceed to a new trial. Lambert v. Fisher, 7 Sim. 525.

"Full Costs"—What Costs allowable.]—The "full costs" to which a successful defendant is entitled under s. 26 of the Copyright Act, 1842, are the ordinary costs as between party and party, and not solicitor and client costs. Avery v. Wood, 61 L. J., Ch. 75; [1891] 3 Ch. 115; 65 L. T. 122; 39 W. R. 577—C. A.

The court knows no distinction between costs generally and full costs. Irwin v. Reddish, 1 D. & R. 413; 5 B. & Ald. 796.

The term full costs, which occurs in 17 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 3, has the same meaning as ordinary costs. Jamieson v. Trevelyan, 10 Ex. 748; 3 C. L. R. 702; 24 L. J., Ex. 74; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 334; 3 W. R. 172.

Full costs, in 4 Geo. 1, c. 5. mean all fair and reasonable costs, to the exclusion of disbursements of extra liberality or generosity on the part of the landlord. Flattery v. Malone, 1 Moll. 463.

Statute of Frauds.]—I disapprove of any suggestion that a defendant, who succeeds upon a plea of the Statute of Frauds, is to be regarded as an unmeritorious litigant, and that he is only reluctantly to be allowed his costs. If a plaintiff attempts to enforce a bargain which is either avoided or of which the enforcement is prohibited by the statute, I am not prepared in effect to put a penalty upon a successful defendant for insisting upon his statutory rights.—per Fitzgibbon, L. J. Dyas v. Stafford, 9 L. R., Ir. 530.

Costs ordered to stand over till Trial.]—Costs of applications ordered to stand over until trial, and costs reserved to be disposed of at the trial, should follow the event of the trial without any special directions. Hodges v. Hodges, 25 W. R. 162.

When the court orders a motion to stand till the hearing of the cause, it in effect reserves to itself the right of dealing differently with the costs of the motion and those of the cause. Singer v. Audsley, 41 L. J., Ch. 229; L. R. 13 Eq. 401; 26 L. T. 238; 20 W. R. 438.

Where interlocutory applications are ordered to stand to the trial, the costs are to be treated as costs in the action, and taxed accordingly, without special directions or mention in the judgment; but where such applications have been disposed of, but the costs have been reserved, such costs are not to be mentioned in the judgment or order, or allowed on taxation, without the special direction of the judge. British Natural Premium Provident Assoc. v. Bywater, 66 L. J., Ch. 787; [1897] 2 Ch. 531; 77 L. T. 22; 46 W. R. 28.

When a motion in an action is adjourned or stands over until the trial of the action, at which judgment is obtained by one of the parties with costs against the other party, the costs of the motion are allowed to the successful party on taxation, without special direction in the judgment. Gosnell v. Bishop, 57 L. J., Ch. 642; 38 Ch. D. 385; 36 W. R. 505.

Application for Interim Injunction.] — An order made on notice and continuing an injunction with costs will, in the absence of special directions to the contrary, include the costs of an interim injunction previously obtained on an ex parte application. Blakey v. Hall, 56 L. J., Ch. 568; 56 L. T. 400; 35 W. R. 592.

What may be considered on Questions of Costs.]—Answer, though not evidence in cause, may be read as to costs. Howell v. George, 1 Madd. 13; 15 R. R. 203.

The answer of a peer upon his protestation of honour may be read on the question of costs. Dawson v. Ellis, 1 Jac. and Walk. 524; 21 R. R. 227.

Although the amended bill is the pleading exclusively, and so far as regards the rights of the parties, the charges of the original bill, omitted in the amended bill, are as if they never existed; yet that does not extend to debar the court of the assistance to be derived from the matter expunged, in determining quo animo the suit was instituted; and for that purpose the Lord Chancellor read from defendant's copy the passages of the original bill, and finding much groundless imputation against the defendant:—Held, the costs were properly given against the plaintiff, although he succeeded in getting a decree. Fitzgerald v. O Flaherty, 1 Moll. 347.

There being no issue joined between co-defendants, the answer of one cannot be read against the other, even as to costs, other than a suggestion on which court may direct inquiry before master. Cheret v. Jones, 6 Madd. 267.

The answer of a mortgagor cannot be read against a mortgagee on the subject of costs. Wright v. Jones, C. P. Coop. 493.

Semble, a correspondence "without prejudice" relating to winding up a suit, may be read to assist the court in deciding on the question of costs. Woodward v. Eastern Counties Ry., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 899. Cp., Walker v. Wilsher, post col. 693.

Letters purporting to have been written by C., the wife of B., to G., after B.'s death, but not proved to have been received by G., containing strong assurances that G. was father of E., who was born five months after B.'s death, are not admissible as evidence of adultery even with a view to the costs of the suit, upon which, if admissible, they would have had a material bearing Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L. J., Ch. 125; 4 W. R. 71.

No evidence dehors deeds can be received in deciding on their effect: but on the question of costs, such evidence may be taken into consideration. Stewart v. Stuart, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 61.

Before Judicature Acts—Following the Result.]—In contentious cases the costs of the litigation should, as a general rule, follow the result of it. Bartlett v. Wood, 30 L. J., Ch. 614; 4 L. T. 692; 9 W. R. 817.

As a general rule, costs ought to follow the result of the suit. If the court departs from this rule some reason ought to be given for so doing. Ferguson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 Ch. 92; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 912; 15 W. R. 80.

In equity as well as at law, costs follow the justice of the demand. Roberts v. Kuffin, 2 Atk 113.

Where costs are in the discretion of the court they will follow the general rule of giving costs to the party succeeding; and there must be peculiar circumstances to restrain the application of the rule. Barker v. Birch, 1 D. & L. 816; 7 Scott (N.R.) 397.

Costs in equity in the discretion of the court, upon the circumstances, not following the event by a positive rule, as at law, though prima facie that is the course, and circumstances must be brought forward by the party who fails. Vancouver v. Bliss, 11 Ves. 458; 8 R. R. 207.

—— Discretion.]—Costs are entirely in discretion of court. Bromley v. Holland, 7 Ves. 28; 6 R. R. 58.

—— Doubt and Difficulty.]—Where there is great doubt in a question, costs will not follow the decree. Dearden v. Byron (Lord), 8 Price, 465.

According to the modern practice, the court, though it retains a discretion, generally acts on the rule that primâ facie the unsuccessful party is to be charged with the costs of the suit, and in the present case it gave costs against an unsuccessful plaintiff, though the case was one of great difficulty, arising out of a will and dependent on foreign law. Where under the circumstances of the case an unsuccessful plaintiff is to be charged with the costs of suit, the result is not altered by the additional fact that the institution of the suit was recommended by the master. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 10 Beav. 305.

Legal Right insisted on.]—A defendant who insists upon his legal rights in a case in which the court considers he should not morally do so, will not be allowed his costs. Landed Estates Investment Co. v. Harding, 21 L. T. 384; 18 W. R. 35.

Relief not claimed.]—Relief being granted on a ground not set out in the pleadings, the court refused to give costs. Leach v. Way, 5 L. J., Ch. 100.

Public Policy.]—A third party assisting a person, in contemplation of bankruptcy, to withdraw property from his creditors, and who afterwards sets up a title in himself to the property against the assignees in a suit instituted by them, which defence fails, cannot claim to be reimbursed his costs out of a surplus of the bankrupt's estate arising from the sale of that property. Public policy requires that he should not derive any benefit from such a transaction. Tratt, Ex parte, 1 W. R. 116.

No costs given where both parties were engaged in manufacturing an article intended to be used to deceive and mislead the public. Estcourt v. Estcourt Hop Essence Co., 44 L. J., Ch. 223; L. R. 10 Ch. 276; 32 L. T. 80; 23 W. R. 313.

A person who is particeps criminis is not entitled to the costs of setting aside bonds given for an illegal consideration. Morgan v. Bruen, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 180.

Where bond set aside as against public policy, at suit of the particeps criminis, no costs are given; secus, where at suit of an innocent party. Debenham v. Ox, 1 Ves. sen. 277.

Suspicious Transaction.]—When a transaction of a suspicious nature in its commencement can only be sustained by subsequent acts of confirmation, the party so sustaining it must pay his own costs of the investigation into the circumstances. De Montmorency v. Devereux 7 Cl. & F. 188; West, 64: 2 Dr. & Wal. 410.

As an Indemnity.]—Costs are given by law only as an indemnity to the party who receives them. Harold v. Smith, 5 H. & N. 381; 29 L. J., Ex. 141; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 254; 2 L. T. 556; 8 W. R. 447.

Court not adjudicating on Subject Matter.]—The court does not deal with the question of costs where it does not adjudicate upon the subject matter of the suit. Therefore, where, upon a motion for an injunction to restrain a partner from dealing with the partnership assets, it was referred to arbitrators to take the accounts (that being the only question at issue), and the result was that a certain sum was due to the plaintiff:—Held, that the court, knowing nothing of the merits of the case, would make no order against the defendant in respect of the costs of the arbitration and award. Andrews v. Morgan, 3 W. R. 145.

By original and supplemental bills, an agreement is made a rule of court, which determines all matters in difference in the suit, but reserves the question of costs. A petition dismissed, which prayed the direction of the court as to costs. The court enters into the question of costs only as incidental to its decision upon the merits of the cause. Gibson v. Cranley (Lord), 6 Madd. 365.

Where a railway company deviated from the limits allowed by their act, and injured plaintiff's house without giving him notice, upon which he applied for an injunction to restrain them from carrying on their works, both parties agreeing to abide by the decision of the Board of Trade, which sanctioned the deviation, each had to pay his own costs of the motion. Pearce v. Wycombe Ry., 1 Eq. Rep. 332.

Bad Faith—Fraud.]—Small instances of bad faith in a plaintiff, where the defendant has an adequate remedy for such breaches of faith in his own hands, will not induce the court to dismiss a bill where the result would be to leave the plaintiff without any adequate remedy: but the court will mark its sense of the plaintiff's misconduct by disallowing all costs. Holmes v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 737.

When a suit was instituted not for the bonâ fide purpose of obtaining the relief prayed but for a collateral and improper purpose, and the plaintiff failed to establish any right to the relief prayed, and the bill was dismissed, the decree was made with a declaration that the suit was improperly instituted, and directed the plaintiff not only to pay the costs but all charges and expenses properly incurred in the suit. Simpson v. Malherbe, 4 Giff. 707; 6 N. R. 245.

Where a plaintiff imputes personal fraud, which is not proved, it is a reason for awarding costs against him on a dismissal of his bill. Langley v. Fisher, 9 Beav. 90; 15 L. J., Ch. 73.

Dismissal without Costs—Grounds for.]—Bill dismissed without costs, where a false defence is tendered, which the plaintiff has been put to the cost of proving. Field v. Churchill, 4 Jur. 739.

Where a suit becomes nugatory by matters subsequent, the court, upon motion, has jurisdiction to dismiss it without costs. Sutton Harbour Improvement Co. v. Hitchens, 15 Beav. 161; 21 L. J., Ch. 568.

When a plaintiff fails in establishing a case for relief, the uncertain character of the evidence on which the case turns, and the setting up of unfounded claims by the defence, are grounds for dismissing the bill without costs. Pitts v. Kingsbridge Highway Board, 25 L. T. 195; 19 W. R. 884.

Bill by purchaser, for specific performance, ordered to be dismissed for defect of title, a necessary party not choosing to concur in conveying. Order to dismiss without costs, it being against the principles of the court to order the defendant to pay the plaintiff his costs on such dismissal. Lewis v. Loxham, 3 Mer. 429. See the notes there.

—— Reported Case afterwards Overruled.]—If a bill is correctly filed on the authority of a reported case, there being no authorities in conflict with it, and the decision in the reported case is afterwards reversed, the plaintiff in the suit filed on its authority is entitled, on motion, to have the bill dismissed without costs. Robinson v. Rosher, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 7; 5 Jur. 1006.

Though a bill has been filed on the authority of a reported case, which is afterwards reversed, the court has not jurisdiction, on a motion, under the 82nd rule, to order that the bill shall be dismissed without costs. Cronin v. Murphy, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 233.

A suit having been instituted on the authority of a reported case, which was afterwards reversed, the court, after looking simply into the record, dismissed it without costs. Sutton Harbour Improvement Co. v. Hitchens, supra.

A decision, on the authority of which a suit had been instituted, being overruled, the plaintiff offered to dismiss his bill without costs:—Held, that this was no answer to a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, and that the plaintiff must either proceed or have his bill dismissed on the usual terms. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Evans, 14 Beav. 529.

B AFTER TRIAL BY JURY.

1. Successful Plaintiff's Costs Disallowed.

Power of Judge at Nisi Prius.]—At the trial of an action of tort the jury found for the plaintiff, and assessed the damages at 12*l.* The counsel for the defendant was about to apply for a direction to deprive the plaintiff of the costs, but, before he did so, the judge made an order to that effect. The plaintiff's counsel was present and objected to the order being made:—Held, that the order depriving the plaintiff of costs was lawfully made. Collins v. Welch, 49 L. J., C. P. 260; 5 C. P. D. 27; 41 L. T. 785; 28 W. R. 208—C. A.

By Grove and Lopes, JJ., that the judge might, under Ord. LV. (now Ord. LXV.) make the order without any application being made to him. Ib.

By Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, L.JJ., that what occurred at the trial was equivalent to an application by the defendant, and to showing good cause why the order should be made. Ib.

At the trial of an action by a jury, the judge may, without any application having been made to him, order under Ord. LV. r. 1, that the costs shall not follow the event. Turner v. Heyland, 48 L. J., C. P. 535; 4 C. P. D. 432; 41 L. T. 556.

The plaintiffs, after a trial with a jury, recovered 5*l.* beyond 100*l.* paid into court. The judge immediately gave judgment for the plaintiffs, 105*l.* without costs. Counsel on both sides were present. No application was made, and no cause was shown. Counsel for the defendants intended to apply to deprive the plaintiffs of costs had not the judge anticipated him. The Exchequer Division rescinded the order:—Held, that the jurisdiction given by Ord. LV. to the judge or the court is an alternative and not an appellate jurisdiction, and that the circumstances of the case showed a substantial compliance with the requirements of Ord. LV. as to application at the trial. Marsden v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. 50 L. J., Q. B. 318: 7 Q. B. D. 641; 44 L. T. 239; 29 W. R. 580—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Divisional Court.] — The divisional court has, under Ord. LV., an original jurisdiction to make an order to deprive a successful party of the costs of an action tried before a jury. Myers v. Defries, Siddons v. Lawrence, 48 L. J., Ex. 446; 4 Ex. D. 176; 40 L. T. 795; 27 W. R. 791—C. A.

Where in an action tried with a jury the plaintiff recovers a farthing damages, and no application or order as to costs is made at the trial, the divisional court has jurisdiction under Ord. LV. to entertain an application to deprive the plaintiff of costs. Bowey v. Bell, 48 L. J., Q. B. 161; 4 Q. B. D. 95; 39 L. T. 607; 27 W. R. 247. S. P. Marsden v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., supra.

Jurisdiction of Judge at Chambers.]—A judge at chambers has no power to make an order as to costs under Ord. LV.; nor to extend the time for making such order under Ord. LVII. r. 6, so as to enable the judge who tried the cause to make such order at any time after the trial. If no application has been made to the judge at the trial, the only way of obtaining such an order is by a substantive application to a divisional court. Baker v. Oakes, 46 L. J., Q. B. 246; 2 Q. B. D. 171; 35 L. T. 832; 25 W. R. 220—C. A.

Time for Application—Judge at Nisi Prius.] —In an action against a railway company for damages caused by their negligence tried by a judge with a jury, the plaintiff recovered 50*l*. The defendants having thereupon applied that the plaintiff should be deprived of costs under Ord. LXV. r. 1, of the rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, the judge refused to exercise his discretion, but after some weeks heard both sides and made an order depriving the plaintiff of costs:—Held, that the judge was not functus officio when he refused to exercise his discretion at the trial, that he had jurisdiction to make the order. Huxley v. West London Ry., 58 L. J., Q. B. 305; 14 App. Cas. 26; 60 L. T. 642; 37 W. R. 625—H. L. (E.)

At the trial, at the assizes, of an action for damages in respect of injuries to the plaintiffs' vessel through the negligence of the defendants, the jury, at 5.10 p.m., on the 14th July, found a verdict for the defendants, and added that they "believed both parties to be in fault," and the associate then immediately entered in his book, kept for the purpose, a note that the jury had so found. No application with respect to costs was then made, and that being the last cause for trial, and the next day being the commission day for the assizes at York in another county, the court rose and the judge departed. Four days afterwards, on the 18th July, while the judge was sitting under the commission in the criminal court at York, the plaintiffs' counsel, having informed the defendants' counsel of his intention so to do, applied to the judge there, under Ord. LV. of the Judicature Act, for an order directing judgment to be entered for the defendants without costs, on the ground that, as the jury had in effect found negligence on both sides, each party ought to bear his own costs, which order the judge, after taking time to consider, made at York on the 21st July. Upon a rule to set that order aside and enter judgment for the defendants with costs, on the ground that the judge had no power to make it, as no application had been made "at the trial":—Held, that, as no application had been made either to the judge "at the trial," which was necessary to give him jurisdiction, or to a divisional court, which is the court mentioned in Ord. LV., and no application to enlarge the time, under Ord. LVII. r. 6, had been made to the judge, the provisions of Ord. LV. had not been complied with, and the order of the judge must be set aside, and the rule to enter judgment for the defendants be made absolute. Tyne Alkali Co. v. Lawson, 36 L. T. 100.

"At the trial" in Ord. LV. means at the time of the same sitting of the court at which the trial took place. Ib.

An action was tried at assizes before a jury, who gave a verdict for the defendant. The plaintiff's counsel an hour afterwards, at the rising of the court, applied under Ord. LV. of the Judicature Act, 1875, for an order to deprive the defendant of costs. The judge reserved his decision until the next morning, when he made the order asked for. The defendant's counsel had notice that the application would be made, and was in court when the judge made the order. —Held, that the application was made at the trial within Ord. LV. Kynaston v. Mackinder, 47 L. J., Q. B. 76; 37 L. T. 390—C. A.

—— To Divisional Court.]—Such application to a divisional court will only be entertained when it is made within a reasonable time after the trial. Bowey v. Bell, 48 L. J., Q. B. 161; 4 Q. B. D. 95; 39 L. T. 607; 27 W. R. 247.

"Good Cause"—What may be considered.]— The concluding words of Ord. LXV. r. 1 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, which give the judge or court a discretion as to costs "for good cause" in trials with a jury, embrace everything for which the party is responsible, connected with the institution or conduct of the suit, and calculated to occasion unnecessary litigation and expense. Huxley v. West London Ry., 58 L. J., Q. B. 305; 14 App. Cas. 26; 60 L. T. 642; 37 W. R. 625—H. L. (E.)

When a plaintiff has supported an extravagant and extortionate claim by fraudulent statements and dishonest acts, and by evidence which the jury disbelieved, this constitutes "good cause" within the meaning of r. 1 of Ord. LXV. Ib.

To be "good cause" within that rule there must be facts showing that it would be more just not to allow the costs to follow the event, as for example, oppression or misconduct of either of the parties by which costs had been unnecessarily increased. The fact that the action is for the recovery of several closes of land, that the only defence is that the defendant is in possession, and that the verdict is for the plaintiff for some only of the closes claimed, does not by itself constitute "good cause" within Ord. LXV. r. 1, since the verdict in such a case is distributive, and the costs, if properly taxed, would be as on a finding by the jury on separate issues. Jones v. Curling, 53 L. J., Q. B. 373; 13 Q. B. D. 262; 50 L. T. 349; 32 W. R. 651—C. A.

If from all the facts proved before a judge and jury it appears that the action was brought or conducted oppressively by the plaintiff, that constitutes "good cause" within Ord. LXV. r. 1, so as to enable the judge to interfere, and not only deprive a successful plaintiff of his costs, but also to order that he shall pay the defendant's costs. Williams v. Ward, 55 L. J., Q. B. 566—C. A.

Where the plaintiff endeavours unjustly, oppressively, or unscrupulously, to fix upon the defendant a liability for which he must have known there was no foundation, there is good cause for depriving him of costs, although he recovers a substantial portion of his claim by the verdict of the jury. Roberts v. Jones, 60 L. J., Q. B. 441; [1891] 2 Q. B. 194.

Unjustifiable use by the plaintiff of his privilege of choosing his venue also constitutes good cause for dealing with the costs of the action, although the defendant has made no effort to change the venue. Ib.

Representations made by a defendant before action, leading the plaintiff to believe that he is entitled to the relief sought, may constitute good cause for depriving the defendant, though successful, of the costs of the action. Buckley v. Irish Industrial Building Society, 22 L. R., Ir. 579.

In exercising his discretion to deprive a successful party of his costs under Ord. LV., the judge is not confined to the consideration of the conduct of the party in the course of the litigation, but may consider his conduct previous to and conducing to the action. He must, however, assume the truth of the facts found by the jury. Harnett v. Vise, 5 Ex. D. 307; 43 L. T. 645; 29 W. R. 7—C. A.

Where an action was tried at the assizes, and adjourned for further consideration, the plaintiff up to the time of the judgment being delivered insisted on an injunction. The result of thus insisting protracted the trial, and it was held that good cause had been shown why the costs of the action should not follow the event. Matthews v. Jeffery, 43 L. T. 796; 29 W. R. 282.

In an action for breach of contract the plaintiff claimed in respect of four separate items of special damage; the jury found in his favour as to one item, but in favour of the defendant as to the remainder. The judge ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs occasioned by the claim in respect of the items in which he had failed:—Held, that, though these items were not "issues" in the strict sense of the term, they were separate heads of claim involving a distinct class of evidence, and that it was not fair to the defendant to make him pay the costs of resisting them, and that, therefore, "good cause" for making the order existed. Forster v. Farquhar, 62 L. J., Q. B. 296; [1893] 1 Q. B. 564; 4 R. 346; 68 L. T. 308; 41 W. R. 425—C. A.

In an action for a libel published in a newspaper the plaintiff obtained a verdict for one shilling. The judge made an order depriving the plaintiff of costs. The libel consisted of hostile comments on a letter written by the plaintiff to another newspaper, and on certain correspondence arising therefrom. It appeared that the plaintiff's letter had been written at the instigation of persons who desired to raise a political controversy. The court thought that under the circumstances the bringing of the action was oppressive; and:—Held, that there was "good cause" for depriving the plaintiff of costs O'Connor v. "Star" Newspaper Co., 4 R. 271; 68 L. T. 146—C. A.

Letters or conversations written or declared to be "without prejudice" cannot be taken into consideration in determining whether there is good cause for depriving a successful litigant of costs. Walker v. Wilsher, 58 L. J., Q. B. 501; 23 Q. B. D. 335; 37 W. R. 723; 54 J. P. 213—C. A.

Where, in an action for seducing a woman thirty-five years of age, it was proved that she had readily consented, and that the parties were very poor, and the jury having awarded only 10*l.* damages, the judge who tried the case stated upon the face of his order the foregoing circumstances, and his own opinion that no greater amount of damages could have been reasonably given or expected, as "special cause," under s. 53 of the Irish Judicature Act, for depriving the plaintiff of his costs:—Held, that the facts did not constitute such "special cause," and that the plaintiff was entitled to his costs. Wilson v. M'Mains, 20 L. R., Ir. 582—C. A.

A judge has power, when the action is tried before a jury, to order a plaintiff who recovers a nominal sum, to pay the defendant's costs. Harris v. Petherick, 48 L. J., Q. B. 521; 4 Q. B. D. 611; 41 L. T. 146—C. A.

In an action to recover a sum of 85*l.*, and also a sum of 6*s.*, the plaintiff was nonsuited. A new trial having been ordered, at the second trial which took place before a jury, he failed as to his claim for 85*l.*, but proved his claim for 6*s.* The judge ordered that the plaintiff should pay the costs of both trials:—Held, that the order was right, and could not be set aside. Ib.

—— Appeal from Order.]—Where an action is tried with a jury, the judge before whom it is tried has no jurisdiction under Ord. LXV. r. 1, to make an order by which the costs will not follow the event unless there exist "good cause" within the meaning of that rule, and consequently there is an appeal with respect to the existence of the facts necessary to give the judge jurisdiction to make such order. Jones v. Curling, 53 L. J., Q. B. 373; 13 Q. B. D. 262; 50 L. T. 349; 32 W. R. 651—C. A.

So long as the judge or court deal with considerations which constitute "good cause," the sufficiency or insufficiency of these considerations as affording a reason for disallowing costs are matters of which they are constituted sole arbiters; they are acting within their jurisdiction, and their decisions are final and conclusive. On the other hand, if they give effect to considerations which do not constitute "good cause" within the meaning of the rule, they exceed the limits of their jurisdiction; and on that ground their decisions are not protected from review. Jones v. Curling (13 Q. B. D. 262), discussed. Huxley v. West London Ry., 58 L. J., Q. B. 305; 14 App. Cas. 26; 60 L. T. 642; 37 W. R. 625—H. L. (E.)

If "good cause" exists the court will decline to consider whether the judge has exercised his discretion rightly or not. Williams v. Ward, 55 L. J., Q. B. 566—C. A.

In the absence of "good cause" a judge has no jurisdiction to make an order preventing costs from following the event. Wight v. Shaw, 19 Q. B. D. 396; 36 W. R. 408—C. A.

Where an action is tried with a jury, the exercise of the judge's jurisdiction as to costs under Ord. LXV. r. 1, was not intended by the legislature to be subject to any appeal. Huxley v. West London Extension Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 506; 17 Q. B. D. 373.

2. Several Issues.

"Event"—Several Causes of Action.]—When in the same action the plaintiff obtains a verdict and judgment as to one cause of action, and the defendant obtains a verdict and judgment as to other and distinct causes of action, the word "event" in Ord. LV. r. 1, is to be read distributively, and the defendant is entitled to tax his costs of the issues found for him, provided no order otherwise is made by the judge who tried the cause or the court. Rule 62 of Rules of Hilary Term, 1853, is repealed by s. 33 of the Judicature Act, 1875. Myers v. Defries, 5 Ex D. 15; 41 L. T. 659; 28 W. R. 258. Affirmed 49 L. J., Ex. 266; 5 Ex. D. 180; 42 L. T. 137; 28 W. R. 406—C. A.

A plaintiff claiming an injunction in respect of three separate subjects of complaint, succeeded as to one but failed as to the remainder. By the order, taxation was directed to the costs of the defendant of so much of the action as had been dismissed, and of the plaintiff of the rest of the action, with a set-off of the costs of the plaintiff against those of the defendant. The taxing-master taxed the plaintiff's and the defendant's costs of the whole action, and allowed one third to the plaintiff and two-thirds to the defendant. Upon a summons by the plaintiff, to vary the certificate, by ordering each item to be considered separately, and according to the subject of complaint, in respect of which each item might turn out to have been incurred, to be paid by the plaintiff or the defendant, as the case may be.—Held, that the taxing-master had proceeded upon the usual principle, and that the certificate was correct. Knight v. Pursell, 49 L. J. Ch. 120; 11 Ch. D. 412; 41 L. T. 581; 28 W. R. 90.

Issues upon which Plaintiff has been Non-suited.]—In an action tried by a jury where the plaintiff succeeds upon some issues but is non-suited upon others, and no order is made as to costs, the defendant is entitled under Ord. LV. r. 1, to the costs of the issues upon which the plaintiff was nonsuited. Abbott v. Andrews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 641; 8 Q. B. D. 648; 30 W. R. 779.

3. Where Counterclaim set up.

Judgment, Form of—"Event."]—In an action tried with a jury, where the defendant counterclaims in respect of matters which could not be pleaded as set-off, and the plaintiff recovers a sum on his claim, and the defendant recovers on his counterclaim a sum exceeding that which the plaintiff recovers on his claim, the claim and counterclaim should, for the purpose of taxation of costs, be treated as separate and independent actions, and the costs in each taxed in favour of the successful party, subject to a deduction in respect of the costs of any issues on which he has not succeeded. In such a case it is immaterial, with respect to the taxation of costs, whether the judgment is drawn up in form for the plaintiff for the sum recovered on his claim, and for the defendant for the sum recovered on his counterclaim; or whether the judgment is given for the defendant for the balance under Ord. XXI. r. 17. Shrapnel v. Laing, 57 L. J., Q. B. 195; 20 Q. B. D. 334; 58 L. T. 705; 36 W. R. 297—C. A.

The plaintiff's claim being for the balance of the contract price of work done, after giving credit for money paid on account, the defendants by way of set-off and counterclaim claimed in respect of the inferiority and defective character of the work. The action being referred for trial to an official referee, he found by his report that a balance of 32*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* remained due to the plaintiff on his claim in respect of the contract price of the work, and that 34*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* was due to the defendants on their counterclaim:—Held, that the proper judgment on these findings was that the defendants do recover the balance of 1*l.* 12*s.*, and the costs of the action, on the ground, either that the inferiority of the work, though pleaded by way of counterclaim in form, in reality amounted to a defence, or that, even if the plaintiff were technically entitled by the findings to the costs of the action, the court ought to interfere under Ord. LV. r. 1, and give the costs to the defendants, who had substantially succeeded in the action. Lowe v. Holme, 52 L. J., Q. B. 270; 10 Q. B. D. 286; 31 W. R. 400.

Both Parties Successful—General Principles of Taxation.]—Semble, per Brett, L.J., that where there is a claim with issues on it and a counterclaim (which is not a set-off but is in the nature of a cross-action) with issues on it, and the plaintiff succeeds on the claim, and the defendant succeeds on such counterclaim, the taxation, if not otherwise ordered, should be by taxing the claim as if it and its issues were an action, and by taxing the counterclaim as if it and its issues were also an action, and the allocatur for costs should be given for the balance in favour of the party in whose favour is such balance; the master on such taxation dividing items which are common to both actions. Barnes v. Bromley, 50 L. J., Q. B. 465; 6 Q. B. D. 691; 44 L. T. 915; 29 W. R. 706—C. A.

—— "Costs of the Cause."]—The plaintiff claimed to recover commission due to him from the defendants on an agreement. The defendants denied the claim, and claimed by way of counterclaim 230*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.* for goods sold. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff on the claim for 114*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, and a verdict for the defendants on the counterclaim for 230*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.* The judgment entered was "that the plaintiff recover against the defendants l. for his costs of suit," and "that the defendants recover against the plaintiff 115*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.* on the counterclaim and l. for their costs of the counterclaim":—Held, that on taxing the costs according to the judgment the plaintiff and not the defendants were entitled to the costs of the cause. Ib.

In an action a verdict was found for the plaintiff for 90*l.* on his claim, and for the defendant on his counterclaim for 75*l.* and 1*s.* damages for the detention of an account-book. The counterclaim was not in form for detinue of the book, and there was no finding as to its value. The judge ordered the book to be returned, and in order to insure its return he assessed its value at 150*l.* The book was returned soon after the trial. The associate's certificate was in these terms:—"The judge directed that judgment should be entered for the plaintiff for 75*l.*, and for the defendant for the return of the book or 150*l.* its value, and 1*s.* damages for the detention." The defendant thereupon claimed that he was entitled to the general costs of the action, having recovered a sum, or its equivalent, exceeding the sum recovered by the plaintiff:—Held, that the claim was wholly untenable, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the general costs of the action, and the defendant to the costs of those issues on which he had succeeded. Hallinan v. Price, 41 L. T. 627; 27 W. R. 490.

When the plaintiff's claim and the defendant's counterclaim have both been successful, the plaintiff, in the absence of any special directions to the contrary, is entitled to the general costs of the action, notwithstanding that the result of the litigation is in favour of the defendant. Brown, In re, Ward v. Morse, 52 L. J., Ch. 524 ; 23 Ch. D. 377 ; 49 L. T. 68 ; 31 W. R. 936—C. A.

There will be no apportionment of such costs as would have been duplicated had the counterclaim been the subject of an independent action, but the plaintiff is not to recover as costs of the action any costs fairly attributable to the counterclaim. Ib.

The plaintiffs claimed 49*l.* 12*s.* The defendants admitted the claim and counterclaimed for 75*l.* The judgment was for the plaintiffs on the claim, and for the defendants on the counterclaim for 40*l.* ; the plaintiffs to have the costs of their claim and the defendants to have the costs of their counterclaim :—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of the cause up to the time of delivery of the defence, and that the defendants were entitled to such costs after the delivery of the defence. Bowker v. Kesteven, 47 L. T. 545.

A plaintiff whose claim is reduced by a counterclaim being proved by the defendant, recovers judgment for the balance only, and the question of costs under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, must be decided with reference to that balance. Staples v. Young, 2 Ex. D. 324 ; 25 W. R. 304. S. P., Ryan v. Fraser, 16 L. R., Ir. 253—C. A.

The provisions of the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), s. 5, denying costs in an action in the High Court where a minimum is not recovered, do not apply to a defendant recovering on a counterclaim. Blake v. Appleyard, 47 L. J., Ex. 407 ; 3 Ex. D. 195 ; 26 W. R. 592.

The plaintiff claimed on a balance of account a sum of money exceeding 50*l.* The defendant pleaded a set-off, and also made a counterclaim for goods supplied to the amount of about 24*l.* The action was referred to a master, the costs of the action to abide the event. The master certified that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiff on the claim 16*l.*, and from the plaintiff to the defendant on the counterclaim 23*l.*, and that the balance due from the plaintiff to the defendant was 7*l.* :—Held, that the defendant was entitled to his costs. Chatfield v. Sedgwick, 4 C. P. D. 459 ; 27 W. R. 790—C. A.

The plaintiff claimed a balance of 114*l.* 8*s.*, and the defendant established a counterclaim to the extent of 109*l.* 16*s.*, whereupon the judge directed the jury (as the result of their answers to certain questions submitted to them) to find a verdict for the plaintiff for the balance 4*l.* 12*s.*, and no order was made as to costs. The court refused to alter the associate's certificate of the findings of the jury for the purpose of assisting the defendant to obtain costs upon his counterclaim. Staples v. Young (supra) and Blake v. Appleyard (supra) considered. Potter v. Chambers, 48 L. J., C. P. 274 ; 4 C. P. D. 69 ; 39 L. T. 350 ; 27 W. R. 414.

Where an action of contract is commenced in the High Court of Justice for a sum exceeding 50*l.*, and the plaintiff establishes his claim to the amount, but in consequence of a counterclaim being decided in favour of the defendant, the plaintiff recovers judgment for a sum not exceeding 20*l.* he is not deprived of his costs by virtue of the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, extended to actions in the High Court by the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 67, for the relief sought by him could not, within the meaning of the latter section, have been given by a county court. Potter v. Chambers, 48 L. J., C. P. 274 ; 4 C. P. D. 457 ; 27 W. R. 414.

The plaintiffs claimed on a balance of account a sum of money exceeding 50*l.* The defendants denied their indebtedness, and pleaded by way of set-off and counterclaim that the plaintiffs were indebted to them for money advanced and money due for work done, and goods sold and delivered, and they claimed a balance on the accounts in their favour exceeding 50*l.* The cause was referred to an arbitrator, costs to abide the event. The arbitrator found that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiffs in a sum exceeding 50*l.*, and that the plaintiffs were indebted in like manner to the defendants in a sum exceeding 50*l.*, but that a balance was due to the plaintiffs on the whole account of 11*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* :—Held, by Kelly, C. B., that the plaintiffs and the defendants were each entitled to the costs of the issues on which they had succeeded, on the ground that the relief sought could not be given in a county court ; and by Hawkins, J., contrary to his own opinion, but on the authority of Potter v. Chambers (4 C. P. D. 457, supra), that the plaintiffs were entitled to their general costs of action. Neale v. Clarke, 4 Ex. D. 286 ; 41 L. T. 438.

The plaintiffs sued for 40*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* and interest for goods sold and delivered, for work, labour, and materials, and for making and delivering a steam-engine for the defendants. The defendants paid 8*l.* 11*s.* into court, pleaded that the work had been improperly done, and counterclaimed for loss of trade profits through defects in the engine supplied by the plaintiffs. The action and counterclaim were referred to a district registrar, the costs of cause and counterclaim to follow the event, the party in whose favour the award was made to be at liberty ten days after its service on the other party, to sign judgment for the sum found due and the costs to which he should be entitled under the order of reference and award, with costs of judgment. The arbitrator awarded a balance of 4*l.* in favour of the defendants, and the district registrar ordered judgment to be signed for the defendants for 5*l.* and the taxed costs of the action, counterclaim, and reference :—Held, that the district registrar had no authority to give the defendants the costs of the action, but that the defendants must pay the costs of proving the claim, and the plaintiffs must pay the costs of proving the counterclaim. Cole v. Firth, 40 L. T. 851.

Claim and Counterclaim both Dismissed.]—Where the plaintiff's claim and defendant's counterclaim are both dismissed with costs, the plaintiff is to pay to the defendant the general costs of the action, and the defendant is to pay to the plaintiff only the amount by which the costs have been increased by reason of the counterclaim. Saner v. Bilton, 48 L. J., Ch. 545 ; 11 Ch. D. 416 ; 40 L. T. 314 ; 27 W. R. 472.

The judge, at the trial of an action in which there was a claim and counterclaim, thinking both parties in the wrong, dismissed the action without costs, and also dismissed the counterclaim with costs, but ordered that if the costs of the counterclaim should not amount to half the whole costs of the action the defendant should pay the difference to the plaintiff:—Held, that the order as to costs was irregular, inasmuch as after dismissing the action without costs, it imposed part of the costs of the action upon the defendant by way of penalty; but that in substance the order was within the discretion of the judge, as it amounted to dismissing the claim and counterclaim, and directing the defendant to pay half the whole costs of the action. Willmott v. Barber, 17 Ch. D. 772; 45 L. T. 229—C. A.

Where the plaintiff's claim and the defendant's counterclaim are both dismissed with costs, the plaintiff is to pay to the defendant the general costs of the action, and the defendant is to pay to the plaintiff only the amount by which the costs have been increased by reason of the counterclaim. Saner v. Bilton (11 Ch. D. 416), approved. Mason v. Brentini, 15 Ch. D. 287; 43 L. T. 557; 29 W. R. 126—C. A.

Where Counterclaim Successful.]—In an action for freight plaintiff claimed 51*l.*, and defendant counterclaimed 9*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* for damage to the cargo, paying the remaining 41*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* into court. The action was remitted to a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, and the registrar certified a verdict for the plaintiff for 16*s.*:—Held, that the court could order the certificate to be altered by distributing the findings on the issues, so as to enable defendants to be allowed the costs of their counterclaim. Davidson v. Gray, 5 Ex. D. 189, n.; 42 L. T. 834—C. A.

—— Claim admitted on Pleadings.]—The plaintiff claimed 78*l.* 15*s.* in respect of a quarter's rent of premises let furnished to the defendant. The defendant by his pleadings admitted the claim, but counterclaimed for a larger amount as damages in respect of the insanitary condition of the demised premises. The action was tried by a jury, who found for the defendant on the counterclaim with 17*l.* 16*s.* damages. The judge at the trial ordered that judgment should be entered for the plaintiffs for the amount of the claim with costs down to the date of the counterclaim, and that judgment should be entered for the defendant for 17*l.* 16*s.* on the counterclaim, with the costs of the counterclaim, and subsequent thereto, including the costs of the trial:—Held, that the effect of the judge's order as regards costs was to prevent him from following the "event," and that in the absence of "good cause" he had no jurisdiction to make such order. Wight v. Shaw, 19 Q. B. D. 396; 36 W. R. 408—C. A.

4. When New Trial Ordered.

Costs of First Trial.]—The plaintiff brought an action for three parcels carried by three ships belonging to the defendant, and which were lost during transit. As regards two of these parcels, a verdict was found for the plaintiff; as to the other, the defendant succeeded. The defendant subsequently applied for and obtained a new trial, the result of which was that he got an entire verdict:—Held, that as there had been no default on the part of the defendant, and the plaintiff had not exercised the power which he possessed of entering a nolle prosequi, or of intimating that he did not intend to pursue further the particular issue found against the defendant on the first trial, the defendant was entitled, under the circumstances, to recover the costs of the first trial, relating to the issue found in his favour. Marcus v. General Steam Navigation Co., 35 L. T. 353—C. A.

Where a venire de novo was awarded, the party succeeding was only entitled to the costs of the second trial. Luckbarrow v. Mason, 6 Term Rep. 131.

If a venire de novo issued, the court had no power over the costs of the application for that writ. Edwards v. Brown, 1 D. P. C. 282; 1 C. & J. 354; 1 Tyr. 281.

—— Party Deprived of Costs of Second Trial.]—An order for a new trial provided that the costs of the first trial should abide the result of the second. The plaintiff at the second trial having been deprived of costs under s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, is not entitled to any costs of the first trial. Brotherton v. Metropolitan District Joint Committee, [1894] 1 Q. B. 666; 9 R. 154; 70 L. T. 218; 42 W. R. 273—C. A.

—— Following Event.]—Where a plaintiff recovers a verdict, and a new trial is ordered on the ground of excessive damages, in which new trial the plaintiff again obtains a verdict in his favour, the second verdict is the "event," within Ord. LV. r. 1, which the costs of the whole action are to follow, including the costs of the abortive first trial. Field v. G. N. Ry., 47 L. J., Q. B. 662; 3 Ex. D. 261; 39 L. T. 80; 26 W. R. 817.

When on the trial of an action a nonsuit is directed which is set aside and a new trial granted, and on the second trial the plaintiff has a verdict and judgment, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of the first trial, and of the rule for a new trial as part of the costs which follow the event under the latter part of Ord. LV. Creen v. Wright, 46 L. J., C. P. 427; 2 C. P. D. 354; 36 L. T. 355; 25 W. R. 502—C. A.

Where, on the first trial of a cause, the plaintiff obtains a verdict, and a rule is afterwards made absolute for a new trial, the costs to abide the event, and the defendant succeeds on the second trial, neither party is entitled to the costs of the rule for a new trial. Eccles v. Harper, 14 M. & W. 248; 3 D. & L. 71; 14 L. J., Ex. 264.

When the court orders a new trial, the costs to abide the event, such event means the ultimate event of the cause; therefore, if the verdict on the second trial is set aside, and, on a third, the ultimate event is the same as at the first trial, the party succeeding at the last will be entitled to the costs of the first trial. Meule v. Goddard, 5 B. & Ald. 766.

When the costs of the former trial are to abide the event of a new trial, if the same party succeeds on the new trial, he has costs of both trials; if his opponent, he has only the costs of the new trial. Sherlock v. Barned, 8 Bing. 21; 1 M. & Scott, 58; 1 L. J., C. P. 11.

If costs are directed to abide the event, neither party has the costs of the first trial, if the event of the second is different from that of the first trial. Canham v. Fisk, 2 C. & J. 126; 2 Tyr. 155.

When a rule for a new trial is granted, "costs to abide the event of such trial," the "event" which is to decide the right to costs is the event of the dispute which was before the court at the time of discussing the rule, and which the parties go down to try. Jones v. Williams, 42 L. J., Q. B. 48; L. R. 8 Q. B. 280; 28 L. T. 122; 21 W. R. 390.

—— Cause referred.]—Where a cause is referred by order of nisi prius, and the award is afterwards set aside on the ground of the arbitrator not having adjudicated on all the matters referred, and the cause is tried again, the party ultimately succeeding is not entitled to the costs of the first trial. Wood v. Duncan, 5 M. & W. 87; 7 D. P. C. 344; 8 L. J., Ex. 224; 3 Jur. 582.

The arbitrators to whom a cause was referred at nisi prius were unable to decide, and they suffered the time for making their award to expire, upon which the plaintiff carried the cause down to a second trial, and obtained a verdict:—Held, that each party must pay his own costs upon the first trial. Thomas v. Lewis, 6 D. P. C. 395; W., W. & D. 67; 1 Jur. 104.

After verdict for the plaintiff, the defendant obtained a rule for a new trial, which was made absolute, no mention being made of costs. The parties then agreed to a reference, and the order of reference stipulated that the costs were to abide the event. The arbitrator having decided the cause in favour of the defendant:—Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of the trial. Thomas v. Hawkes, 9 M. & W. 53; 1 D. (N.S.) 346; 11 L. J., Ex. 54; 5 Jur. 1115.

A rule nisi for a new trial was obtained after a verdict for the defendant, and the cause was then referred, and the costs left in the discretion of the arbitrator. He awarded in favour of the plaintiff, and directed the defendant to pay the costs of the cause:—Held, that it meant such costs as the defendant would have been liable to pay, if, on a new trial, there had been a verdict for the plaintiff. Rigby v. Okell, 7 B. & C. 57; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 357; 31 R. R. 156.

—— Case reserved.]—Where, instead of proceeding on a new trial, the parties agreed to state the facts specially, as if in a case reserved at the trial, on which the postea was afterwards delivered to the plaintiff:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the first trial. Robertson v. Liddell, 10 East, 416.

Where a case is reserved, from the insufficient state of which it is necessary to send the cause down to a second trial, and nothing is said respecting the costs, the party succeeding on such second trial is not entitled to the costs of the first. Hankey v. Smith, 3 Term Rep. 507. S. P., Smith v. Haile, 6 Term Rep. 71.

—— Cognovit.]—In a like case, the defendant, without going to trial again, gave the plaintiff a cognovit:—Held, that the defendant was liable to pay the costs of the former trial. Booth v. Atherton, 6 Term Rep. 144. And see Elvin v. Drummond, 4 Bing. 415; 1 M. & P. 88; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 31.

—— Three Trials.]—After a venire de novo, awarded upon an imperfect special verdict, and a new trial granted after a verdict for the plaintiff on the second trial, and the jury finds again for the plaintiff on the third trial, he is only entitled to the costs of the last trial, unless it is otherwise expressed in the rule granting the new trial. Bird v. Appleton, 1 East, 111; 8 Term Rep. 562; 5 R. R. 468.

When there were three verdicts, the first in favour of the plaintiff, the second in favour of the defendant by reason of a misdirection, and the third in favour of the defendant upon the merits, and the rule for the first new trial reserved the consideration of costs, the court allowed the defendant to take the costs of the first or second at his option, and the costs of the third. Body v. Esdaile, 3 Bing. 174; 10 Moore, 569; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 220.

—— Jury discharged.]—On the trial of a cause, the jury was unable to agree, and was in consequence discharged by the judge, without having given a verdict, and the associate indorsed the record as a remanet, and the cause being tried again the plaintiff had a verdict:—Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of the first trial. Brown v. Clarke, 12 M. & W. 25; 1 D. & L. 409; 13 L. J., Ex. 36; 7 Jur. 1043.

Where a jury, being unable to agree, is discharged with the consent of counsel, the party who obtains the verdict on the second trial is not entitled to the costs of the first trial. Bostock v. North Staffordshire Ry., 18 Q. B. 777; 21 L. J., Q. B. 384; 16 Jur. 726.

So where the jury, being unable to agree upon their verdict, is discharged by the judge, and the plaintiff afterwards discontinues, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of the trial. Wall v. L. & S. W. Ry., 11 Ex. 696; 25 L. J., Ex. 93; 4 W. R. 262.

Where a jury was discharged by the judge, of his own authority, from finding a verdict, they being unable to agree, the ultimately successful party is not entitled to the costs of the first attempt at trial. Waite v. Spurgin, 4 D. P. C. 575.

—— Insufficient or Perverse Verdict.]—If a jury finds an insufficient verdict, upon which the court can give no judgment, and a new trial is granted, the party ultimately successful is not entitled to the costs of the former trial. Worcestershire Canal Co. v. Trent and Mersey Navigation Co., 2 Marsh. 475; 17 R. R. 525.

A new trial after a perverse verdict of the jury is granted without costs; secus, after a mistaken or an erroneous verdict. Howorth v. Samuel, 1 Chit. 633, n.; 1 B. & Ald. 566. S. P., Shillitoe v. Claridge, 2 Chit. 426.

—— Verdict against Weight of Evidence.]—The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 44, does not apply where a new trial is granted for no fault of the jury, but on fresh matter disclosed by affidavit. Abbott v. Bult, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 93.

A new trial was granted, on the ground of the verdict being against the weight of evidence, and was also moved on affidavits: the court directed the costs to abide the event, excepting those of the affidavits, which the party who succeeded on the rule ought to pay in any event. Ib.

When a new trial is granted on the ground that the verdict is against evidence, the party who succeeds on the second trial but fails on the first is not entitled to the costs of the first trial, without a special order of the court. Evans v. Robinson, 11 Ex. 40; 24 L. J., Ex. 212.

In an action for the wrongful dismissal of a clerk, with a count for wages, the plaintiff obtained a verdict on the first count, and, no claim being urged on the second count, the verdict on that was entered for the defendant. A rule for a new trial was afterwards granted, "the plaintiff's costs of and occasioned by the trial already had, and of and occasioned by this application, to abide the event of this cause." On the second trial the defendant obtained a verdict on the first count, and the plaintiff (who had then discovered that there had been a mistake in the calculation of the wages due to him at the time of the dismissal) had a verdict on the second count:—Held, that the event contemplated by the rule being the event in respect of which the contest took place upon the first trial, the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs mentioned in the rule. Dawson v. Harrison, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 801; 31 L. J., C. P. 168; 5 L. T. 680; 10 W. R. 230.

Misdirection of Judge.]—A new trial was granted to the plaintiff without costs, when he had been improperly nonsuited. Bunscall v. Hogg, 3 Wils. 146.

Where a jury gave a general verdict for the defendant on three issues, having been misdirected on one, the court granted a new trial on payment of costs. Lord v. Wardle, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 680; 4 Scott, 402; 1 Jur. 382.

A new trial was granted without payment of costs, where the judge had misdirected the jury upon an important matter of fact. Haine v Davey, 6 N. & M. 356; 4 A. & E. 892; 2 H. & W. 30.

Where a mistaken verdict was given in consequence of the omission of the judge to draw the attention of the jury to a material feature in the case, the court imposed the terms of the payment of costs on the granting of a new trial, the judge not having been requested to enter into a fuller explanation. But the costs of a former trial, where the verdict was set aside for misdirection, and of an intermediate postponement, by making the cause a remanet, were to abide the event. Gibbins v. Phillips, 2 M. & Ry. 238; 8 B. & C. 437; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 371.

Rule Silent as to.]—If a new trial is granted on the ground that the verdict was imperfect, without any mention of costs in the rule, the costs of the first trial will not be allowed to the successful party, though he succeeds on the second. Horsey v. Graham, 23 L. T. 495.

Rule 54 of Hilary Term, 1853, applies only to cases where a new trial is granted upon the whole record. Bower v. Hill, 2 Scott, 540; 1 Hodges, 334; 5 D. P. C. 183.

A rule was made absolute for a new trial without any mention of costs in the rule:—Held, that the master was right in allowing the successful party all such costs of the first trial as were available for the second. Lambert v. Lyddon, 4 D. & L. 400; 2 B. C. Rep. 232; 16 L. J., Q. B. 34; 11 Jur. 44.

Where a rule is made absolute for a new trial, and no mention is made of the costs of the rule, neither party is entitled to them. Eccles v. Harper, 3 D. & L. 71; 14 M. & W. 248; 14 L. J., Ex. 264.

After verdict for the plaintiff a new trial was granted, on the ground of the reception of improper evidence. The defendant then withdrew his plea, and suffered judgment by default. The rule for a new trial was silent as to the costs of the first trial:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the first trial. Peacock v. Harris, 1 N. & P. 240; 5 A. & E. 449; 2 H. & W. 456; 6 L. J., K. B. 14.

Discharge of Rule.]—Where a rule nisi has been obtained for a new trial, or to enter a verdict for the defendant, unless the plaintiff consents to reduce the verdict, and the plaintiff does consent to reduce the verdict, and the rule is thereupon discharged, each party pays his own costs of the rule. Thompson v. Bailey, 4 Ex. 86; 7 D. & L. 234.

After verdict for a plaintiff, a rule nisi for a new trial or for arresting the judgment was obtained; the rule for a new trial was made absolute, the question of costs being reserved. After verdict for the plaintiff on the second trial, a rule nisi for a new trial, or for arresting the judgment was obtained, and afterwards discharged:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the first trial. Hunter v. Caldwell, 10 Q. B. 83; 11 Jur. 1056.

A rule to discharge a rule for a new trial, on the ground that the party has neglected to pay costs, is, in the Court of Exchequer, a rule nisi, which makes itself absolute, unless cause be shown within a limited time. Phillips v. Warren, 3 D. & L. 301; 14 M. & W. 730; 15 L. J., Ex. 3; 9 Jur. 930.

Where in trespass there were several issues, one of them on a plea of liberum tenementum, and the judge improperly rejected evidence applicable to that issue only, the court discharged a rule for a new trial after a verdict for the defendant on several issues, on his consenting to the verdict being entered for the plaintiff on that issue; and gave no costs of the rule to either party. Hughes v. Hughes, 15 M. & W. 701.

When, upon a verdict being returned for the plaintiff, the defendant obtains a rule nisi for a new trial, which is afterwards discharged in consideration of the plaintiff consenting to a reduction of his damages, neither party pays to the other the costs of the rule. Hussey v. Metropolitan Ry., 20 L. T. 612.

A rule was made absolute for a new trial on payment of costs by the plaintiff. The costs were taxed and demanded on the 4th of May. On the 8th, the defendant obtained a rule nisi to discharge that rule, unless the costs were paid before the fourth day of the ensuing term. The plaintiff having in the meantime paid the costs, the court discharged the rule, but ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs of the application. Solly v. Langford, 2 D. & L. 250.

Where a rule for a new trial upon payment of costs is granted, a rule to rescind that rule, upon the ground that the costs have not been paid, is, in the Common Pleas, a rule nisi only in the first instance. Spear v. Ward, 1 L., M. & P. 248.

Where a rule absolute for a new trial on payment of costs had been granted, but the costs were not paid within a reasonable time, the court made a rule absolute in the first instance for discharging the rule. Champion v. Griffiths, 1 D. (N.S.) 319; 5 Jur. 1182.

On Discontinuance.]—When the court granted a rule for a new trial on the application of the defendant, in a case where the plaintiff succeeded, and the latter applied to amend his declaration, but discontinued the action, not choosing to pay the costs of the former trial, as the condition of the amendment:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to the costs of the trial, notwithstanding the discontinuance. Gray v. Cox, 8 D. & R. 220; 5 B. & C. 458.

Where after a verdict for a defendant, and a rule absolute for a new trial, the plaintiff discontinues the action, the defendant is entitled to the costs of the trial. Sweeting v. Halse, 4 M. & Ry. 545; 9 B. & C. 369; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 339.

Where a defendant had a verdict on one of two issues, and the plaintiff on the other issue, and the defendant obtained a rule for a new trial on the latter issue, on the ground of misdirection, whereupon the plaintiff discontinued:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to the costs of the trial. Macclesfield (Earl) v. Bad- deley or Bradley, 7 M. & W. 570; 9 D. P. C. 312; 10 L. J., Ex. 182.

The defendants in replevin having obtained a verdict, a rule for a new trial was granted, on the ground that evidence had been improperly admitted. This rule was made absolute. The plaintiff gave a fresh notice of trial, but afterwards gave notice of discontinuance, and the cause was not re-tried. On the taxation, the costs of searches for documentary evidence (not including the evidence objected to), which had been made use of on the first trial, were allowed to the defendants, as well as the charge of drawing and copying the old briefs:—Held, that as these matters would have been available if the cause had been tried again, such costs were properly allowed. Daniel v. Wilkin, 8 Ex. 156; 22 L. J., Ex. 73.

Court Equally Divided.]—If the court is equally divided in opinion upon a rule for a new trial, and it consequently drops, neither party is entitled to any costs of the rule. Dansey v. Richardson, 3 El. & Bl. 722; 2 C. L. R. 1467; 23 L. J., Q. B. 361; 18 Jur. 957.

Appeal from Decision.]—Where the Exchequer Chamber confirms, on appeal, the decision of the court below, as to granting, discharging, or making absolute a rule, the appellant is liable for the costs both of the appeal and of the proceedings below, but no costs will be given to either when the judgment below is reversed. Barker v. Windle, 6 El. & Bl. 675; 25 L. J., Q. B. 349; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1069; 4 W. R. 603.

So where the exchequer chamber reverses, upon appeal, the decision of the court below as to granting, discharging, or making absolute a rule, the appellant is, as a general rule, entitled to such costs as he would have had if the decision in the court below had been in his favour, but not to the costs of the appeal. Young v. Moeller, 6 El. & Bl. 681.

Solicitor not on Roll.]—In granting a new trial, it is no ground for refusing to annex the condition of payment of costs by the party obtaining the rule, that the attorney of the adverse party was not on the roll when those costs were incurred. Punter v. Grantley (Lord), 3 Man. & G. 295; 3 Scott (N.R.) 647.

What Costs.]—Costs of opposing an unsuccessful application for a new trial are costs in the cause. Eyre v. Thorpe, 6 D. P. C. 768.

When a new trial is granted on payment of costs, such costs do not include the costs of summonses to obtain admissions, they being costs in the cause; nor do they include expenses of briefs, where the same will be used on the second trial. Lord v. Wardle, 5 Scott, 398; 6 D. P. C. 174.

If an attorney shows cause on his own behalf, against a rule for a new trial, or a stet processus, his client not appearing, the costs of the attorney are not costs in the cause, but must be made the subject of a special application to the court; and if that application is not made when the rule is disposed of, the court will not afterwards amend the rule as to them. Southee v. Terry, 2 D. P. C. 522.

Where there have been two trials, and the successful party is entitled to the costs of the second trial only, the master may allow fees on the second trial, with reference to those given on the first. Wilkinson v. Malin, 2 D. P. C. 65.

A plaintiff obtained a verdict, and a new trial was granted on account of the admission of improper evidence. The plaintiff drew up the rule for the new trial, and served it on the defendant, who informed the plaintiff that he would not avail himself of the rule. The court ordered that the postea should be delivered to the plaintiff, and that he should have his costs of the trial. But the court allowed neither party the costs of the rule for a new trial, or of the rule for giving the postea and costs to the plaintiff. De Rutzen v. Lloyd, 5 A. & E. 456; W. W. & D. 473; 2 N. & P. 213; 6 L. J., K. B. 223.

On the trial of a cause in which there were several issues, the plaintiff had a general verdict, leave being reserved to the defendant to move to enter a nonsuit, or a verdict for the defendant. A rule was obtained accordingly, and thereupon it was agreed, that the facts should be stated in a special case for the opinion of the court. On the argument of the case the court gave judgment for the defendant, and the verdict was accordingly entered for him, and this judgment was afterwards affirmed in the exchequer chamber:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the trial, and that although one of the issues was given up by him at the trial. Tobin v. Crawford, 10 M. & W. 602; 2 D. (N.S.) 541; 12 L. J., Ex. 77.

Where a rule nisi is granted for a new trial, the successful party is entitled to recover in costs his attorney's term fee, 1*l.* per term, until the giving of judgment. Bourne v. Alcock, 4 Q. B. 621.

—— Shorthand Notes of Evidence.]—It is competent to this court to make an order for the allowance, on taxation between party and party, of the expense of the shorthand notes of the evidence given at the trial, as part of the costs of a rule for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, in a case where, from the nature and extent of the evidence, it is manifest that the matter could not have been properly disposed of without their aid. Watson v. G. W. Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 302; 6 Q. B. D. 163; 29 W. R. 427.

The party who succeeds at a second trial will not be allowed on taxation the costs he has incurred for copies of a shorthand writer's notes of the evidence given at the former trial. Crease v. Barrett, 2 C. M. & R. 738; 1 Tyr. & G. 112.

On taxation of costs, the master declined to allow the costs incurred by the defendant at the second trial for shorthand writer's notes:—Held, that it was entirely within the discretion of the master to allow or disallow these items, and that it was not the practice of the court to interfere with that discretion, except in cases of gross abuse. Marcus v. General Steam Navigation Co., 35 L. T. 353—C. A.

In taxing the costs of a motion for a new trial of an issue, the cost of copies of the shorthand writer's notes of the evidence taken on the former trial are in the discretion of the taxing master, regard being had to the nature of the issue, and the extent to which such copies, if at all, were necessary; but in no case will more than two copies be allowed. Malins v. Price, 1 Ph. 590; 9 Jur. 955.

—— Shorthand Notes of Summing-up.]—The costs of the shorthand-writer's notes of the summing-up of a judge at the trial will, on applications for a new trial, only be allowed upon taxation in exceptional cases. Andrews v. Mockford, 65 L. J., Q. B. 302 ; [1896] 1 Q. B. 372 ; 73 L. T. 730—C. A.

C. HEARING FOR COSTS ALONE.

Trial of Cause on Non-payment.]—The defendant having satisfied the plaintiff's demand, the court refused to allow the action to be proceeded with for costs. Tapp v. Tanner, 20 L. J., Ch. 559.

After action brought, the plaintiff after receiving payment of his demands, may go on to a trial, if the costs then incurred are not tendered. Lill v. Robinson, Beat. 84.

When the demand of the plaintiff is submitted to, and the only question between the parties is the costs of the suit, the cause ought not to be proceeded in, but an application ought to be made to the court to prevent the expense of further proceeding. Sivell v. Abraham, 8 Beav. 598.

A cause will not be heard for costs alone. Blackwood v. Gregg, 1 Hay. & J. 310.

Court will not hear suit for settlement of costs only, even on mutual consent. Roberts v. Roberts, 1 Sim. & S. 39.

An order made on a party to a suit for payment of costs after taxation, with liberty to apply at the hearing for reimbursement, is intended to conclude all questions. He will not, therefore, having omitted to make any such application at the hearing, be allowed afterwards to open the question of costs, although at the time of the hearing no taxation had been made of the costs to which he was liable under the order. Whalley v. Ramage, 8 L. T. 499.

Whether it is regular to present a petition to come on with the cause on further directions, for the purpose of stating circumstances occurring since the filing of the bill, with a view only to the adjudication of the costs of suit, semble, not. Tanner v. Dancey, 9 Beav. 339.

Though the substantial object of a suit be attained previously to the hearing, yet either party has the right to prosecute the suit to a hearing, in order to determine the question of costs. Morgan v. G. E. Ry., 2 N. R. 60.

A bill was filed in consequence of a claim to a fund made by a defendant. The defendant, in his answer, disclaimed all right to the fund, but stated certain facts, as the ground for his not being ordered to pay the costs of the suit. The plaintiffs entered into evidence by which they falsified those statements. The court held that they were justified in so doing, and ordered the defendant to pay the costs of the suit. Deacon v. Deacon, 7 Sim. 378.

Where a debt is paid by a defendant without any knowledge of an action commenced, this is no defence to the action at the trial. Toms v. Powell, 7 East, 536 ; 3 Smith, 554 ; 6 Esp. 40.

Where the plaintiff issued a writ and the defendant produced a receipt date the same day, the receipt is no defence to the action without proof that the payment was made before the writ was issued. Godard v. Benjamin, 3 Camp. 331.

An action must proceed till it is brought to its proper termination, or is stopped upon payment of costs. Goodwin v. Cremer, 18 Q. B. 760.

Motion—Proceeding to Trial for Costs.]—Where upon an interlocutory motion in an action the plaintiff obtains the relief which he seeks, he is bound to make an application to the defendant to have the costs disposed of on motion, and unless he does so is precluded from having the extra costs occasioned by going on to trial. But if the defendant refuses to allow the matter to be disposed of on motion, or if there is any question remaining open between the parties to be decided, the case cannot be so dealt with. Sonnenschein v. Barnard, 57 L. T. 712.

Where the right of a party to an order for which he has given notice of motion is intercepted by a step taken by his adversary, he is entitled to his costs ; but he should not bring on the motion, if the costs then incurred are tendered. Newton v. Ricketts, 11 Beav. 164.

The defendant served the plaintiff with notice of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution. Before the motion was made, the master, on an application to him, gave the plaintiff liberty to amend on payment of 10*s.* costs. The defendant, having brought on the motion for the purpose of obtaining the costs of the service of the notice, was held to be regular in his proceedings. Findlay v. Lawrence, 16 L. J., Ch. 333 ; 11 Jur. 705.

The plaintiff served a defendant with a notice of motion, under the 76th Order of May, 1845, but, before the motion was made, the defendant put in his answer :—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to bring on the motion for the purpose of obtaining the costs of it. Spooner v. Payne, 17 L. J., Ch. 130 ; 12 Jur. 642. See Moody v. Hebberd, 17 L. J., Ch. 24 ; 11 Jur. 941.

After Compromise of Suit.]—Parties compromised the subject-matter of the suit, without providing for the costs :—Held, that the cause could not be afterwards heard, for the purpose of determining the costs alone, and it was struck out of the paper. Whalley v. Suffield (Lord), 12 Beav. 402.

Where parties to a suit have compromised all matters in difference between them, the court will not entertain the suit for the mere purpose of determining the question of costs. Nicholls v. Elford, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 264.

A bill was filed for an account. In his answer the defendant, throwing on the plaintiff part of the blame of the circumstances which led to the institution of the suit, paid the amount due from him as agreed by the parties, and the plaintiff accepted the amount without prejudice to his right to the costs of the suit. Afterwards the plaintiff moved to stay all proceedings, and that the defendant might be ordered to pay the costs. The Vice-Chancellor (10 W. R. 368 ; 6 L. T. 185) made the order as prayed ; but, on appeal :—Held, that the question of costs would depend upon the merits of the case, the time for deciding which had not arrived, when the proceedings were ordered to be stayed : and the court, therefore, discharged the order of the Vice-Chancellor, but expressed a doubt whether the plaintiff's right to costs was wholly gone by reason of his agreement to settle the dispute. Wilde v. Wilde, 31 L. J., Ch. 558 ; 6 L. T. 275 ; 10 W. R. 503.

The rule that a court of equity will not entertain a suit merely for determining the question of costs applies only where there has been an actual settlement of the subject-matter of the suit before the commencement of litigation. Griffin v. Brady, 39 L. J., Ch. 136 ; 18 W. R. 130.

In a suit to compel the defendant to deliver up certain deeds and execute certain conveyances, he having at last done what was required, and having been paid on the other hand a small part of his counter-demand:—Held (notwithstanding the general rule as to suits which have been compromised), that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring the suit to a hearing for the purpose of getting their costs, and decree against the defendant accordingly. Ib.

D. POWER OF COURT TO VARY ORDER.

In what Cases.]—The plaintiff's motion for an interim injunction to restrain a nuisance committed by the defendant was ordered to stand over till the trial of the action, no order being made as to costs. At the trial the judge awarded the plaintiff damages in lieu of an injunction, and ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs of action, the order reserving liberty to apply. The judgment as passed and entered was silent as to the costs on the previous motion. The taxing officer having refused to allow the costs of the motion without a special order of the judge:—Held, on motion, that the court might order the costs of the motion to be paid by the defendant. Semble, that all orders of the court carry in gremio liberty to apply. Fritz v. Hobson, 49 L. J., Ch. 735; 14 Ch. D. 542; 42 L. T. 677; 28 W. R. 722.

The direction in a decree that "any of the parties are to be at liberty to apply to the court as they shall be advised":—Held, not to extend to an application by the plaintiff to be allowed costs, as to which there was no express direction given by the decree. Kendell v. Masters, 2 De G. F. & J. 200.

After a decree passed, the court will not, on a petition, give the costs of the suit to a defendant, although a mere trustee, and as such entitled to them, if they had been asked for on hearing. Colman v. Sarell, 2 Cox, 206: 1 Ves. Jr. 50; 1 R. R. 83.

An order made upon notice for leave to the plaintiffs to amend their bill, giving security to the clerk of records and writs for the costs of the defendants of the suit already incurred, was varied ex parte by directing the costs of the defendants to be taxed and paid to them by the plaintiffs, reserving the question how they were ultimately to be borne, the variation not being such as could prejudice the absent defendants. Hart v. Tulk, 6 Hare, 611; 18 L. J., Ch. 162.

The question of costs not having been mentioned on the argument of the exceptions, the case cannot be reopened on that question. Crossley v. Stewart, 8 L. T. 269; 11 W. R. 636.

A testatrix bequeathed a mixed fund of pure personalty and money to arise from realty directed by her will to be sold, to A. for life, and then to a charity. In a suit to administer the estate, an order on further consideration was made, which directed the costs of suit and certain legacies to be paid out of four sums of cash in court, two of which arose from realty, and two from pure personalty, so far as they would extend, the deficiency to be raised out of a sum of stock in court which represented realty. There was no reservation of subsequent further consideration, nor of the question how the costs should ultimately be borne. The dividends on the residue of the fund were ordered to be paid to A. for life with liberty to apply. On A.'s death the testatrix's heir-at-law petitioned for the payment of the fund to him as being realty. The Attorney-General, for the charity, objected that the costs of administering the real estate ought to have been paid out of the proceeds of real estate, in which case there would have been left a substantial sum of pure personalty which the charity could take. The court below considered that the order on further consideration settled the question how the costs were to be borne, and ordered payment of the fund to the heir. The Attorney-General appealed:—Held, by Cotton and Bowen, L.JJ., that the cost of administering the realty ought to have been paid out of the proceeds of realty, and that as the order on further consideration contained no declaration as to the ultimate incidence of the costs, and did not indicate any intention to decide that question, the application of the sums of cash in payment of costs and legacies must be treated as directed for convenience without any intention to alter the rights of the parties, and that as the fund was still in hand, the court, although there was no express reservation of the ultimate incidence of the costs, ought now to set the matter right:—Held, by Fry, L.J., that an order on further consideration which directs payment of costs in a particular way, and does not reserve subsequent further consideration nor reserve the question how the costs are ultimately to be borne, ought to be treated as final. Roper, In re, Taylor v. Bland, 45 Ch. D. 126; 63 L. T. 434; 39 W. R. 101—C. A.

Power of Court of Appeal.]—See infra, col. 857.

Order at Chambers—Jurisdiction of Judge at Trial.]—Where on an application under Order XIV. the judge at chambers has made an order as to costs, the judge at the trial has no jurisdiction to interfere with the prior order. Koosen v. Rose, 76 L. T. 145; 45 W. R. 337—C. A.

E. PARTIES—PAYMENT TO OR BY.

1. General Principles.

Jurisdiction to order successful Party to pay other Party's Costs.]—The railway commissioners have no jurisdiction under the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, s. 28, to order a railway company, in whose favour they have decided upon an application to them against such company, to pay costs to the unsuccessful applicant. Foster v. G. W. Ry., 51 L. J., Q. B. 233; 8 Q. B. D. 515; 46 L. T. 74; 30 W. R. 398—C. A.

By articles of partnership between three partners, on the death of any partner the survivors were entitled to take his share at a valuation. One of the partners having died his executrix brought her action to have it declared that the goodwill was to be included in the valuation, and to have the value of the deceased partner's share in the assets ascertained. A decree was made declaring that the goodwill must be valued as part of the assets, and directing accounts. The chief clerk made his general certificate, finding (inter alia) that two specified leaseholds belonging to the partnership were of no value. The plaintiff took out a summons to vary the certificate by estimating these leaseholds as worth a considerable sum. The summons was adjourned into court, and Bacon, V.-C., refused to vary the certificate, but ordered the costs of both parties to be paid out of the estate. The defendants appealed:—Held, that the case did not come within the rule in Foster v. G. W. Ry. (8 Q. B. D. 25, 515); that the court cannot make a successful defendant pay the costs of a plaintiff who has wholly failed; but that it was within the discretion of the court to order all costs reasonably incurred in ascertaining the sum to be paid out of the fund, and that an appeal would not lie. Butcher v. Pooler, 52 L. J., Ch. 930; 24 Ch. D. 273; 49 L. T. 573—C. A.

Where an action is tried before a jury the judge has power to order a plaintiff who recovers a nominal sum to pay the defendant's costs. Harris v. Petherick, 48 L. J., Q. B. 521: 4 Q. B. D. 611; 41 L. T. 146—C. A.

In an action for infringement of alleged copyright in the title of a novel, the defendant, before trial, discontinued the use of the title. At the trial the judge held that the plaintiff had established his claim to copyright, and that the defendant had invaded it, but he made no order except that the defendant should pay the costs of the action. The defendant appealed, contending that the plaintiff had no title and that the action ought to have been dismissed:—Held, that it is not within the discretion of the court to make a defendant pay the whole costs of an action if the plaintiff had no right to sue. Dicks v. Yates, 50 L. J., Ch. 809; 18 Ch. D. 76; 44 L. T. 660—C. A.

The court cannot make a defendant pay the costs of a plaintiff where the bill is dismissed. Sutton Harbour Improvement Co. v. Hitchens, 15 Beav. 161; 21 L. J., Ch. 568.

When a bill is dismissed the court cannot decree the costs to be paid by a defendant whose misconduct occasioned the suit. Cochrane v. O'Brien, 2 Jo. & Lat. 380; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 241.

Costs cannot be given to a defendant who sets up a defence that fails. Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 455; 1 Jo. & Lat. 134.

A defendant against whom a bill is dismissed cannot be made to pay costs, though the suit is caused solely by his misconduct. Cochrane v. O'Brien, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 241; 2 Jo. & Lat. 380.

Third Party—Jurisdiction to Order to Pay Plaintiff's Costs.]—The High Court has jurisdiction to order a third party to pay to an unsuccessful defendant the costs payable by such defendant to the plaintiff. The plaintiff let to the defendant a house for twenty-one years, with option to determine the lease at the end of seven or fourteen, by deed containing covenants by the defendant to repair and paint and leave in repair. The defendant, after having occupied for five years, sublet the house to H. for the remainder of the first seven years by a writing with a clause, that "the letting should be subject in all respects to the terms of the existing lease and the covenants and stipulations contained therein." At the end of the seven years, the defendant having determined the lease in the exercise of his option, the plaintiff claimed from the defendant, and the defendant claimed from H., the amount at which dilapidations had been assessed by the plaintiff's surveyor. H. declined to pay or to give the defendant an indemnity, or to take any responsibility in the matter. The plaintiff sued the defendant, who brought in H. as third party. The issues, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the defendant and H., were referred separately to an official referee, who reported that the sum claimed by the plaintiff was due from the defendant to the plaintiff, and that a similar sum was due from H. to the defendant. A divisional court, on adopting the second report, ordered H. to pay all costs as between the plaintiff and the defendant:—Held, by the court of appeal, that these were costs within the discretion of the high court, and therefore that this order was not appealable. Hornby v. Cardwell, 51 L. J., Q. B. 89; 8 Q. B. D. 329; 45 L. T. 781; 30 W. R. 263—C. A.

The court has power under Ord. XVI. r. 21, to order the third party brought into the action to pay to the plaintiff the costs occasioned by his defence. Piller v. Roberts, 21 Ch. D. 198; 46 L. T. 527; 30 W. R. 595.

—— Jurisdiction to order Plaintiff to Pay Costs of Third and Fourth Parties.]—In an action on an agreement to purchase certain lands, and which agreement contained a stipulation that the conveyance should contain a certain covenant as to rent, the defendant, having brought in the assigns as third parties, and the assigns having brought in, as fourth parties, persons who had covenants to indemnify the assigns against the rent:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction to order the plaintiff to pay the costs of the third and fourth parties, and that as there was no disputed question of fact relating to them, but only a question of liability as between the plaintiffs and defendants, there should be no order as to the costs of the third or fourth parties. Witham v. Vane, 44 L. T. 718—C. A. Reversing 28 W. R. 812.

A third party, who was under a contract to indemnify the defendant, obtained leave to appear at the trial, and appeared accordingly, and succeeded in his object of reducing the damages to a sum already paid into court by the defendant:—Held, that he was not entitled to costs against the plaintiff. Williams v. S. E. Ry., 26 W. R. 352.

The court has complete jurisdiction over the costs of a third party brought in under Ord. XV. r. 18; and even where the order giving directions as to the mode in which the questions are to be tried, reserves all questions between the defendant and the third party, including the question of costs, the court may order the plaintiff to pay the costs of the third party. Hanbury v. Upper Inny Drainage Board, 12 L. R. Ir. 217.

—— Defendant may be ordered to Pay Costs of Third Party.]—There is a power to order a defendant to pay costs to a third party who appears in consequence of being served by the defendant with a notice under Ord. XVI. r. 18. Yorkshire Waggon Co. v. Newport Coal Co. (infra) explained. Dawson v. Shepherd, 49 L. J., Ex. 529; 42 L. T. 611; 28 W. R. 805—C. A.

There is no jurisdiction under the provisions of Ord. XVI. r. 21, to impose any terms with regard to the payment of the costs of a party brought in by notice under r. 18, upon the party bringing him in. Yorkshire Waggon Co. v. Newport Coal Co., 49 L. J., Q. B. 527; 5 Q. B. D. 268; 42 L. T. 367; 28 W. R. 505.

—— Payment of Defendant's Costs by Third Party.]—In an action by landlord against tenant for rent, the defendant brought a counter-claim against the plaintiff and third parties for illegal distress. The judge before whom the case was tried without a jury gave judgment for the plaintiff on the claim and the counter-claim, but for the defendant against the third parties for 2*l.* 5*s.* "with such costs as the defendant would be entitled to by law":—Held, that as the case had been tried without a jury, the costs were by Ord. LXV. r. 1, in the discretion of the judge, and there having been no exercise of such discretion in favour of the defendant as against the third parties, the defendant was not "entitled by law" to costs. Lewin v. Trimming, 21 Q. B. D. 230; 59 L. T. 511; 37 W. R. 16.

Liability of Person not a Party.]—The court has not (as a rule) any power after verdict to compel a person not a party to the record to pay the taxed costs, even though he may be really the party interested in the decision of the suit. Evans v. Rees, 1 G. & D. 579; 1 D. (N.S.) 338; 2 Q. B. 334; 11 L. J., Q. B. 11; 5 Jur. 1060.

The court will not interfere to make a person who is not a party to the record pay the costs of the action, though he is the real party interested in the event of it. Hayward v. Giffard, 4 M. & W. 194; 6 D. P. C. 699; 7 L. J., Ex. 256.

A solicitor, who, in order to induce a plaintiff to go on with a suit, agrees to indemnify him against the costs, thereby makes the suit his own, and becomes liable to pay the costs of the defendant; and this notwithstanding that by the abatement of the suit by the death of the plaintiff before the hearing and the non-revivor by his executor, the remedy against the plaintiff's estate may be gone. Fielden v. Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres, Jones, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 113; L. R. 6 Ch. 497; 23 L. T. 655; 19 W. R. 361.

Where plaintiffs sue on behalf of themselves and others, the persons on whose behalf they sue are not liable to the costs of the suit. Scott v. Pascall, 15 Sim. 559; 11 Jur. 550. Affirmed, 2 Ph. 390; 11 Jur. 955.

Parties in the same interest with the plaintiff, not joining as co-plaintiffs, are not entitled to the costs of a suit, which as to their interests is successful. England v. Downs, 6 Beav. 279.

A party to a cause, for whose benefit, in common with others, the cause has been prosecuted, cannot avail himself of the benefit resulting from the suit, discharged of the expenses of it, although he might have been made a party without his authority. Hall v. Laver, 1 Hare, 571. Affirming 4 Y. & Coll. 218; 5 Jur. 241.

—— In Ejectment.]—In ejectment, the court has jurisdiction to order by rule the parties really conducting the defence to pay the costs of the plaintiff, though those parties are strangers to the record, and claim no interest in the property. Hutchinson v. Greenwood, 4 El. & Bl. 324; 3 C. L. R. 115; 24 L. J., Q. B. 2; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 3 W. R. 105.

To entitle a plaintiff in ejectment to call upon parties who are strangers to the record to pay the costs, it must be clearly shown that the defence was conducted by them for their own benefit in the name of a pauper defendant; it is not enough to show that they are interested as equitable mortgagees of part of the premises, and that they have endeavoured to make terms with the plaintiff after judgment signed. Anstey v. Edwards, 16 C. B. 212.

In ejectment, the court will order the person for whose benefit, and at whose instance, the action is brought, though not a party to the record, to pay costs to a successful defendant. Mobbs v. Vanderbrand, 4 B. & S. 904; 33 L. J., Q. B. 177; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 745; 9 L. T. 760; 12 W. R. 405. S. P., Dalbiac v. Delacourt, 44 L. J., Ex. 129; L. R. 10 Ex. 210; 23 W. R. 632; Thornton v. Wilkinson, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 606; 8 L. T. 507; 11 W. R. 916.

Absent Party.]—The court has no authority to give costs against an absent party, upon an ex parte application. Cast v. Poyser, 26 L. J., Ch. 93, 353; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 38.

Costs against Third Persons on Certiorari.]—A party who attempts to carry on litigation under cover of the protection usually afforded to justices of the peace may be ordered to pay the costs. Reg. v. Wheatley, 34 W. R. 257.

Where Solicitor a Party.]—Where an action is brought against a solicitor, who defends it in person and obtains judgment, he is entitled upon taxation to the same costs as if he had employed a solicitor, except in respect of items which the fact of his acting directly renders unnecessary. London Scottish Benefit Society v. Chorley, 53 L. J., Q. B. 551; 13 Q. B. D. 872; 51 L. T. 100; 32 W. R. 781—C. A.

Where one of a body of mortgagees is a solicitor, and acts as such in enforcing the security, he is entitled to charge profit costs against the mortgagor, whether the mortgagees are trustees or not. Donaldson, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 151; 27 Ch. D. 544; 51 L. T. 622.

Where Solicitor one of Several Mortgagees.]—See MORTGAGE.

Where Solicitor an Executor or Trustee.]—See TRUST AND TRUSTEE.

Where Jurisdiction of Court Impeached.]—Where a county court judge appeared to a rule to show cause why he should not hear and determine an action remitted to him, and the rule was discharged; in an application for costs:—Held, that as it is not usual for a judge to be represented, unless the whole jurisdiction of his court is in question, he could not be allowed his costs. Reg. v. Stonor, 50 L. T. 99.

Where the whole jurisdiction of a court is called in question on an application for a prohibition, the judge is entitled to appear, to prevent the jurisdiction being lost, and will, if successful, be entitled in the Court of Appeal to his costs. Dale's Case, Enraght's Case, 50 L. J., Q. B. 234; 6 Q. B. D. 474; 43 L. T. 786; 45 J. P. 284—C. A. And see Green, Ex parte, 51 L. J., Q. B. at p. 36; 7 Q. B. D. 294; 44 L. T. 632—C. A., as to costs of Lord Penzance and of the Vice-Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

A judge is entitled to appear when it is attempted to obtain a prohibition to his court, and the superior court cannot refuse to allow his costs if successful. Combe v. De la Bere, 22 Ch. D. 348; 48 L. T. 303—C. A.

Rule, that a party who merely supports the decision of a competent jurisdiction is never called on to pay the costs of so doing. Att.-Gen. v. London Corporation, 2 Mac. & G. 247; 2 Hall & Tw. 1; 19 L. J., Ch. 314; 14 Jur. 205.

Liability of Public Officer to pay.]—Where the registrar of trade marks, by the direction of the commissioners of patents, refused to register a trade mark:—Held, that the court of appeal had no jurisdiction to give costs against the registrar when the latter unsuccessfully appeals. Rotherham's Trade Mark, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 511 ; 14 Ch. D. 585 : 43 L. T. 1—C. A.

Where a court of inquiry into a shipping casualty suspended a master's certificate on the invitation of the board of trade, the court of appeal ordered the board of trade to pay the costs of the appeal. The Arizona, 49 L. J., P. 54 ; 5 P. D. 123 ; 42 L. T. 505 ; 28 W. R. 704—C. A.

The court has no jurisdiction to make the comptroller pay the costs of a successful application to register a trade mark, though it will not order the applicant to pay the comptroller's costs. Leaf's Trade Mark, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 740 ; 33 Ch. D. 477 ; 55 L. T. 254 ; 35 W. R. 99.

2. SEVERAL PARTIES.

Joinder of Plaintiffs—Some successful.]—Two plaintiffs joined in one action, claiming for separate and distinct causes of action. The case was referred, with power to the arbitrator to enter judgment, the costs of the cause to abide the event. The arbitrator found in favour of one plaintiff, and against the other, and entered judgment accordingly. On an application to review taxation of costs :—Held, that the successful plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the whole of his general costs of the action, and the defendant was only entitled to recover from the unsuccessful plaintiff the costs occasioned by joining such plaintiff. Gort (Viscount) v. Rowney, 55 L. J., Q. B. 541 ; 17 Q. B. D. 625 ; 54 L. T. 817 ; 34 W. R. 696—C. A.

Two owners of distinct properties joined in a suit to restrain a nuisance. The court considered that a sufficient case of nuisance had in the case of the first plaintiff not been made out, but in the case of the second plaintiff had been made out. A decree was made for an injunction so far as regarded the second plaintiff, and for the defendant to pay him his costs ; the bill as regarded the first plaintiff to be dismissed, and the costs occasioned by the addition of the first plaintiff to be deducted from the costs so to be paid by the defendant. Umfreville v. Johnson, 44 L. J., Ch. 752 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 580 ; 23 W. R. 844.

—— Liability.]—Each co-plaintiff is liable severally for all defendant's costs of the suit, and there is no apportionment of the costs as between the co-plaintiffs and the defendant, apportionment being only in respect of funds ; but a co-plaintiff may, in the progress of the cause, protect himself from further costs, by a proper application to the court. Poole v. Franks, 1 Moll. 78.

Defendants appearing Separately—Separate Sets of Costs.]—Two sets of defendants joined in delivering a defence, and appeared by the same solicitor, but were represented by separate counsel at the trial, when the action was dismissed with costs. The taxing-master allowed one set of costs only in respect of counsel, on the ground that the difference in the defences was not sufficiently material to justify appearance by separate counsel :—Held, on motion to vary the certificate, that the question was not one for the discretion of the taxing-master ; and the court being of opinion that the defendants had in fact different cases by way of defence, remitted the certificate to the taxing-master on the ground that the defendants were justified in appearing by separate counsel. Ager v. Blacklock, 56 L. T. 890.

One of two defendants (after appearing and pleading jointly), two days before the trial, obtained an order to appoint a new attorney for himself. On taxation the master allowed him separate costs of the trial. The defendant had reasonable grounds for changing his attorney. The court refused to interfere with the master's discretion. Rolfe v. Johnson, 6 Man. & G. 759 ; 7 Scott (N.R.) 496.

The court allowed two sets of costs of an abandoned motion to A. and B., who were sheriffs of London and also sheriffs of Middlesex, and had been served with the notice of motion in each capacity. Von Bolton v. Cruden, 21 W. R. 356.

Two sets of defendants having put in separate answers, on the taxation of their costs the master refused to allow more than one set :—Held, that there was no appeal. Beattie v. Ebury (Lord), 43 L. J., Ch. 80 ; 29 L. T. 419 ; 22 W. R. 68.

A. and B., two surveyors in partnership, who were employed as a firm with respect to the matters in question in the suit, were made defendants for the purpose of discovery only. The bill also prayed that "the defendants might pay the costs of the suit." They put in separate answers, and appeared by separate counsel at the hearing. Prior to the hearing they had dissolved partnership. At the hearing a decree was taken by consent (as between the plaintiffs and the principal defendants) as to the matters in question in the suit, and it was admitted that A. and B. were entitled to their costs :—Held, that they were only entitled to one set of costs between them, as they were not justified in severing in their defence. Bull v. West London School Board, 34 L. T. 674.

Two defendants pleading separately, and being represented by different counsel, although by the same attorney, are entitled to present, for taxation, separate bills of costs on the rule. Newton v. Boodle, 4 C. B. 359.

So, in an action on the case against many defendants, where one suffers judgment by default, and a verdict is entered for the others, those for whom the verdict is entered are entitled to their costs. Price v. Harris, 2 D. P. C. 804 ; 10 Bing. 557 ; 4 M. & Scott, 474 ; 3 L. J., C. P. 188.

Where several defendants defend separately, and apparently by different attorneys, but all the business is virtually done by one, they are not entitled to charge by separate bills of costs, but must make a joint charge. Nunny v. Kenrick, 2 D. P. C. 334.

Where separate defences were unnecessarily but bonâ fide delivered by the same solicitor for different defendants, the costs of one defence only were allowed. De Burgh v. Chichester, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 623 ; 19 W. R. 221.

A solicitor who acts for two defendants in the same interest should employ one set of counsel for both, although he act directly for one and as agent for the solicitors of the other. Walters v. Webb, 39 L. J., Ch. 414 ; L. R. 9 Eq. 83 ; 21 L. T. 657 ; 18 W. R. 86.

Where some defendants demurred to some counts, and the other defendants went to issue upon them, and all the defendants went to issue upon the other counts, and those defendants who demurred got judgment upon the demurrer before the issues were tried :—Held, that they were not entitled to have their costs taxed upon that judgment, under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11. Forbes v. Gregory, 1 D. P. C. 679 ; 1 C. & M. 435 ; 3 Tyr. 385.

Where in trespass two defendants pleaded not guilty, and separate justifications, and one obtained a general verdict, and the other a verdict on his justification only :—Held, that the latter was not entitled to any costs on the issue found for him. Holroyd v. Breare, 4 B. & Ald. 700.

If defendants in a suit for renewal file separate answers where their defence is the same, the court will not make the usual decree, giving the defendants their costs, but will disallow the costs of separate proceedings. Hamilton v. Patten, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 341.

Where, apparently for the purpose of accumulating costs, several similar answers of vexatious length were put in on behalf of a number of formal defendants, who appeared to have acted upon an understanding with the plaintiffs, and under the directions of the same solicitor—on motion of the principal defendant, that further proceedings should be stayed, &c , it was referred to the master to ascertain the amount due to the plaintiffs, and to tax their costs of proceeding against the principal defendant only, but not the costs of proceeding against the other defendants ; and it was further ordered, that the principal defendant should pay, &c., he so undertaking, within ten days after the report ; and that the cause should be stayed in the meantime ; and the plaintiffs should not be allowed their costs of appearing on this motion. Bateman v. Bateman, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 296.

Where several are made defendants in respect of a joint fiduciary character only, or some having a beneficial interest unconnected and not conflicting with their duty, separate costs will not be allowed ; but if, from personal interest or other cause, it becomes impossible for them to answer with prudence together, they will be allowed. Gaunt v. Taylor, 2 Beav. 346 ; 7 L. J., Ch. 2 ; 4 Jur. 166.

The same solicitor put in and set down for hearing two pleas for want of parties, for two several defendants, and they were both allowed ; the plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs of one of su h pleas only. Tarbuck v. Woodcock, 3 Beav. 289.

The two co-heiresses of a trustee, who lived at a distance from each other, were made parties to a suit for enforcing the performance of marriage articles. They submitted to act as the court might direct, and defended separately : —Held, they were entitled to two sets of costs. Aldridge v. Westbrook, 4 Beav. 212.

The separate appointees of portions of an entire charge (and not those claiming partial or sub-interests in portions of it) are entitled to separate costs as defendants in a suit relating to the estate charged. Hoops v. Kingston (Lord). 11 Ir. Eq. R. 471.

Where husband and wife, who were living apart, had put in separate answers, and appeared by different solicitors, separate costs were allowed, there being no evidence in the cause of the grounds of their separation. Barry v. Woodham, 1 Y. & Coll. 538 ; 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 20.

Husband and wife entitled in the wife's right to a share of residue, were living apart, and they defended separately :—Held, entitled to only one set of costs. Garey v. Whittingham, 5 Beav. 268 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 334 ; 6 Jur. 545.

A party entitled to a share of the residue became bankrupt : — Held, that he and his assignees were entitled to one set of costs between them. Ib.

Where several defendants retain the same solicitor, each of them can only be charged with his proportion of the general costs of proceedings taken on behalf of all. Ford, Ex parte, Colquhoun, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 35 ; 2 Eq. Rep. 304 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 515 ; 2 W. R. 286.

Where several persons of one class are represented by separate counsel, there will be only one set of costs allowed for each class. Stevenson v. Abington, 6 L. T. 345.

Where a country solicitor is a defendant, it is competent to him to act as solicitor for his co-defendant, and employ his town agent to be his own solicitor, and two distinct sets of costs may thus be charged against the plaintiff. Bainbrigge v. Moss, 3 Kay & J. 62 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 107.

Two defendants, taking the same line of defence, but entitled to sever in defence, allowed the costs of separate counsel. Ib.

An original bill asked separate relief against one of the defendants, who therefore put in a separate defence. The bill was afterwards amended, and that relief was struck out :— Held, that the defendant was justified in continuing a separate defence, and was entitled to his costs on that footing. Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Dr. & Sm. 412 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 646 ; 4 L. T. 461 ; 9 W. R. 629.

The court does not compel persons who have different shares in an estate to appear by the same solicitor because their interests, as regards their opposition to the claim of the plaintiff, are identical. Remnant v. Hood, 27 Beav. 613.

Therefore the bill being dismissed with costs, each of such persons gets his separate costs ; but a trustee and his cestui que trust get but one set of costs between them ; and so the person entitled to a share, and all his incumbrancers, have but one set of costs, which is payable to the first incumbrancer. Ib.

Co-trustees, being made defendants in a suit, may sever in their defence, where relief is sought against the one in a matter with which the other has nothing to do. Pince v. Beattie, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1119 ; 9 L. T. 315 ; 11 W. R. 979.

The rule that where a joint fiduciary character exists, a joint defence should be always adopted, is too general. It does not apply where the joint parties are liable to account, and incur responsibility. Reade v. Sparkes, 1 Moll. 8.

Where the bills was dismissed with costs, the court referred to the master to inquire whether it was necessary for parties, trustees, and the cestui que trust, appearing by the same solicitor, to file separate answers. Woods v. Woods, 5 Hare, 229.

—— Delegation of Authority.]—An action to set aside a sale of a life interest to the defendants on the ground of fraud was dismissed by the House of Lords with costs (11 App. Cas. 232), and their lordships directed that the taxing-master should consider whether any of the defendants who appeared separately had sufficient reason for severing in their defences, and if and in so far as it should appear they had not, the taxing-master was to allow only one set of costs, or only as many sets of costs as he should think right. The taxing-master allowed a separate set of costs to each of the six defendants, they having all appeared separately :—Held, that the House of Lords had delegated the decision of the question as to how many sets of costs should be allowed to the taxing-master, and, unless it was shown that he had not exercised his discretion, his decision could not be appealed from. Boswell v. Coaks, 36 Ch. D. 444; 58 L. T. 97; 36 W. R. 209—C. A.

—— Separate Taxations.]—Where there are several defendants who defend separately, and obtain a verdict generally, the costs of all need not be taxed at the same time. Brueford v. Griffin, 20 L. J., Ex. 287.

In an action against several defendants, who had pleaded, the plaintiff obtained an order to strike out the names of some of the defendants on payment of costs, the defendants whose names remained having liberty to plead de novo. The master allowed the defendants whose names remained the costs of the day only. The defendants subsequently pleaded, paying money into court, which was accepted; and the master taxed the plaintiff his costs, not allowing him the costs incurred subsequently to the former pleas:—Held, that the successive taxations by the master were right, and that the defendants were further entitled to the costs of the former pleas. Jackson v. Nunn, 3 G. & D. 543; 4 Q. B. 209; 7 Jur. 846.

Judgments against some Defendants.]—Three defendants, being sued for assault and false imprisonment, appeared by the same attorney, but severed in pleading. The same evidence was adduced for all, with the exception of one witness, who was called for one of them separately; that one being acquitted, the master taxed him 40*s.* costs only:—Held, that he was entitled to recover from the plaintiff his aliquot proportion of the costs incurred by the three on their joint retainer, as well as the costs he had separately incurred, on satisfying the master that he was not indemnified by the other defendants. Griffiths v. Kynaston, 2 Tyr. 757.

Where there are several defendants, and a verdict passes against some and for others, the latter are entitled to their aliquot proportion of the whole costs incurred, and not merely to 40*s.* each. Griffith v. Jones, 4 D. P. C. 159; 2 C. M. & R. 333; 1 Gale, 254; 5 Tyr. 1092; 5 L. J., Ex. 267.

When two defendants in trespass sever in pleading, but plead the same pleas, all going to the whole action, and one succeeds upon one issue, and the other fails upon all the issues, the successful defendant is entitled not only to his separate costs of the issue on which he has succeeded, but to an aliquot part of the joint costs, unless the master is satisfied that, by reason of special circumstances, less ought to be allowed. Gambrill v. Fulmouth (Earl), 5 A. & E. 403; 2 H. & W. 287; 6 N. & M. 859; 5 L. J., K. B. 253.

The defendants in such a case having appeared by separate attorneys and counsel, but the attorneys being members of the same firm, and the briefs and evidence substantially the same, the master taxed the costs as if the parties had appeared by the same attorney:—Held, that the taxation in that respect could not be disturbed. Ib.

In an action of trespass against two defendants, they pleaded by different attorneys, but appeared by the same counsel, and a verdict was found for one, and against the other:—Held, that the defendant who obtained a verdict was only entitled to half the costs of trial, counsel's fees, &c. Bartholomew v. Stevens, 7 D. P. C. 808; 5 M. & W. 387; 5 L. J., Ex. 250; 3 Jur. 753.

Where several defendants are sued in trespass, and a verdict is found for the plaintiff on some of the issues against some of the defendants, and against him on all other issues, the plaintiff is entitled to the balance only of the costs, after deduction of all the costs of all the defendants. Starling v. Cozens or Cousins, 3 D. P. C. 782; 2 C. M. & R. 445; 1 Gale, 159; 5 Tyr. 823; 4 L. J., Ex. 223.

Where there are several defendants, and one alone employs an attorney for all, the others are not entitled to claim any costs. Ib.

—— Set-off of Costs.]—In trespass, four defendants pleaded separate pleas by the same attorney; one, the general issue and a justification, upon both of which he was found guilty; another, similar pleas, but was only found guilty on the general issue; and the two others, the general issue only, upon which they were acquitted:—Held, that the costs payable to the three last might be set-off against the costs which the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the first. Lee v. Kendall, 5 N. & M. 310; 3 A. & E. 707; 1 H. & W. 316; 5 L. J., K. B. 19.

Where, in trespass, there were three defendants, who appeared by the same attorney, and pleaded jointly, and at the trial one of them was acquitted:—Held, that the defendants' attorney was entitled to have one-third of his general bill of costs against the three set-off against the amount of the plaintiff's bill: and unless there were some special circumstances in the cases, the master was bound to adopt this principle of taxation. Norman v. Climenson, 1 D. (N.S.) 718; 4 Scott (N.R.) 735; 4 Man. & G. 243; 11 L. J., C. P. 191. Cp. cases, post, col. 842.

Bill dismissed—Some Defendants' Costs only.]—When a bill was dismissed without costs as against the principal defendant, the costs of the defendants who in their official capacity had been made parties were ordered to be paid by the plaintiff. Eglin v. Dryden, 18 L. T. 549; 16 W. R. 837.

Judgment against Defendants—Costs of Separate Pleading.]—In an action of tort against two defendants they pleaded jointly payment into court only. The plaintiff replied, denying the sufficiency of the payment. One of the defendants then obtained leave to amend his defence, and added an alternative separate defence, denying any liability to the plaintiff. At the trial a verdict was found against both defendants for an amount beyond the sum paid into court, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff for that amount, with costs to be taxed:—Held, by Lord Esher, M.R., affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division, that the defendant who delivered the separate defence was alone liable for the costs occasioned to the plaintiff by and in consequence of the separate pleading, and that the other defendant was not liable for those costs. By Fry, L.J., dissenting, that both defendants were jointly and severally liable for all the costs of the action. Stumm or Shumm v. Dixon, 58 L. J., Q. B. 183; 22 Q. B. D. 529; 60 L. T. 560; 37 W. R. 457; 53 J. P. 500—C. A.

In a suit for account of tithes, the court, in decreeing an account and payment, may apportion the costs, where the defendants have several defences. But where there is a common defence, the costs must be paid by the defendants generally. Esdaile v. Peacock, 1 Johns. 216.

—— In Ejectment.]—Three ejectments brought against a landlord and his two tenants were consolidated, the ejectment against one tenant (a pauper) to abide the event of the other, on the plaintiff obtaining judgment the landlord was ordered to pay the costs. Thrustout d. Jones v. Shenton, 10 B. & C. 110.

Where one defendant has appeared separately and limited his defence to part of the lands claimed he is liable for the whole costs unless he has confessed the claimant's title. Johnson v. Mills. 37 L. J., C. P. 57 ; L. R. 3 C. P. 22 ; 17 L. T. 215 ; 16 W. R. 132.

Payment to one Defendant not Payment to other.]—Where judgment against two defendants in a joint action of contract against both is set aside, at the instance of the defendant A. only, for irregularity, with costs (there being no rule to plead), and the costs are paid to the other defendant B., such payment is no answer to the demand of A. upon the allocatur. Showler v. Stoakes. 2 D. & L. 2 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 230 ; 8 Jur. 449.

Co-Defendant's Costs paid by Defendant direct and not by Plaintiff.]—In cases where, under the old practice in Chancery, the court would have ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs of one defendant and have them over against another defendant, an order will now be made at once for one defendant to pay them to the other. Rudow v. Great Britain Mutual Life Assurance Society, 50 L. J., Ch. 504 ; 17 Ch. D. 600 ; 44 L. T. 688 ; 29 W. R. 585—C. A.

A decree for specific performance of a contract having been made against two defendants in a suit which had been rendered necessary chiefly by the misconduct of one of them :—Held, that as between the two defendants the costs ordered to be paid by both of them to the plaintiff ought to be borne by the defendant T., and that the other defendant should have liberty to apply in chambers as to the payment to him by T. of such costs. Wilson v. Thomson, 44 L. J., Ch. 527 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 459 ; 23 W. R. 744.

Defendants, who by persisting in an unfounded defence, have caused the suit to be proceeded with may be decreed to pay the costs of their co-defendants and of the plaintiff, so far as the suit was properly constituted. Glynn v. Locke, 2 Con. & L. 21 ; 3 Dr. & War. 11 ; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 61.

Costs against Individual Members of Corporation.]—The corporation of Dublin desired to change the name of a street ; in an action by householders for an injunction to restrain the corporation from effecting the change :—Held, that the corporation were not empowered to alter the name where such alteration would be injurious to the householders, and costs were awarded against certain members of the corporation who had taken an active part in passing the resolution to effect the intended change, and who had been named special defendants in the action. Anderson v. Dublin Corporation, 15 L. R., Ir. 410.

Body against whom prohibition sought—Two Sets of Costs.]—The Local Government Board moved to discharge a conditional order for a prohibition obtained against them by the Kingstown commissioners to prohibit them from conducting an inquiry as to the propriety of making certain provisional orders. The Dublin corporation had presented a memorial on which the inquiry was founded, praying that the board would order certain local acts to be amended :—Held, that as the board had no power to do what the corporation asked, as they were acting in a quasi legislative capacity, and prohibition would not lie against them ; and as they were justified in coming before the court to obtain a decision as to their powers, costs must be granted them against both the corporation and the commissioners. Kingstown Commissioners, Ex parte, Local Government Board, In re, 16 L. R, Ir. 150.

Joinder of Parties for the purpose of Costs.]—A vestry incorporated under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, having resolved to incur certain unauthorised expenditure, an action for an injunction was commenced by the attorney-general, at the relation of a ratepayer, against the vestry and the movers and seconders of the resolution passed by the vestry, and some of their supporters. On motion on which the individual defendants were unrepresented, the vestry consented to a perpetual injunction without costs, and the plaintiffs then moved for judgment against the individual defendants in default of pleadings, and asked that they might be ordered to pay the costs of the action. The statement of claim did not ask for costs against the vestry : —Held, that it was irregular to make the individual members of the vestry defendants for the sole purpose of making them pay costs, and that as no costs were asked against the vestry there was no necessity for an indemnity to the vestry from costs occasioned to it by the individual defendants having led the vestry astray and that the action must therefore be dismissed as against the individual defendants, but without costs on either side. Att.-Gen. v. Bermondsey Vestry, 51 L. J., Ch. 848 ; 46 L. T. 852 ; 30 W. R. 872. Affirmed, 52 L. J., Ch. 567 ; 23 Ch. D. 60 ; 48 L. T. 445 ; 31 W. R. 463 ; 47 J. P. 153—C. A.

3. Contribution between Co-Defendants.

How Obtained.]—Where co-defendants are decreed to pay costs of an action, one co-defendant cannot, by an independent proceeding, obtain contribution in respect of such costs against the other. Middleweek v. Dearsly, 50 L. J., Ch. 777 ; 18 Ch. D. 236 ; 45 L. T. 404 ; 30 W. R. 45.

The costs of all parties liable to make a contribution should be added together and borne by them in proportion to the shares in which they are bound to contribute. Moye v. Sparrow, 22 L. T. 154 ; 18 W. R. 400.

Where two defendants were sued for tithes, and one made default, the court decreed the whole costs against the other, and left him to get the contribution as he could. Lloyd v. Mackworth, Bunb. 138.

Where one of several co-defendants in a tithe cause, wherein a general decree for costs had been made, survived the rest, the court refused to order the costs to be apportioned so as to relieve the survivor from the whole of them. Michel v. Bullen, 6 Price, 87.

Under a joint order for costs, one party absconded, and was never served; a proceeding against the other good. Bishop, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 333.

In what cases.]—Where the same solicitor acts for executor, and the other co-defendants, the estate will be charged in respect of the executor's costs, only with that proportion of the sum due to the solicitor from his clients which the executor, as between himself and the co-defendants, ought to bear. Harmer v. Harris, 1 Russ. 155; 25 R. R. 20.

Where a bill was filed by a judgment creditor against three persons as devisees of certain lands, liable to the judgment debt:—Held, that one of the defendants, who had paid his portion of the debt before the filing of the bill, was entitled to his costs, as against his co-defendants, by whose default the suit was rendered necessary. Hales v. Kirby, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 116.

One of the several cestuis que trustent of a fund charged upon land, filed a bill against the owners of the estate, the other cestuis que trustent, and the trustees (who had refused to act), to raise its amount, and for payment thereof to the persons entitled:—Held, that the suit being for the benefit of all the cestuis que trustent they were bound to contribute, in proportion to their shares, to the difference between the taxed costs between party and party, and the plaintiff's costs of suit, taxed as if he were the trustee of the fund. Bagge v. ——, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 494.

Persons being churchwardens, overseers, and trustees of the poor, directed, in consequence of a resolution of the vestry, a prosecution to be instituted against certain persons accused of having concurred in the misapplication of parochial moneys. One of them, having been compelled to pay the bill of costs of the attorney employed in the prosecution, is entitled to contribution from the others. Wrightson v. Masterman, 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 14.

Where a decree has been had against several defendants with costs, and one of them has been compelled to pay the whole costs, the court will, by consent, decree contribution between the co-defendants on motion in the same suit. Pitt v. Bonner, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 670; 6 Jur. 636.

In a suit for the recovery of tithe composition, there was a decree for the plaintiff, with costs The plaintiff levied the full amount of the costs off one of the defendants:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to contribution from his co-defendants; and that the court would compel payment of such contribution by summary order. Staples v. Smith, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 211.

Semble, one of the co-defendants having died after the costs were taxed, the other co-defendants were not bound to contribute in a greater proportion than if he were living. Ib.

A decree against several for payment of costs is joint and several, but the costs given by it are in the nature of a debt, and therefore there must be contribution between the parties liable. Dublin (Archbishop) v. Trimleston (Lord), 13 Ir. Eq. R. 98.

In a suit where the plaintiff and defendants are members of a club, the plaintiff cannot be made to contribute to the defendants' costs. Harvey v. Beckwith, 4 N. R. 258.

4. Want of Parties.

When the hearing of an action is adjourned in order to allow parties to be added, the party who applies for the adjournment must pay all the costs incurred by the action having been in the paper for hearing, and not merely a fixed sum for costs of the day. Lydall v. Martinson, 5 Ch. D. 780; 37 L. T. 69; 25 W. R. 866.

Objection for want of parties not being taken till hearing, defendant generally does not get costs; but where the defect of parties was very gross and obvious, plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs of the day. Keating v. Keating, 1 Moll 218.

Cause on hearing ordered to stand over for want of parties; defendant not allowed costs of day because answer did not state objection. Mitchell v. Bailey, 3 Madd. 61.

Where a respondent takes a formal objection to a petition for want of parties, and the petition is for that cause ordered to stand over, the costs of the day are in the discretion of the court. Thompson, Ex parte, Ecroyd, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 612; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 312, 324.

Where a cause is ordered to stand over for want of parties, the plaintiff, it seems, is bound to pay the costs of the day. Hill v. Airwan, Jac. 163.

When at hearing of cause, objection is taken for want of parties, court should order cause to stand over, with liberty to amend bill by adding parties; plaintiff paying costs. Green v. Poole, 5 Bro. P. C. 504.

Where a defect of parties, not suggested by the answer nor insisted upon by the defendants at the hearing, rendered it necessary that the cause should stand over for the purpose of amending the record by adding parties, the defendants were held entitled to the costs of the day. Att.-Gen. v. Hill, 3 Myl. & C. 247. S. P., Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 104; 7 L. J., Ch. 158.

Objection for want of parties not being taken till hearing, defendant does not get his costs. Court v. Jeffery, 1 Sim. & S. 106.

Where a cause was ordered to stand over for want of parties, with liberty to amend, the defendants, not having taken the objection by their answer, were refused the costs of the day. Wilson v. Broughton, 7 L. J., Ch. 120.

Defendants admitted by their answer that all persons interested were parties to the suit, and at the hearing objected for want of parties, and the objection prevailed:—Held, that having misled the plaintiff, they ought to pay him the costs of the day. Price v. Berrington, 2 Beav. 285.

Where the court sees that a suit cannot effectually be brought to a hearing without certain parties, it will visit the costs arising from the defect of parties upon the party by whom the defect was occasioned, whether the objection for want of parties be taken by the answer or not. Bailey v. Dennett, 3 Y. & Coll. 459; 3 Jur. 844.

Where a defect of parties appears upon the bill, costs of the day will be allowed to the defendant, at the hearing, although he has not taken the objection by his answer. Furze v. Sharwood, 5 Myl. & C. 96.

Objection for want of parties raised by answer, and those parties added to the suit by amended bill, but not served, being out of the jurisdiction. On objection taken at the hearing:—Objection allowed, and costs of the day given, on the ground that the objection was raised by the answer, and the old practice in that respect remained unaltered. Moodie v. Bannister, 1 Eq. Rep. 180; 17 Jur. 520; 1 W. R. 405.

Where an objection for want of parties is not taken by answer or affidavit, the costs of the day will not be allowed, although such objection is taken successfully at the hearing. Cox v. Stephens, 2 N. R. 506; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1144; 8 L. T. 721; 11 W. R. 929.

When it is plain on the face of the bill that a suit is defective for want of parties, a defendant raising the objection at the hearing is entitled to the costs of the day, although he may not have taken the objection by his answer. Rowsell v. Morris, 43 L. J., Ch. 97; L. R. 17 Eq. 20; 29 L. T. 446; 22 W. R. 67.

5. Misjoinder of Parties.

Defendants.]—Where one or two defendants in an action of contract is struck out of the record at the trial, and the plaintiff obtains a verdict against the other, the ordinar course of taxation is, to tax the whole costs of the action on each side, and deduct from the plaintiff's costs a moiety of the costs of the defence; by analogy to the old rule in the case of the acquittal of one of two defendants in an action of tort. Redway v. Webber, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 254; 32 L. J., C. P. 84; 7 L. T. 385.

Extra costs occasioned by an infant being made a defendant, who ought to have been made a plaintiff, not allowed. Hosking v. Nicholls, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 478; 11 L. J., Ch. 230; 6 Jur. 386.

The judge having at the trial substituted for the defendant on the record the name of the person really intended to be sued, and directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff against him; the court refused to order a verdict to be entered for the defendant named originally on the record, for the purpose of enabling him to get costs, there being suspicion of collusion. Podmore v. Schmidt, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 725.

Plaintiff decreed to pay the costs of a certificated bankrupt who had been made a defendant to the suit. Pannell v. Hurley, 2 Coll. 241.

Plaintiff decreed to pay, out of a fund recovered from persons who had acquired it by a breach of trust, the extra cost occasioned by making a party a defendant instead of a co-plaintiff to a bill of revivor. Ib.

Plaintiffs—Time for Objection.—The proper time for objecting to unnecessary parties is at the first hearing. If the defendant, the mortgagor, neglects to do so then, he must pay the costs of such parties. Webb v. Blessington (Lord), 1 Moll. 74.

—— Indemnity—Solicitor.]—When cause at issue one plaintiff applied to have name struck out of bill, on ground that he knew not of its insertion, defendant objected, he being only plaintiff of ability to pay costs. Objection good, and application refused; but solicitor, who inserted plaintiff's name, ordered to indemnify him. Fitterton v. Osborne, Dick. 350.

Although the name of one of the plaintiffs was made use of without his authority, yet he must remain liable to the costs of the suit, and must recover from the solicitor any expense he may be put to on that account. Dundas v. Dutens, 2 Cox, 236. S. P., Stuckey, Ex parte, id. 283.

A bill being dismissed with costs, a person who was made a co-plaintiff, without his authority or knowledge, is liable for the costs to the defendant, but is entitled to be indemnified by the solicitor. Wade v. Stanley, 1 Jac. & Walk. 674.

A person named a trustee without his knowledge, and in that character a party to the suit, having never accepted the trusts, is entitled to his costs as between solicitor and client. Sherratt v. Bentley, 1 Russ. & M. 655.

Costs of application by married women not a party in the cause in her own name, given against the solicitor serving the notice. Betagh v. Burke, 2 Moll. 384. See now Order XVI. r. 11.

F. Several Issues.

1. Since Judicature Acts.

See Ord. LXV. r. 2.

"Event" to be read Distributively.]—When in the same action the plaintiff obtains a verdict and judgment as to one cause of action, and the defendant obtains a verdict and judgment as to other and distinct causes of action, the word "event" in Ord. LV. r. 1, is to be read distributively, and the defendant is entitled to tax his costs of the issues found for him, provided no order otherwise is made by the judge who tried the cause or the court. Rule 62 of Rules of Hilary Term, 1853, is repealed by s. 33 of the Judicature Act, 1875. Myers v. Defries, 49 L. J., Ex. 266; 5 Ex. D. 180; 42 L. T. 137; 28 W. R. 406—C. A.

Where, in an action for the recovery of land, the plaintiff has succeeded as to certain definite closes, and the defendant has succeeded as to other closes, although there was only one demise, the verdict is to be entered distributively, and the case treated as if there were separate issues. The plaintiff therefore will get the general costs of the action and the costs of the issues found for him, and the defendant the costs of those issues on which he was successful. Jones v. Curling, 53 L. J., Q. B. 373; 13 Q. B. D. 262; 50 L. T. 349; 32 W. R. 651—C. A.

Plaintiff succeeding on part of Claim—Apportionment of Costs.]—In an action to recover the price of work done in and about a house the plaintiff claimed for three distinct items of work and recovered a sum of 37*l.* in respect of one of the items. An order was thereupon made "that the plaintiff recover against the defendant such costs as one of the masters may find that he has rightly incurred in recovering the above amount to be taxed; and that the defendants recover against the plaintiff such costs as they have rightly incurred in defending themselves on those points on which they have succeeded to be also taxed:"—Held, that upon the true construction of the order the plaintiff was entitled upon taxation to be allowed the general costs of the cause, excluding only such costs as were applicable exclusively to the two items on which he failed, and that the defendants were entitled to be allowed such costs only as were incurred exclusively with respect to the two items on which their defence was successful. Sparrow v. Hill, 50 L. J., Q. B. 675; 8 Q. B. D. 479; 44 L. T. 917; 29 W. R. 705—C. A.

—— Chancery Division.]—The practice in the taxing-master's office with regard to the apportionment of the costs of an action in the chancery division, where each party is partially successful at the trial, is settled according to the form of order in Knight v. Purssell (49 L. J., Ch. 120). Jenkins v. Jackson, 60 L. J., Ch. 206; [1891] 1 Ch. 89; 63 L. T. 688; 39 W. R. 242—C. A.

A plaintiff claiming an injunction in respect of three separate subjects of complaint, succeeded as to one, but failed as to the remainder. By the order, taxation was directed to the costs of the defendant of so much of the action as had been dismissed, and of the plaintiff of the rest of the action, with a set-off of the costs of the plaintiff against those of the defendant. The taxing-master taxed the plaintiff's and the defendant's costs of the whole action and allowed one-third to the plaintiff and two-thirds to the defendant. Upon a summons by the plaintiff, to vary the certificate, by ordering each item to be considered separately, and according to the subject of complaint, in respect of which each item might turn out to have been incurred, to be paid by the plaintiff or the defendant, as the case may be:—Held, that the taxing-master had proceeded upon the usual principle, and that the certificate was correct. Knight v. Purssell, 49 L. J., Ch. 120; 41 L. T. 581; 28 W. R. 90.

Issues on which Plaintiff Nonsuited.]—In an action tried by a jury where the plaintiff succeeds upon some issues but is nonsuited upon others, and no order is made as to costs, the defendant is entitled under Ord. LV. r. 1, to the costs of the issues upon which the plaintiff was nonsuited. Abbott v. Andrews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 641; 8 Q. B. D. 648; 30 W. R. 779.

When Counterclaim set up.]—In an action brought for a liquidated demand of 25*l.* for work and labour, the defendant pleaded a cross-liquidated demand as a counterclaim, and the jury found for the plaintiff on the statement of claim for 22*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*, and for the defendant on the counterclaim of 9*l.* 13*s.*, and the judge at the trial directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for 12*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, with his costs. The taxing-master allowed the defendant full costs, and on motion to review his taxation, the exchequer division declared the plaintiff entitled to his full costs, and directed judgment to be entered that the plaintiff do recover from the defendant 22*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* in respect of the cause of action in the statement of claim, with costs, and that the defendant do recover from the plaintiff 9*l.* 13*s.* in respect of the cause of action in the counterclaim, with costs; that the said sums and costs so recovered should be set-off, and the party in whose favour there should be a balance should recover from the other such balance:—Held, that one judgment should be entered for the plaintiff for 12*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, and that the plaintiff having recovered less than 20*l.* was entitled to no costs. In such a case a true set-off is not deprived of its real character of a defence by being described and pleaded as a counterclaim. Ryan v. Fraser, 16 L. R. Ir. 353—C. A.

See also ante, col. 695.

Defendant withdrawing Defence.]—Where one of two defendants to an action of ejectment withdrew his defence, and was ordered, as one of the terms on which such withdrawal was permitted, to pay to the plaintiffs their costs of the action "so far as they were occasioned by the defendant's defence" down to the date of the application to withdraw:—Held, that the effect of the order (the terms of which followed the language of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 205, and were practically identical with that of Judicature Act, Ord XXIII. r. 1) was to relieve the withdrawing defendant from the general costs of the action, and to make him liable only for the additional or increased costs, over and above the general costs, occasioned by such defendant having defended the action. Real and Personal Advance Co. v. McCarthy, 18 Ch. D. 362; 45 L. T. 116; 30 W. R. 481.

Reference—"Costs to abide Events"—Each Party in part Successful.]—A plaintiff having claimed for goods sold and delivered, and for commission, and the defendants having counterclaimed for moneys collected by the plaintiff on the defendants' account and for work and labour, the action was referred to an arbitrator under an order of reference whereby "the costs of the cause, and the costs of the reference and award, shall abide the event." The arbitrator found the issues on the claim in favour of the plaintiff, and awarded him a sum of money in respect thereof, and found the issues on the counterclaim in favour of the defendants, and awarded to them a sum of money in respect thereof. After deducting the sum found for the plaintiff from the sum found for the defendants, a balance of 97*l.* was due to the defendants:—Held, that the word "event" in the order of reference must be construed distributively, and that judgment must be entered for the defendants, who were entitled to the costs of the action, reference, and award, but that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the issues found in his favour. Baines v. Bromley (6 Q. B. D. 691) explained. Lund v. Campbell, 54 L. J., Q. B. 281; 14 Q. B. D. 821; 53 L. T. 900; 33 W. R. 510—C. A.

In an action the defendants denied all the allegations of the statement of claim, and, as an alternative defence, paid a sum of money into court in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. This sum the plaintiff did not accept. The cause was referred, the costs of the cause, reference, and award to abide the event. The arbitrator found all the issues, except one as to special damage, in favour of the plaintiff; and he also found that the money paid into court was enough to satisfy the plaintiff's claim in respect of the subject-matters of the action:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to the general costs of the action and award, and to the costs of the issues found in their favour; but that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the issues on which he had succeeded, for that the costs ought in such a case to be taxed in the same manner as though the action had been tried out in the ordinary course of law. Goutard v. Carr, 53 L. J., Q. B. 55; 32 W. R. 242—C. A.

Where an action is referred to an arbitrator, "the costs of the said cause, of the reference, and of the award to abide the event," and the plaintiff is successful on his claim, and the defendant on his counter claim, the amount recovered by the plaintiff exceeding the amount recovered by the defendant on his counter claim, the defendant is entitled to the costs of the issues on which he is successful, notwithstanding that the subject-matter of the claim and counterclaim is the same. Pearson v. Ripley, 50 L. T. 629; 32 W. R. 463.

On a reference to arbitration, the costs "to abide the event," the word "event" means the event of the whole action, and where the plaintiff is substantially successful in the action he is entitled to the general costs of the action, and the defendant only to the costs of those issues on which he has been successful, notwithstanding that on the reference the defendant has recovered more upon his counterclaim than the plaintiff on his claim, and that the success of the plaintiff on the whole action is due to the defendant having paid money into court prior to the reference. Waring v. Pearman, 50 L. T. 633; 32 W. R. 429.

An action and all matters in difference were referred, the costs of the cause, reference, and award to abide the event:—Held, that the word "event" must be construed distributively; and that upon an award by the arbitrator deciding in the plaintiff's favour upon the claim, but in the defendant's favour upon a matter in difference not raised in the action, the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the action and the defendant to the costs of the matter on which he had succeeded. Hawke v. Brear, 54 L. J., Q. B. 315; 14 Q. B. D. 841; 52 L. T. 432; 33 W. R. 613.

The appellants brought an action against the respondent in which their statement of claim concluded for a lump sum as unliquidated damages. The cause was referred upon the terms that the award of the arbitrators should be "for a sum certain for the plaintiffs, or an award for the defendant as the arbitrators may find," with liberty "to enter the said award as the verdict in this cause, and to sign final judgment therein"; costs to follow the verdict and be taxed in the ordinary way. The arbitrators awarded to the plaintiffs an amount less than one-quarter of that claimed in the statement of claim, and a verdict was entered for the sum so found due:—Held, that, even apart from the terms of the reference to arbitration, the court had no power to direct a verdict to be entered for the defendant for the difference between the amount claimed by the plaintiffs and the amount awarded by the arbitrators, and the costs to be taxed on the footing that the defendant had succeeded as to parts of the claim. O'Rourke v. Railways Commissioner, 59 L. J., P. C. 72; 15 App. Cas. 371; 63 L. T. 66—P. C.

—— Plaintiff recovering less than £20.]—In an action of contract the defendant counterclaimed. By the award of a special referee it was found that the plaintiffs were entitled on their claim to 13*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, and that the defendant was entitled on the counterclaim to 63*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*:—Held, that by reason of the provision of s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the costs of the issues found for them on the claim. Lund v. Campbell (supra), distinguished. Ahrbecker or Ahrbecket v. Frost, 55 L. J., Q. B. 477; 17 Q. B. D. 606; 55 L. T. 264; 34 W. R. 789. And see also post, cols. 814, et seq.

2. Before Judicature Acts.

Verdict entered Distributively.]—Where, in an action for disturbance of a ferry, the plaintiff alleged in his declaration that he was possessed of an ancient ferry for passengers and goods to and from A., from and to B., and the defendant pleaded not possessed, and a traverse of the ancient and entire right of ferry, and the jury found that there was a ferry from A. to B. only:—Held, that the verdict might be entered distributively for the plaintiff for so much as was proved at the trial. Giles v. Groves, 6 D. & L. 146; 12 Q. B. 721; 17 L. J., Q. B. 323; 12 Jur. 1084.

In an action for conversion of goods, the verdict may, on the general issue, and a plea of not possessed, be entered distributively; and when a verdict has been taken for the plaintiff, subject to a point reserved, on which the defendant has leave to move to enter the verdict, or to reduce the amount of damages, and the court, on the hearing of the rule, determines in favour of the plaintiff, except as to a portion of the goods claimed, distinguishable whether as fixtures or otherwise, this is equivalent to a direction that the verdict should be entered for the defendant for such portion, and not merely that the damages shall be reduced by the value of such goods, and the costs will follow such entry of the verdict, as on a distributive issue. Freshney v. Wells, 26 L. J., Ex. 228.

When a cause is taken down to trial, while demurrers are pending, and at the trial there is a verdict for the plaintiff subject to leave to enter it for the defendant, and the court holds the counts bad, and also directs the verdict to be entered for the defendant on these counts, the plaintiff is not entitled to the general costs of the trial on those counts, save as to particular issues on which he has really succeeded in point of proof. Oxenham v. Smith, 10 W. R. 649.

Action for money had and received in respect of sums paid under protest on the admission of the plaintiff to copyhold premises, alleged to be charged in excess. The particulars of demand consisted of eleven items, amounting in all to 17*l.* 1*s.* On a case reserved, it appeared that the plaintiff insisted that the principle on which the fees were charged was faulty, of which opinion was the court in some instances, but not all; and the court directed that the master should reduce the charges by allowing only a quantum meruit in respect to the greater part of the charges. On one item, 3*s.* for proclamations, the master allowed the whole charge; on three items he disallowed the charge altogether, and in all the others made a reduction. The whole reduction of the charges amounted to 9*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the verdict entered distributively, viz.: as to 9*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.* for the plaintiff; and as to the residue, 7*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* for the defendant, and that each party was to be allowed his costs in respect of so much as he had succeeded upon. Traherne v. Gardner, 8 El. & Bl. 161; 26 L. J., Q. B. 259; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1100; 5 W. R. 817.

If a plea contains several substantial defences (so that it might have been divided into so many separate pleas), then any one of those defences being proved, the defendant succeeds on the issue of that plea, but has the costs only of so much of the plea as is found for him, and the plaintiff has no costs in respect of the rest of the plea. Reynolds v. Harris, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 267; 28 L. J., C. P. 26; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 365.

The defendant's costs in such case include the expense of evidence applicable to the part of the plea found for him, though it may also be applicable to the residue of the plea. Ib.

Apart from costs in the cause, costs are only given by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 75, to a party who succeeds upon an issue raised on the record. Ib.

Where a plea is pleaded to the whole declaration, which includes two separate claims, and the defendant succeeds as to the first claim, but fails as to the second, and a verdict is entered distributively, the costs of the issues are to be taxed as though the plea had been originally separated into two, each pleaded to the parts respectively. Davis v. Thomas, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 709.

When a declaration contains a count for slander with other counts, and the jury finds a general verdict for the plaintiff, with 40*s.* damages, the verdict must be apportioned between the different counts, and the plaintiff is only entitled to recover so much for costs as the damages, which are apportioned to the count for slander, amount to. Burton v. Low, 16 L. T. 385; 15 W. R. 791.

A declaration alleged that the plaintiff obtained judgment and execution against B., and the defendant, as sheriff, arrested him but allowed him to escape. Pleas—first, not guilty; and, secondly, that B. produced to the sheriff's officer a certificate of the registration of a deed between B. and his creditors, whereupon the officer discharged B. Issue joined, and demurrer to the second plea; and replication, that the cause of action against B., in respect of which judgment was recovered, first accrued after the registration of the deed, and the plaintiff was not a creditor of B., bound by the deed. Issue joined on the replication, and demurrer. Judgment was given on the demurrers, that the second plea was bad in substance and the replication good. A verdict was afterwards found for the plaintiff on not guilty, the jury assessing the damages at the amount of the judgment debt; and the court afterwards, on the facts, directed the verdict on the replication to the second plea to be entered for the defendant:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the postea, and to have the judgment entered for him; for that it was immaterial that the second plea appeared on the record as bad, as the replication and verdict cured the defect, and showed that the defendant had succeeded on the merits. Dignam v. Baily, 10 B. & S. 891; 40 L. J., Q. B. 68; L. R. 6 Q. B. 47; 23 L. T. 706; 19 W. R. 325—Ex. Ch.

To a count upon a marine policy of insurance upon a submarine telegraph cable, alleging a total loss, the defendant pleaded that the subject-matter of the insurance was not, nor was any part thereof, during the risk covered by the policy, lost by the perils insured against. The plaintiff, at the trial, sought to recover on the policy for the depreciation in the value of his interest in the cable consequent upon the failure of the scheme (the cable never having been successfully laid), and also for the value of 373 miles of cable, which were admitted to have been lost by the perils insured against; and had a verdict in respect of the lost portion of the cable only:—Held, that in such case the count must be regarded as containing two distinct allegations, one in respect of a total and the other in respect of a partial loss; and the plea as applicable to either; and that the issue raised was therefore a divisible one, on which the verdict should be entered distributively, so as to entitle each party to costs proportioned to his success in the action. Paterson v. Harris, 2 B. & S. 814; 31 L. J., Q. B. 277; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 6 L. T 576; 10 W. R. 757.

Plaintiff Nonsuited.]—A defendant in case of a nonsuit was entitled to costs, under 23 Hen. 8, c. 15, although he may not have had a verdict in his favour on every part of the record. Elderton v. Emmens, 5 D. & L. 680; 17 L. J., C. P. 277; 12 Jur. 728.

Cases before C. L. P. Act of 1852.]—Action for work and labour. Pleas (except as to 60*l.*), never indebted, payment and set-off; and as to 60*l.*, payment into court. Issue having been joined on all the pleas, the first was found for the plaintiff, and the other two for the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff (the defendant being entitled to the costs of the cause) was not entitled to his costs as a witness, unless his evidence was confined exclusively to the issue found for him; and that if he was called to prove that a greater debt once existed than the payment and set-off covered, his evidence was not so confined. Clothier v. Gann, 13 C. B. 220; 22 L. J., C. P. 98; 17 Jur. 736.

A declaration contained three counts, to the first and third of which the defendant demurred, paying 25*s.* into court on the second, and pleading to the fourth. The plaintiff joined in demurrer, took out the 25*s.* in satisfaction as to the second count, and joined issue on the plea to the fourth count. At the trial there was a verdict for the defendant on the fourth count, and a contingent assessment of damages for the plaintiff on the demurrer to the first and third counts; and the plaintiff afterwards obtained judgment on the demurrer:—Held, that the defendant having succeeded upon the only issue of fact, was entitled to the costs of the trial, deducting the costs which the plaintiff would have been entitled to upon a writ of enquiry as to the first and third counts. Smith v. Hartley, 11 C. B. 678.

Where several pleas are pleaded, and one of them, which amounts to an answer to the whole action, is found for the defendant, and others for the plaintiff, the latter is entitled to the costs of the issues found for him, including a portion of the briefs and counsel's fees. Hazlewood v. Back, 9 M. & W. 1; 1 D. (N.S.) 94; 11 L. J., Ex. 89; 6 Jur. 107.

Action for false imprisonment. Pleas, not guilty and a justification under a ca. sa. Replication, a breaking open of an outer door; rejoinder thereupon. Verdict for the defendant on the first, and for the plaintiff on the second issue:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the general costs of the cause. Newton v. Holford, 2 D. & L. 826; 1 C. B. 141; 14 L. J., C. P. 145.

Where a defendant pleaded the general issue, and several special pleas, which were involved in the general issue, and the defendant succeeded on the general issue, but the special pleas were found for the plaintiff, the general issue is to be construed distributively, for the purpose of the taxation of costs; and the defendant is not to be allowed the costs on so much of the general issue as is involved in the special pleas found for the plaintiff, but such last-mentioned costs are to be allowed to the plaintiff. Nicholson v. Dyson, 1 D. & L. 276; 11 M. & W. 545; 12 L. J., Ex. 336.

In trover for waggons, wheelbarrows, iron rails, &c., a verdict was given for the plaintiff for 1.850*l.*, but afterwards, on the argument of a special case, was reduced by consent to 600*l.*, and the following rule was drawn up: "It is ordered, by consent, that the verdict found for the plaintiff on the trial of this cause be reduced to 600*l.*, and that, as to the residue of the claim, the verdict be entered for the defendant":—Held, that this was the proper course, the issue being divisible, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to have the verdict entered generally for him; but the defendant was entitled to a verdict and his costs, as to so much of the cause of action on which he had succeeded. Williams v. G. W. Ry., 8 M. & W. 856; 1 D. (N.S.) 16; 10 L. J., Ex. 472.

Action for selling a vessel under a misrepresentation that it was fit to be placed in class A. in the register at Lloyd's. Pleas, not guilty; and a traverse of the unfitness The jury found a verdict for the defendant on the first issue, and for the plaintiff on the second:—Held, that the master correctly taxed the costs in disallowing to the defendant the costs of the witnesses called by him to prove the second issue, and in allowing to the plaintiff the costs of the witnesses called by him for that purpose; although it might have been otherwise if the general issue only had been pleaded. Daniel v. Barry, 3 G. & D. 277; 4 Q. B. 59; 12 L. J., Q. B. 113; 7 Jur. 41.

Where a plaintiff succeeded upon the issue of never indebted, but the defendant upon the plea of set-off:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of a witness whose evidence was material to prove the issue found for the defendant, as well as that found for the plaintiff. Freeman v. Rosher, 18 L. J., Q. B. 105; 13 Jur. 427.

A party succeeding on an issue which entitles him to the postea and the general costs of the cause, is entitled to the costs of all witnesses attending to prove that issue, whether their evidence applies to any other issue or not. But the opposite party is entitled only to the costs of such witnesses as attend solely to prove the issue on which he succeeds; and if they also attend to prove an issue on which he fails, he is not entitled to any costs in respect of them. Welby v. Brown, 5 D. & L. 746; 1 Ex. 770.

Where the general issue is pleaded to a declaration containing several counts, it tenders a distinct issue upon each count; and the defendant is entitled to the costs of those counts found for him. Cox v. Thomason, 2 C. & J. 498; 1 D. P. C. 572; 2 Tyr. 411; 1 L. J., Ex. 187.

"Costs of issue" include costs of the trial of them. Eyre v. Thorpe, 6 D. P. C. 768.

The defendant is entitled to the costs of all issues found for him, although they exceed the costs of those found for the plaintiff. Milner v. Graham, 2 D. P. C. 422.

And if a verdict is found for the plaintiff on some counts, and for the defendant on others, the defendant is entitled to have the costs of those counts which are found for him deducted from the general costs in the cause. Knight v. Brown, 2 M. & Scott, 797; 9 Bing. 643; 1 D. P. C. 730.

If a defendant pleads the general issue and several special pleas, and the jury finds for him on the general issue, and for the plaintiff on the special pleas, the latter is entitled to the costs of the pleadings and witnesses on those pleas. Hart v. Cutbush, 2 D. P. C. 456.

Trespass. Pleas, not guilty, and son assault demesne; the defendant having a verdict on the latter plea, and the plaintiff on the former, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of the issue on the former. Mullins v. Scott, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 423; 8 L. J., C. P. 220.

The rule does not apply to paupers; and the costs of such of the opposite parties, who have got verdicts, cannot be deducted from the plaintiff's costs of the cause. Guggenheim v. Lane, 4 D. P. C. 482; 1 M. & W. 136; 1 Gale, 343; 1 Tyr. & G. 216.

When there are several issues, some of which are abandoned at the trial, the plaintiff is entitled only to the costs of those parts of such briefs, and such of the witnesses as were necessary for the issues on which he succeeded. Ib.

Where, in an action for libel, on the general issue, the jury found for the plaintiff, and also found as a fact, that a great part of the declaration did not apply specifically to the plaintiff, though there were innendoes, by which it was endeavoured to connect him with the matter complained of:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of that part. Prudhomme v. Frazier, 4 N. & M. 512; 2 A. & E. 645; 1 H. & W. 5; 4 L. J., K. B. 87.

Where some issues are found for the plaintiff, and some for the defendant, the latter will be entitled to the costs of the witnesses who are called exclusively in support of the issues found for him, but not of those who are also examined to disprove the issues found for the plaintiff. Crowther v. Elwell, 4 M. & W. 71; 6 D. P. C. 697; 1 H. & H. 187; 7 L. J., Ex. 251; 2 Jur. 760.

In an action of libel, in which there was a plea of not guilty, which was found for the defendant, and a special plea, in support of which no evidence was given, but which was found for the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the postea, for the purpose of having his costs on the second issue. Empson v. Fairfax, 8 A. & E. 296; 3 N. & P. 385; 1 W. W. & H. 353; 2 Jur. 441. See Spencer v. Hanerton, 4 A. & E. 413; 6 N. & M. 22; 1 H. & W. 700.

Where, in trespass, the jury found for the defendant upon a plea which went to the whole cause of action, and the judge thereupon discharged them as to the other issues:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to the costs of the pleadings or witnesses in respect of the issues upon which no verdict was given. Vallance v. Evans, 2 D. P. C. 118; 1 C. & M. 856; 3 Tyr. 863; 2 L. J., Ex. 272. S. P., Butler v. Hobson, 5 Scott, 824.

Before the issue was made up, the cause was referred, the costs of the cause were to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator found that the plaintiff had sustained damage to a certain amount upon one of the breaches of covenant specified in his particulars; and as to the rest, that he had no cause of action against the defendant:—Held, that the defendant was entitled under r. 74 H. T., 2 Will. 4, to the costs of those issues that were found for him, notwithstanding the cause was not in strictness at issue. Daubuz v. Rickman, 1 Scott, 564; 4 D. P. C. 129; 1 Hodges, 75.

A party entitled to the costs of the pleadings on any issue found for him, is entitled to all other expenses incidental to those pleadings, as briefs, witnesses, &c. Bird or Bond v. Higginson, 6 N. & M. 799; 5 A. & E. 83; 2 H. & W. 278; 6 L. J., K. B. 262.

If the issues found for the defendant, taken together, form an answer to the whole of the declaration, the defendant is entitled to the general costs of the cause; although some issues may have been found for the plaintiff, and damages assessed on them. Probert v. Phillips, 5 D. P. C. 473; 2 M. & W. 40; 2 Gale, 235; 6 L. J., Ex. 10.

So also where the defendant succeeds on one issue, which goes to the whole cause of action. Bayley v. Long, 5 D. P. C. 616; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 781; 4 Scott, 481; 6 L. J., C. P. 191; 1 Jur. 310. S. P., Smith v. Brown, 5 D. P. C. 736; 3 Hodges, 144.

Trespass. Justification under a right of way to carry water and goods. As to the water, verdict for the defendant; as to the goods, verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant had substantially succeeded, and was entitled to the general costs in the cause. Knight v. Woore, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 534; 4 Scott, 360; 5 D. P. C. 487; 3 Hodges, 1; 6 L. J., C. P. 135; 1 Jur. 84.

Held, also, that he was entitled to the costs of a witness who spoke as to the water, notwithstanding he spoke also as to the goods. Ib.

A declaration alleged that the plaintiff caused to be shipped on board a vessel of the defendant's certain wares and merchandises, to be safely and securely carried by the defendant from Buenos Ayres to Liverpool, and then to be delivered to the plaintiff. Breach, that he did not safely or securely carry the wares and merchandises, but that, through their improper stowage and negligence, the same were broken and damaged. The defendant pleaded, that he did not promise; and that the wares and merchandises were not broken or damaged by the improper stowage or negligence. The jury found for the plaintiff on the first issue, and for the defendant on the second, except as to one cask of grease, which had been injured by a cask of tallow falling upon it, and they gave the plaintiff 12*l.* damages:—Held, that this finding amounted to a general verdict for the plaintiff, the second issue not being divisible; and that the defendant was not entitled to costs in respect of that part of the issue found for him. Anderson v. Chapman, 7 D. P. C. 822; 5 M. & W. 483; 9 L. J., Ex. 9; 3 Jur. 1154.

Costs were allowed to plaintiffs, though they failed in a great part of their claim. Hill v. South Staffordshire Ry. 43 L. J., Ch. 556; L. R. 18 Eq. 154.

When there is upon the face of a bill that which will give a right to relief in equity, that right will not be affected by the circumstances that there are also in the bill allegations of personal fraud, which might give a farther or a different right to relief, if they were proved. If they are not proved the proper course is to dismiss, with costs, so much of the bill as is founded on them, but not to dismiss the bill itself. Thompson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215. See also post. col. 788.

When different demands arise in a cause, the costs should be arranged as the equities between the parties require. Shine v. Gough, 2 Ball & B. 34.

A suit was instituted for the administration of an estate, and to charge an executor with interest on balances retained in his hands; the decree directed a taxation of the costs of so much of the suit as sought to charge interest:—Held, that this comprised, not only the excess of costs incurred by the question of interest, but also an apportionment of the general costs of the suit. Mode of taxation of a bill of costs where an apportionment is directed. Heighington v. Grant, 1 Beav. 228; 9 L. J., Ch. 142. And see S. C., 10 L. J., Ch. 12; 11 L. J., Ch. 171; 4 Jur. 1052.

The defendants will be allowed the costs of that part of the bill which they disprove; though substantially the bill may be maintained. Metcalf v. ——, 4 Jur. 716.

Where there are several issues, and some are found for plaintiff, and others for defendant, the parties will be allowed costs on issues found in their favour, and must pay in those against them. Prevost v. Benett, 2 Price, 272.

An information related to two objects; one failed; and the decree dismissed so much of the information as related to it, without costs, and ordered the defendant to pay the informant his costs of the suit:—Held, that the taxing-master was wrong in apportioning the general costs of suit between the two objects. Att.-Gen. v. Carrington (Lord), 6 Beav. 454; 12 L. J., Ch. 453.

The court of exchequer will not apportion the costs as between plaintiff and defendant, in a suit where the plaintiff succeeds in one only of several points put in issue by the bill; but will give the plaintiff the general costs of the suit, deducting only his additional costs by the claims which he fails to establish; and the defendant will only be entitled to the additional costs he is put to by the introduction of such unsuccessful claims. Jesus College v. King, 3 Y. & Coll. 662; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 15; 4 Jur. 120.

When a plaintiff in his bill alleges a case which he proves, and upon which he is entitled to relief, and also alleges other matters which he fails to prove, if the case alleged and proved can be separated from the other matters alleged and not proved, the bill will not be dismissed, but the plaintiff will obtain a decree giving him the relief to which he is entitled, and only that part of his bill which relates to the matters alleged and not proved will be dismissed with costs. Parker v. MacKenna, 44 L. J., Ch. 425; L. R. 10 Ch. 96; 31 L. T. 739; 23 W. R. 271.

Several defendants entitled to a fund in equal shares; and long enquiries being necessary as to one share only, the costs were apportioned. Basevi v. Serra, 14 Ves. 313.

A party, in possession under a title derived under a tenant for life and equitable incumbrancer, having set up the Statute of Limitations as a defence against the claim of a devisee of the reversion, was decreed to pay so much of the costs of the cause as was incurred by the defence, so far as it rested on the Statute of Limitations, and to abide his own costs of the remainder of the suit up to the hearing. Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 177.

A bill was filed for two distinct objects. The decree ordered that the plaintiff's bill, so far as it related to one of the objects, should stand dismissed with costs, and, after granting the relief sought in respect of the other object, ordered that "the costs of the plaintiff of this suit, up to and including the hearing, other than such costs as have been occasioned by so much of the bill as is hereby dismissed, be taxed," &c.:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to an apportionment of the general costs. Proud v. Bates, 35 L. J., Ch. 341; 14 L. T. 14; 14 W. R. 306.

The plaintiffs were order to pay to the defendant so much of the costs "as had been occasioned" by one object of the suit, and a decree was made with costs as to the other objects. The taxing-master considered the suit to be for two objects, and allowed the plaintiff one-half only of the general costs common to both:—Held, that he was right. Hardy v. Hull, 17 Beav. 355.

Of the two objects of a bill, one succeeded and the other failed. The costs not being easily separable, a decree was made without costs on either side. Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 16 Beav. 630; 22 L. J., Ch. 604; 17 Jur. 1001. And see Hardingham v. Thomas, 2 W. R. 547.

A plaintiff though successful, ordered to pay all costs occasioned by unsustained charges on the bill. Blest v. Brown, 4 De G. F. & J. 367; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 602; 6 L. T. 620; 10 W. R. 569.

B., a second mortgagee, filed a bill for redemption and foreclosure against F., who held the first and third mortgages on the property. F., by his answer, disputed B.'s security by denying the consideration, and filed a cross bill for foreclosure impeaching that security. By the decree made in both suits, F.'s bill was dismissed with costs, so far as it sought to set aside B.'s security, and F. was ordered to pay the costs of the first suit, "so far as the same have been increased by the answer of F. impeaching the validity of the security of B." The master held that the costs incurred by B. in proving the consideration, and consequent thereon, were the increase of costs in the first suit which F. was to pay, and that the expense of the hearing must be apportioned according to the number of folios, and that the costs of the second suit must be apportioned. B. objected to this taxation, and contended that he ought to be allowed all his costs except such as would have been incurred if the suits had been ordinary redemption and foreclosure suits heard as short causes, and that F. ought to have all his costs disallowed, except such as would in that case have been incurred, the difference being attributable to F.'s impeaching B.'s security:—Held, that the master had proceeded on a correct principle. Begbie v. Fenwick, L. R. 6 Ch. 869; 25 L. T. 441; 20 W. R. 67.

Separation of the costs occasioned by a defence founded on a statement of fact disproved by the evidence. Bower v. Cooper, 2 Hare, 408; 11 L. J., Ch. 287; 6 Jur. 681.

In defence to a suit for specific performance by a purchaser, the vendor set up inadequacy of consideration and intoxication. An inquiry was directed as to the former part of the defence; and the defendant having failed to prove the latter part, the plaintiff was declared entitled to so much of the costs as had been occasioned by it. Ib.

Bill to enforce forfeiture for a second marriage by the defendant, and for an inquiry as to the marriage, wholly fails on the plaintiff's own evidence, it appearing that there was no second marriage, although there was marital cohabitation:—Held, that the plaintiff must pay the costs of the suit, notwithstanding the immoral conduct of the defendant, and notwithstanding that the bill prayed for the appointment of new trustees, which relief was granted. Preece v. Seale, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 711.

H TAXATION OF COSTS

1 BETWEEN PARTY AND PARTY

a Practice.

1 Generally

In what Cases]—When costs are given against a party he must pay the costs of his antagonist when taxed as between party and party Ashwood v Lyons, 1 Hog 116

—— Nominal Party]—A railway company made a defendant in order to ascertain the amount of shares belonging to a testator's estate will only have party and party costs on being dismissed De Combe v De Combe, 3 Jur (N S) 712

Where a company is made a defendant to a bill by a plaintiff claiming an incumbrance on shares of a shareholder, also made defendant, the company is entitled to costs as between party and party from the plaintiff, and to the difference between such costs and costs as between solicitor and client out of the fund Chartered Mercantile Bank of India v De Jonge 9 L T 678

A person named a trustee in a deed, who declines to accept the office is in the situation of any other defendant against whom a bill is dismissed and can only have his costs as between party and party Norway v Norway, 2 Myl & K 278, 3 L J, Ch 111, 163

Taxation ex parte]—If a defendant in an action on a foreign judgment, which ordered costs to be paid neglected to appear to tax the costs the plaintiff might tax the costs ex parte Sadler v Robins 1 Camp 253

Payment of Debt within four days from Service of Writ]—Where a defendant, within four days from the service pays the amount of the debt indorsed on the writ, he is entitled to have the costs taxed though he pays less than the amount of the costs demanded by the indorsement Hunter v Russell, 6 Scott (N R) 627, 5 Man & G 601, 12 L J, C P 272

A plaintiff having issued a writ indorsed with the amount of the debt and a sum for costs, after four days from service accepted from the defendant payment of the full amount indorsed, without any agreement as to taxation of costs —Held that, the plaintiff having waived payment within the four days required by Ord III r 7, the defendant was entitled to tax the bill under that rule Hoole v Earnshaw, 39 L T 409—C A See also Holding v Sturchfield, 7 Man & G 957, Young v Crompton, 2 D & L 557, 10 Jur 248

Directions to Master]—The court will not, on the application of the plaintiff or the defendant, give any directions to the master as to the taxation of costs Merrick v Wakley, 5 Jur 987

The court refused a motion for special direction to master requiring him to deduct, in his taxation of costs of the parties the costs which he should allow to defendant from those which he should allow to plaintiff (who had become insolvent) after decree had been passed and acted upon Rumney v Beale, 10 Price, 113

A motion for the taxation of a solicitor's bill, with special directions to disallow the costs of certain proceedings alleged to have been improperly taken by the solicitor, or with a qualification that the tax was to be of the costs of such proceedings only as had been properly incurred, refused as such objections may be taken advantage of under the common order for a taxation Wiggins v Pippin, 2 Beav 403 See S C, 3 Jur 721

The court ought not be called upon to give directions to the master how to tax the master ought to announce the principle on which he taxes and then the court may be called on to review his taxation Eccles v Blackburn Corporation, 30 L J, Ex 358

Informal Proceedings]—Under a general order of taxation, the master will, without any special direction exercise a discretion as to taxing the costs of informal proceedings Clayton v Meadows 2 Hare, 26

Delivery of Bill of Costs]—Where a plaintiff in ejectment obtained judgment, and issued and executed a writ of possession and the defendant was about to take the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act and required to have the plaintiff's bill of costs in the action taxed in order to insert the amount in his schedule, a judge has power to make an order calling on the plaintiff to deliver his bill of costs in order to be taxed Baker v Saunders, 7 C B (N S) 858 29 L J, C P 158 6 Jur (N S) 637, 1 L T 403, 8 W R 190

Where decree orders defendant to retain his costs when taxed, out of the balance in his hands and pay the residue into court, if the defendant delays to get costs taxed, plaintiff must move that he may bring his bill of costs to be taxed within limited time, and not that he may pay in the whole balance Newsome v. Shearman, 2 Sim & S 95

Order that Shorthand Note be taken]—A taxing master, a chief clerk or even a judge, has no jurisdiction to order shorthand notes of the evidence to be taken, but where, in a case of a lengthy and complicated nature, the taxing-master had suggested that a shorthand note of the evidence before him should be taken, and the parties had acceded to that suggestion and had acted upon it, and each side had employed a separate shorthand writer, the court held that under the special circumstances of the case, the taxing master was right in directing the unsuccessful party to pay one half of the costs of the shorthand notes. Hilleary and Taylor, In re, 56 L J, Ch 758, 36 Ch. D 262, 56 L. T. 867, 35 W R 705—C A.

Where Solicitor in Custody]—A solicitor being in custody under an attachment, the court granted a writ of habeas corpus directed to the marshal to bring him before the taxing-master, to enable him to attend the taxation of bills of costs Walsh v Wilson, 2 Ir Ch R 79

Jurisdiction]—An order directing an inquiry what is due to a party for costs but not containing a direction to tax them does not preclude the taxing officer from not allowing him any costs Simmons v Storer, 49 L J Ch 121, 14 Ch D 154 42 L T 201 28 W R 408

A decree directed a reference to the master to tax the defendant's bill of costs and a reference to the master in ordinary to take an account of all the dealings and transactions between the plaintiff and the defendants By a subsequent order made on a motion it was directed that notwithstanding the decree both references should go to the taxing master —Held first that the order was erroneous as varying the decree in such a manner in which it could not be varied upon motion without consent King v Savery, 8 De G M & G 311, 2 Jur (N S) 431 4 W R 471

Held secondly that matters unconnected with bills of costs could not under the 9th Order of the 20th October 1842, be referred to the taxing master Ib

—— Discretion—"Other Circumstances"]—Upon the taxation in an administration action of an administrator's bills of costs as between solicitor and client the registrar is entitled in the exercise of his discretion to take into consideration the fact of the insolvency of the estate as one of the 'other circumstances' in the case referred to by Order L A r 20 of the County Court Rules 1889 Pain v Boulton, 65 L J, Q B 530, [1896] 2 Q B 301, 75 L T 102, 45 W R 48

—— Costs incurred Abroad]—A bill was dismissed with costs Considerable costs had been incurred by the examination and cross-examination of witnesses in Australia under a commission —Held, that the master must have regard to the rules of taxation there but the court refused to refer the taxation of that bill to the proper officer in Australia Wentworth v Lloyd, 34 Beav 455, 13 L T 226, 13 W R 486

—— Amount fixed]—The defendant having succeeded in two interlocutory applications, with costs to be paid to him by the plaintiff the costs were measured by the court pursuant to the 159th General Order The bill was afterwards dismissed for want of prosecution, and upon taxation the master, notwithstanding the award of the sum for costs, taxed the defendant's costs of the two applications to sums greater than those awarded —Held, that the sum awarded by the court was final and conclusive, and that the master was not authorised to tax those costs Woodley v Woodley, 7 Ir Eq R 77

—— Time for]—An order, directing the costs of the suit to be taxed, warrants a taxation up to the time of the master's making his report Semble Clutton v Pardon, Turn & R 304, 24 R R 68

—— On Compromise]—Parties agreed to compromise a suit, and that the costs, charges, and expenses, as between solicitor and client, should be paid out of the fund —Held, that the taxing-master ought to treat the suit as properly constituted, and ought not, in the taxation, to consider whether defendants, having interests similar to the plaintiffs, should have been made co-plaintiffs, and, secondly, that if any of the parties entering into the compromise intended to challenge the propriety of the constitution of the suit, they ought to have distinctly stated, and have provided for it in the agreement. Lucas v Peacock, 5 Beav 1

Mistake in Addition]—It is not the duty of the solicitor of a party entitled to costs to add up upon oath, the items in the bill of costs as certified by the taxing officer, but if he takes it upon himself to make the addition in the absence of the solicitor of the opposite party, his client will be liable for the consequences of any mistake he may make Kelly v O Beirne, 16 W R. 172

When Unnecessary]—Taxation of costs is not necessary upon a cognovit Clothier v Ess, 3 M & Scott, 216

Staying Taxation pending Appeal] — See APPEAL

Judgment Ambiguous — Procedure]—Where there is an ambiguity in the terms of a judgment with respect to costs, and the master in consequence refuses to tax the costs of one of the parties, the proper course is to apply for a direction to the judge who tried the cause and not to appeal against the master's decision Abbott v Andrews 51 L J, Q B 641, 8 Q B D. 648, 30 W R 779

Taxation not a Condition precedent to Right of Action for Costs]—See post, col 849

Notice to Tax—When Necessary]—No notice to tax is necessary when a defendant appears in person and gives a cognovit which is good, though there is no declaration Clarke v Jones, 3 D P C 277 5 P, Clothier v Ess, 3 M & Scott, 216

Where at the instance of one of several joint defendants the taxation of the plaintiff's costs is deferred, notice of taxation on another day is not necessary Perry v Turner, 1 D P C 300, 2 C & J 89 2 Tyr 128, 1 L J, Ex 13

Where costs need not be taxed it is unnecessary to give the one day's notice Griffiths v. Liversidge 2 D P C 143

A defendant, against whom the bill has been dismissed with costs to be paid by the plaintiff, and received by the plaintiff out of the estate to be administered in the cause, is not bound to serve the parties interested in the estate with a warrant to attend the taxation, but may proceed with the taxation, serving the plaintiff only with the warrant Lander v Ingersoll, 6 Hare, 73

—— Sufficiency of]—A notice to attend taxation at Westminster during term, is good Blake v Warren, 6 M & W 151, 8 D P C 173, 9 L J, Ex 136, 4 Jur 27

It is unnecessary to give a 24 hours' notice of taxing costs Edmonds v Cates, 1 H & H 190, 4 M & W 66, 6 D P C 667, 2 Jur. 496

Notice of taxation given before 9 o'clock P M. of one day for the day following at 12 is one day's notice within the meaning of the rule of court Ib

A notice of taxation dated the 23rd of February, to attend the following day, left at the office of the plaintiff's attorney, between seven and eight o'clock of the evening of the 24th, is a sufficient notice. Grant v. Mackenzie, 5 D. & L. 129; 1 Ex. 12; 16 L. J., Ex. 255.

—— Date Insensible.]—Where, in a notice of taxation, the date is insensible, it will take effect from the day of delivery. Ib.

—— Omission to Give.]—The omission to give notice of taxation is not such an irregularity as entitles the party to whom it has been given to set aside the judgment. Ilderton v. Sill, 2 C. B. 249; 15 L. J., C. P. 1; 9 Jur. 948.

But where judgment was signed for want of a plea, and the costs were taxed without giving such notice, the court, on an affidavit of merits, set aside the judgment, and execution issued upon it, without costs. Ib.

It is no ground for setting aside a judgment that it has been signed without notice of taxation of costs; but the opposite party might have the taxation reviewed. Field v. Partridge, 7 Ex. 689; 21 L. J., Ex. 269; 16 Jur. 413.

If it is agreed between the attorneys of the parties that a particular person should tax the costs, it is no answer to an action for such costs that the defendant's attorney had no notice to attend the taxation, if he did not object when he was first apprised of its having taken place in his absence. Watson v. Murrel, 1 Car. & P. 307; 28 R. R. 779.

—— Other Points.]—Where, on account of the pressure of business, a cause was entered in the list of motions for new trials on the fourth day of term, and the plaintiff signed judgment and gave notice of taxation, whereupon the defendant gave notice that the cause stood in the list to be moved:—Held, that the practice being to sign judgment before notice of taxation, the defendant ought to have given notice before, and must pay the costs of signing judgment. Emblin v. Dartnell, 1 D. & L. 1010; 13 L. J., Ex. 255.

The rule of a court is imperative, unless waived by the other party. Wilkins v. Perkins, 5 D. P. C. 461; 2 M. & W. 315; Mur. & H. 46; 6 L. J., Ex. 77; 1 Jur. 168.

A judgment on demurrer is not within the rule of court which requires a copy of the bill of costs and affidavit of increase to be delivered to the opposite party at the time of the service of the notice of taxation. Taylor v. Murray, 6 D. P. C. 80; 3 M. & W. 141; Mur. & H. 349; 7 L. J., Ex. 53.

Taxing costs and signing final judgment are contemporaneous. Pierce v. Derry, 4 Q. B. 635; 3 G. & D. 477; 12 L. J., Q. B. 277; 7 Jur. 552.

—— Costs of Service.]—Reasonable costs of serving a notice of taxation will be allowed, and if the defendant resides in the country, and has not employed an attorney, an attorney in the country may be employed to serve him with a notice of taxation. Thorp v. Wordy, 2 C. & J. 488; 1 D. P. C. 576; 2 Tyr. 489.

Affidavit of Increase—Contents.]—A copy of the affidavit of increase must contain a copy of the jurat also. Wheldall v. Eastern Counties Ry., 2 D. & L. 246; 13 M. & W. 9; 13 L. J., Ex. 258; 8 Jur. 859.

On an objection to a solicitor's charge for journeys, his affidavit that they "were necessarily and properly taken for the benefit of the trust estates," was, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, held sufficient. Maw v. Pearson, 3 N. R. 99.

—— Delivery of Copy.] — An omission to comply with the rule requiring a copy of the bill of costs and affidavit of increase to be delivered to the opposite party at the time of the service of notice of taxation is no ground for setting aside the judgment and execution, but only of reviewing the taxation. Taylor v. Murray, 6 D. P. C. 80; 3 M. & W. 141; M. & H. 349; 7 L. J., Ex. 53. S. P., Field v. Partridge, 7 Ex. 689; 21 L. J., Ex. 269; 16 Jur. 413.

The rule of court is not complied with by one day's previous delivery of the copy of an affidavit of increase, not sworn until the day of taxation. Todd v. Fellingham, 8 D. P. C. 373; 4 Jur. 682.

—— Sums not Paid.]—Where it was alleged that certain sums sworn to in an affidavit of increase had not been paid, the court directed the taxation to be reviewed. Pembray v. Jones, 11 Jur. 589.

The witnesses in a cause should be actually paid before an affidavit of increase is made; and if the practice is not followed in this respect, the court will order the sums sworn to have been paid and allowed by the master to be refunded. Trent v. Harrison, 2 D. & L. 941; 14 L. J., Q. B. 210; 9 Jur. 873.

An affidavit of increase ought not to state that the expenses charged for witnesses have been paid to them, unless they have been actually paid at the time when it is made; the fact of the money due to a witness for his attendance having been set off against expenses incurred by the successful party in conveying him to the assize town, and keeping him there, is insufficient. Cross v. Durrell, 29 L. J., Ex. 473; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 638; 3 L. T. 87; 8 W. R. 630.

An attorney who, in his affidavit of increase, represents that he has paid money to witnesses in the cause, when he has not, in fact, paid it (though he may have taken steps for so doing), or who without proper grounds makes statements tending to heighten the costs payable, with intent to favour such witnesses or to oppress the opposite party, commits an offence for which, on a timely application, he may be punished by the court. Doe d. Mence v. Hadley, 17 Q. B. 571.

A fine of 100*l.* and suspension from practice for three years imposed upon an attorney for having made a false affidavit of increase. Mant, In re, 5 L. T. 254; 10 W. R. 13.

—— Practice in Chancery Division.]—Where one of the parties to an action in the Chancery Division has been ordered to pay costs, the common law practice of requiring in all cases from the party to whom the costs are to be paid an affidavit of increase, proving that payments said to have been made have in fact been made, that witnesses were material, how many days they were in attendance, &c., will not be followed, but the party ordered to pay costs will only be entitled to call for such an affidavit in cases in which the taxing-master has required it to supply information of which he is not in possession. Smith v. Day, 50 L. J., Ch. 333; 16 Ch. D. 726; 44 L. T. 217; 29 W. R. 424.

Several Taxations.]—In trover, the plea of not guilty was found for the defendant, and the other issues for the plaintiff. The defendant signed judgment and taxed his costs, which were paid. The court refused to set aside an order, which the plaintiff obtained nearly a year afterwards, to tax the costs upon the issues found in his favour. Watson v. Boyes, 2 D. & L. 663; 13 M. & W. 635; 14 L. J., Ex. 116.

Costs of increase form no integral part of the suit, as they are awarded by the court in consequence of the damages recovered by the plaintiff, and form the subject of a distinct and separate adjudication. Taylor v. Wilkinson, 5 N. & M. 189; 1 H. & W. 451.

Costs of Taxation.]—A defendant paid within four days the amount of debt and costs indorsed upon the writ, but afterwards had the costs taxed. Upon taxation two items, amounting to less than one-sixth of the whole amount, were taxed off. An order was afterwards made by a master of the court sitting at chambers for payment of the costs of taxation by the defendant. Upon the hearing of the summons no objection on the part of the defendant was made to the payment of the costs of taxation, on the ground of the nature of the items so charged and taxed off. The defendant having moved to rescind the order:—Held, that though there was a discretion in the court to allow or disallow the costs of taxation to the plaintiff, the court would not rescind the order on the ground that the items taxed off were such as the plaintiff's attorney must have known to be not allowable, no objection having been made before the master on that ground. Carpenter v. Calvert, 17 L. T. 578.

The costs of the plaintiff and of the several parties to the cause having been ordered to be paid out of the fund, and a puisne creditor not a party, but whose demand had been decreed to be paid, having obtained leave to attend the taxation of the costs:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of reading over the bills of costs of the several parties to the cause. Phillips v. Page, Hay. & J. 819.

In chambers, the defendants interested in taking accounts were represented by some of their number. L., one of the defendants excluded from attending at chambers, claimed a right to attend the taxation of costs; but the master refused to recognise his attendances, and disallowed all his charges for the same. On appeal, the court declined to interfere with the discretion which the master had exercised in the matter, and ordered L. to pay to the parties served with the motion a sum for costs. Stahlschmidt v. Lett, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1271; 9 W. R. 830.

ii. The Allocatur.

Alterations in — Power to Make.]—Where there is an error in the deductions made on the taxation of costs, and the allocatur is made in ignorance of such, the party affected by such error is not at liberty to make an alteration in order to set it right, the proper course being to apply to a judge or the master. Levy v. Drew, 5 D. & L. 307; 2 B. C. Rep. 142; 12 Jur. 119.

Part Taxed by another Officer.]—A writ of summons having issued, proceedings in bankruptcy were taken against the defendant, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 78, and the commissioner made an order under s. 85 that the costs of such proceedings should abide the event of the action. Afterwards a judge's order was made for staying proceedings, on payment of debt and costs. The master in the Exchequer taxed the costs of the action, and gave his allocatur for their amount, together with the debt; and the other costs having been taxed by the officer in bankruptcy, the master added the two sums together, and judgment was signed for the whole:—Held, that the proceedings were regular, as the costs in bankruptcy, when taxed by the master in bankruptcy, became part of the judgment of the Exchequer. Webb v. Hewlett, 6 Ex. 107; 2 L. M. & P. 4; 20 L. J., Ex. 134.

Order for Payment of Costs.]—A rule for taxation of costs, and the allocatur, do not amount to a rule or an order whereby money is payable, within the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, so as to operate as a judgment. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635.

Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, an order for payment of costs operates only as against purchasers, mortgagees and creditors from the registration of the certificate of taxation. Hargrave v. Hargrave, 23 Beav. 484.

To Whom belonging.]—An allocatur is the property of the person in whose favour it is made. Doe d. King v. Robinson, 2 D. P. C. 503.

iii. Review of Taxation.

Objection in Writing.]—An application by a party to a judge under Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-rule 41, for an order for a review of taxation of a bill of costs as to any item or part of an item contained therein, cannot be entertained unless the party applying has first carried in an objection in writing under sub-rule 39 with respect to each such item or part of an item. Stronsberg v. Sanders, 38 W. R. 117—C. A.

Where a party in objecting to the taxation of his bill took various objections which were overruled by the taxing-master:—Held, that on a summons to vary the certificate he could not raise any points not set forth in his written objections. Nation, In re, Nation v. Hamilton, 57 L. T. 648.

When a party carries in an objection in writing to the certificate of a taxing-master under Rules of Court, 1875 (Costs), Ord. VII. r. 30, he is only bound to state the items to which he objects, not the reasons of his objection. Simmons v. Storer, 49 L. J., Ch. 121; 14 Ch. D. 154; 42 L. T. 291; 28 W. R. 408.

—— Privilege of Solicitor.]—No action lies against a solicitor for defamatory words contained in written objections lodged by him upon taxation of another solicitor's bill of costs. Pedley v. Morris, 61 L. J., Q. B. 21; 65 L. T. 526; 40 W. R. 42.

Applicant not Party to Order.]—A person who is not a party to the making of an order for the taxation of costs, and who desires that the taxation under the order may be reviewed, ought not to apply by motion to review the taxing-master's certificate, but ought to apply to have the order for taxation set aside. Charlton v. Charlton, 31 W. R. 237.

Application not made till after Allocatur.]—An application to review the taxation of costs ought not to be made before the master has made his allocatur, as he has not, until doing so, finally decided what costs he will allow. Sellman v. Boorn, 8 M. & W. 552; 1 D. (N.S.) 11; 10 L. J., Ex. 433; 5 Jur. 846.

To what Court.]—Semble, that a question as to the taxation of costs will not in general be entertained at chambers. Smith v. Harnor, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 829.

All applications to review taxation where the master clearly was in error should be made at chambers in the first instance. Levett v. Rothwell, 27 L. J., Ex. 6. See Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 41.

Jurisdiction to Review, in what Cases.]—A master taxing costs in proceedings not in the court, by direction of a private act of parliament, is not necessarily subject to the control and revision of the court. Wraithby, In re, 35 L. J., Ex. 60; L. R. 1 Ex. 54; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 954; 13 L. T. 440; 14 W. R. 143; 4 H. & C. 74.

The court has no jurisdiction to review the taxation of a master of the court made under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 52. Owen v. L. & N. W. Ry., 37 L. J., Q. B. 35; L. R. 3 Q. B. 54; 17 L. T. 210; 16 W. R. 125; 7 B. & S. 758.

A taxation of sheriff's costs and charges by a master of the supreme court under the general order of 31st August, 1888, is not the subject of review under Ord. LXV. r. 27 (39–41). Townend v. Yorkshire (Sheriff), 59 L. J., Q. B. 156; 24 Q. B. D. 621; 62 L. T. 402; 38 W. R. 381; 54 J. P. 598.

A taxing-master at common law referred certain items in a bill of costs to one of the chancery taxing masters. On an application for an order that the chancery master might be directed to review his finding:—Held, that it was not within the jurisdiction of the court to make an order as to anything which was not before it. Lett, Ex parte, Parry, In re, 5 L. T. 416; 10 W. R. 6.

When a superior court of record has jurisdiction to make upon motion an order or a certificate for costs, such order is binding and conclusive, and the master's taxation for such costs cannot be impugned except by a suggestion of error in fact upon the record that no order or certificate was made by the court. Scott v. Bennett, L. R. 5 H. L. 234; 20 W. R. 686.

Second Application on Facts known at first.]—The court having refused an application to direct the master to tax the plaintiff's costs, a second application, differing in form, but in substance the same, was made two terms after, upon grounds which might have been laid before the court on the first occasion; and it was therefore refused. Leggo v. Young, 17 C. B. 549; 25 L. J., C. P. 176.

Second Application after Review.]—Where the master had been directed to review his taxation as to the disallowance, as between attorney and client, of the expenses of the plaintiff's attorney for attending at the trial (in London), and he had reconsidered the matter, and again disallowed the charge, considering that it had not been sufficiently sustained, the court refused a rule, directing him again to review his taxation. Pobjoy v. Rich, 27 L. J., Ex. 10.

When Ordered—Discretion.]—The court will rarely interfere to review a taxation upon a matter of discretion only. Wakefield v. Brown, 43 L. J., C. P. 222; L. R. 9 C. P. 410; 30 L. T. 428.

But where, through some mistaken construction, the master has not exercised his discretion in the allowance of items under any head of costs, erroneously conceiving that he was not entitled to do so, the court will direct him to review his taxation, in order to exercise his discretion. So, if he errs in principle, or departs from a positive rule. Reg. v. L. C. & D. Ry., 12 Jur. (N.S.) 230.

—— Number of Counsel.]—In an action to recover a large sum a verdict having been found for the defendant, and a new trial directed on payment of costs, the master, on taxing the defendant's costs, disallowed the briefs and fees to the junior counsel, and the consultation fees (on the ground that the briefs disclosed no witnesses for the defence), and also the journeys and attendance of the defendant's attorney (from Bath):—The court directed a review of the taxation, on an affidavit showing that the circumstances of the case justified the employment of two counsel, and the attendance of the attorney from the country. Maddison v. Bacon, 1 Arn. 487; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 246; 7 Scott, 207; 3 Jur. 248.

—— Mistake.]—Two solicitors, A. and B., dissolved partnership, and it was agreed that B. should be entitled to half the profits of a suit instituted by them. After some time an order was made, by consent of both, for the taxation of the costs down to the date. Some of the costs had, unknown to B., been already taxed, and received by A.:—Held, under the circumstances, that the order comprised all such costs; and the previous costs having been omitted in the master's certificate, the court, upon a petition to review the taxation, referred the matter back to the master. Greenwood v. Churchill, 14 Beav. 160.

—— Unnecessary Proceedings.]—A creditor's administration action was ordered to be stayed on payment by the applicant, the executrix and residuary legatee, of the debt and the costs of the action. Before the master, the executrix objected to items in the plaintiff's bill of costs, alleging, as to some of them, that they had been incurred in taking unnecessary and improper proceedings in the action. The master refused to inquire into the truth of these allegations, and taxed the costs without reference to them:—Held, that, under r. 18 of the Additional Rules of Court, 1875, the master ought to have considered the plaintiff's objections, and that there must be a new taxation. Baines v. Wormsley, 47 L. J., Ch. 844; 39 L. T. 85; 27 W. R. 36.

If a solicitor negligently or ignorantly takes some unnecessary proceeding, it is the duty of the master to disallow the charge made in respect of such proceeding. Alsop v. Oxford (Lord), 1 Myl. & K. 564; 2 L. J., Ch. 174.

The taxing-master disallowed a general objection to a bill of costs as not properly chargeable under a trust deed, on the ground that the words of the trust deed covered all expenses incurred by the trustee in the proper matters of the trust, and that the majority of the items of costs were incurred with the plaintiff's consent, and some admitted by the plaintiff's bill. The master also disallowed an objection to particular items, as having been "unnecessarily and improperly incurred," on the ground that such costs had been proved before him to have been properly incurred:—Held, that the above answers were sufficient. Maw v. Pearson, 3 N. R. 99.

The court will not inquire into the propriety of the master's decision in a case in which he has disallowed certain costs between party and party, as being unnecessarily incurred, and where the attorney subsequently sues his client for the same costs, which are again, on taxation, disallowed. Williams v. Nicholas, 1 D. (N.S.) 840; 6 Jur. 838.

—— False Affidavits.]—The master having been induced by false affidavits to allow a large sum, as the fees and expenses to commissioners named in a commission for the examination of witnesses, which it was suggested had not been paid; the court referred it back to the master, to inquire, by such means as he should think fit, what sums had actually been paid, and to review the taxation if necessary. Barnes v. Attwood, 5 C. B. 164.

—— Solicitor not on Roll.]—Where, after the taxation of the costs of one of the parties of the cause, it appeared that the name of the individual who had acted as his attorney in the action was not upon the roll of attorneys, the court refused a rule to review the taxation, although some of the items allowed by the master were charges for attendances by such pretended attorney. Coles v. Hayman, 8 Jur. 495.

—— Amount.]—The court will not order a taxation to be reviewed where the amount alleged to have been improperly allowed is less than 40s. Newton v. Boodle, 4 C. B. 359.

—— Objection not taken before Master.]—The court will not grant a review of taxation upon a ground which was not specifically presented before the master. Hore v. Saxl, 17 C. B. 599; 25 L. J., C. P. 181. S. P., Pook v. Burrows, 2 D. (N.S.) 378; 7 Jur. 87; Mortimer, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 96; 18 W. R. 367.

—— Error in Calculation.]—The court will order a review of a taxation where the master has clearly made an error of calculation, or in the construction of an order, as to the allocation of costs between the parties. Levett v. Rothwell, 27 L. J., Ex. 6.

Where the master has made a manifest mistake in calculation, or has erroneously allowed or disallowed any item on some supposed rule which does not apply, the court will correct his decision. Knight v. Gravesend Ry., 27 L. J., Ex. 8.

—— Error in Principle.]—The court will not interfere with the taxation of costs, except to correct some error of principle into which the master may have fallen. Burton v. Burton, 29 L. J., Ex. 291. S. P., Mortimer, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 96; 18 W. R. 367.

The court will not ordinarily interfere with the taxation of costs by the registrar unless his decision is shown to have been erroneous in principle. The Neera, 5 P. D. 118; 42 L. T. 743; 28 W. R. 816.

The court will not review a master's taxation of costs unless he has been wrong in principle. Darley v. Nicholson, 1 Con. & L. 391; 2 Dr. & War. 86.

On general exception to report on taxation, referring to a schedule, court will hear exception on principle only. Christy, Ex parte, Barrow, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 102; 2 Deac. 129; 6 L. J., Bk. 68.

Exceptions do not lie to master's report as to costs, nor can there be a re-taxation as to quantum. Irregularity in proceedings, or master acting on mistaken principle, will induce court to interfere. Fenton v. Crickett, 3 Madd. 496.

The master's decision on questions of taxation is final, as to matters of fact and amount of charges, and is only reviewed by the court when the master acts upon a mistaken principle. Alsop v. Oxford (Lord), 1 Myl. & K. 564; 2 L. J., Ch. 174.

In appeals respecting costs the court entertains not only questions whether a principle of taxation was correct or not, but also whether a given principle was applicable or not to the particular items. Newby v. Drew, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 24.

—— Quantum.]—The court will not interfere where an objection is made to the quantum allowed by the master, in his taxation of a solicitor's bill. Stocken v. Dawson, 5 L. J., Ch. 123.

Hearing of Application.]—Upon a rule to rescind an order for a review of the master's taxation, it being objected that neither the rule nor the affidavits upon which it was drawn up disclosed what the taxation was, the court in the exercise of their discretion, under the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 16, and, without imposing any terms, ordered the allocatur to be produced for their inspection. Ashcroft v. Foulkes, 18 C. B. 261; 25 L. J., C. P. 202; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 449; 4 W. R. 457.

On a rule to review a taxation, on the ground of a supposed mistake on the part of the master, it is not competent to the party showing cause to point out counter mistakes to balance the former. Smith, In re, 2 D. & L. 376; 13 M. & W. 477; 8 Jur. 1143.

Costs, when Allowed.]—Where a party applies for a review of the taxation of costs, and the taxation is referred back to the master, he is not entitled to the costs of the rule upon which the review is sought for and obtained. Parsons v. Pitcher, 6 D. P. C. 600; 6 Scott, 298.

Costs of a rule for reviewing a taxation are not given where the mistake is with the master. Ward v. Bell, 2 D. P. C. 76.

No costs are allowed upon a rule made absolute to review the master's taxation. Miller v. Thomson, 4 Man. & G. 260; 11 L. J., C. P. 224.

The costs of an unsuccessful motion to review the master's taxation do not necessarily follow the general costs of the cause. Bartholomew v. Carter, 4 Man. & G. 612; 5 Scott (N.R.) 498.

Where the question as to such taxation involved the construction of a difficult statute, the court discharged the rule to review without costs. Ib.

A petition to review a taxation was successful, but the petitioner, not having taken proper steps to satisfy the taxing master when the matter was in his office, was ordered to pay the costs.

Sturge v. Dimsdale, 9 Beav. 170; 15 L. J., Ch. 124; 10 Jur. 277.

Where exceptions are taken to the master's certificate of the taxation of costs, on the ground that he has not charged the solicitor with all the moneys received by him with which he ought to have been charged, and such exceptions are allowed, and the master directed to review his report, in that respect the court does not give the exceptant the costs of such proceedings, on the ground that they are necessary to correct a mistake, or misapprehension of the master. Wright v. Southwood, 1 Y. & J. 527.

b. What Costs Allowed.

i. Counsel's Fees.

a. Number of Counsel.

General Rule.]—The general rule that, for the purposes of taxation as between party and party, only two counsel can be allowed as against an adverse party, will not be departed from except under very special circumstances. Att.-Gen. v. Munro, 1 Mac. & G. 231.

The general rule is, that the costs of two counsel only are allowed upon a taxation between party and party, the taxing-master's certifying the fact of one counsel being brought specially from another court is not a ground for allowing an extra number. Smith v. Effingham (Earl), 10 Beav. 378; 16 L. J., Ch. 297; 11 Jur. 444.

Where the taxing-master had refused to allow the briefs of more than two counsel, on the taxation of costs between party and party, the master having exercised his discretion by looking into the circumstances of the case, and not having relied wholly on the general rule, the court refused to disturb the certificate. Midland Ry. v. Brown, 10 Hare (App.) xliv.; 22 L. J., Ch. 1092; 17 Jur. 969.

The number of counsel to be allowed is in the (almost uncontrolled) discretion of the master. Lockstone v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 12 C. B. (N.S.) 243.

The master allowed, in the costs of the motion for a new trial, the fee paid to the counsel who led at the trial, and disallowed that paid to the junior counsel:—Held, that, as the leader could not be heard in banc, the fee to him was improperly allowed; and that the fee to the junior, for taking notes, was improperly disallowed. Stewart v. Steele, 5 Scott (N.R.) 517; 4 Man. & G. 669.

The plaintiff had instructed two queen's counsel and a junior to oppose an application for leave to amend on the part of H., one of the defendants, and the other defendants were represented by a junior counsel and supported the plaintiff. The court in ordering H. to pay the costs of the application, allowed the costs of only one counsel on behalf of the plaintiff, and 40*s.* costs to the other defendants. Cargill v. Bower, 46 L. J., Ch. 175: 4 Ch. D. 78; 35 L. T. 621; 25 W. R. 221.

Where a point of law is involved in a cause, two counsel are not an unreasonable number, and the master ought to allow the costs of both, although at the trial it was agreed to turn the facts into a special case. Grindall v. Goodman, 5 D. P. C. 378; W. W. & D. 70; 1 Jur. 55.

In an action to recover 1,000*l.*, involving the character of the parties, a new trial having been granted to the plaintiff on the payment of the costs, and the master having disallowed costs on brief for a second counsel, upon the ground that there were no witnesses in the defendant's brief, the court directed a review of the taxation. Maddison v. Bacon, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 246; 7 Scott, 207; 1 Arn. 487; 3 Jur. 248.

Where nominal damages (exceeding the limit within which the judge's certificate for costs is required) are recovered in an action involving a question of title, the amount recovered cannot be taken as the measure of the importance of the action. The costs of second senior counsel allowed. McBride v. McBride, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 76.

A fee given to senior counsel to plead, the cause was not heard on the day set down. At the next hearing the counsel was from home and another senior was feed. An appeal from the taxing-master allowing both fees was dismissed. Kidd v. Young, 1 W. R. 214.

The fact of a petition being unopposed is not of itself a sufficient reason for the disallowance of the costs of two counsel. Costs of two counsel, upon a petition of a retiring trustee for a reference to appoint a new trustee, and of a petition to confirm the master's report, allowed under the circumstances. Sturge v. Dimsdale, 9 Beav. 170; 15 L. J., Ch. 124; 10 Jur. 277.

Briefs to two counsel, on an unopposed motion made by a trustee, to pay money into court, allowed, upon appeal from the decision of the taxing-master. Stephens v. Newborough (Lord), 11 Beav. 403; 17 L. J., Ch. 332; 12 Jur. 319.

The plaintiff's solicitor employed a queen's counsel and a junior to oppose a motion for further time to answer. The court held that he was justified in so doing, and ordered the taxing-master, who had disallowed the fees of the junior counsel, to review his taxation. Cooke v. Turner, 12 Sim. 649.

If the petition is of a special nature a fee to a second counsel on the hearing will be allowed. Ellis. Ex parte, Musgrove, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 600.

Whether the costs of two counsel retained on behalf of parties having liberty to attend the proceedings, and being in the same interest as the plaintiff, ought to be allowed or not is a question for the discretion of the taxing-master. Webb's Estate, In re, 28 L. T. 726; 21 W. R. 745.

The mere fact of such parties appearing by the same solicitor as the plaintiff is no good reason why they ought to be allowed the costs of a junior counsel only. Ib.

The costs of employing two queen's counsel for the plaintiff at the hearing allowed; the second queen's counsel having drawn the bill when he was without the bar. Carter v. Barnard, 16 Sim. 157; 17 L. J., Ch. 278; 12 Jur. 322.

Two Juniors.]—The fees of two junior counsel engaged in settling defendant's answer will not be allowed. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 21 Beav. 124; 25 L. J., Ch. 122; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1153; 4 W. R. 41. Affirmed, 8 De G. M. & G. 33; 25 L. J., Ch. 322; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219; 4 W. R. 268.

Only one junior counsel allowed as between party and party, except by special leave of the court. Ib.

Costs of two junior counsel allowed. North Eastern Ry. v. Jackson, 22 W. R. 629.

Three Counsel.]—The rule that charges will not be allowed for employing more than two counsel will only be departed from in exceptional circumstances, and in determining whether such circumstances exist the amount of interest which the successful party has in maintaining the suit may be taken into consideration. Smith v. Buller, 45 L. J., Ch. 69 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 473 ; 31 L. T. 873 ; 23 W. R. 332.

The general rule that, upon taxation of costs as between party and party, the briefs of more than two counsel shall not be allowed, is not inflexible. Pearce v. Lindsay, 1 De G. F. & J. 573 ; 8 W. R. 383.

Circumstances under which the costs of a third counsel will be allowed. Betts v. Clifford, 1 John. & H. 74.

Parties employing more than two counsel in equity do so at their own risk ; the costs will not be allowed unless directed by the court. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 21 Beav. 124 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 122 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1153 ; 4 W. R. 41. Affirmed, 8 De G. M. & G. 33 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 322 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219 ; 4 W. R. 268.

The costs of a third counsel of the common law bar disallowed in equity. Flockton v. Peake, 4 N. R. 456 ; 12 W. R. 1023.

A defendant in an action upon a policy of insurance, obtained a rule for a new trial on the payment of the costs of and occasioned by the former trial. The master allowed three counsel : —Held, a proper exercise of discretion. Stewart v. Steele, 5 Scott (N.R.) 517 ; 4 Man. & G. 669.

An arrangement by which a Q. C. retained for one of the defendants for the hearing of an appeal has been transferred to the co-defendants to argue the case for them as leading counsel, does not justify the allowance of three counsel on party and party taxation, although only four counsel were employed between the two sets of defendants, and the hearing of the appeal occupied several days. Merchant Banking Co. v. Maud, 44 L. J., Ch. 581 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 452 ; 32 L. T. 794 ; 23 W. R. 788.

—— Evidence Voluminous.]—In an action for running down a vessel, the plaintiff succeeded. There were eighteen witnesses and the trial lasted four hours. The master allowed three counsel, with fees of 25, 20, and 15 guineas. Review of taxation refused. General Steam Navigation Co. v. Mann, 2 W. R. 154.

Where evidence was voluminous, and required careful consideration, the costs of a third counsel were allowed. Wentworth v. Lloyd, 35 L. J., Ch. 642 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 607 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 581 ; 14 L. T. 751.

—— Case of Difficulty.]—A plaintiff may be allowed for fees to three counsel in a cause of difficulty. Morris v. Hunt, 1 Chit. 544.

In a case of considerable complication, in which charges of fraud were made against the defendant, judgment having been given for him with costs, he was allowed the costs of employing three counsel, though the master had only allowed the costs of two. Kirkwood v. Webster, 47 L. J., Ch. 880 ; 9 Ch. D. 239 ; 26 W. R. 812.

Where costs are awarded upon an application to the Railway and Canal Commissioners, the costs of more than two counsel will not be allowed on taxation between party and party, unless the case involves extraordinary complication and difficulty, and is one in which a reasonable and prudent man, acting with ordinary prudence, would not go into court without three counsel. In applying this latter test, the chance of counsel being absent should not be taken into consideration ; but it should be assumed that all the counsel employed can attend throughout the hearing. The rule laid down by Fry, J., in Kirkwood v. Webster (9 Ch. D. 239) explained. Glamorgan County Council v. G. W. Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 138 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 21 ; 71 L. T. 736 ; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1 ; 59 J. P. 182.

B., a second mortgagee, filed a bill for redemption and foreclosure against F., who held the first and third mortgages on the property. F., by his answer, disputed B.'s security by denying the consideration, and filed a cross-bill for foreclosure impeaching that security. By the decree made in both suits, F.'s bill was dismissed with costs, so far as it sought to set aside B.'s security, and F. was ordered to pay the costs of the first suit, "so far as the same have been increased by the answer of F. impeaching the validity of the security of B." The master held that the costs incurred by B. in proving the consideration, and consequent thereon, were the increase of costs in the first suit which F. was to pay, and that the expense of the hearing must be apportioned according to the number of folios, and that the costs of the second suit must be apportioned. He allowed the costs of three counsel in the second suit on account of the complexity of the case. B. objected to this taxation, and contended that he ought to be allowed all his costs except such as would have been incurred if the suits had been ordinary redemption and foreclosure suits heard as short causes, and that F. ought to have all his costs disallowed, except such as would in that case have been incurred, the difference being attributable to F.'s impeaching B.'s security :—Held, that the master had proceeded on a correct principle. Bigbie v. Fenwick, L. R. 6 Ch. 869 ; 25 L. T. 441 ; 20 W. R. 67.

Held, also, that so much of B.'s bill as was directed to anticipating the objection taken by F.'s answer ought to be dealt with as occasioned by the objection taken in the answer, and that in the other suit regard ought to have been had in taxation to the circumstance that the complexity which justified the allowance of three counsel was owing to B.'s security being impeached. Ib.

—— Questions of Importance.]—In an action to recover 20*l.* the defendant, who pleaded fraud, obtained a verdict. The taxing-master allowed the costs of three counsel upon a motion to set aside the verdict and enter judgment for the plaintiffs, or for a new trial, certifying that he did so having regard to the nature of the case, and the complicated and important questions involved :—Held, that the taxing-master's discretion should not be interfered with. Aaron's Reef v. Twiss, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 242. S. P., L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 60 L. T. 753.

Although two counsel only are heard in the Court of Appeal, the costs of three counsel in that court should be allowed on taxation between party and party where the difficulty and importance of the case render it proper to retain them, particularly in cases where three counsel had been allowed on taxation between party and party in the court below. Robb v. Connor, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 373.

—— Amount claimed.]—A collision occurred between the P. and the M., in consequence of which the P. also collided with the D., doing damage to the latter to the extent of 2,700*l.* The P. and the D. commenced actions against the M.; but the D. stood by until the P.'s action was decided. Three counsel were employed in the action on behalf of the D. :—Held, that, considering the amount of the damage, the allowance of the costs of three counsel was not unreasonable. The Mammoth, 53 L. J., P. 70; 9 P. D. 126; 51 L. T. 459; 33 W. R. 172; 5 Asp. M. C. 289.

—— Length of Hearing.]—A bill having been dismissed with costs, after a hearing of fourteen days' duration, in a suit in which nineteen individuals and two companies—who had to a great extent a common case—were defendants, and some of them had justifiably answered separately, and had severally appeared by three counsel, two only of whom were heard for each defendant or set of defendants; the court refused, in the instance of an individual defendant, to review the taxation whereby the costs of the third counsel were disallowed by the taxing-master as between party and party. Haslam v. O'Connor, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 615. S. P., Merchant Banking Co. v. Maud, supra.

—— Third Counsel after Transfer.]—The action, after a motion for an injunction had been heard before Malins, V.-C., was transferred for hearing to Fry, J.; the defendant therefore retained a third counsel. The taxing-master allowed his costs :—Held, that the costs of such counsel could not be allowed on account of the transfer, and that the weight of the case did not justify such allowance. Mason v. Brentini, 42 L. T. 726.

—— Third and additional Counsel on Appeal.]—On the hearing of an action in the Chancery Division, the plaintiff was represented by four counsel, the defendants by two only. Judgment was then given for the defendants. The plaintiff having given notice of appeal, the defendants retained another counsel, and were represented by him and their former counsel at the hearing of the appeal, which was dismissed with costs. The taxing officer disallowed the fees paid to the additional counsel :—Held, that the case was one in which the court ought not to interfere with the taxing-officer's discretion. Wegmann v. Corcoran, 41 L. T. 792.

—— Junior appointed a Queen's Counsel.]—The mere fact of a junior counsel in a cause having been appointed a Q. C. is not a sufficient reason for allowing the costs of briefs to three counsel. Mem. L. R. 10 Ch. 540.

When a junior counsel who has prepared the pleadings for a party to a cause is called within the bar before the hearing, and after a leader has been retained, then, if the case is of such a description as to make the retaining a leader at that stage of the cause proper, the costs of three counsel at the hearing ought to be allowed. Cousens v. Cousens, 41 L. J., Ch. 166; L. R. 7 Ch. 48; 25 L. T. 719; 20 W. R. 48.

The costs of three counsel allowed where the junior who had drawn the pleadings was called within the bar before the hearing of the cause. Ib.

It is not a matter of course to allow the costs of three counsel in such a case. They ought to be allowed only where the matter is of such a nature that, according to the ordinary practice of litigants, it would have been proper in the first instance to give a retainer to a queen's counsel. Ib.

But when a leader has been employed in a suit but not retained, the costs of employing him as third counsel at the hearing will not be allowed as between party and party, although the junior counsel who drew the pleadings has before the hearing been called within the bar. Betts v. Cleaver, 41 L. J., Ch. 663; L. R. 7 Ch. 513; 27 L. T. 85; 20 W. R. 732.

The costs of more than two counsel disallowed in taxation between party and party, notwithstanding the third counsel was retained after the counsel by whom the pleadings had been drawn had been called within the bar. Green v. Briggs, 7 Hare, 279; 17 L. J., Ch. 323.

Costs of a brief to a second queen's counsel on the hearing of the cause allowed, he having before he had been called within the bar been the junior counsel in the cause. Horsley v. Cox, 38 L. J., Ch. 678; L. R. 7 Eq. 461; 20 L. T. 473; 17 W. R. 603.

Before the trial of an action the junior counsel for the plaintiff was called within the bar; at the trial, which lasted eight days, three counsel were engaged, viz. a leading queen's counsel who had formerly been junior in the case, and a junior. The judge decided in the plaintiff's favour. The taxing-master disallowed the fees of the leading queen's counsel :—Held, that the taxing-master had exercised his discretion rightly, as the case was not one in which it was essentially necessary for the purpose of doing justice between the parties that the plaintiff should employ three counsel. Parish v. Poole, 34 W. R. 365.

The junior counsel who had advised throughout the proceedings taken by a claimant against a company in liquidation, in respect of its breach of contract to purchase his business, having been called within the bar within the hearing of the claim and after a leader had been retained :—Held, that having regard to the length and complication of the case and evidence, the costs of a third counsel as junior counsel at the hearing ought to be allowed. Laffitte & Co., In re, Laffitte's claim, 44 L. J., Ch. 633; L. R. 20 Eq. 650; 33 L. T. 91; 24 W. R. 7

Railway and Canal Commission.]—Where costs are awarded upon an application to the Railway and Canal Commissioners, the costs of more than two counsel will not be allowed on taxation between party and party, unless the case involves extraordinary complication and difficulty, and is one in which a reasonable and prudent man, acting with ordinary prudence, would not go into court without three counsel. In applying this latter test, the chance of counsel being absent should not be taken into consideration; but it should be assumed that all the counsel employed can attend throughout the hearing. The rule laid down by Fry, J., in Kirkwood v. Webster (9 Ch. D. 239), explained. Glamorgan County Council v. G. W. Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 138; [1895] 1 Q. B. 21; 71 L. T. 736; 59 J. P. 182; 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1.

In Arbitrations.]—In cases referred, the rule has been not to allow, on taxation, costs of more than one counsel on each side attending the reference; therefore the court refused to make absolute a rule for the master to review his taxation, allowing only for one counsel, although the case was one of considerable complication. Hawkins v. Rigby, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 271 ; 29 L. J., C. P. 228 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1208 ; 2 L. T. 243.

There is no universal rule that in an arbitration the fees of one counsel only can be allowed. Orient Steam Navigation Co. v. Ocean Marine Insurance Co., 35 W. R. 771.

Writs of Inquiry.]—On taxation of costs on a writ of inquiry, the master should allow only for one counsel, unless in the exercise of his discretion on all the circumstances of the case, including the amount in dispute, he is satisfied that there was more to do in the case than could reasonably be imposed on one counsel only. Reg. Gen., T. T. 1870, June 14. Q. B., Ex. & C. P. ; 22 L. T. 652, n.

Before the promulgation of this rule, there was no inflexible rule as to the number of counsel allowed on taxation. The master had a discretion in the matter, and the court did not interfere with the exercise of that discretion except in extraordinary and glaring cases. Frost v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 39 L. J., Ex. 54 ; L. R. 5 Ex. 201 ; 21 L. T. 757 ; 18 W. R. 351. S. P., Jacobs v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 22 L. T. 651.

Commissions to take Evidence.]—Though the increased expenses occasioned by sending out counsel to act as commissioner in taking evidence abroad will not generally be allowed, yet it may be allowable under the circumstances of a particular case ; and if the master has used his discretion the court will not interfere unless it sees he is clearly wrong. Yglesias v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 39 L. J., C. P. 173 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 141 ; 22 L. T. 269 ; 18 W. R. 381.

On the execution of a commission for the examination of witnesses at Calcutta, in a case of much complication and importance, the master, on taxation of the defendant's costs, disallowed the expenses incurred on his behalf in legal assistance to the commissioners in conducting the viva voce examination of the several witnesses, although the order for the commission provided that "the costs of the order, and of the examination, interrogatories, cross-interrogatories and office copies thereof, and all other costs incidental thereto, should be costs in the cause" :—The court refused to interfere with the master's discretion. Potter v. Rankin, 38 L. J., C. P. 130 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 76 ; 19 L. T. 383.

To entitle a successful party to the costs of the attendance of counsel on a commission to examine witnesses abroad, it must be shewn that the attendance of counsel was necessary for the conduct of the commission. Le Coeq v. S. E. Ry., 6 B. & S. 415; 14 L. T. 401; 14 W. R. 619.

The costs of more than one counsel attending the examination of witnesses before an examiner will not be allowed. Hallows v. Fernie, 17 L. T. 347 ; 16 W. R. 175.

In Chambers.]—Before the 120th Order of May, 1845, the expense of attending the master by counsel was not allowed between party and party, except on reference for scandal. Green v. Briggs, infra.

The costs of counsel in chambers are always understood as being allowed, unless the contrary is expressed. Greville v. Greville, 27 Beav. 596. See now Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 16.

b. What Fees Allowed.

Retainers.]—In taxation between party and party, it is not the practice to allow the common retaining fee to counsel. Green v. Briggs, 7 Hare, 279 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 294. See now Ord. LXV. r. 27 (44).

Special retainer disallowed in the taxation of costs between party and party. Smith v. Effingham (Earl), 10 Beav. 378 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 297 ; 11 Jur. 444.

In taxing the costs of a suit which were to be paid by the defendant a special retainer paid by the plaintiff to the attorney-general, who did not usually practise in the court of chancery, was allowed, although there were no special circumstances which rendered the employing the attorney-general necessary. Nichols v. Haslam, 15 Sim. 49 ; 9 Jur. 649.

According to the ordinary practice of the Admiralty Court, retainer fees for both the leading and junior counsel are allowed on taxation. The Neera, 5 P. D. 118 ; 12 L. T. 743 ; 28 W. R. 816.

Conferences and Consultations.]—The master refused to allow counsel's fees for consultation on a demurrer and costs of a conference concerning special admissions, which saved the necessity of a commission :—Held, that these matters were within the master's discretion, and that he had exercised that discretion properly. Kidston v. Empire Marine Insurance Co., 16 L. T. 286.

In an action a defendant justified under a distress for a fee-farm rent, deducing his title so far back as the reign of Charles II. After issue joined, the plaintiff discontinued :—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to the costs of consultations. Davis v. Hatton, 8 D. P. C. 164 ; 4 Jur. 28.

The master is not at liberty to disallow a charge for a conference, where the solicitor has thought one necessary and paid the counsel's fee, except where a number of conferences has been charged for on the same point. Braund, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 384.

The court refused to allow the fees paid on a second consultation held pending the hearing of the appeal. Weymann v. Corcoran, 41 L. T. 792.

A fee for a conference with counsel allowed, as the solicitor had thereby spared counsel much trouble and been able to give him a more moderate fee on his brief than would otherwise have been the case. Ernest v. Partridge, 2 N. R. 232 ; 8 L. T. 655 ; 11 W. R. 715.

In the absence of sufficient reason, only one consultation ought to be allowed under the 120th Ord. of May, 1845 ; and the taxing-master's certifying the fact of one counsel being brought specially from another court is not a ground for an extra number. Smith v. Effingham (Earl), 10 Beav. 378 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 297 ; 11 Jur. 444.

On taxation of costs, a charge for consulting counsel previously to presenting the petition, if the petition is one of a special nature, ought to be allowed. Ellis, Ex parte, Musgrove, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 600.

When the master has disallowed the fees paid to counsel for a consultation previously to the argument of a rule, the court will not interfere with his decision unless satisfied that he has erroneously exercised his discretion. Smith v. Baker, 28 L. T. 669.

Where no fee is paid to counsel on a consultation, no charge can be allowed to the solicitor for his attendance. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 516.

Where, by arrangement, exceptions to an answer were heard with the cause, a charge for consultation between counsel on the exceptions, as distinct from the consultation on the hearing of the cause, was allowed. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 8 De G. M. & G. 33; 25 L. J., Ch. 322; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219; 4 W. R. 268.

A charge for copies only of those parts of the interrogatories, the answers to which were excepted to, can be allowed for the purposes of the consultation on the exceptions, as distinct from the copies made for the purpose of preparing the answer; for which latter purpose, also, only one copy to one junior counsel can be allowed. Ib.

—— Amount.]—The amount of fees to be allowed for consultations is in the discretion of the taxing-officer, who is not bound to inquire into the length of each consultation and the occasion on which it is held, but who may reasonably take into consideration the number of the consultations which he allows. Railway Commissioners v. O'Rourke, 65 L. J., P. C. 84; [1896] A. C. 594; 75 L. T. 84—P. C.

Opinions.]—The costs of procuring the advice of counsel prior to the institution of a motion are not taxable as party and party costs of the motion; such costs are "preliminary to" not costs "of" the motion. Lynch v. Macan, 26 L. R., Ir. 385.

The costs of procuring the advice of counsel to institute a motion to attach a person for contempt of court are not taxable against such person as party and party costs. Lynch v. Macan, 26 L. R., Ir. 388.

The costs of a case for opinion on evidence will be allowed on taxation as between party and party, though no answer has been filed. Fry v. James, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 255. Contra, Freeman v. Springham, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 197; 32 L. J., C. P. 249; 8 L. T. 428; 11 W. R. 701.

In the course of the cause the opinion of a strange counsel was taken, and the taxing-master allowed only the costs of a short case such as might have been laid before a counsel acquainted with the cause. The court refused to interfere with this discretion, considering it doubtful if, in strictness, the case should have been allowed at all. Newby v. Drew, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 24.

Pleadings.]—The taxing officer has discretionary power to allow, as between party and party, fees to counsel on (a) settlement on writ of summons, (b) settlement of reply, though the latter is simply a joinder of issue on the preceding pleading. Tisdall v. Richardson, 20 L. R., Ir. 190.

On the taxation of a plaintiff's bill of costs (in a suit in which a bill for the production of title deeds had been dismissed), the master allowed charges for the settlement of the answer by the defendant's junior equity counsel, and by his conveyancing council, who was familiar with the defendant's title, and also allowed a charge for an abstract of title laid before the junior equity council for the purpose of preparing the answer, but which abstract did not appear to have been prepared entirely for that purpose:—Held, that these allowances ought not to have been made. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 8 De G. M. & G. 33; 25 L. J., Ch. 322; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219; 4 W. R. 268.

Costs of a conveyancing counsel employed to assist in the preparation of an answer disallowed. Ib.

Fees to two junior counsel (one of them being a conveyancer only) to settle the answer cannot be allowed as between party and party, unless by special order of the court. Ib.

A charge for abbreviating the answer, estimating it at its total length, including schedules, is proper, and to be allowed on a taxation between party and party. Ib.

Instructions.]—In instructing counsel to prepare pleadings, &c., a solicitor is bound to send only copies of deeds, and not the original deeds, which act would be a violation of his duty to his client. The costs of such copies will be allowed on taxation. Beamish's Trusts, In re, 19 W. R. 740.

The costs of a letter of instructions, for the guidance and direction of the commissioners, sent with the commission, were disallowed by the master, but subsequently allowed by the court. Mann v. Harbord, 39 L. J., Ex. 27; L. R. 5 Ex. 17; 21 L. T. 641; 18 W. R. 146.

Settling Affidavits.]—In an exceptional case, a fee to senior counsel for settling interrogatories and affidavits may be allowed. Jessop v. Cusack, 25 L. R., Ir. 244.

Rule 17 of 4th Consolidated Order, empowering the master to consider whether he will allow an affidavit to be settled by counsel, does not take the question of the costs of the affidavit out of the discretion of the court. Davies v. Marshall, 1 Dr. & Sm. 564; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 639; 9 W. R. 756.

Costs of settling affidavit (which was an echo of the bill) by counsel allowed. Ib.

Particulars of Breaches.]—In a patent suit in which the plaintiffs, after the briefs were delivered but before the hearing, took the common order dismissing their bill, with costs:—Held, on taxation of the costs, notwithstanding the judge had not certified what particulars had been proved, that the defendants were entitled to allowances in respect of drawing and settling by counsel particulars of breaches. Batley v. Kynoch, 44 L. J., Ch. 565.

On Briefs.]—In fixing the remuneration of counsel and solicitor and the number of counsel employed, the amount of the money-issue involved and the commercial importance of the case are properly taken into consideration. L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 60 L. T. 753.

—— Separate Proceedings by same Solicitor.]—Where the same solicitor is employed by different persons to conduct proceedings for the same or a similar purpose, he is entitled to such costs as would have been allowed in either action if he had not been engaged in the other, except as regards attendances or other matters which might have been done at the same time in both actions; and if the same counsel appear in both actions they ought in each action to have such fees as if they had not been instructed in the other. Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association, In re, Grieb's Case, 59 L. J., Ch. 532; 45 Ch. D. 606; 62 L. T. 561; 38 W. R. 462. See also ante, col. 715.

—— Amount allowed.]—When, after briefs

had been delivered, the plaintiff's counsel desired to be furnished with a tabulated statement of some of the facts, and the master on taxing his costs as between party and party, in the exercise of his discretion having allowed additional fees to counsel on the delivery of such tabulated statement, a judge ordered the master to review the taxation, and to disallow such additional fees, on the ground that it was not competent to the master to allow such fees where no new matter had been furnished, the court held that the judge had acted on an erroneous principle, and set aside such order. Wakefield v. Brown, 43 L. J., C. P. 222; L. R. 9 C. P. 410; 30 L. T. 428.

The charge to be allowed for counsel's fees for cross-examination will not ordinarily exceed 5*l.* 5*s.* a day after the first, for which a larger fee may be allowed in heavy cases; and where the case is long and complicated, as much as 7*l.* 7*s.* a day may be allowed for the subsequent days. Smith v. Buller, 45 L. J., Ch. 69; L. R. 19 Eq. 473; 31 L. T. 873; 23 W. R. 332.

In estimating the amount of fees to counsel, the taxing-master should always have regard to the difficulty and complication of the questions of law and fact involved in the case and the importance of the result of it to the parties. Robb v. Connor, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 373.

The fees bonâ fide paid by a solicitor to counsel and fairly required by the magnitude or complication of the cause ought not to be reduced, but should be allowed on taxation between party and party. Ib.

The master having reduced counsel's fees, on taxation between party and party, not because the amount was excessive, but because the fee had been increased at the instance of the counsel, the court referred it back to the master to review his taxation as to those items. O'Brien v. Cantwell, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 221.

It would be illegal for the bar, as a body, to fix a minimum fee for any particular class of business; but any individual member of the bar may decline to take a fee less than a certain amount. Ib.

The master, in taxation between party and party, should only allow the usual and accustomed fee payable on each particular class of business, though a larger fee had been paid to counsel. Ib.

One of several defendants appealed, substantially, from the whole decree, and the appeal was dismissed with costs:—Held, on taxation, that the same fees on the plaintiff's briefs which had been allowed on the original hearing ought to be allowed on the appeal. Sturgis v. Morse, 26 Beav. 562.

Held, also, that the length of the interval between the two hearings ought not to vary the amount. Ib.

In an action for damage by collision, where the damage to one vessel amounted to 20,000*l.*, and to the other vessel to 2,000*l.*, three counsel were instructed on behalf of the plaintiffs, and the fees marked on their briefs were respectively seventy-five guineas, fifty guineas, and thirty guineas, and the registrar on taxation reduced these fees to sixty guineas, forty guineas, and twenty-seven guineas. The court, on appeal from the taxation, allowed the original fees, holding that they were proper fees in a case of that magnitude. The City of Lucknow, 51 L. T. 907; 5 Asp. M. C. 340. See General Steam Navigation Co. v. Mann, 2 W. R. 154.

—— Master's Discretion.]—The amount to be allowed for fees to counsel is in the (almost uncontrolled) discretion of the master. Lockstone v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 12 C. B. (N.S.) 243.

The master refused to allow a larger fee to a junior counsel than a nominal one to take notes:—Held, that this was within the master's discretion, and that he had exercised that discretion properly. Kidston v. Empire Marine Insurance Co., 16 L. T. 286.

On an appeal, the taxingofficer allowed for the defendants' two original counsel the same fees as he had been allowed in the court below:—Held, that the court ought not to interfere with the taxing officer's discretion. Wegmann v. Corcoran, 41 L. T. 792.

The court will not interfere with the discretion of the master as to the amount allowed for counsel's fees and refreshers upon a petition against a municipal election, unless it be manifest that he has failed to exercise it in a reasonable manner. Hargreaves v. Scott, 4 C. P. D. 21; 40 L. T. 35; 27 W. R. 323.

The court will not interfere with the discretion of the taxing-master as to the quantum of fees to counsel. Att.-Gen. v. Carrington (Lord), 6 Beav. 454; 12 L. J., Ch. 453.

The court will not entertain an application to review the certificate of the master as to the amount of fees to be allowed to counsel. Parkinson v. Hanbury, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 474; 12 L. T. 624; 13 W. R. 1056.

The Court of Appeal will not interfere with the discretion of the taxing-master as to the amount of counsel's fees. Cousens v. Cousens, 41 L. J., Ch. 166; L. R. 7 Ch. 48; 25 L. T. 719; 20 W. R. 48.

The taxing-master's decision as to the amount of counsel's fees will not be interfered with unless a gross mistake is made. Brown v. Sewell, 16 Ch. D. 517; 44 L. T. 41; 29 W. R. 295.

The rule that the decision of the master is final as to the proper charge for business done, does not apply to counsel's fees on the hearing of an appeal, on the ground that the judge of the court below is better able to decide the question of quantum. Gilbert v. Guignon, 21 W. R. 745.

Term Refreshers.]—Certain refreshers were paid for four terms antecedently to that in which the briefs were delivered; these refreshers were disallowed by the master: the court granted a rule to show cause why the master should not review his taxation. Craven v. Sanderson, 2 Jur. 374.

Refresher fees to counsel are allowable only when the cause is so circumstanced as that it may be called on, and are therefore not allowable when a cause has been ordered to stand over to await the decision of a court of error in another cause involving the same question, and therefore cannot by possibility come on. Hughes v. Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners, 16 L. T. 350.

Refresher Fees — Discretion.]—Under Ord. LXV. r. 27 (48), the taxing-master has a discretion in the special circumstances of the case to disallow refresher fees. Smith v. Wills, 53 L. T. 386; 34 W. R. 30. See Hargreaves v. Scott, supra.

—— Clear Day.]—The trial of an action with witnesses occupied four whole days and about three hours on a fifth day. Subsequently, at the request of the judge, the action was re-heard and evidence given on one point, when the previous judgment was adhered to; this further hearing occupied substantially the whole day. The taxing-master allowed refreshers for the second, third, fourth, and fifth days, but refused to allow refreshers for the re-hearing on the ground that the case had occupied less than five hours on the fifth day:—Held, that the taxing-master ought to have allowed refreshers for the sixth day, and that Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 48, did not prevent him from doing so. Boswell v. Coaks, 35 W. R. 711. Affirmed, 36 Ch. D. 444; 58 L. T. 97—C. A.

When a trial has occupied less than five hours on the first day, but on the second day the five hours are completed and a further period is occupied on that day before the case is concluded, a "clear day" begins after the expiration of the five hours, and refresher fees may be allowed in respect of the further period of work done on the second day, under Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 48. Walker v. Crystal Palace Gas Co. ([1891] 2 Q. B. 300) not followed. The Courier ([1891] P. 355) and Collins v. Worley (60 L. T. 748) approved. O'Hara v. Elliott, 62 L. J., Q. B. 317; [1893] 1 Q. B. 362; 5 R. 205; 68 L. T. 166; 41 W. R. 248.

The taxing officer may allow a refresher fee to counsel where the trial of an action, heard on vivâ voce evidence, has been substantially prolonged beyond five hours, although less than five hours may have been occupied on the first day of the hearing. The Courier, 61 L. J., P. 11; [1891] P. 355; 66 L. T. 386; 40 W. R. 336; 7 Asp. M. C. 157; 55 J. P. 793.

A trial extended over parts of two days, lasting altogether about five and a quarter hours; it occupied less than five hours on each day. Upon taxation of costs as between party and party, the master disallowed a refresher fee to the successful party's counsel in respect of the second day:—Held, that a right to a refresher fee could only arise where the trial had lasted a "clear day" beyond the first five hours, whether "clear day" meant a separate day of the week, or only an additional period of five hours, and that therefore the master was right. Walker v. Crystal Palace Gas Co., 60 L. J., Q. B. 781; [1891] 2 Q. B. 300; 65 L. T. 86: 39 W. R. 716.

The taxing-master, in calculating the five hours referred to in Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 48, is not to deduct the time occupied by the usual midday adjournment of the court. Collins v. Worley, 60 L. T. 748.

—— Argument in Court of Appeal.]—An action was tried before a judge without a jury, and the verdict and judgment were for the plaintiffs. The defendants appealed to the Court of Appeal, in which court the argument lasted for four days, and the Court of Appeal reversed the decision of the judge, and gave judgment for the defendants with costs. On taxation of the costs of the arguments in the Court of Appeal the master refused to allow certain refresher fees to the defendants' counsel in respect of three of the days occupied in arguing in the Court of Appeal, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to allow them, as Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 48, provided for the allowance of refreshers only when a trial was had with vivâ voce evidence. The defendant appealed:—Held, that the master had a discretion, and such arguments were included in the work performed within sub-r. 30 of the same order, and that the matter ought to go back to him to allow the refresher fees if he saw fit to do so. Svendsen v. Wallace, 55 L. J., Q. B. 65; 16 Q. B. D. 27; 53 L. T. 565; 34 W. R. 151.

Where the hearing of an appeal from the Chancery Division occupies more than one day, the taxing-master has a discretion to allow additional fees to counsel, in the shape of a daily allowance or otherwise, though no vivâ voce evidence has been adduced before the Court of Appeal, such fees not being treated as refreshers in the sense in which refreshers are dealt with on taxation as fixed sums, but as an allowance by way of addition to the original fees, on the ground that such fees have by miscalculation been fixed too low. This discretion, however, is to be exercised with jealousy, since there is not in such a case the same difficulty in fixing the proper fee at first as there is in cases where oral evidence is adduced, the probability of a case lasting long in argument being a matter which ought to be taken into account at the time of delivering the brief. Svendsen v. Wallace (16 Q. B. D. 27) explained. Easton v. London Joint Stock Bank, 57 L. J., Ch. 329; 38 Ch. D. 25; 58 L. T. 364; 36 W. R. 375—C. A.

—— Previous Practice.]—Where a master had refused to allow the refresher usual for a queen's counsel:—Held, that this was within his discretion, and that he had exercised that discretion properly. Kidston v. Empire Marine Insurance Co., 16 L. T. 286. See Hargreaves v. Scott, supra.

In the Court of Common Pleas the rule as to the allowance of fees as refreshers, on taxation of costs, is the same as in the Queen's Bench and Exchequer, viz. that such fees when proper may be allowed. Lawrie v. Wilson, 44 L. J., C. P. 87; L. R. 10 C. P. 152; 31 L. T. 688; 23 W. R. 139.

The costs of proceedings in court in the course of which several witnesses were examined vivâ voce, and which involved the question whether a certain person was legitimate, were ordered to be taxed upon the common-law scale, so as to give the equity counsel refreshers for every day after the first day of the hearing as in the case of counsel of the common-law bar. Hill v. Hibbit, 41 L. J., Ch. 703; L. R. 14 Eq. 221; 27 L. T. 334.

On a summons to review the master's certificate, in a suit where all the evidence was written, for disallowing refreshers to counsel in some cases and allowing them in others:—Held, that there is a discretion to allow refreshers where, from the nature of the case, the period of time occupied in the hearing, and the amount of fee originally given with the brief, it appears reasonable to allow further fees, and that the quantum of fees to be allowed is entirely a matter of discretion for the master. Smith v. Daniell, 34 L. T. 899. S. P., Oakley v. Glanpool Slate Co., 1 N. R. 356.

The rule of the common-law courts as to refreshers applies to the hearing of heavy suits in chancery, whether on written or vivâ voce evidence; but the brief fee may fairly be taken to cover two days, after which refreshers should be allowed. Smith v. Buller, 45 L. J., Ch. 69; L. R. 19 Eq. 473; 31 L. T. 873; 23 W. R. 332.

In taxing the costs of an action in the Chancery Division tried on oral evidence, the taxing-master should follow the rule in the Common Law Divisions of allowing refreshers to counsel for every day occupied by a trial beyond one day's time; but where the action is tried on affidavit evidence no refreshers should be allowed. The amount of the refreshers lies in the discretion of the taxing-master, and depends on the fee originally marked on the brief and the nature of the case. The rule in Smith v. Buller (supra), that the criterion for allowing refreshers is the length of the time occupied by the trial, irrespective of the mode in which the evidence has been taken, dissented from. Harrison v. Wearing, 48 L. J., Ch. 365; 11 Ch. D. 206; 41 L. T. 376; 27 W. R. 526.

The taxing officer having disallowed refresher fees to counsel, in a case where the hearing commenced in the afternoon of one day, and was concluded at noon of the next, but the time occupied was less than one day's time, the court refused to interfere with his discretion. The Neera, 5 P. D. 118; 42 L. T. 703; 28 W. R. 816.

When the trial of an action commences on one day and is concluded on the next day, refreshers to counsel will not be allowed unless the trial occupied in the whole more than one day's sitting, i.e. six hours. Brown v. Sewell, 16 Ch. D. 517; 44 L. T. 41; 29 W. R. 295—C. A.

c. Clerks' Fees.

Fees to counsel's clerks are mere gratuities, for which they have no legal demand, and this court has no jurisdiction in respect of such fees as against the clerks. The sum allowed for clerks' fees does not limit the sum which may be spontaneously given, but it does limit the sum which the solicitor can safely pay without the special direction or permission of the client. The Regulation of the 5th November, 1840, (Ordines Can. 157), is not a general order of the court, giving the clerks a legal demand for the fees therein mentioned, but a mere intimation of the opinion of the equity judges that they may be properly allowed in taxation. Cotton, Ex parte, 9 Beav. 107; 10 Jur. 84.

d. Receipt.

The taxing-master ought not to require a receipt stamp to be affixed to counsel's signature to a fee before allowing the charge on taxation. Beavan, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 40; 22 L. J., Ch. 536; 2 W. R. 229.

Payment in respect of counsel's fees should specify the cause, and each particular fee. Payments, except for stated and specific fees for particular matters of business done or to be done, disapproved of. Smith, In re, 4 Beav. 309.

ii. Briefs.

Counsel's Fees on.]—See supra.

After Notice of Trial.]—A plaintiff is not in any case entitled to the costs of preparing for trial, such as instructions for brief, drawing and copying briefs and documents, and advising on evidence, until after notice of trial; and that even though the defendant has obtained repeated orders for time to plead, extending down to five or six days before the commission day, and is under terms to take short notice of trial, or such notice as the plaintiff can give. Freeman v. Springham, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 197; 32 L. J., C. P. 249; 8 L. T. 428; 11 W. R. 701.

Where issue has been joined, but the plaintiff has had leave to add a fresh count, the pleadings to which are not concluded when the action is settled, it is not so clear that the ordinary rule of not allowing costs of briefs, &c., before final joinder of issue does not apply, that the court will interfere to review the master's taxation disallowing those costs: at all events, if he has not merely acted on the rule, but has also exercised his discretion on the whole case. Knight v. Gravesend Ry., 27 L. J., Ex. 8.

The defendant's costs of "preparing for trial" cannot be allowed where a plaintiff discontinues before notice of trial, even though liberty had been reserved to the plaintiff under a judge's order to set down the cause for trial before issue joined and a special jury had been struck. Curtis v. Platt, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 465; 33 L. J., C. P. 253; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 823; 10 L. T. 383.

As a general rule, the costs of preparing briefs for trial cannot be allowed on taxation as between party and party before notice of trial is served. Cordner v. Guedalla, 29 L. R., Ir. 81.

When a consent to judgment is given by a defendant the day after service upon him of notice of trial, the plaintiff is not entitled to the costs of preparing briefs, etc. incurred before service of the notice of trial. Meldon v. Lawless, 18 W. R. 761.

An order for re-hearing was discharged with costs, but in the meantime, the cause had been set down, and briefs delivered:—Held, that the costs thereof could not be included in the order, and could only be given on a re-hearing, or upon special application. Davenport v. Stafford, 9 Beav. 106.

Brief of pleading prepared for counsel after publication and before the cause had been set down, and which became useless in consequence of a compromise before hearing, disallowed on taxation as between solicitor and client. Friend v. Solly, 10 Beav. 329; 11 Jur. 958.

Brief of pleadings made before the case was at issue, disallowed. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

The plaintiff's solicitor is entitled to give out briefs and fees to counsel upon the same day that he sets down the cause to be heard pro confesso. Ivie v. Gahan, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 223.

Where an injunction or receiver is prayed by the bill, the defendants, who are interested in resisting the motion, are entitled to the costs of two briefs on the filing of their answers; but the plaintiff is not entitled to the costs of briefs unless he has moved or served a bonâ fide notice of motion, or unless some act has been done by the defendant after the briefs were bonâ fide made which rendered the notice of motion unnecessary. The bill prayed an injunction, and, upon the coming in of the answer, the solicitor prepared two briefs for the injunction motion. The suit was compromised before the briefs were given out or notice of motion served:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the briefs against the defendant. Broadbent v. Hughes, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 65.

In taxation between party and party, costs of counsels' fees on brief to fix a day for the hearing disallowed. Clarke v. Malpas, 1 N. R. 221.

Documents contained.]—A demurrer having been allowed with costs, the costs of preparing "observations" to counsel's briefs, including marginal notes and an index to the bill, which was very long, disallowed. Ernest v. Partridge, 2 N. R. 232; 8 L. T. 655; 11 W. R. 715.

Costs of drawing observations for counsel, when the cause stood over, allowed. Davies v. Marshall, 1 Dr. & Sm. 564 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 639 ; 9 W. R. 756.

In a bill of costs taken in before the master for taxation, one charge under the title of "observations," of considerable amount, was for copies of certain charters, accompanying briefs to counsel:—Held, that the master was right in allowing the charge. Skinners' Co. v. Irish Society, 1 Jur. 37.

As a general rule, it is improper to introduce, into counsel's briefs, both the original and amended bills. Higgins v. Bateman, 2 Dr. & War. 70.

In an action against a railway company for an injury resulting from the negligence of the company's servants, the court directed that the costs of copying into the plaintiff's briefs the evidence given at an inquest held upon the bodies of other persons who had been killed on the same occasion should be disallowed. Lockstone v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 12 C. B. (N.S.) 243.

When one party, by his pleading, puts in issue documents which the other may reasonably expect will be read in evidence, and he accordingly has them briefed to his counsel, the master ought, in the exercise of his discretion, having regard to the probable materiality and relevancy of those documents to the case as pleaded, to allow the costs of the briefs containing them, if he considers that the party was justified in having them briefed, even though they were not read in the evidence at the hearing. Haslam v. O'Connor, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 615.

In preparing briefs for the hearing, copies of deeds should not be made up into the brief, but should be kept for the use of the court if necessary. The deeds should be briefed independently of such copies. Beamish's Trusts, In re, 19 W. R. 740.

The entry upon the decree, of documents as read at the hearing, does not, upon taxation of costs between party and party, exclude the master's discretion as to disallowing the charges for briefing them to counsel. Murphy v. Nolan, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 498.

A cause having been made a remanet, a correspondence took place between the respective attorneys, with a view to reference, which failed :—Held, that the master exercised a proper discretion in disallowing copies of this correspondence as part of the briefs, in taxing the costs of the cause. Pilgrim v. Southampton and Dorchester Ry., 8 C. B. 25. See Budgett v. Budgett, post, col. 773.

The costs of briefing the proceedings in an action in which a question similar to that in issue was involved disallowed as between party and party. Thompson v. Moore, 25 L. R. Ir. 98.

Diagrams annexed to the margin of copies of the evidence supplied to counsel, illustrative of the subject-matter in dispute, although convenient are not necessary, and the extra costs occasioned thereby will not be allowed in taxation as between party and party. Smith v. Buller, 45 L. J., Ch. 69 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 473 ; 31 L. T. 873 ; 23 W. R. 332.

The court allowed the costs of copies of the transcript of the shorthand writer's notes of the judgment below furnished to the defendants, two original counsel. Wegmann v. Corcoran, 41 L. T. 792.

Under the common order of the Court of Appeal giving the costs of the appeal, and of the shorthand writer's notes of the evidence and of the judgment in the court below, the solicitor of the successful party, when the shorthand notes have been printed in the first instance, is entitled on taxation of the costs to be allowed, in addition to the printer's bill, 3*d*. per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the evidence supplied to each of his counsel on the appeal, and 3*d*. per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the judgment supplied for the use of each judge of the Court of Appeal. Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Loog, 52 L. J., Ch. 288 ; 49 L. T. 484 ; 31 W. R. 392.

Master's Discretion.]—The master having, on a taxation as between party and party, allowed 105*l*. as instructions for brief, though the witnesses were not very numerous, or the brief very long, the court declined to interfere with his discretion, the questions involved in the trial being complicated and difficult. Beaufort (Duke) v. Ashburnham (Lord), 13 C. B. (N.S.) 598 ; 32 L. J., C. P. 97 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 822 ; 7 L. T. 710 ; 11 W. R. 267.

Several Actions.]—Where, in actions on a policy of insurance against several, the attorney had only made out a full brief in one cause, and short statements in the others, but the master allowed for the full briefs in all, the court made a rule for him to review his taxation. Martineau v. Barnes, 1 Tidd's Prac. 666.

Two plaintiffs brought separate actions, and recovered damages against the same defendant, in respect of a distinct inquiry sustained by each of them from the same cause. The same attorney was employed by both plaintiffs, and the briefs in each case were to a certain extent similar. The master, in taxing the plaintiff's costs, treated those portions of the briefs in each action which were similar as a brief and a draft brief, and taxed the costs accordingly. He then added together the costs of such brief and of the draft, and allowed half the aggregate amount to each plaintiff:—Held, that the taxation was wrong, it not being the duty of the master to take into consideration that the same attorney was employed by two parties, unless the actions had been consolidated. Mucklow v. Whitehead, 9 Ex. 384 ; 2 C. L. R. 553 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 97 ; 2 W. R. 172.

A solicitor is entitled to charge for fully instructing every counsel employed at the hearing. Therefore when A. and B. had a common interest in one question at the hearing, and A. only was interested in another question, and the taxing-master disallowed the charges for so much of the briefs to A.'s counsel as related to the former question, the taxation was sent back to be reviewed. Newby v. Drew, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 24.

Abandoned Motion or Discontinuance of Action.]—On an abandoned motion, or on the discontinuance of an action, the costs of all work in preparing, briefing or otherwise, relating to affidavits or pleadings, are allowed, provided, in the opinion of the taxing-master, such work has not been prematurely done. Harrison v. Leutner, 50 L. J., Ch. 264 ; 16 Ch. D. 559 ; 44 L. T. 331 ; 29 W. R. 393.

Further Brief.]—There is no rule which on the taxation of costs as between party and party forbids the allowance of a further fee to counsel on the occasion of delivering a further brief, although such further brief contains no new matter, but only a new arrangement in a more compendious form of matter which was in the first brief. Wakefield v. Brown, 43 L. J., C. P. 222; L. R. 9 C. P. 410; 30 L. T. 428.

Costs of supplemental briefs on petition allowed, where made necessary by opposition of respondents, after expressing their intention not to oppose petition. Stephens v. Newborough (Lord), 11 Beav. 403; 17 L. J., Ch. 332; 12 Jur. 319.

Counsel's Fees on.]—See supra.

iii. For Letters before Writ.

Where a debt is paid before action, a plaintiff cannot recover the costs of his attorney's application. Caine v. Coulson, 1 H. & C. 764; 32 L. J., Ex. 97; 7 L. T. 636; 11 W. R. 239.

An attorney of a creditor retained to demand a debt has no right to insist on payment of any costs of his letter demanding the debt, previously to issuing a writ of summons. Holman v. Stephens, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 124.

A solicitor will not be allowed, on taxation of costs, to charge for more than one letter before action under any circumstances. Capel v. Staines, 2 M. & W. 850; 5 D. P. C. 770; M. & H. 265; 6 L. J., Ex. 212; 1 Jur. 740. See also Morrison v. Summers, 1 D. P. C. 325; 1 B. & Ad. 559; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 13; and Williams v. Barnett, 16 L. T. 672.

iv. Writ of Summons.

Sum Accepted less than that Indorsed.]—Where a sum of money less than the amount of the debt and costs indorsed on a writ of summons has been paid and accepted within four days of the service, the defendant is not entitled to have the costs taxed, unless it distinctly appears that the deduction was from the debt, and not from the costs, or that it was acknowledged on the part of the plaintiff that there was a mistake in the amount of the debt indorsed. Young v. Crompton, 2 D. & L. 557; 10 Jur. 248.

Right to Tax.]—A plaintiff issued a writ of summons indorsed for 7*l.* 7*s.* debt, and 2*l.* costs. The defendant within the four days tendered the 9*l.* 7*s.*, and the plaintiff's attorney offered to take off 2*s.* 6*d.* from the costs, as being too much. The defendant's attorney insisted on his right to a taxation, and took out a summons accordingly, which was dismissed, with costs, on the ground of there being a dispute as to the sum actually paid for costs. The court set aside the judge's order, as the defendant had at all events a right to have the 1*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* taxed. Hunter v. Russell, 5 Man. & G. 601; 6 Scott (N.R.) 627; 12 L. J., C. P. 272.

Debt accepted after Four Days.]—The debt and costs indorsed on a writ of summons were received by a clerk of the plaintiff's attorney after the four days:—Held, that the attorney not having offered to return the money, was not entitled to go on with the action for the recovery of further costs. Holding v. Sturchfield, 7 Man. & G. 957. See also Hoole v. Earnshaw, 39 L. T. 409—C. A.

Service out of Jurisdiction.]—A defendant being out of the jurisdiction, and personally served with a writ of summons, is liable to the expense attending such service or reasonable efforts to serve him, and the question as to the amount must be raised before the master on taxation of costs, with the proper materials for that purpose. White v. Brett, 28 L. J., Ex. 32.

Costs of Two Writs.]—In the taxation of costs, the master is justified in allowing the expenses of two writs issued in one action against the defendant into two counties, where it was doubtful in which county he was to be found. Morris v. Hunt, 1 Chit. 544.

v. Notices of Action.

Costs of—When Allowed.]—A railway company was bound by acts of parliament to charge all persons sending goods by it at equal rates. In an action to recover the difference between the sums charged the plaintiff, and those charged by the company to other persons for the conveyance of goods, it was held that the charges so made must be considered as something done under the act by which they were incorporated, and consequently they were entitled to notice of action, and therefore that the master was right in allowing the plaintiff the costs of a notice of action. The court refused to entertain an objection to the amount of the costs of the notice of action so allowed, as that objection had not been taken before the master. Kent v. G. W. Ry., 4 Railw. Cas. 699; 4 D. & L. 481; 3 C. B. 714; 16 L. J., C. P. 72.

In an action by a carrier against a railway company to recover back exorbitant and unequal charges made upon him for the conveyance of goods, and which action was at the trial referred, the company's act of incorporation requiring that they should have a notice of action, the plaintiff at great labour and expense prepared and delivered a notice, accompanied by voluminous accounts of the several packages upon which the overcharges were alleged to have been made, together with the dates and other particulars. The master having allowed the plaintiff 100*l.* for the preparation of the notice and the accompanying accounts, and 17*l.* for one fair copy only, the court on the plaintiff's motion refused to order a review of the taxation, on the ground that the allowance for preparing the notice was inadequate, and that two fair copies should have been allowed; and afterwards, upon the company's motion, the court directed a review on the ground that the sum of 100*l.* was an excessive allowance, inasmuch as this was an expense necessarily incurred by the plaintiff in preparing himself to bring the action. Edwards v. G. W. Ry., 12 C. B. 419.

vi. On Removal from Inferior Courts.

Ord. LXV. r. 3.

A defendant having removed from a county court, by certiorari, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 38, a plaint for a claim not exceeding 5*l.*, the plaintiff is not bound to follow the action into the superior court; and the defendant, after notice to the plaintiff to declare, is not entitled to sign judgment, and he cannot obtain from the plaintiff the costs of removing the plaint. Garton v. G. W. Ry., 1 E. & E. 258; 28 L. J., Q. B. 103; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 595; 7 W. R. 63.

The court has no power where an action has been removed from an inferior court by certiorari, to order that the defendant shall have his costs, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 86, which enables the court so to order, where satisfied that before action the plaintiff made an affidavit of debt under the defendant's bankruptcy in an unreasonable amount, and has recovered less. Woodall v. Voight, 6 H. & N. 153; 30 L. J., Ex. 31; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1162; 3 L. T. 334; 9 W. R. 57.

The directions to the masters, of H. T., 1853, do not apply to an action commenced in a county court, and removed by a certiorari to a superior court; a plaintiff in such a case therefore is entitled to costs on the higher scale, though he recovers less than 20*l*. Perry v. Bennett, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 402; 33 L. J., C. P. 45.

vii. Costs in the Cause.

What are.]—Costs in the cause mean the costs of all interlocutory proceedings which are not otherwise provided for. Pugh v. Kerr, infra.

The costs of proceedings before the attorney-general for obtaining his fiat to an information and bill are costs in the cause. Att.-Gen. v. Halifax Corporation, 41 L. J., Ch. 100; L. R. 12 Eq. 262; 24 L. T. 655.

A cause having been set down for trial, the defendant obtained a rule to change the venue on payment of the costs incurred. Thereupon the plaintiff withdrew the record; but the defendant not having paid the costs, he again set down the cause, and tried it:—Held, that the costs relating to the abortive attempt at trial were not costs in the cause. Pugh v. Kerr, 8 D. P. C. 218; 6 M. & W. 17; 9 L. J., Ex. 255; 4 Jur. 152.

On an appeal to a judge, from an order of a master, if the judge makes no order about the costs, they will not be costs in the cause, and, therefore, the party finally successful in the cause will not be entitled to them. Mann v. Harbord, 39 L. J., Ex. 27; L. R. 5 Ex. 17; 21 L. T. 436.

By an order made for facilitating the entry of causes for trial in Lancashire, causes for trial at Liverpool were allowed to be entered provisionally at the office of the acting prothonotary and associate at Preston previously to the commission day at Liverpool. The plaintiff entered his cause provisionally at Preston, and afterwards, and before the commission day at Liverpool, an order was made by a judge at chambers for a commission to examine witnesses on the part of the defendants, and for staying the trial till the summer assizes. The cause was provisionally entered for trial at the summer assizes, but the defendants withdrew their pleas before the commission day. On a subsequent taxation of the costs of the c use for the plaintiff, he was held to be entitled to the costs of so provisionally entering the cause. Ib.

A suit was instituted by a person claiming a legal title to land, praying discovery and a delivery up of the title deeds against a person who had the deeds, and merely claimed to hold them as a stakeholder for the person who had the legal title. The bill in that suit also prayed an account against the defendant as agent of the plaintiff. The defendant had not acted in that capacity. The deeds having been brought into court on an interlocutory motion, and another suit having been subsequently instituted, in which the questions as to the title to the lands could be decided, the plaintiff in the first suit offered the defendant to consent that the deeds in court should be transferred to the second suit, and the first dismissed with costs. The defendant having declined to consent, and put the plaintiff upon the terms to bring the first suit to a hearing:—Held, the defendant not objecting to the retention of the deeds in court, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of the suit generally, and not merely to those incurred up to the service of the notice of consent. Whittingham v. Cusack, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 159—C. A.

Where a plaintiff obtains a verdict and the defendant afterwards obtains a rule for a nonsuit or a new trial, and upon cause shown it is ordered by consent that the damages be reduced, but that, on payment of such reduced damages and the taxed costs of the cause, the verdict be vacated, and a stet processus entered, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of opposing the rule as costs in the cause. Delisser v. Towne, 1 Q. B. 333; 4 P. & D. 644.

In trover a verdict was taken for the plaintiff to the full amount of the goods converted, the plaintiff consenting to take them back in reduction of damages, upon its being referred to an arbitrator by order of nisi prius, to ascertain the amount of deterioration, which amount, with the costs of the cause, was to be paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that the expenses of witnesses attending the arbitrator were costs in the cause. Tregoning v. Attenborough, 7 Bing. 733; 5 M. & P. 453; 1 D. P. C. 225.

Where a rule was obtained for referring back to an arbitrator a cause at nisi prius, with directions to him to reduce the damages, or enter a verdict for the defendant, and on which rule the court gave judgment that the verdict ought to be reduced:—Held, that the costs of this rule were properly taxed as costs in the cause. Goodall v. Ray, 1 H. & W. 333; 4 D. P. C. 1.

Where a defendant entered into an agreement with the plaintiff in writing, but not stamped, and the plaintiff's attorney engrossed a copy thereof, and before action tendered the same, properly stamped, to the defendant, which he refused to sign; the court directed the master to include the costs of stamping the agreement in the costs of the action. Bowen v. Pitman, 2 Esp. 728.

The plaintiff's costs of obtaining an order for the investment of money are costs in the cause. Brennan v. Nolan, 1 Hog. 130.

When on an interlocutory application the costs are reserved to the hearing, and the bill is afterwards dismissed, with costs, for want of prosecution, the costs of such interlocutory application cannot be obtained. It is therefore sometimes useful, upon interlocutory applications, for the defendant to ask that the costs may be reserved to the hearing or further order, or else that they may be made the costs in the cause. Rumbold v. Forteath, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 608.

The plaintiff obtained an order to set aside the appearance of a minor, and that the minor should appear and answer by the officer. The uncle of the minor afterwards obtained an order to set aside the first order, and that the minor should be at liberty to appear and answer by him as his guardian:—Held, that he was not bound to pay the costs in the first order, but that they were costs in the cause. Wallen v. Barry, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 124.

Cause a Remanet.]—In an action of trespass, the defendant pleaded four pleas, upon which issues were joined. The cause was entered for trial at the assizes, and made a remanet. He afterwards obtained an order to amend one of the pleas, and the cause was tried at a subsequent assizes, when a verdict was found for him on the amended plea (which covered the whole cause of action), and for the plaintiff on the other pleas:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the remanet. Waller v. Blacklock or Warner, 4 D. & L. 4; 15 M. & W. 715; 15 L. J., Ex. 333; 10 Jur. 716.

The costs occasioned by the cause being a remanet are costs in the cause, not taxable, as costs of the trial, on a rule for a new trial on payment of costs. Bentley v. Carver, 2 C. B. 817; 15 L. J., C. P. 173.

Costs are allowed when a cause goes off and remains to be tried for want of jurors. Sparrow v. Turner, 2 Wils. 366.

After verdict, the party succeeding is entitled to the costs incurred at a former assizes, when the cause, from press of business, was made a remanet. Standen v. Hall, 1 Ld. Ken. 338.

viii. Copies.

Necessary or Proper.]—An order had been made by the Court of Appeal on the application of the defendants directing part of an affidavit to be struck out as scandalous and giving the defendants the costs of the application. Among the items in the bill of costs of the defendants were charges for four copies of the pleadings, one for the use of counsel and three for the use of the judges of the Court of Appeal. The taxing master, without entering into the consideration of the question whether the copies were necessary for the purpose of the application, disallowed them on the ground that it was the general rule not to allow the costs of copies of pleadings on an interlocutory application:—Held, that no such general rule as was alleged to exist in the taxing master's office could be sustained; that it was the duty of the taxing master, under the Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), r. 26, to consider in each case whether the copies were "necessary or proper for the attainment of justice," and that as the copies in the present case were necessary for the hearing of the application, the costs of them must be allowed. Warner v. Mosses, 51 L. J., Ch. 86; 19 Ch. D. 72; 45 L. T. 359.

Copy Correspondence.]—The costs of a proper copy of the correspondence for the use of the judge and counsel should be allowed on taxation, where the merits of the case turn on the correspondence. Budgett v. Budgett, 64 L. J., Ch. 209; [1895] 1 Ch. 202; 13 R. 1; 71 L. T. 632; 43 W. R. 167.

—— Accidental Destruction.]—The papers in the suit were accidentally burnt in the offices of the relator's solicitor, and new copies became necessary for the hearing of the cause. A decree was afterwards pronounced against the defendant, with costs as between party and party:—Held, that the extra costs occasioned by the accident ought not to be borne by the defendant. Att.-Gen. v. Kerr, 3 Beav. 425; 10 L. J., Ch. 177; 5 Jur. 863.

—— Whole or Part.]—In allowing the costs of attested copies, it is discretionary with the taxing master whether he will allow for the copy of the whole or a part only of a document. Clanmorris v. Mahon, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 144.

—— Provided for the Court.]—The costs of copies of deeds or documents not actually read at the hearing, but furnished by the parties to the court, are not allowed where they are personal costs, and do not come out of a fund. Bozon v. Williams, 3 Y. & J. 378.

The costs of all copies of documents, which are required by the judge for his assistance in hearing the cause, are costs in the cause. Small v. Attwood, 1 Y. & Coll. 53; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 1.

—— Pleadings.]—Where any of the plaintiffs in a suit live in the country, close copies of the answer will be allowed, and the costs of them will be costs in the cause. Ib.

If upon a motion by the plaintiff, grounded upon the defendant's answer, documents therein shortly stated have been read from copies in which they are set out at length; an order dismissing the motion with costs, will not entitle the defendant to the costs of such copies. Skinners' Co. v. Irish Society, 1 Myl. & C. 162.

On a summary application by injunction, the court will direct the costs of a written bill to be allowed, unless it is shown that such additional expense has not been incurred bonâ fide. Elt v. Islington Burial Board, 2 Eq. Rep. 1089; 2 W. R. 584.

An order for taxation of costs having been made in a suit, in which three copies in writing of the bill had been served, and the master, in the absence of any special direction in the decree, having refused to allow the costs of these:—Held, that the omission to ask for them at the hearing being by inadvertence, the costs of these bills might be allowed; but the costs of the motion refused, it arising out of the negligence of the party himself. Hewitt v. White, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 46; 13 L. T. 787; 14 W. R. 220.

—— Conferences with and Instructions to Counsel.]—See supra.

Prints of Record in another Action.]—A collision occurred between the P. and the M., in consequence of which the P. also collided with the D. The P. and the D. commenced actions against the M.; but the D. stood by until the P.'s action was decided. In the P.'s action the M. was found alone to blame. Prints of the evidence taken in the P.'s action were obtained by the solicitors for the D. from the solicitors for the P., and were used in the action by the D. against the M.:—Held, that the solicitors for the D. were entitled to charge the defendants 3*d.* per folio for the prints of the record. The Mammoth, 53 L. J., P. 70; 9 P. D. 126; 51 L. T. 459; 33 W. R. 172; 5 Asp. M. C. 289.

—— Evidence.] — The appellants from an order on a claim in a winding up gave notice to read a mass of affidavits made in the winding up but not used on the hearing below. The respondent objected to their being admitted, but took copies. The court of appeal confined the argument in the first instance to a question not affected by these affidavits, and being against the appellants on that question, dismissed the appeal with costs, so that the question as to the admissibility of the affidavits was not decided. The respondent applied to have the affidavits entered in the order, as otherwise he would not be able to get the costs of having taken copies:—Held, that the application could not be granted, and that the respondent ought not to have taken copies unless and until the court held the evidence admissible, in which case it would have given him time to enable him to meet it. Brampton and Longdown Ry., In re, Shaw's claim, L. R. 10 Ch. 186; 33 L. T. 5; 23 W. R. 813.

A deposition of a witness, taken in the court of bankruptcy for one purpose, and filed, may be used against him as an admission in any other proceeding in the matter of the same bankruptcy. Hall, Ex parte, Cooper, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 556; 19 Ch. D. 580; 46 L. T. 549.

But when a party to an application in the court of bankruptcy gives notice to his opponent of his intention to use as evidence on the hearing of the application a deposition which is on the file, though it was originally taken for another purpose, he ought not to serve his opponent with a copy of it, and if he does so, he will not, though successful on the application, be allowed the costs of the copy thus served. Ib.

Semble, per curiam. With regard to the costs of the copies of the deposition which were supplied for the use of the respondent's counsel, we think that in the present case those costs should be allowed. It must not be supposed that we should in all cases allow such costs, we might in some cases allow only the costs of making extracts. Ib.

—— Shorthand Notes.] — See APPEAL — EVIDENCE.

—— Interrogatories.]—A charge for copies only of those parts of the interrogatories, the answers to which were excepted to, can be allowed for the purposes of the consultation on the exceptions, as distinct from the copies made for the purpose of preparing the answer; for which latter purpose, also only one copy to one junior counsel can be allowed. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 8 De G. M. & G. 33; 25 L. J., Ch. 322; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219; 4 W. R. 268.

—— Where same Solicitor.]—It would appear to be the settled practice, that where the same solicitor acts for both the plaintiff and the defendant in a cause, not to allow copies to be taken by one party of documents brought into chambers by the other. Sharp v. Wright, L. R. 1 Eq. 631; 14 L. T. 246; 14 W. R. 552.

A firm of solicitors acting for a number of sets of persons (five in all) interested in moneys secured upon mortgage, on the mortgage being paid off, in their bill of costs charged the executors of the mortgagor with the costs of five copies of the draft deed of transfer, and the taxing-master having disallowed the charge for four such copies:—Held, that the taxing-master was right in allowing the costs of only one copy. Wade and Thomas, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 601; 17 Ch. D. 348; 44 L. T. 599; 29 W. R. 625.

Where the same solicitor is employed by different persons to conduct proceedings for the same or a similar purpose, he is entitled to such costs as would have been allowed in either action if he had not been engaged in the other, except as regards attendances or other matters which might have been done at the same time in both actions. Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association, In re, Grieb's case, 59 L. J., Ch. 532; 45 Ch. D. 606; 62 L. T. 561; 38 W. R. 462.

—— Charge for.]—A defendant's solicitor, who himself furnishes copies of documents which the plaintiff has a right to take under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, ss. 18, 20, will not be permitted to charge for them at the rate of 4*d.* per folio, but will be allowed only stationer's charges actually incurred. Kennedy v. George, Honnor, In re, 6 W. R. 218.

The sums paid for office copies of answers at 4*d.* per folio, and for ordinary printed copies at ½*d.* per folio, are payable to the defendant, and when received by his solicitor must be applied in reduction of the cost of printing the answer. Att.-Gen. v. Etheridge, 32 L. J., Ch. 706; 9 L. T. 314; 11 W. R. 927.

A solicitor is not entitled to charge at the rate of fourpence per folio for documents existing in print prior to the institution of a suit, though the documents may have been properly used for the purposes of the suit. Underwood v. Secretary of State for India, 19 L. T. 270; 16 W. R. 926.

Under the common order of the court of appeal giving the costs of the appeal, and of the shorthand writer's notes of the evidence and of the judgment in the court below, the solicitor of the successful party, when the shorthand notes have been printed in the first instance, is entitled on taxation of the costs to be allowed, in addition to the printer's bill, 3*d.* per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the evidence supplied to each of his counsel on the appeal, and 3*d.* per folio for one printed copy of the shorthand notes of the judgment supplied for the use of each judge of the court of appeal. Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Loog, 52 L. J., Ch. 288; 49 L. T. 484; 31 W. R. 392.

When allowed.] — The costs of perusals of exhibits to affidavits are not allowed on taxation under the Rules of Court, August, 1875 (Costs), Ord. VI., without a special direction to the taxing-master, who by the form of order has liberty to allow a special charge for perusal and consideration of the exhibits, the amount of such charge, if any, to be in his discretion. De Rosaz, In re, Rymer v. De Rosaz, 53 L. J., Ch. 448; 24 Ch. D. 684; 49 L. T. 133.

Where depositions have been taken abroad, a reasonable allowance should be made to the solicitor in England for perusing them. Wentworth v. Lloyd, 33 L. J., Ch. 642; L. R. 2 Eq. 607; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 581; 14 L. T. 751.

A demurrer to the whole bill having been allowed with costs:—Held, that the solicitor for the defendant was not entitled to fees for perusing interrogatories (so as to render the plaintiff liable to the costs of a double defence by demurrer and answer), for drawing an index and marginal notes to the bill (which are of extraordinary length and complication), for the assistance of counsel, or for drawing observations for counsel's brief to argue the demurrer. Ernest v. Partridge, 2 N. R 232; 8 L. T. 655; 11 W. R. 715.

A similar affidavit was filed by a plaintiff in each of several suits. The solicitor for the defendants took an office copy of the affidavit in one suit only, and examined at the record office the affidavits in the other suits:—Held, that he was not entitled to charge for perusing the affidavits in the other suits. Betts v. Cleaver, 41 L. J., Ch. 663; L. R. 7 Ch. 513; 27 L. T. 85; 20 W. R. 732.

x. Attendances.

Country Solicitor at Trial.]—In taxing costs between party and party a charge for the attendance of the country solicitor at the hearing in London is discretionary. Where in admiralty cases the attendance of the country solicitor, who has taken the examination of the witnesses and managed the proceedings up to the trial, is necessary for the proper conduct of the case, his charges for such attendance ought to be allowed.

The Soto, 62 L. J., P. 17; [1893] P. 73; 1 R. 579; 69 L. T. 231; 41 W. R. 479; 7 Asp. M. C. 335.

Costs of attendance of the country solicitor in a country cause, where witnesses were cross-examined in court, disallowed in a taxation between party and party. Clark v. Malpas, 31 Beav. 554; 1 N. R. 221; 32 L. J., Ch 313; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 612; 7 L. T. 659; 11 W. R. 251.

When on the trial of a cause in London, the country as well as the London attorney attends, the rule that the costs of the attendance of the country attorney will not be allowed is not inflexible, but the master should decide in the exercise of his discretion, whether, under all the circumstances of the case, such attendance was necessary. Bell v. Aithin, 37 L. J., C. P. 168; L. R. 3 C. P. 320; 18 L. T. 363; 16 W. R. 704. S. P., Parsloe v. Foy, 2 D. P. C. 181; Archer v. Marsh, 7 D. P. C. 541.

The master, on taxation of the defendant's costs in an action on a policy, where the questions to be tried were admitted to be extremely difficult and complicated, having declined to allow the expenses of the attendance at the trial in London, and on a motion, of the managing clerk of the defendant's attorney, who had had the entire management of the cause, the court refused to interfere. Potter v. Rankin, 38 L. J., C. P. 130; L. R. 4 C. P. 76; 19 L. T. 383.

The plaintiff having brought an action for 1,000*l.* involving the character of the parties, review of taxation granted where the taxing-master had disallowed the attendance of the defendant's solicitor in London. Maddison v. Bacon, 5 Bing. (N. C.) 246; 7 Scott, 207; 1 Arn. 487.

On Motion.]—Only one fee is allowed to a solicitor for attendance on a motion. Doolan v. Tebeaudo, 2 Jones, 314.

Where a motion to dismiss stood over for a space of time, including fifty-three motion days, the defendant's solicitor being unable to swear that he actually attended in court upon such motion days, the taxing-master allowed him costs for ten attendances only, and the vice-chancellor on petition confirmed this order Hollocombe v. Hollocombe, 17 Jur. 362; 1 W. R 160.

On Commission.]—Costs of solicitor attending execution of commission abroad. Hamond v. Wordsworth, Dick. 381.

The costs of a London attorney attending the execution of a commission for the examination of witnesses in the country, may, under special circumstances, be allowed on taxation of costs between party and party. Howell v. Tyler, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 284; 12 L. J., Ch. 223; 7 Jur 525.

Undertaking to Appear.]—Costs of attending the defendant's solicitor for undertaking to appear were allowed. Davies v. Marshall, 1 Dr. & Sm. 564; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 669; 9 W. R. 756.

At Chambers.]—Where one solicitor attends in chambers for two parties in different interests the costs of one attendance only will be allowed. Brown v. Gellatly, 16 L. T. 553; 15 W. R. 887.

At Consultation.]—Where no fee is paid to counsel on a consultation, no charge can be allowed to the solicitor for his attendance. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 516.

Of Solicitor and Clerk at Examination.]—The attendance of a solicitor's clerk in addition to the solicitor himself, on cross-examination before the examiner, is unnecessary and unusual, and the costs of such attendance will be disallowed in taxation. Smith v. Buller, 45 L. J., Ch. 69; L. R. 19 Eq. 473; 31 L. T. 873; 23 W. R. 332.

On Accountant Examining Books.]—An accountant having been employed, by desire of the arbitrator, to examine the accounts of one of the parties at their counting-house, by which means much time and expense were saved, and the attorney of the other party having attended these investigations at the counting-house, the master, in taxing the latter party's costs, disallowed the charges for such attendances: the court made absolute a rule for the master to review the taxation in this respect. Hawkins v. Rigby, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 271; 29 L. J., C. P. 228; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1208.

On Filing Affidavits.]—Only one 6*s.* 8*d.* is allowed for filing several affidavits at the same time; if filed at different times, even on the same day, it depends on the circumstances what attendances are allowed. Christy, Ex parte, Barrow, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 95; 2 Deac. 119; 6 L. J., Bk. 68.

xi. Improper, Vexatious, or Unnecessary Proceedings.

See Order LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 20.

Infringement of Patent—Particulars of Objections.]—Where in a patent action the defendant pleaded no infringement of the plaintiff's patent, and that it was invalid, and delivered particulars of objections to the validity of the patent, and the action was dismissed on the ground of no infringement, and the question of the validity of the patent was not considered by the court, the disallowance by the taxing-master of the defendant's costs of his particulars of objections to the validity of the patent, on the ground that there was no certificate that the particulars were reasonable and proper as required by the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883, s. 29, sub-s. 6, is not such a disallowance of the costs under Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 20, as to give the taxing-master jurisdiction to deal with the costs occasioned to the plaintiff by these particulars In such a case the plaintiff ought, if he desires to raise the point, to ask the judge to direct the taxing-master to see whether, by reason of any proceedings which have been improperly, vexatiously, or unnecessarily taken by the defendant, he has been put to extra costs, and to tax these costs and to allow them. Garrard v. Edge, 59 L. J., Ch. 379; 44 Ch. D. 224; 62 L. T. 510; 38 W. R. 455—C. A.

Vexatious Proceedings.]—Where costs are vexatiously and improperly incurred by a successful party, and can be clearly distinguished from the rest, the court will make a provision for them; otherwise they must be left to the master. Farrow v. Rees, 4 Beav. 25.

The master, to whom it was referred, reported the proceedings under a commission for examination of witnesses irregular; on exceptions, the court thought them regular, and allowed the exceptions, and the party who succeeded had his costs of the application. Order for costs discharged because the plaintiff's was not a vexatious proceeding, but in the master's opinion, well founded; and the rule is not to give costs but where no just ground appears for the proceeding. Anon., 3 Atk. 235.

Mortgagee, on bill to redeem, insisted heir-at-law was living. Master twice reported him dead, and exceptions were twice taken thereto, and issue at law was directed, by which he was also found to be dead. Mortgagee not to pay costs of issue, as it was not vexatious, so long as court thought necessary to direct issue. Wilson v. Metcalf, 3 Madd. 45; 18 R. R. 193.

Plaintiff's father died intestate; the mother administered; forty years after the father's death, the son, who had accepted a legacy under the mother's will equal to two-thirds of what his father left, brings a bill against the mother's executor to account for the father's personal estate come to her hands. Bill dismissed with costs, to deter others from such frivolous suits. Huet v. Fletcher, 1 Atk. 467.

In a frivolous suit, costs given to neither side. Clark v. May, 16 Beav. 273; 22 L. J., Ch. 302; 1 W. R. 69.

Where defendant will not admit a general right, but puts plaintiff to proof of it, he shall pay costs of suit. Trinity House v. Ryall, 2 Bro. P. C. 389.

Although there is no rule that in every instance in which a defendant takes several grounds of defence, one tenable and successful, the rest doubtful or invalid, that circumstance ought to avail the plaintiff on the subject of costs, yet where, upon the evidence, the plaintiff's case failed absolutely and wholly as a case for equitable relief, but the defendant had in the suit endeavoured to support claims without any just foundation, and had vexatiously disputed the legal title of the plaintiff:—Held, that the bill ought to be dismissed without costs. Clowes v. Beak, 2 De G. M. & G. 731.

A debtor who, not being satisfied as to the title of his creditor, compels him to bring an action to prove it, is liable to pay the costs Matthew v. Northern Assurance Co., 47 L. J., Ch. 562; 9 Ch. D. 80; 38 L. T. 468; 27 W. R. 51.

When a plaintiff fails in establishing a case for relief, the uncertain character of the evidence on which the case turns, and the setting up of unfounded claims by the defence, are grounds for dismissing the bill without costs. Pitts v. Kingsbridge Highway Board, 25 L. T. 195; 19 W. R. 884.

Costs not always to follow the event of the cause, as where, though money was found due to the defendant upon account, yet it appearing to be much less than had been claimed by the defendant's answer; in that case the defendant was allowed no costs. Att.-Gen. v. Brewers' Co., 1 P. W. 376.

If lands have been sold under a decree, and judgment creditors, knowing that they have no chance of the fund reaching them, render it necessary to file a supplemental bill against them, they will not get their costs in that suit; and semble, they will be obliged to pay the costs occasioned by such vexatious conduct. Jarrett v. Berwingham, Sau. & Sc. 419. And see S. C., 1 Ir. Eq. R. 417.

When a multiplicity of actions has been brought where the custom might have been tried in one, it is such a vexation that the plaintiff in equity shall have the costs both in law and equity. Coddington v. England, 2 Atk. 167.

Under an Act of Parliament, a corporation took lands for public purposes. The act empowered the court to order the costs, charges, and expenses of re-investing the compensation-money to be paid by the corporation. On a fourth application to re-invest the residue, amounting to 63*l.*:—Held, that the proceeding was not so vexatious as to disentitle the party to the costs. Merchant Taylors Co., In re, 10 Beav. 485.

Irrelevance—Misconduct—Scandal.]—Where a petition contained personal and irrelevant charges against the respondent, the husband of the petitioner, the next friend was ordered to pay so much of the costs on both sides as were properly occasioned by the introduction of such charges into the petition. Wills' Trust, In re, 3 N. R. 107.

When charges of misconduct are introduced into a bill, and are denied by the answer and then withdrawn, the court will, at the hearing, make an order for payment by the plaintiff of all the costs occasioned by such unfounded charges, without any special application for the purpose. Finch v. Westrope, 40 L. J. Ch. 441; L. R. 12 Eq. 24; 24 L. T. 412; 19 W. R 672.

Where a bill contains scandalous imputations on the character of the defendant, the defendant will not subject himself to the payment of costs by answering such imputations, although he objects at the same time to the introduction of the matter so answered on the ground of irregularity in point of pleading. Wray v. Hutchinson, 2 Myl & K. 235; 3 L. J., Ch. 62.

Prolixity and Unnecessary Matter.]—Additional costs of long amendments, granted. Rowe v. Stuart, Dick. 58.

Where the bill prayed a sale, and account and payment of prior contemporaneous incumbrances, and a prior elegit creditor had put in an answer of unreasonable length, the court directed that the remembrancer should, in taxing the costs, have regard to the length of the answer. O'Brien v. O'Brien, Jon. & C. 193.

In a suit for tithe composition, all the defendants appeared by the same attorney, and such of them as were tenants from year to year answered the bill separately at length. The court, upon motion, permitted the plaintiff to dismiss his bill against those defendants, upon payment of costs; and directed the officer, in taxing the costs, to disallow the costs of any answer, or part of any answer, which should appear to have been improperly and unnecessarily filed. Armstrong v. Bannon, 2 Jones, 538.

Where the bill was dismissed with costs, the court referred it to the master to inquire what parts of a cross-bill were of unnecessary length, and the costs thereby occasioned. Woods v. Woods, 5 Hare, 229.

Where, in an unopposed petition, unnecessary statements were introduced, the court directed the taxing master, on taxing the costs, to have reference to such statements. Hyder v. Coleman, 21 L. J., Ch. 592.

Where a petition was presented to the court of vexatious length, the court directed the master, in taxing the costs, to have regard to the length of the petition. Canning v. Bell, 13 L. J., Ch. 304.

The plaintiff, in a supplemental bill, set out at considerable length the statement of the original bill:—Held, that he ought to pay the costs of any unnecessary statements, to be determined by the master. Horsley v. Fawcett, 11 Beav. 565.

The costs of an unnecessarily long petition will be limited to ten guineas. Bourne v. Buckton, 36 L. J., Ch. 792.

Impertinent Matter.]—The court will, on the hearing of a cause, decide the question whether the pleadings contain any impertinent matter, and will order a direction to be inserted in the decree, that the taxing master, in taxing the costs, shall have regard to the matter so decided to be impertinent. Stephens v. Lawrie, 12 L. J., Ch. 71.

Vexatious Pleading.]—Where, in a foreclosure suit, a defendant, who had answered, and who had been called upon to answer the amended bill, stated in his further answer, that, having regard to his former answer, it was unnecessary and vexatious to call upon him to answer the amended bill; and that the costs of such answer ought, without reference to the result of the suit, to be paid by the plaintiff; the court ordered such costs to be taxed and paid by the plaintiff, and not to be allowed to him as part of his costs Cocks v. Stanley, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 942; 6 W. R. 45.

Where no objection had been taken by another defendant, required under similar circumstances to put in a further answer, the court refused to make any order. Ib.

Where bill had been amended three times, and the two last were by the negligence or error of plaintiff, the defendant was allowed extra costs of those latter amendments. Watts v. Manning, 1 Sim. & S. 421.

Special direction to taxing master to see whether matter had been properly introduced by amendment, and to charge the plaintiff therewith. Burchell v. Giles, 11 Beav. 34

Directions given to the master, that in taxing the costs he should, under r. 9, Order XL., strike off such parts of the costs as might have been occasioned by an improper mode of framing the pleadings and the affidavits on both sides. Hanslip v. Kitton, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 835.

Trustee who had not acted, putting in a full answer, disallowed the costs of such vexatious answer, and order made at the hearing to tax him with the costs only of such an answer as would have been necessary and proper. Martin v. Persse, 1 Moll. 146.

Plaintiff filing bill, and after answer amending bill, so as to make case quite reverse, ordered that he pay costs of original bill, and parts of answer set forth by reason of that bill, and costs of the motions as a vexatious proceeding. Mavor v. Dry, 2 Sim. & S. 113.

A bill was filed for a foreclosure of a mortgage, and for a transfer of a sum of stock. On the answer being filed, disclosures were made which rendered it advisable to amend the bill by striking out all that related to the mortgage, and thereby nearly one-half of the bill, and answer was rendered useless; the court, however, refused to order, on motion, the plaintiff to pay the defendant's costs occasioned by the amendment, as it appeared that the amendment was made under the advice of counsel, and not for the purpose of vexation or oppression. Monck v. Tankerville (Earl), 10 Sim. 284; 8 L. J., Ch. 368; 3 Jur. 1167.

A plaintiff having by an amended bill abandoned part of the relief prayed by his original bill, the court referred it to the Master, upon motion by the defendant, to tax the additional costs which had been occasioned by so much of the plaintiff's claim as had been so abandoned, and ordered the costs when taxed to be paid by the plaintiff. Strickland v. Strickland, 3 Beav. 242; 9 L. J., Ch. 392.

If a defendant disclaims generally, and the plaintiff replies to her answer, and serves her with a subpœna to rejoin, she is entitled to have costs against him for the vexation. Williams v. Longfellow, 3 Atk. 582.

Unnecessary Proceedings.]—As a general rule, the costs of the cause should follow the result of the cause; but an exception will be made where a party has established his object by means of an unnecessary degree of litigation. Millington v. Fox, 3 Myl. & C. 338.

Where plaintiff not only failed to establish his case by evidence, but also encumbered the suit with an unnecessary multitude of witnesses, and with a body of very irrelevant depositions, he must pay the cost of the depositions, although the bill, not being vexatious, was dismissed without costs, as to the rest of the cause. Moore v. M'Kay, Beat. 282.

Plaintiffs filing unnecessary affidavits ordered to pay the defendants' costs occasioned thereby. Att.-Gen. v. Halifax Corporation, 18 W. R. 37.

A wrongdoer cannot be heard to complain that in proceedings hurriedly taken to stop the wrong the plaintiff has not accurately stated his title, and in such a case the defendant will not be relieved from the payment of the extra costs occasioned by the plaintiff's mistake as to his title. Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 5 Ch D. 750; 36 L. T. 684; 25 W. R. 802.

When a defendant on motion for an injunction gives an undertaking and agrees to pay all costs, the plaintiff will not obtain the costs of going on to trial. Hudson v. Bennett, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 519; 14 L. T. 698; 14 W. R. 911.

Where, under an order directing an account of what was due to a party in respect of costs of proceedings taken by him to enforce a judgment in the Exchequer Division, the taxing-master to whom the bill of costs was referred disallowed the costs of certain abortive garnishee summonses. On a summons to review the taxation:—Held, that the taxing-master was not precluded by the form of order from disallowing any costs that he thought proper, and that, under Rules of Court, 1875 (Costs), Ord. VI. r. 26, he was bound to do so; also that the costs in question were properly disallowed. Simmons v. Storer, 49 L. J., Ch. 121; 14 Ch D. 154; 42 L. T. 291; 28 W. R. 408.

Where the bill was dismissed with costs, the court referred it to the master to inquire what parts of a cross bill were of unnecessary length, and the costs thereby occasioned. Woods v. Woods, 5 Hare, 229.

One of two tenants for life under a settlement brought an action, claiming to have the trusts executed by the court. The statement of claim alleged that the surviving trustee had committed a breach of trust, and asked to have new trustees appointed in the place of him and a deceased trustee. The settlement contained a power to appoint new trustees, exercisable by the tenants for life. The plaintiff's income had always been regularly paid to him. At the trial the charges against the trustee were abandoned, and it was admitted that there was no ground for his removal:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the execution of the trusts, but that, the action being unnecessary, he must pay the costs of it up to and including the trial. Fane v. Fane, 13 Ch. D. 228; 41 L. T. 551; 28 W. R. 348.

A motion was made for leave to take evidence in a suit by affidavit. It was opposed by the defendants, who were trustees, and the court held that they were entitled to have the evidence taken vivâ voce, but reserved the costs of the motion. On the cause coming on for hearing no witnesses were called, and no reason was given for insisting upon the evidence being taken vivâ voce:—Held, that the costs of the motion must be paid by the defendants, the trustees, who had perversely, unreasonably, and unjustly refused to adopt the cheaper and more familiar mode of taking evidence. Patterson v. Wooler, 45 L. J., Ch. 274; 2 Ch. D. 586; 24 W. R. 455.

Costs refused to a plaintiff, who, having in his hands a sum of money belonging to an infant, institutes a suit to have that sum secured for the infant, though there was a trustee of a settlement, to whom it might have been paid. Ellis v. Ellis, 1 Russ. 368.

In a suit to recover the amount of a lost bill of exchange, the loss of the bill being proved at the hearing, the defendant, if he disputes the sufficiency of an indemnity which has been offered to him, and the master finds in favour of the indemnity, will be ordered to pay the costs subsequent to the original hearing. Macartney v. Graham, 2 Russ. & M. 353.

In a suit for the delivery up of deeds in the defendant's possession, and upon which he claimed a lien, it was referred to the master to ascertain the amount of the defendant's lien. The master stated to the parties the amount which he intended to report, whereupon the plaintiff offered to pay that sum to the defendant, together with his costs of suit up to that time. The defendant refused the offer, but did not except to the report afterwards made by the master in accordance with his statement:—Held, on motion at the hearing on further directions, that the defendant ought to have accepted the plaintiff's offer; that the litigation afterwards was useless; and that each party should pay his own costs. Sentance v. Porter, 7 Hare, 426; 18 L. J., Ch. 448; 13 Jur. 980.

A railway company having entered into possession of certain lands required for their works after notice by the landowner that they were not to enter until payment of the purchase money, an injunction was granted against their retaining possession. They afterwards entered into a long correspondence, "without prejudice." Ultimately they paid the purchase and compensation money into court, and then moved only to dissolve the injunction. The plaintiff wished, on that motion, that all proceedings might be stayed, and to go into the general question, but the defendants refused. Thereupon the plaintiff moved to that effect:—Held, on the hearing of this latter motion, that the defendants ought to pay all the costs of the suit, including the costs of this motion. Woodward v. Eastern Counties Ry., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 829.

Where a matter is within the knowledge of a plaintiff, and by not stating such matter correctly great expenses incurred, the plaintiff must pay all the expenses thereby incurred. Field v. Donoughmore (Lord), 1 Dr. & War. 227.

Costs given against a party who, by his want of caution in settling an estate without giving notice that it was subject to a prior demand, rendered a suit by the prior incumbrancer necessary to establish his rights. Wise v. Wise, 2 Jo. & Lat. 403.

Where costs of an injunction suit are increased by an allegation in the bill which is untrue, the court will direct such increased costs to be paid by the plaintiff, although he substantially establishes his case. Pierce v. Franks, 10 Jur. 25.

More Expensive Procedure than Necessary.]—An action was commenced in the chancery division claiming relief which might have been given on a summary proceeding in the probate division:—Held, that although the plaintiff was entitled to the relief claimed, no costs should be allowed on either side. Blackett v. Blackett, 51 L. T. 427.

—— Motion or Summons.]—In an action to restrain the publication of a trade circular, the defendants by their defence offered to submit to a perpetual injunction (in the terms of an interim injunction which had been previously granted), "to be obtained on a summons issued for that purpose." The plaintiffs set the action down for trial on motion for judgment on the admissions in the pleadings, and delivered to the defendants a copy of minutes of the proposed judgment, which was identical with the judgment to which the defendants had offered to submit:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the plaintiffs ought to have proceeded by summons in chambers, and that, consequently, they would only be allowed the costs which they would have properly incurred if they had proceeded by summons. London Steam Dyeing Co. v. Digby, 57 L. J., Ch. 505; 58 L. T. 724; 36 W. R. 497. S. P., Allen v. Oakey, 62 L. T. 724. See also PRACTICE.

—— Two Proceedings.]—Where a defendant admits by his answers the possession of documents and a balance of money, it is irregular to move for the production of the former, and payment into court of the latter, by two separate motions; they ought to be included in one. In this case, the court ordered the plaintiff to pay the extra costs occasioned by this irregular proceeding. Hawke v. Kent, 3 Beav. 288; 10 L. J., Ch. 30.

Where an order is moved for, which might and ought to have been procured to be made as part of another order obtained on a previous motion, the party will not get his costs of the second motion, although he succeed. Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & W. 86; 1 Con. & L. 207.

Costs of one of two suits only allowed where the court considered that one suit only was necessary. Bensusan v. Nehemias, 4 De G. & Sm. 381.

—— Petition or Bill.]—Where a plaintiff, by the present practice of the court, may obtain that relief by petition for which a supplemental bill was formerly necessary, and prefers the latter course, the supplemental bill is not demurrable; but the proceeding will be taken into consideration on the question of costs. Davies v. Williams, 1 Sim. 5; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 210.

A plaintiff having filed a bill for the appointment of new trustees in a case in which it might be done by petition, was ordered to pay all the costs. Thomas v. Walker, 18 Beav. 521.

Where subsequent incumbrances were discovered by the answers to a bill for foreclosure, and a necessary defendant was abroad, the court declined to make the plaintiff pay the extra costs of proceeding by bill instead of claim. Holford v. Yate, 1 W. R. 504.

—— Petition or Summons.]—On a petition for a vesting order to convey the interests of certain persons entitled to property about to be sold under an order in a foreclosure suit, the court, while granting the order, held that the application ought to have been made in chambers, and directed that all extra costs should be paid by the petitioners. Clark v. Ward, 14 W. R. 241; 13 L. T. 624.

If an application be made by special motion, for what is properly obtainable on a petition or motion of course, the order will still be made on payment of costs. Kelsey v. Larkin, 3 Jur. 767.

And see cases sub tit. LANDS CLAUSES ACT and PRACTICE (Funds in Court).

—— Where Demurrer possible.]—A question raised by claim, which involved a litigation extending over four years, which might have been raised by bill and demurrer. The court, holding the costs to have been improperly incurred, refused the plaintiff his costs. Marshall v. Bremner, 2 Sm. & G. 237.

A contributory of a company in voluntary liquidation presented a petition for a compulsory winding-up or supervision order, and for the removal of the liquidators, on the ground (chiefly) that the liquidators, who had been directors, had immediately before the winding-up taken a vote, allowing the solicitors of the company, who were also directors, but not liquidators, 1,500*l.* for their bill of 1,650*l.*, 960*l.* being payable only by the promoters of the company, and that the vote was improperly carried. The petition also contained various allegations tending to show that the solicitors had a preponderating influence in the company. Affidavits were filed opposing the petition and denying the charges of improper conduct. The debts of the company had been all paid, and nothing remained but to divide a small balance amongst the contributories, who were less than twenty in number:—Held, that as the petition was in effect demurrable, evidence to oppose it was unnecessary, and the respondents were disallowed the costs of such evidence. Star and Garter, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 374; 28 L. T. 258.

When a defendant does not demur but puts in an answer to a demurrable bill, the court will not in all cases refuse to allow him the costs so occasioned, but may, in its discretion, refuse him his costs if it thinks the question in the suit ought to have been raised by demurrer. Bush v. Trowbridge Waterworks Co., 44 L. J., Ch. 645; L. R. 10 Ch. 459; 33 L. T. 137; 23 W. R. 641.

Costs incurred in an inquiry into a matter of fact, where the question in the cause might have been first decided by demurrer, directed to be borne as to each party by themselves. Shaw v. Lawless, 5 Cl. & F. 129.

When the point in contest was sufficiently raised by the bill, the court gave no costs to a successful defendant, who brought the cause to a hearing instead of demurring. Hollingsworth v. Shakeshaft, 14 Beav. 492; 21 L. J., Ch. 722.

A bill being dismissed by reason of an objection which might have been taken by demurrer, the defendant was only allowed costs as of a demurrer. Godfrey v. Tucker, 3 N. R. 20; 33 L. J., Ch. 559; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1188; 9 L. T. 359; 12 W. R. 33.

When a defendant to a suit does not demur, but at the hearing takes the same objection as would have been taken by the demurrer if he had demurred, and succeeds in the objection, he is entitled to the whole of his costs of the suit. Pearce v. Watts, L. R. 20 Eq. 492; 23 W. R. 771.

Allegations in bill, which prevented the case being determined on demurrer failing on the evidence, ground for costs against the plaintiffs on dismissal of bill. Lind v. Isle of Wight Ferry Co., 1 N. R. 13.

Improper Conduct.]—Where a suit was in part rendered necessary by the conduct of the defendants, costs separated, part to be paid by each party. Powell v. South Wales Ry., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 773.

It was agreed that judgment against A. for 60*l.* to be paid by instalments should be signed, but not entered up nor published, in any way, by B., the creditor; 50*l.* in cash was offered to B., by A.'s solicitor, but declined. Shortly afterwards B. announced his intention of putting up his judgment for sale by auction. A. thereupon filed a bill and obtained an injunction, restraining the threatened sale and advertisement. B. offered before appearing to give an undertaking, but insisted that the costs should be paid by A.:—Held, that B. by his conduct had forced A. to carry on the suit to a hearing, and must pay the whole costs up to the hearing. Jamieson v. Teague, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1206.

Where a plaintiff, by taking an inquiry which turns out to be useless, throws the matter into chambers and thus causes expense, he is guilty of improper conduct, and may be compelled to pay costs. Ormston, In re, Goldring v. Lancaster, 59 L. T. 594—C. A.

A defendant endeavouring to get the plaintiff to come to an agreement with him, to take a very small sum of money in satisfaction of all his interest in the estate, is a reason for making him pay costs of suit. Avery v. Osborne, Barnard. 349.

A successful plaintiff not allowed costs where his bill contained an unproved imputation on the defendant. Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 1 Jo. & Lat. 134; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 455.

A defendant succeeding was not allowed his costs of a suit concerning 18*l.* where he had refused a reference. Lawes v. Gibson, 35 L. J., Ch. 148; L. R. 1 Eq. 135; 13 L. T. 316.

On reforming a lease no costs were given to the plaintiff, the lessor, because the suit had been occasioned by his error in not having the lease properly prepared. Murray v. Parker, 19 Beav. 305.

A creditor being decreed to reconvey on payment of what was due on an estate in the West Indies, acquired by an unconscientious use of legal process, was deprived of costs subsequent to the payment of money into court. Cranstown (Lord) v. Johnston, 5 Ves. 277; 3 R. R. 80.

A plaintiff, in 1850, was, by W. and B. (who were partners as bankers), induced, on untrue and false representations made to him as to the state of their affairs, to enter into partnership with them. The banking business was at that time in an extremely critical, if not insolvent, position, but it was carried on for four years after the plaintiff became partner therein. After the business was, in 1854, transferred to another bank, the plaintiff discovered that the statements made to him were incorrect and untrue; and on bill for that purpose, the court decreed that the contract of 1850 must be set aside, and that accounts and inquiries, as prayed, must be taken and made. The costs of the plaintiff were not allowed, in consequence of his conduct not being free from blame, and in consequence of his case having been greatly overstated in the bill. Rawlings v. Wickham, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 990. But see S. C. on appeal, 28 L. J., Ch. 188; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 278; 7 W. R. 145.

The right to an injunction ordinarily carries with it the right to costs; but if a plaintiff asks for the costs, and for something more than he is entitled to, he will lose the costs he might otherwise have received. Moet v. Couston, 33 Beav. 578; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1012; 10 L. T. 395.

Where a plaintiff makes a too extensive claim, the defendant, if he resists the entire claim, must pay costs up to the hearing. Jeffryes v. Agra and Masterman's Bank, 35 L. J., Ch. 686; L. R. 2 Eq. 674.

Notwithstanding the rule that the court will not go into the merits of a case until the hearing, the court will at any time look at the conduct of the parties to the cause with the view to costs, or to an interlocutory application. Lister v. Leather, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 433.

It is the duty of solicitors to have the original documents in court at the hearing: and if this is not done, the party in whose custody they are is liable to be deprived of his costs. Gallimore v. Gill, 4 W. R. 773.

Plaintiff may apply for costs when defendant gives unnecessary trouble in carrying a decree into execution. Scarborough v. Burton, 2 Atk. 111.

Defendant in suit for renewal may have so misconducted himself as to be made to pay the costs, but not having acted dishonestly, was held entitled to the usual terms. Wallace v. Patten, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 338.

Costs were given to the plaintiff in a cause on account of the misconduct of the defendant in the progress of the suit. Scott v. Roose, 1 L. & T. 54; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 170.

A promise by a party to make no opposition to an application intended to be made by another is not of itself a sufficient ground for refusing him the costs of his appearance. Bamford v. Watts, 2 Beav. 201.

Defendants admitted by their answer that all persons interested were parties to the suit, and at the hearing objected for want of parties, and the objection prevailed:—Held, that having misled the plaintiff, they ought to pay him the costs of the day. Price v. Berrington, 2 Beav. 285.

A married woman, living apart from her husband, and by whose misconduct the suit had been rendered necessary, and who herself had shown an indisposition to assist the plaintiff:—Held, not entitled to her costs. Times v. Negus, 3 Y. & Coll. 90.

A party refusing to obey an order, which being technically defective, could not be enforced, without stating his objection, not allowed his costs upon a motion to carry the order into effect. Richards v. Dudley, 2 Jur. 464.

Plaintiff procured the usual order for defendants to produce certain deeds within particular time, but did not take the usual steps to enforce it, on account of the defendants submitting to perform the order. Subsequently, the defendants not having produced a particular deed, plaintiff gave notice of motion to produce the same, and for defendants to pay the costs of the application. Defendants immediately produced the deed, but refused to pay the costs of the application:—Held, upon motion by plaintiff for defendants to pay the costs, that plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the motion, made necessary by the non-compliance of defendants with the order, although the plaintiff had not taken the regular steps to enforce it. Maw v. Marsden, 4 Jur. 1079.

Where a suit has been rendered necessary by the conduct of one of the parties in not carrying an agreement into effect, he will not be fixed with the costs of that suit unless it is shown that all requisite and proper steps were taken by the other parties to the agreement, and that the party sought to be charged had notice of their intent to institute the suit, and to seek to fix him with the costs of it. Harwood v. Burstall, 16 Jur. 770.

Refusal to refer to arbitration in pursuance of an agreement is not of itself a sufficient reason for refusing costs to a successful party. Lees v. Laforest, 14 Beav. 250.

Semble, that an assignee of a bankrupt partner, who, by giving notice to the debtors to the partnership, prevents the payment of the debts to the solvent partner, who is answerable for the partnership debts, and thus gives occasion to a suit by the solvent partner, is liable to the costs of the suit. Freeland v. Stansfield, 2 Sm. & G. 479; 23 L. J., Ch. 923; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 8; 2 W. R. 575.

Parties are not justified, by remaining passive, to prevent the rightful owners obtaining possession of their property, but if called on to do an act involving no risk or responsibility, which is necessary to enable the true owner to obtain his property, they are bound to do it. If, therefore, their refusal renders an application to the court necessary, they will be made to pay the costs. Primrose, In re, 23 Beav. 590.

A defendant setting up an improper defence ordered to pay the costs of his defence. Jones v. Farrell, 1 De G. & J. 208; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 751.

Costs were refused to a defendant who, though successful, had deliberately done that which by his contract (which he sought to set aside) he had engaged not to do. Allsopp v. Wheatcroft, 42 L. J., Ch. 12; L. R. 15 Eq. 59; 27 L. T. 372; 21 W. R. 162.

xii. Fraud Proved or Alleged.

When Proved.]—Where a husband had by imposition induced his wife to transfer part of her separate property to him, on a bill by her against him for a specific performance of an agreement before marriage, he was made to pay costs on account of the fraud. Lampert v. Lampert, 1 Ves. J. 21.

A. and B. having entered into a verbal treaty for the purchase of certain premises belonging to A., and not being able to agree as to the amount of the purchase-money, A. addressed a letter to C., a third person, stating that he would take a certain sum from B. for the premises, reserving a small portion of same for his sister if C. approved of it; B. subsequently lodged the sum named by A. with C., of which lodgment C. made a memorandum on A.'s letter. with a remark that it was "a great price." During the period of this negotiation between A. and B, A. entered into a contract with D. for the sale of the same premises, and although notice of the agreement between A. and B. was given to D., actually conveyed the premises to D.:—Held, that D., having had notice of the agreement between A. and B., the conveyance to him must be considered fraudulent, and should be delivered up to be cancelled, and that the conduct of A. being very fraudulent, the costs of B. should in the first place be paid out of the funds lodged by him in the hands of C. Field v. Boland, 1 Dr. & Wal. 37.

The owner of some leasehold tenements, being persuaded by a conveyancer that other parties were entitled to part of the estate, entered into an agreement by which the estate was to be sold, and all these parties were to share in the purchase-money, and 40*l.* was to be paid to the conveyancer. The court being of opinion that the agreement had been obtained by fraud, misrepresentation, and pressure, ordered it to be delivered up to be cancelled, with costs as against the conveyancer. Brent v. Brent, 10 L. J., Ch. 84.

Alleged but not Proved.]—Where a charge of fraud fails, the party making it without ground ought to pay the costs. New Brunswick and Canada Ry. v. Conybeare, 9 H. L. Cas. 711; 31 L. J., Ch. 297; 6 L. T. 109; 10 W. R. 305.

A charge of fraud not made out will be visited with costs. Standish v. Whitwell, 14 W. R. 512.

Costs are always given against any party appearing on a petition, who endeavours to support a case of fraud; whether the costs are prayed, or not. Taylor, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 125; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 36; 4 L. J., Bk. 4.

In Bill.]—There is no rule more general with respect to costs, than that bill claiming on the ground of fraud, the decree, or the order of dismission, shall in either event be with costs; and therefore a bill, although suggested by the House of Lords, filed by a party who had succeeded originally, being dismissed, costs were on that ground awarded against plaintiff. Scott v. Dunbar, 1 Moll. 442.

In a suit by some members of a company, on behalf of the company, to rescind a purchase of mines, on the ground of fraudulent representations made by the vendor, one of the plaintiffs, who had acted as agent for his partners, was, by amendment, made a defendant, and collusion between him and the vendor was charged in the bill, but not proved. It was held that it was not consistent with the rules or practice of equity, to fix the vendor with his costs after the charge of collusion failed of proof, his acts (he being acquitted from that charge) affecting the interests of the company as much as if he had continued a plaintiff. Attwood v. Small, 6 Cl. & F. 232. Reversing Small v. Attwood, Younge, 407.

Where plaintiffs, whose remedy was by action for goods sold and delivered, filed a bill, alleging fraud, and upon the faith of this allegation obtained an injunction to restrain the defendant from parting with the goods, and the allegation of fraud was afterwards disproved, the court ordered the plaintiffs to pay the whole of the costs of the suit, although the injunction was dissolved upon the defendant paying the price of the goods. Straker v. Ewing, 34 Beav. 147; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 127; 11 L. T. 588; 13 W. R. 286.

A suit was instituted to set aside a charge on a reversion, and a cross-suit to establish it. It being set aside for inadequacy of consideration merely, and a decree for redemption being made, the grantor was ordered to pay the costs of charges of fraud which had not been substantiated; but no costs were given as to the remainder of the first suit. The cross-suit was dismissed with costs. Bromley v. Smith, 26 Beav. 644.

On a bill charging fraud and imposition against a defendant, which was reasonably made out, costs will be given to the plaintiff, notwithstanding overstatements and exaggerations in the bill in the plaintiff's own favour. Thomas v. Lloyd, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 288.

Where a bill was filed by a married woman by her next friend against a trustee, in which charges of improper conduct and neglect of duty were made, but which were destitute of truth, it was held that the bill must be dismissed, with costs, to be paid by the next friend. Ibberson v. Warth, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 440; 3 W. R. 230.

Where fraud and improper motives were charged without evidence to support those charges, the bill was dismissed with costs. Chapman v. Chapman, L. R. 9 Eq. 276; 22 L. T. 145; 18 W. R. 533.

Where a bill was filed to set aside a residuary bequest, on the ground that the object and intention of the testator was to defeat the Statute of Mortmain:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to support the case; and the bill, charging but not sustaining fraud and misconduct, was dismissed, with costs. Lomax v. Ripley, 24 L. J., Ch. 254; 3 Eq. R. 301; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 272; 3 W. R. 269.

Where a bill showed that there was a right to relief, it will not be dismissed where charges of fraud have not been proved. The proper course is to dismiss with costs so much of the bill as is founded on them. Thompson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215.

A bill contained charges of fraud which were neither supported nor repelled by evidence; but inasmuch as the costs were not increased by such charges:—Held, that the costs of the suit ought not to be affected thereby. Staniland v. Willott, 3 Macn. & G. 664.

A bill contained allegations of great fraud against trustees, which all failed. The trustees were removed, but not, however, on the ground of misconduct:—Held, that they were entitled to the costs of the whole suit. Passingham v. Sherborn, 9 Beav. 424.

Numerous and extensive charges of fraud against the defendants having been introduced into the bill by amendment, but not supported by evidence, the costs whereof would have to be paid by the plaintiff, the court made a decree against the defendants, without giving any costs on either side. Cullingworth v. Loyd, 2 Beav. 385; 9 L. J., Ch. 218; 4 Jur. 284.

Solicitors against whom charges of fraud had been made which were unsubstantiated, and against whom the bill was dismissed:—Held, not entitled to their costs, on the ground that, by the position in which they had placed themselves, they had exposed themselves to an investigation which had not unreasonably been instituted. Fyler v. Fyler, 3 Beav. 550; 5 Jur. 187.

Where a plaintiff, having a clear ground for relief against proceedings at law, set up by amendment a further independent ground for the same relief, founded on suggestions of misrepresentations which failed on the evidence:—Held, that though the decree was in his favour, he must pay the costs of that part of the case on which he failed. Pledge v. Buss, 1 Johns. 663; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 695.

A plaintiff having introduced into his amended bill allegations of fraud against a defendant, which the evidence failed to support:—Held, that though entitled to the relief prayed, he must pay the defendant all the costs of that part of the bill containing such allegations, and the evidence taken thereunder. Blest v. Brown, 4 De G. F. & J. 367; 10 W. R. 569.

When charges of misconduct are introduced into a bill, and are denied by the answer, and then withdrawn, the court will, at the hearing, make an order for payment by the plaintiff of all the costs occasioned by such unfounded charges, without any special application for the purpose. Finch v. Westrope, 40 L. J., Ch. 441; L. R. 12 Eq. 24; 24 L. T. 412; 19 W. R. 672.

If a cross bill be filed bonâ fide by the defendant to the original suit, against whom the original bill is dismissed with costs, the costs of it will usually follow the decree in the original suit, notwithstanding charges of fraud are alleged in it which are not sustained. Flight v. Robinson, 16 L. J., Ch. 178.

A plaintiff, by his original bill, sought to set aside a deed, on the ground of fraud. After answer was filed, he amended his bill by striking out from it all the previous allegations of fraud, and prayed to be allowed to take a benefit under the deed. The court ordered him to pay the costs of the original bill. Kernot v. Critchley, 17 L. T. 134.

—— Scale of Costs.]—A plaintiff, in a bill to enforce against the defendant an alleged agreement for the compromise of claims of the plaintiff against the defendant in respect of accounts, charged the defendant with various frauds in respect of the accounts, such alleged frauds being the ground of the claims included in the compromise. The plaintiff having failed in proving the agreement, and his bill being dismissed with costs, he was ordered to pay the defendant's costs so far as they had been increased by the irrelevant charges of fraud as between solicitor and client. Forester v. Read, L. R. 6 Ch. 40; 24 L. T. 79; 19 W. R. 114.

The plaintiff in this action claimed relief on the ground of alleged fraudulent misrepresentations in the prospectus of a company, and upon the action being dismissed with costs, the taxing-master allowed costs upon the higher scale. Before trial the plaintiff took out a certificate that the lower scale of fees was applicable to the case. The amount that the plaintiff claimed to recover was 40*l*., paid by him in respect of shares of the company; he also claimed costs and damages and an indemnity:—Held, on adjourned summons to review the taxation and vary the certificate of the taxing-master, that the case did not come within the definitions of cases under Ord. VI. r. 1 of the Rules of August, 1875, and that fraud being alleged, the court would exercise its discretion under r. 3 of the same order, and allow costs on the higher scale. Harrison v. Leutner, 52 L. J., Ch. 927; 24 Ch. D. 594; 49 L. T. 91; 31 W. R. 837.

The fact of the issue of fraud being raised is not a sufficient reason for ordering the costs to be taxed on the higher scale. Terrell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 473; 47 L. T. 588; 31 W. R. 208.

In Defence.]—A defendant who by his answer had raised charges of forgery and fraud against the plaintiff, which were negatived by the verdict of a jury, was ordered to pay the costs of the plaintiff, although the latter had persisted, until his examination in court upon the trial, in false statements. so as to give the defendant reasonable grounds for suspicion, and for trying the question. Theyer v. Tombs, 12 W. R. 512.

Where a person who was a necessary party to a conveyance, though he had no beneficial interest in the property, refused to execute the deed of conveyance, and, in his answer to a bill filed against him to compel the execution of the deed, set up as the ground of his refusal a case of fraud in the plaintiff, which he did not attempt to support by any evidence at the hearing:—Held, that this was not a case for an inquiry as to the alleged fraud, and that the defendant must pay the costs of the suit. Times v. Negus, 3 Y. & Coll. 90.

Although, as a rule, costs are decreed at the hearing against a party making charges of fraud and misconduct which he fails in proving. yet, when such charges are made by way of defence, and the plaintiff is out of the jurisdiction, and the evidence raises the presumption that the plaintiff will not recover anything by his suit, the court reserved the question of costs until after the accounts should be taken. Warrin v. Thomas, 2 W. R. 442.

An heir at law of a testator brought an action of ejectment against the devisee, and failed. In a subsequent suit by the devisee against a purchaser, to enforce specific performance, the court, on the ground that the will was open to suspicion, directed the devisee to substantiate the will against the heir. The devisee thereupon filed his bill against the heir, asking a decree establishing the will. The heir, by answer, set up as a defence, incompetency in the testator, and fraud and undue influence, and went into evidence in support of this defence. At the hearing an action of ejectment by the plaintiff against the defendant was, on the defendant electing such action instead of an issue, directed to be tried at law. At the trial the devisee called witnesses, but the defendant called none, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff. On the cause coming on upon further direction, the court established the will without costs as regarded the general result of the suit and the action of ejectment, but with costs to be paid by the defendant of so much of the suit as was caused by the issues raised of fraud and improper practice by the devisee. Grove v. Young, 5 De G. & Sm. 38; 21 L. J., Ch. 95; 15 Jur. 1099.

xiii. Offers to Settle and Tender.

Offers to Settle—Costs.]—On the 12th June, 1886, one of the defendants' travellers received an order from Nutting, of Lavender Hill, for sixty dozen cardboard boxes, with labels bearing the words "Browne's Satin Polish for ladies' and children's boots and shoes, travelling bags, trunks, &c., manufactured by Browne, of Lavender Hill." On the 6th July, 1886, the plaintiff, the owner of a registered trade mark, 14,127, bearing the words "Browne's Satin Polish," issued a writ to restrain the infringement of his trade mark. On the 7th July, 1886, the defendants offered to compensate the plaintiff without the necessity of legal proceedings, and to destroy the labels, and comply with any reasonable request of the plaintiff. On the 16th July the plaintiff moved for an injunction :—Held, that, notwithstanding the defendants' offer, the motion was not an unnecessary proceeding, and the defendants must pay the costs caused by what they had done. Fennessy v. Day, 55 L. T. 161.

Defendants bought from E., at a cost of 17*s.* 6*d.*, a box of 500 cigarettes bearing a label which was a very close imitation of the registered trade mark used by the plaintiffs upon the boxes in which they sold the cigarettes made by them. The defendants bought the cigarettes under the belief that they were made by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs served the defendants with a writ and notice of motion for an injunction to restrain them from infringing their trade mark or selling the cigarettes. The defendants at once returned to E. the greater part of the cigarettes, and, by their affidavit, submitted to abide by any order the court should make, but contended that they ought not to be made to pay costs :—Held, that there ought to be no order as to costs. Upmann v. Forester (24 Ch. D. 231) discussed. American Tobacco Co. v. Guest, 61 L. J., Ch. 212 ; [1892] 1 Ch. 630 ; 66 L. T. 257 ; 40 W. R. 364.

Where a defendant, having rendered himself liable to be sued, and being sued offers to submit to all the relief to which the plaintiff is entitled, the court will not give the plaintiff his costs of the subsequent prosecution of the suit. Colburn v. Simms, 2 Hare, 543 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 388 ; 7 Jur. 1104.

An offer made after litigation has commenced, if it is to have the effect of avoiding the payment of costs by an unsuccessful party, must amount in substance to an offer of everything which the court eventually holds the successful party entitled to. Birmingham and District Land Co. v. L. & N.-W. Ry., 57 L. J., Ch. 121 ; 36 Ch. D. 650 ; 57 L. T. 185 ; 36 W. R. 414.

In an action to restrain the infringement of a patent a defendant, on being served with the writ, offered to undertake not to infringe, to give the other relief claimed by the writ, and to pay the plaintiff's costs. Notwithstanding this offer the plaintiff delivered a statement of claim and particulars of breaches. The defendant then delivered a defence ; and the plaintiff moved for judgment in the terms of the statement of claim : —Held, that the plaintiff ought to have accepted the undertaking offered ; and, on the defendant's giving the undertaking, the court declined to grant an injunction, giving to the plaintiff costs down to the date of the offer and the costs of the day's appearance, and to the defendant the other costs subsequent to the offer. Jenkins v. Hope, 65 L. J., Ch. 249 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 278 ; 73 L. T. 705 ; 44 W. R. 358.

The defendant having satisfied the demand for which the suit was instituted, the court refused to allow it to be proceeded with for the costs ; but upon the terms of an agreement, to which the plaintiff had consented, but which the defendant had not strictly observed, ordered the defendant to pay the costs of the plaintiff out of pocket in the suit and on this notice of motion. Tapp v. Tanner, 20 L. J., Ch. 559.

A defendant having, pendente lite, offered to pay all that was ultimately found due from him, the plaintiff was ordered to pay all the subsequent costs of suit. Remnant v. Hood, 27 Beav. 74.

In a suit in which the plaintiffs ultimately succeeded, an offer had been made by the defendants to submit to a decree, on the basis of each party paying their own costs, which was simply refused :—Held, that each party must pay the costs subsequently to the offer, for it was open to the plaintiffs to propose to vary the terms offered by adding a provision for the payment of costs by the defendants. Kensington (Lord) v. Metropolitan Ry., 14 L. T. 580 ; 14 W. R. 754.

A successful plaintiff will not be deprived of his costs because, in negotiations antecedent to the suit, he had been offered all that could be obtained by the suit—except in cases of bad faith, or where the negotiations amounted to a binding release from the cause of suit. Edelsten v. Edelsten, 1 N. R. 300.

If an agent does not render his account within a reasonable time, he must bear the costs of a suit instituted to have the accounts taken, and it will not be any excuse for him that he offered to pay on account a gross sum, which it turns out would have covered all that was due from him. Collyer v. Dudley, Turn. & R. 421.

A plaintiff who was only entitled to an injunction and costs insisted also on an account. The defendant offered to submit to the injunction without costs. The plaintiff having brought his cause to a hearing, the court held both parties in the wrong, and gave no costs to either side. Moet v. Couston, 33 Beav. 578 ; 4 N. R. 86 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1012 ; 10 L. T. 395.

If the plaintiff has harshly refused to settle amicably, the court will consider that conduct on the question of costs ; and such oppressive conduct being alleged, and some proof offered, it was generally referred to the master to report the circumstances of an offer of payment of a sum less than the full sum claimed, and of the rejection of such offer. Armstrong v. Blake, 1 Moll. 178.

Where defendant in tithe cause submits to part of plaintiff's demand, the court will, on motion for that purpose on part of defendant, refer it to master in any stage of proceeding to ascertain what is due, and to tax costs, the defendant undertaking to pay the amount without prejudice to any other question in the cause. Lowe v. Firkins, 11 Price, 453.

If a defendant offers the plaintiff an injunction on fair and reasonable terms, and his offer is not accepted, and the plaintiff moves for the injunction, and those terms are imposed, the plaintiff must pay the defendant the costs of the motion. Butler v. Gore, 2 Hog. 103.

Where a defendant submits to all the plaintiff's demands, but neglects or refuses to pay his costs, an application should be made to the court to stay proceedings, and to determine the question of costs. Nicholls v. Elford, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 264.

Before instituting a suit to set aside the sale of a reversion, the plaintiff offered very nearly the same terms that were afterwards imposed by the decree :—Held, that the defendants, who had refused these terms, must pay the costs properly incurred up to the hearing. Nesbitt v. Berridge, 1 N. R. 345.

Where in a suit the defendants were originally in the wrong, but, pendente lite, placed themselves in the right:—Held, that the plaintiff must pay the costs subsequently incurred. Flower v. Muspratt, 6 N. R. 351.

Land belonging to a land society was sold, and underlet in building plots, there being a covenant restraining the use of any building as a tavern, hotel, or public-house. A tenant of an underlessee opened one of the houses as a public-house in ignorance of the covenant, and on a bill being filed for an injunction and an interim order being obtained, immediately submitted and closed the house, giving public notice by a printed placard. The bill was filed against all the under-lessees as well as against the publican, and the plaintiff having filed interrogatories, and taken out a summons to produce documents, one of the defendants put in an answer, and others filed affidavits. On motion for the injunction all the defendants, except the publican, appeared by two counsel:—Bill dismissed as against the under-lessees with costs, except the costs of the answer and affidavits, and a decree made against the publican without costs. Knox v. Green, 17 L. T. 282.

A plaintiff complained of works intended to be executed by the defendants, churchwardens of his parish, which he alleged in the way in which it was proposed to execute them, constituted a nuisance. Much negotiation took place, in the course of which the defendants showed a continued acquiescence in the suggestions made by the plaintiff as to the mode of executing the works, and suspended their execution. While these negotiations were still going on, and before any works were commenced, the plaintiff filed his bill for an injunction, and obtained special leave to give notice of motion, and served the notice of motion. On the day following the service of the notice of motion, the defendants, in order to avoid litigation, passed a resolution at a vestry, at which the plaintiff was present, that the works should be wholly abandoned. After that the plaintiff brought on his motion:—Held, without going into the question whether there would be any nuisance, that, under the circumstances, the motion was useless and improper, and it was refused with costs. Woodman v. Robinson, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 204.

The solicitors of a defendant wrote to the plaintiff's solicitors that they were prepared to advise the defendant to settle on certain terms:—Held, that this was not such an offer as would free the defendant from liability to subsequent costs of the action, inasmuch as he might have refused to follow the advice of his solicitors. Trotter v. Maclean, 13 Ch. D. 574; 42 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 244.

One of the defendants to an action for the recovery of land was allowed to withdraw his defence after the action had been in the paper for trial, but had been postponed till another action relating to the same property should be ready for trial, upon the terms of giving the plaintiffs all the relief to which they could be entitled at the trial, and paying the costs occasioned by the defence, and the costs of a summons for leave to withdraw. And, the defendant having offered in chambers what the court considered proper terms, the plaintiffs were ordered to pay the costs of an adjournment of the summons into court. Real and Personal Advance Co. v. McCarthy, 49 L. J., Ch. 615; 14 Ch. D. 188; 42 L. T. 48; 28 W. R. 418.

The plaintiff's motion for an interim injunction to restrain a nuisance committed by the defendant was ordered to stand over till the trial of the action, no order being made as to costs. At the trial the judge awarded the plaintiff damages in lieu of an injunction, and ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs of action, the order reserving liberty to apply. The judgment as passed and entered was silent as to the costs on the previous motion. The taxing officer having refused to allow the costs of the motion without a special order of the judge:—Held, on motion, that the court might order the costs of the motion to be paid by the defendant, and that the plaintiff having written to the defendant giving him an opportunity of avoiding further litigation, of which the defendant had not availed himself, the costs of the present application must be paid by the defendant. Fritz v. Hobson, 49 L. J., Ch. 735; 14 Ch. D. 542; 42 L. T. 677; 28 W. R. 722.

A suit was instituted by a person claiming a legal title to land, praying discovery and a delivery up of the title deeds against a person who had the deeds, and merely claimed to hold them as a stakeholder for whoever had the legal title. The bill in that suit also prayed an account against the defendant as agent of the plaintiff. The defendant had not acted in that capacity. The deeds having been brought into court on an interlocutory motion, and another suit having been subsequently instituted, in which the questions as to the title to the lands could be decided, the plaintiff in the first suit offered the defendant to consent that the deeds in court should be transferred to the second suit, and the first dismissed with costs: the defendant having declined to consent, and put the plaintiff upon the terms to bring the first suit to a hearing:—Held, the defendant not objecting to the retention of the deeds in court, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of the suit generally, and not merely to those incurred up to the service of the notice of consent. Whittingham v. Cusack, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 159.

Tender.]—Tender must be very express and formal to prevent costs. Gammon v. Stone, 1 Ves. 339.

If to a bill for tithe, defendant does not show a previous tender, or make one by his answer, plaintiff shall have an account; if the tender be only by answer, defendant shall account with costs, but if made before, he shall save his costs. Anon., Bunb. 28.

That a tender may be made after answer. See Exeter (Bishop) v. Trenchard, Bunb. 47.

Where defendant in a tithe cause sets up a modus, and is desirous of protecting himself from costs, he should move for an order that plaintiff accept sums admitted due by answer, or proceed at peril of costs; and court will notice the tender by minute. The motion may be made without notice or payment of money into court. Davis v. Moseley, 9 Price, 211.

Answer stating tender before bill filed, but not proved, will not save costs. Milnes v. Davison, 3 Madd. 374.

In a suit for various articles of tithes, the defendant offered to pay into court the value of all but one article, with costs:—Held, he must pay costs incurred by claim of whole of them. Worral v. Miller, 3 Anstr. 632.

Bill for tithes, modus set up as defence; motion by defendant, to pay up arrears of modus, with costs up to time, refused; but plaintiff proceeding and then abandoning suit, costs after tender allowed to defendant. Bristol (Dean) v. Donnesthorpe, 1 Anstr. 272.

Tender of Debt after Issue of Writ.]—A defendant cannot escape paying the cost of a writ of summons by tendering the amount sued for without costs before service, but after issue of the writ. O'Malley v. Kilmallock Union, 22 L. R. Ir. 326.

See Ord. XXII. r. 3.

Offer to pay Costs.]—If a defendant desires to avoid the payment of costs at the trial of an action should he be held to be unsuccessful, any offer he may have previously made with regard to the payment of costs must have been of substantially the whole of the costs which the court finds the plaintiff to be entitled to at the trial. Short of that the offer may be evidence of good faith; but it is not such an offer as to interfere with the ordinary course with respect to costs. Schlesinger v. Turner, 63 L. T. 764.

After an action brought, the plaintiff, receiving payment of his demands, may go on to a trial, if the costs then incurred are not tendered. But equity acts on a more discretionary rule than a court of law: if the sum received by the plaintiff had satisfied the whole purpose of the suit, he ought to apprise the defendant that he would proceed for his costs, unless they were also paid. Under decrees for specific performance, the vendee considered as entitled to his costs, up to the time when the vendor evidences a good title: when that is done, the vendee is bound to declare that he is satisfied, and will accept the title if the vendor will pay his costs up to that time; if he omit to do so, the court will fix all the subsequent costs on him. Lill v. Robinson, Beat. 84.

On a bill for the assignment of dower, a defendant, who had disputed the plaintiff's title, and only admitted it after the filing of the bill, and then without tendering costs, was ordered to pay the costs up to the hearing. Harris v. Harris, 1 N. R. 43; 7 L. J. 411; 11 W. R. 62.

Where the plaintiff is entitled to have an injunction made perpetual, the defendant will have to pay the costs of the suit, however trivial the subject matter of the suit may be, if he did not, after the injunction was granted, tender the costs up to that time. Fradella v. Weller, 2 Russ. & M. 247. S. P., McAndrew v. Barsett, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 492; 10 L. T. 65; Burgess v. Hill, 26 Beav. 244; 28 L. J., Ch. 356; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 233; 7 W. R. 158; Burgess v. Hateley, 26 Beav. 249.

Where, after notice of a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, the defendant filed a replication:—Held, that the plaintiff, not having tendered the defendant the costs of the notice, must pay the costs of the motion. Att.-Gen. v. Cooper, 9 Sim. 379; 8 L. J., Ch. 19; 2 Jur. 917. Cp. cases supra, cols. 792—796.

—— Irregularity.]—Notwithstanding an offer has been made to pay all the expenses which the party has been put to by the irregularity in issuing an attachment, he has a right to have the judgment of the court on the question of its irregularity, and is, therefore, entitled to the costs of the motion for setting it aside. Frowd v. Lawrence, 1 Jac. & Walk. 655.

Reference to Taxing-master to Inquire.]—Where very considerable delay had occurred in proceedings under a decree in an administration suit which, in the opinion of the court, ought to be accounted for, the court, in exercise of the powers afforded by Ord. LXV. r. 11 of the Rules of Court, 1883, ordered that, in the taxation of the costs, the matter be referred specially to the taxing-master, and he be directed to inquire into the cause of the delay, to make such disallowance of costs in respect thereof as he might think fit, and to call upon the solicitors engaged in the conduct of the case to show cause why that disallowance should not be made. Furness v. Davis, 51 L. T. 854; 33 W. R. 320.

An action was begun on the 19th April, 1882, by a person who had bought a share in an estate for 55*l.*, asking that the trusts of the will of a testator might be carried into execution, and his real and personal estate administered by the court, and that all proper accounts and inquiries might be taken and made, and directions given. No allegation was made in it of any kind of misconduct on the part of the trustees. The claim showed that the widow of the testator, who by the will was tenant for life of all the real and personal estate, was still living; there was no doubt as to who were the persons ultimately entitled. On the 17th March, 1883, the usual judgment for administration was pronounced, and numerous accounts and inquiries were ordered to be taken and made. One inquiry, as to certain investments, was not asked by the pleadings, or indeed until after the hearing on further consideration. On the 23rd August, 1887, the chief clerk filed his certificate. The court of first instance held, that no benefit having resulted to the estate from the action, and the action being an idle and vexatious proceeding, the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs out of the estate; that the plaintiff must pay all the costs of the action since Ord. LXV. r. 1 of the Rules of Court came into operation on the 24th October, 1883. The costs would be taxed, and the taxing-master should have regard to Ord. LXV. r. 11, to see what costs (if any) had been fruitless, or had been occasioned by this delay. On appeal from so much of the order as related to costs incurred before the Rules of 1883 came into operation:—Held, that though the general delay could not be attributed to the plaintiff, he had, by taking the inquiry as to investments, and thus throwing the matter into chambers and causing expense, been guilty of such improper conduct as gave the judge a discretion to make him pay the costs, and that with this discretion the court would not interfere. Ormston, In re, Goldring v. Lancaster, 59 L. T. 594—C. A. Affirming 36 W. R. 216.

Powers of Judge.]—The powers given by Ord. LXV. r. 11, of disallowing costs improperly incurred, or rendered fruitless by undue delay, may be exercised by the judge of his own motion without any request from any of the parties. Brown v. Burdett, 37 Ch. D. 207; 58 L. T. 571; 36 W. R. 225—C. A.

Payment of Costs out of Fund.]—The rule extends to cases where in the ordinary course the costs are paid out of a fund, and is not confined to disallowing costs as between the solicitor and his client who has to pay them. Ib.

The court will not permit the costs occasioned by improper litigation, or by negligent conduct of administration proceedings, to be paid out of an estate under its care. The amount of costs allowed by a taxing-master as between the client and his solicitor is not conclusive of the amount which the court will allow out of the estate. Brown v. Burdett, 40 Ch. D. 244; 60 L. T. 520; 37 W. R. 533—C. A.

An administration action, which was commenced in May, 1875, came on in November, 1887, upon second further consideration. The judge finding that the costs would probably amount to nearly the whole value of the estate, and believing that there had been unreasonable delay in the conduct of the proceedings, directed the taxing-master, under Ord. LXV. r. 11, to inquire and report as to the delay and the costs occasioned thereby. The taxing-master reported that there had been great delay in the suit caused by the conduct of the solicitor for the plaintiff, and disallowed considerable sums from the costs as between the various solicitors and their clients. The judge ordered that only a portion of the costs allowed by the taxing-master to the several parties, including the costs of the plaintiff, who was a trustee, should be paid out of the estate; and the Court of Appeal affirmed this decision. Ib.

Omission to procure Investment of Purchase-money.]—An order was obtained by the solicitor for the plaintiff that the purchaser of property, sold under an order of the court in an action, should pay his purchase-money into court, and that the money when paid in should be invested in consols. The plaintiff had the conduct of the sale. The money was paid into court by the purchaser, but the plaintiff's solicitor omitted to leave with the paymaster the necessary request for its investment, and consequently the investment was not made. On the further consideration of the action it was ordered that the balance of the purchase-money, after the payment of certain costs, should be paid to the receiver in the action, in part satisfaction of a balance due to him. The carriage of the order was given to the receiver, and he then discovered that the purchase-money had not been invested. He took out a summons, asking that the plaintiff's solicitor might be ordered to pay to him the amount of interest lost by the non-investment of the purchase-money:—Held, that the solicitor, as the officer of the court having the conduct of the sale, was responsible not only to his client but to the court for the due discharge of his duty, and that he must make good to the person entitled the loss of interest, but that he was entitled to a set-off in respect of a gain which had resulted from a fall in the price of consols between the time when the investment ought to have been made and the date of the order on further consideration, and that this liability could be enforced by summons in the action. The solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of the summons, though on allowing the set-off, it appeared that the amount to be paid by the solicitor would be only 5*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* Batten v. Wedgwood Coal and Iron Co., 55 L. J., Ch. 396; 31 Ch. D. 346: 54 L. T. 245; 34 W. R. 228.

Appeal from Order.]—An order that the costs of an application at chambers on behalf of a client shall be paid by his solicitor personally is not within the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 49, and therefore is subject to appeal without leave. Bradford, In re, 53 L. J., Q. B. 65; 15 Q. B. D. 635; 50 L. T. 170; 32 W. R. 238—C. A.

Ord. LXV. r. 23.

In what Cases.]—A contingent legacy to an infant was paid into court by the executor of the will of the testatrix under the Legacy Duty Act. A summons was then taken out by the guardian of the infant, asking that the income of the legacy might be paid to him until the infant should attain twenty-one. An originating summons was also taken out by the next of kin of the testatrix, claiming the income during the minority of the infant on the ground that it was undisposed of by the will. The two summonses were heard together before the judge in chambers, when he decided that the income until the infant should attain twenty-one was undisposed of, and that the next of kin were entitled to it. The executor's solicitor asked that his cost of attendance, amounting to about 13*l.*, might be allowed out of the income. The judge considered the attendance of the executor's solicitor unnecessary, and declined to allow more than a fixed sum for costs, to be determined by the chief clerk. The chief clerk, without attempting to tax the bill, but acting upon what the judge had said, allowed the sum of three guineas. The matter was again referred to the judge, who confirmed the order of the chief clerk. A motion was accordingly made to vary that order:—Held, that r. 23 of Ord. LXV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, seemed to apply to the case; but that, in any event, the court had power in such a case as the present to limit the amount of costs to be allowed. Walters, In re, Moore v. Bemrose, 58 L. T. 101.

The court will not, under the 123rd Order of May, 1845, fix the amount of costs to be paid in respect of an abandoned motion, except where the parties are poor and anxious to put an end to the matter. London & Blackwall Ry. v. Limehouse Board of Works, 26 L. J., Ch. 164.

A sum certain given for costs where of small amount. Wilding v. Wilding, 4 Bro. C. C. 100.

Where notice of motion is irregularly given before the Master of the Rolls, in a Vice-Chancellor's cause, this court has jurisdiction to award costs, and two counsel having been instructed by the respondents in such a case, 42*s.* costs were summarily given. Yearsley v. Yearsley, 19 Beav. 1.

Claimants to Fund in Court.]—Three guineas is a proper sum to allow to each successful claimant to a fund in court for the costs of establishing his claim. Waterton v. Burt, 39 L. J., Ch. 425; 18 W. R. 683.

xviii. In other Cases.

Agency Charges—Firms of Solicitors having Common Members.]—Agency charges for work done by a London firm of solicitors as agents for a country firm—two partners out of three in each firm being the same—were disallowed on taxation:—Held, that it having been the practice of the chancery taxing-masters for forty or fifty years not to treat cases of two firms having certain partners in common as agency cases at all, the court could not overrule the practice, and the charges were properly disallowed. Borough Commercial and Building Society, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 365; [1894] 1 Ch. 289; 7 R. 75; 70 L. T. 51; 42 W. R. 161—C. A.

Abstracts.]—Where an abstract of title which was used in the preparation of a defendant's answer had been prepared mainly, if not entirely, before the commencement of the suit, and there was no evidence before the court to show what part, if any, had been prepared since the institution of the suit:—Held, that in taxation as between party and party the costs of preparing such abstract could not be allowed. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 8 De G. M. & G. 33; 25 L. J., Ch. 322; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219; 4 W. R. 268.

Appearance—Several Defendants.]—A solicitor is entitled to charge 6*s.* 8*d.* for every one of three defendants to a bill for whom he enters appearances, although he may enter the appearances for all the defendants at the same time; and the scale of fees contained in the 5th General Order of the 23rd October, 1852, as to entering appearances, is not to be confined to appearances to summonses. Morratt v. Walton, 23 L. J., Ch. 1003; 18 Jur. 563; 2 W. R. 599.

Withdrawal of Defence of one Defendant.]—Where one of two defendants to an action of ejectment withdrew his defence, and was ordered as one of the terms on which such withdrawal was permitted, to pay to the plaintiffs their costs of the action "so far as they were occasioned by the defendant's defence" down to the date of the application to withdraw:—Held, that the effect of the order (the terms of which followed the language of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 205, and were practically identical with that of Ord. XXIII. r. 1) was to relieve the withdrawing defendant from the general costs of the action, and to make him liable only for the additional or increased costs, over and above the general costs, occasioned by such defendant having defended the action. Real and Personal Advance Co. v. McCarthy, 18 Ch. D. 362; 45 L. T. 116; 30 W. R. 481—C. A.

Staying Proceedings.]—When a defendant obtains the ordinary order to stay proceedings upon payment of costs, it is the duty of the master when taxing such costs to consider and determine questions raised by the defendant as to the necessity or propriety of proceedings for which charges are made in the bills of costs. Wormsley, In re. Baines v. Wormsley, 47 L. J., Ch. 844; 39 L. T. 85; 27 W. R. 36.

Abandoned Motion.]—On an abandoned motion, or on the discontinuance of an action, the costs of all work in preparing, briefing, or otherwise, relating to affidavits or pleadings, are allowed, provided, in the opinion of the taxing-master, such work has not been prematurely done. Harrison v. Leutner, 50 L. J., Ch. 264; 16 Ch. D. 559; 44 L. T. 331; 29 W. R. 393.

Discontinuance of Action.]—By Ord. LXV. r. 27, special allowances in respect of (sub-r. 9) "such just and reasonable charges and expenses as appear to have been properly incurred in procuring evidence," shall apply to all taxations in the Supreme Court:—Held, that under this rule a master had a discretion to allow charges and expenses properly incurred by the defendant in procuring evidence where the plaintiff, having given no notice of trial, subsequently discontinued the action. Windham v. Bainton, 57 L. J., Q. B. 519; 21 Q. B. D. 199; 36 W. R. 832. See preceding case.

In an action on a marine insurance policy, owing to the plaintiff's delay in complying with an order for production of papers, the defendant did not plead until a year after declaration. Meanwhile, to save expense, the defendant examined witnesses before the master, under 1 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 4. The defendant pleaded unseaworthiness, &c., and paid 25*l.* into court on the money counts for the premium. The plaintiff took the money out of court, and joined issue on the other pleas, but afterwards discontinued:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of the witnesses examined before the master, as incurred before instructions for plea, within Reg. Gen. H. T. 1853, r. 12. Previte v. Adelaide Fire and Marine Insurance Co., 32 L. T. 768. And see PRACTICE (DISCONTINUANCE).

Rehearing.]—The costs of rehearings are not carried by the words "costs of suit as between solicitor and client," but require to be specially mentioned in the order for taxation. Agabeg v. Hartwell, 5 Beav. 271.

Of New Trial.]—See supra, col. 699.

Parties having Liberty to attend Proceedings.]—Mere liberty to attend the proceedings under an administration judgment does not entitle the parties having the liberty to the costs of their attendance in chambers as a matter of course. In order to entitle such parties to such costs, the order giving the liberty to attend should expressly provide that they are to be entitled thereto. Day v. Batty, 21 Ch. D. 830.

Inspection of Documents.]—As between party and party, no costs can be allowed in respect of notices to inspect documents, or of attendance for the purpose of inspecting documents, at the office of the solicitor to whose client the documents belong. The discretion given to the taxing-master by Ord. LXV. r. 27 (17)—repeated from Rules of Supreme Court, 1875 (Costs), schedule, r. 15—only applies to taxation of costs as between solicitor and client. Wicksteed v. Biggs, 34 L. J., Ch. 967; 52 L. T. 428.

Decrees and Minutes.]—Where the court has pronounced an order, but no minutes of it have been drawn up, the solicitor is, nevertheless, entitled to his costs of the minutes, as if they had been actually drawn up. Gould v. Drummett, 35 L. J., Ch. 794; L. R. 2 Eq. 609; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 614; 14 L. T. 881; 14 W. R. 1008.

Where Defendant sets up Counterclaim.]—See ante, col. 695.

Change of Venue—Taxation as if in former Place of Trial.]—A plaintiff opposed a change of the venue from London to Newcastle, but undertook to tax, if successful, as if tried in Northumberland. The cause was in the paper six days, and was tried on the fifth and sixth days, when the plaintiff had a verdict. On taxation, the master allowed only two days' attendance of the plaintiff's attorney and witnesses, considering that their detention would not have exceeded that space of time if the cause had been tried at Newcastle. He also refused to allow the estimated cost of a journey from London to Newcastle of two witnesses (residents of South Shields) who happened to be near London at the time of the trial. He further disallowed detention money to witnesses whose ordinary place of abode was Newcastle or the neighbourhood, upon the presumption that they would probably have been at home at the assize time:—Held, that these were matters for the master's discretion, and that he had not so plainly and obviously erred as to induce the court to interfere. Clarke v. Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 37 L. J., C. P. 110; L. R. 3 C. P. 230; 17 L. T. 509.

Term Fees.]—Term fee allowed where the only proceeding was leaving copy of decree and bill of costs before the master. Davies v. Marshall, 1 Dr. & Sm. 564; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 669; 9 W. R. 756.

On a reference A. and B. had a common interest in one question, and A. a separate interest in another. On the former the master directed one charge to be filed for both. During the proceedings on it the taxing-master allowed only one term fee to the solicitor, who acted for both A. and B.:—Held, that he was right in disallowing the second, and the taxation was affirmed. Newby v. Drew, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 24.

c. Scale of Taxation.

i. Higher or Lower Scale.

Ord. LXV. r. 9.

Pending Proceedings.]—Ord. LXV. r. 9, does not apply to an action pending at the commencement of the new rules; and, according to the former practice, the question whether costs shall be allowed on the higher or the lower scale is a matter for the taxing-master. Edgington v. Fitzmaurice, 32 W. R. 848.

Power cannot be Delegated.]—A judge has no power to delegate to a master the discretionary authority given him by the Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), Ord. VI. r. 3 [repealed], with reference to allowing costs on the higher or lower scale. Cortvene Floor Covering Co. v. Tull, 27 W. R. 373—C. A.

Appeal from Decision.]—An appeal will lie from a decision by a judge under Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), August, 1875, Ord. VI. r. 3 [repealed], as to the taxation of costs on the higher or lower scale; but where he has exercised his discretion, the Court of Appeal will not interfere unless he has proceeded on a wrong principle or made a manifest slip. Terrell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 473; 47 L. T. 588; 31 W. R. 208. S. P., Paine v. Chisholm, 60 L. J., Q. B. 413; [1891] 1 Q. B. 531; 39 W. R. 353—C. A.

Action in Common Law Division.]—Semble, that Ord. VI. r. 3, of the Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs) [repealed], allowing costs upon the "higher scale," is not limited to costs in actions brought in the Chancery Division of the High Court, but gives the Common Law Divisions a discretionary power to order costs to be taxed upon the higher scale, even though the cause of action involves no equitable element. Norfolk (Duke) v. Arbuthnot, 50 L. J., Q. B. 384; 6 Q. B. D. 279; 29 W. R. 337.

Amount at Stake.]—The court will not allow costs on the "higher scale" unless special circumstances of urgency or difficulty are shown. The amount at stake in an action is not of itself a sufficient reason for such allowance. The Horace, 53 L. J., P. 64; 9 P. D. 86; 50 L. T. 595; 32 W. R. 755; 5 Asp., M. C. 218.

On a petition for the appointment of new trustees, the amount of the fund alone does not constitute a "special ground arising out of the nature and importance or the difficulty or urgency of the case" for ordering costs on the higher scale within Ord. LXV. r. 9. Spettigue's Trusts, In re, 32 W. R. 385.

The allowance of the higher scale of fees does not depend upon the amount to be recovered, but upon the questions raised in the suit, and whether the suit is one which affects the entire property involved. Grimes v. Harrison, 27 Beav. 198; 28 L. J., Ch. 828; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 972.

Scientific Evidence—Plans.]—In an action against a port authority for damage to a ship owing to the alleged improper condition of the bed of the harbour, where a number of scientific witnesses were called to speak to the condition of the harbour and the strength of the ship, and several plans were used for such purpose, the court, having given judgment for the plaintiffs, made an order for costs on the higher scale. The Robin, [1892] P. 95; 67 L. T. 298; 7 Asp., M. C. 194.

Costs on the higher scale should be allowed in patent cases where scientific witnesses are necessarily called. Ellington v. Clark, 58 L. T. 818—C. A.

Intricacy.]—Where the nature and intricacy of a case render it necessary, costs on the higher scale may be allowed. Farrar v. Farrars, 59 L. T. 619.

Manner in which Case Conducted.]—In considering whether the costs of a cause shall be awarded upon the higher scale, the court will have regard to the importance of the questions in issue in the action, and also as to the manner in which the case has been prepared and conducted at the trial. Davies v. Davies, 56 L. J., Ch. 481; 36 Ch. D. 359; 56 L. T. 401; 35 W. R. 697.

Although a case as presented to the court may not be of special "difficulty" within the meaning of Ord. LXV. r. 9, leave will be given to the taxing-master to tax all or any part of the costs on the higher scale, if it appears on such taxation that the difficulty was removed by the expenditure of time, money, and learned industry. Fraser v. Brescia Steam Tramways Co., 56 L. T. 771.

Special Knowledge—Skill and Labour.]—Where a case is one requiring special knowledge on the part of those concerned in it, it is one of those exceptional cases in which costs on the higher scale ought to be allowed. Moseley v. Victoria Rubber Co., 57 L. T. 142.

An action for the recovery of large estates, the statement of claim in which set up a case of concealed fraud to avoid the operation of the Statute of Limitations, was dismissed without costs. The taxing-master, in taxing the costs of the plaintiff as between the solicitor and a person who had guaranteed their payment, taxed them on the lower scale, as coming within Ord. VI. r. 1 [repealed], and the Vice-Chancellor affirmed his decision:—Held, that the fact of the issue of fraud being raised was not a sufficient reason for directing the costs to be taxed on the higher scale, but that, to take the case out of the general rule that the costs of an action for the recovery of land are to be taxed on the lower scale, the solicitor must show that the case was one requiring extra skill or labour. Terrell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 473; 47 L. T. 588; 31 W. R. 208.

Witnesses examined in Court—Long Arguments.]—Costs should be allowed on the higher scale whenever witnesses are properly brought into court and a good deal of time is necessarily occupied in the argument. Lydney and Wigpool Iron Ore Co. v. Bird, 55 L. J., Ch. 383; 31 Ch. D. 328; 54 L. T. 242; 34 W. R. 437.

Trial lasting a Long Time.]—In an action brought against directors of a building society to make good losses arising from advances made by them and from paying rents, royalties, and expenses after taking possession of the property upon which money had been advanced, the trial lasted ten days; the court refused an application for costs on the higher scale, but allowed the costs of the shorthand notes of the evidence. Sheffield Building Society v. Aizlewood, 59 L. J., Ch. 34; 62 L. T. 678.

Importance and Difficulty.]—An action for the establishment of a right of great pecuniary value, and involving difficult questions of fact and law, was heard at great length on five days, and judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff. The principal defendant appealed. The appeal was argued on four days and judgment reserved. Ultimately the decision was reversed, and the action dismissed with costs:—Held, that, although the case was important and difficult, the court could not say that there were special grounds arising out of its importance and difficulty which would warrant giving costs on the higher scale. Williamson v. North Staffordshire Ry., 55 L. J., Ch. 938; 32 Ch. D. 399; 55 L. T. 452—C. A.

In a summons under the Settled Land Act, 1882, to obtain the direction of the court as to sale of certain settled estates and the disposal of the purchase-money, the court, on account of the difficulty of the case, allowed the costs of the application on the higher scale. Chaytor's Settled Estate Act, In re, 25 Ch. D. 651; 50 L. T. 88; 32 W. R. 517. See also Davies v. Davies, and The Horace, supra.

An action to recover damages (more than 3,000*l.*) for an alleged fraudulent misrepresentation upon the sale of a public-house was tried with a special jury, the trial lasting five days. The misrepresentation relied upon was that the "legitimate takings" of the house were represented by the vendor to be 500*l.* per week, whereas the takings-book shown to the purchaser was concocted, and the takings were not legitimate, but were brought about by giving overmeasure to the customers and a quality of liquor superior to that which was usual in the trade. About thirty witnesses, chiefly customers at the public-house before and since the sale, were called. The jury found a verdict for the defendant, and the judge gave judgment for him, with costs on the higher scale:—Held, that there were no special grounds arising out of the nature and importance or the difficulty of the case to warrant giving costs on the higher scale. Paine v. Chisholm, 60 L. J., Q. B. 413; [1891] 1 Q. B. 531; 39 W. R. 353—C. A.

Where Fraud alleged.]—The plaintiff in this action claimed relief on the ground of alleged fraudulent misrepresentations in the prospectus of a company, and upon the action being dismissed with costs the taxing-master allowed costs upon the higher scale. Before trial the plaintiff took out a certificate that the lower scale of fees was applicable to the case. The amount that the plaintiff claimed to recover was 40*l.*, paid by him in respect of shares of the company; he also claimed costs and damages and an indemnity:—Held, on adjourned summons to review the taxation and vary the certificate of the taxing-master, that the case did not come within the definitions of cases under Ord. VI. r. 1, of the Rules of August, 1875 [repealed], and that fraud being alleged, the court would exercise its discretion under r. 3 of the same order, and allow costs on the higher scale. Harrison v. Leutner, 52 L. J., Ch. 927; 24 Ch. D. 594; 49 L. T. 91; 31 W. R. 837. See Terrell, In re, supra.

No Difference of Fact.]—In an action to restrain the erection of buildings in which the plaintiff failed, the court refused to order the costs to be taxed on the higher scale, as there was no substantial difference of fact between the parties. Att.-Gen. v. Edwards, [1891] 1 Ch. 194.

Imitation of Trade Name.]—The plaintiffs in an action to restrain the defendants from using a trade name were ordered to pay costs on the higher scale. Turton v. Turton, 42 Ch. D. 128; 61 L. T. 571; 38 W. R. 22—C. A.

Infringement of Patent.] — Costs on the higher scale were allowed in an action for an alleged infringement of patent. Van Gelder v. Sowerby Bridge Flour Society, 59 L. J., Ch. 292; 44 Ch. D. 374; 62 L. T. 105.

Salvage Action.]—Salvage services were rendered by the steamship G. to the steamship R. and her cargo under a towage agreement which made no reference to cargo. Salvage was awarded in respect of ship and freight, but in a second salvage action in personam against the owners to recover salvage for services to the cargo:—Held, that there was no liability on the owners to pay salvage for the cargo, but that costs on the higher scale could not be awarded them, as there were no exceptional circumstances in the case. Cardiff Steamship Co. v. Barwick, 53 L. T. 56; 5 Asp., M. C. 473.

Injunction.]—In the case of an interlocutory injunction, the court refused to make an order that the costs should be allowed on the higher scale, though an important question was raised. Grafton v. Watson, 51 L. T. 141—C. A.

A submission to a perpetual injunction with costs by a defendant in an action for the infringement of a trade-mark does not afford a special ground upon which the court will direct taxation of the costs upon the higher scale under the provisions of Ord. LXV. r. 9. Hudson v. Osgerby, 50 L. T. 323; 32 W. R. 566.

An injunction was granted restraining a district board of works from erecting posts by the side of public footpaths so as to interfere with the due enjoyment of the plaintiff's market, but costs on the higher scale were refused. Horner v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 54 L. J., Ch. 148.

—— "Injury to Property"—Trespass.]—In Ord. VI. r. 2, of the Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs) [repealed], the "injury to property" must be a substantial physical injury, and does not include a trespass upon land without injury to the soil, though of a permanent character and committed in the assertion of title. Chapman v. Midland Ry. (5 Q. B. D. 167, 431) discussed. Goodhand v. Lysaught, 10 Q. B. D. 71. Affirming 52 L. J., Q. B. 97; 47 L. T. 701; 31 W. R. 114.

The plaintiff brought an action for damages for an alleged trespass under a claim of right, and prayed an injunction to restrain the defendant from a repetition of it. The issue was one of considerable importance as between the parties, and involved a lengthened and expensive inquiry into the title of property which had been in the possession of the plaintiff's family for more than three centuries. Upon the trial (without a jury) the plaintiff obtained judgment for nominal damages:—Held, not a case in which the court, in the exercise of its discretion under Ord. VI. r. 3, Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), would order the costs to be taxed upon the higher scale. Norfolk (Duke) v. Arbuthnot, 50 L. J., Q. B. 384; 6 Q. B. D. 279; 29 W. R. 337.

—— When the principal Relief Sought.]—In an action for trespass to land, the plaintiff claimed and obtained an injunction in addition to damages for the trespass. The nature of the trespass complained of did not involve any assertion of title or any injury of a permanent, irreparable character. The plaintiff claimed costs on the higher scale under Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), Ord. VI. r. 2 [repealed]:—Held, that this was not such an action for an injunction as to render the higher scale applicable within the rule. Chapman v. Midland Ry., 49 L. J., Q. B. 449; 5 Q. B. D. 431; 42 L. T. 612; 28 W. R. 592—C. A.

The plaintiff, the lessee and owner of a market, brought an action to recover damages for breaches of covenant against the tenants of certain houses within the market, and claimed an injunction to restrain the defendants from further breaches. The judge before whom the action was tried, holding that the injunction was the principal relief sought, and that the action was brought to establish a right, made an order, allowing the plaintiff costs on the "higher scale." The judge who tries the action has jurisdiction to make such an order under r. 3 of Ord. VI. of the rules as to costs [repealed], and should, in the exercise of his discretion, regard the intention of the legislature, as expressed in r. 2 of the same order. Horner v. Oyler, 49 L. J., C. P. 655.

The plaintiffs brought an action in the Chancery Division claiming an injunction to restrain the defendants from allowing the wall of their dock to remain below a certain height prescribed by act of parliament, and 9,000*l.* for damages in respect of injury to his houses and land, caused by a high tide overflowing the wall. The claim for an injunction was only added by amendment of the statement of claim. A perpetual injunction was granted and an inquiry directed as to damages before a special referee. The referee reported that the plaintiff was entitled to 1,941*l.* damages; this amount was reduced on the ground that it had been assessed upon a wrong principle. The taxing-master gave the plaintiff costs on the higher scale:—Held, that it was the duty of the taxing-master to consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances, an injunction was the principal relief sought, but that the court could, though it would not except in a clear case, interfere with his finding; that the action was really a common law action, though brought in the Chancery Division; that, in order to see which was the principal relief sought, the comparison must be made between the injunction and the damages claimed; that if no injunction had been asked, the defendants would, as a matter of business, have raised their wall to the proper height; and, therefore, that the plaintiff had not sustained the onus of proving that an injunction was the principal relief sought, and was only entitled to costs on the lower scale. Rust v. Victoria Graving Dock, 60 L. T. 645—C. A.

Agency Denied.]—The costs of a suit for the purpose of establishing a right to property against an alleged agent, who has denied the agency, and claimed the property as his own, do not come within the lower scale, although the property in question is under the amount or value of 1,000*l.* Stamford (Earl) v. Dawson, 36 L. J., Ch. 749; L. R. 4 Eq. 352; 16 L. T. 516; 15 W. R. 896.

Bill of Exchange.]—In an action on a bill of exchange properly brought in the Chancery Division, costs may be allowed on the higher scale under Ord. VI. rr. 2, 3 [repealed]. Pooley v. Driver, 5 Ch. D. 458.

Estate or Fund less than £1,000.]—A husband purported to devise six freehold cottages to his wife for life, with remainder to his nephew in fee, and bequeathed his personal estate, which amounted to upwards of 1,000*l.*, to his wife absolutely. The cottages were not in fact the property of the husband, but of his wife. After his death his widow sold the cottages to a purchaser in fee. Upon the death of the widow a purchaser of the nephew's supposed reversion under the will brought an action against her executors, claiming damages in consequence of her alleged wrongful sale, or compensation in consequence of her having elected to take the cottages against her husband's will, and, if necessary, administration of the estates of herself and her husband. At the trial of the action it was declared that the plaintiff was entitled to prove against the widow's estate (which was already being administered in another action) for the value of the cottages—subsequently assessed at 360*l.*, and for his costs in the action. In taxing the costs the master taxed them on the lower scale under Ord. VI. r. 1 [repealed], on the ground that the value of "the estate or fund dealt with" in the action was under 1,000*l.*:—Held, that the action was nothing more than an action for damages, and not within the causes and matters assigned to the Chancery Division by the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 34, and that consequently the lower scale applied. Rogers v. Jones, 7 Ch. D. 345; 38 L. T. 17.

In an administration action, where the estate consisted of personalty, and the equity of redemption in real estate and the gross value, including the amount of the mortgage debt, exceeded 1,000*l.*, but the net value of the interest possessed by the testator was less than that sum, the lower scale of costs was held to be applicable. Sanderson, In re, 7 Ch. D. 176; 38 L. T. 379; 26 W. R. 309.

In estimating the value of an estate of a testator for the purpose of ascertaining whether costs are to be paid on the higher or lower scale, the value of the estate at the death of the testator is to be looked at, although the costs of a suit to get in part of the assets may reduce that amount. Steward v. Nurse, 43 L. J., Ch. 384.

In a suit to enforce a charge or a lien for an amount under 1,000*l.* against the purchasers of real estate for an account of the amount due, and for a receiver and sale, the costs ought to be taxed upon the lower scale. Paddon v. Winch, 44 L. J., Ch. 568; L. R. 20 Eq. 449; 32 L. T. 794; 23 W. R. 787.

A mortgagor received an advance of 900*l.* from a building society, and conveyed to the society property to secure the payment by him of 900*l.* and interest in 120 instalments (amounting together to 1,275*l.*), and also of certain fines and charges in the event of his failing to pay the instalments. A decree for redemption was made, the costs of the suit to be added to the security:—Held, that as the sum originally advanced was less than 1,000*l.*, the costs must be taxed on the lower scale, and that the fines and charges which might be incurred could not for this purpose be considered as added to the sum advanced. Otterell v. Stratton, 43 L. J., Ch. 573; L. R. 9 Ch. 514; 30 L. T. 589; 22 W. R. 607.

Held, also, that the scale of taxation was not dependent on the amount due when the bill was filed. Ib.

The lower scale of costs directed by the general orders of the court must govern the taxation where a sum exceeding 1,000*l.* has been reduced below that amount by payments before suit. Judd v. Plumm, 30 L. J., Ch. 94; 9 W. R. 27.

The costs of a suit seeking relief by way of account in respect of alleged fraud and overcharges by a builder fall within the higher scale upon taxation as between party and party; and especially when the account sought to be taken includes sums far exceeding 1,000*l.*, and the amount of overcharge is fixed by the plaintiff at a sum exceeding that limit. Flockton v. Peake, 4 N. R. 456; 12 W. R. 1023.

ii. As between Solicitor and Client.

Jurisdiction to Order.]—The Court of Chancery formerly had, and the High Court of Justice now has, in matters of equitable jurisdiction, a general discretionary power to give costs as between solicitor and client. Whether the High Court has the same power in matters of common law jurisdiction, quære. Cockburn v. Edwards (18 Ch. D. 449) questioned. Mordue v. Palmer (L. R. 6 Ch. 22) approved. Andrews v. Barnes, 57 L. J., Ch. 694; 39 Ch. D. 133; 58 L. T. 748; 36 W. R. 705; 53 J. P. 4—C. A.

An arbitrator to whom the matters at issue in a suit, including the costs of the cause, have been referred by the Court of Chancery, has power to award costs as between solicitor and client. Mordue v. Palmer, 40 L. J., Ch. 8; L. R. 6 Ch. 22; 23 L. T. 752; 19 W. R. 86. See Hartnell v. Hill, Forrest, Ex. Rep. 74.

In a suit against an attorney, for the purpose of having his bills of costs on the plaintiff taxed, and for an injunction against his proceeding at law in the meantime, defendants moved that the costs might be taxed as between attorney and client; but the court said, that the rules of taxation of costs, as between attorney and client, did not apply where they appear in the court as party and party in a cause, and that these costs, therefore, must be taxed as between party and party. Spelman v. Woodbine, 1 Cox, 49.

In what cases Ordered.]—When an unsuccessful party has been ordered to pay costs, it is not the practice to direct such costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client, except where a fiduciary relation exists between the parties, or where there is something in the nature of scandal, as where gross charges of fraud have been made and not sustained; but the court may direct an unsuccessful party to pay the costs of a trustee as between solicitor and client, whether there is or not any fund out of which they may be paid. Turner v. Collins, 40 L. J., Ch. 614; L. R. 12 Eq. 438; 25 L. T. 264. See N. C., 41 L. J., Ch. 558; L. R. 7 Ch. 329; 25 L. T. 779; 20 W. R. 305.

—— Fraud.]—Costs as between attorney and client against parties to a fraudulent bankruptcy, except those who discovered and gave evidence; and the attorney deprived of the office of master extraordinary, and committed. Thorp, Ex parte, 1 Ves. J. 394.

A plaintiff, in a bill to enforce against the defendant an alleged agreement for the compromise of claims of the plaintiff against the defendant in respect of accounts, charged the defendant with various frauds in respect of the accounts, such alleged frauds being the ground of the claims included in the compromise. The plaintiff having failed in proving the agreement, and his bill being dismissed with costs, he was ordered to pay the defendant's costs so far as they had been increased by the irrelevant charges of fraud, as between solicitor and client. Forester v. Read, L. R. 6 Ch. 40; 24 L. T. 79.

—— Scandal.]—On a successful appeal from an order overruling exceptions for scandal, the appellant was allowed his costs of appeal as well as his costs in the court below, as between solicitor and client. Christie v. Christie, 42 L. J., Ch. 544; L. R. 8 Ch. 499; 28 L. T. 607; 21 W. R. 493. See Pearse v. Pearse, 29 L. T. 453; 22 W. R. 69.

In cases of scandal the costs are as between solicitor and client. Porter, Ex parte, Robinson, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 220.

Affidavit in bankruptcy ordered to be taken off the file as irrelevant and scandalous, with costs as between attorney and client. Simpson, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 476; 10 R. R. 104.

Trusts.]—An action was brought by the vicar and churchwardens of a parish to recover from the defendants a fund of small amount which had been handed over to them upon trust for a charitable purpose connected with the parish, but, as the plaintiffs alleged, upon a condition which had become incapable of fulfilment. The plaintiffs failed to make out their case. The court, in dismissing the action, being of opinion that it had been brought wholly without justification, ordered the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the defendants as between solicitor and client; and the Court of Appeal refused to interfere with the judgment. Andrews v. Barnes, supra. And see also TRUST AND TRUSTEE.

—— Mortgage.]—A taxation at the instance of a mortgagor of the bill of the mortgagee's solicitor, must be as between the solicitor and his client, the mortgagee. Wells. In re, 8 Beav. 416; 14 L. J., Ch. 215; 9 Jur. 820. S. P., Harrison, In re, 10 Beav. 57; 16 L. J., Ch. 170; 11 Jur. 197; and see MORTGAGE.

—— Will—Representation Order.]—On an adjourned summons for the decision of the court as to the construction of a will, three classes of issue were interested under the will, and representation orders had been made in respect of each class:—Held, that costs must be allowed as between solicitor and client. Davies, In re, Jenkins v. Davies, 64 L. T. 824.

—— Against Receiver.]—An adverse application was made against a receiver by a party to the cause, which was refused with costs. The applicant being wholly unable to pay the costs:—Held, that the receiver was entitled to be indemnified and have his costs, as between solicitor and client, out of the fund in hand belonging to incumbrancers. Courand v. Hanmer, 9 Beav. 3.

—— Highway Act.]—Section 109 of the Highway Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50) provides that where an action is brought against any person for anything done under the authority of the act, and judgment shall be given for the defendant, he shall have costs as between attorney and client:—Held, that this did not apply to an action for an injunction in the Chancery Division. Pullin v. Deffel, 64 L. T. 134.

—— Proceedings without Authority.—A suit instituted by a solicitor without authority was dismissed on motion, with costs of the suit, and of the motion, as between solicitor and client. Allen v. Bone, 4 Beav. 493.

A bill was filed by a solicitor as next friend, charging that the plaintiff was of unsound mind, against the plaintiff's housekeeper, to restrain her from exercising undue influence over the plaintiff. Proceedings directed by the court to be taken by the next friend in lunacy to ascertain the state of plaintiff's mind having resulted in a dismissal by the lords justices of the next friend's petition in lunacy with costs, the plaintiff applied to have the bill taken off the file, and Malins, V.-C., made an order accordingly, but, being of opinion that the suit had not been instituted by the next friend without reasonable cause, gave no costs. On appeal upon the subject of costs, the lords justices, in reversal pro tanto of the Vice-Chancellor's order, gave costs to the plaintiff as between solicitor and client, and to the defendant as between party and party. Palmer v. Walesby, 37 L. J., Ch. 612; 19 L. T. 1. See Davies v. Davies, 18 L. T. 701.

A person who has been made plaintiff without authority is entitled to full indemnity; and a defendant who, by reason of the bill being ordered to be taken off the file, cannot be heard on the merits, is entitled to costs as if the cause had come to a hearing, and the bill been dismissed on the merits. Ib.

Taxation.]—Costs directed by decree to be taxed as between a solicitor and client, cannot, on petition, be ordered to be taxed on another principle. Massie v. Drake, 4 Beav. 533.

The 159th General Order does not affect or regulate the taxation of costs as between solicitor and client. Brangan v. Gorges, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 225.

What Costs included.]—By a decree, the costs of all parties were ordered to be taxed as between solicitor and client. Upon a rehearing, the decree was affirmed, and the deposit was ordered to be returned, but nothing was said as to costs. By a subsequent order, the costs of all parties were ordered to be taxed, as between solicitor and client, from the last taxation:—Held, that this did not include the costs of the rehearing. Agabeg v. Hartwell, 5 Beav. 271.

A solicitor's bill having been partly taxed and paid, an order, obtained as of course, referring the bill generally for taxation, was discharged with costs. The conduct of the solicitor cannot be adduced in support of such an order, and the costs of affidavits upon that subject were ordered to be paid as between solicitor and client. Clutton v. Pardon, Turn. & R. 301. And see Gretton v. Leyburne, Ib., 407.

Where proceedings in an action were stayed by a judge's order on payment by the defendant of the debt and costs, to be taxed as between attorney and client, the costs of obtaining the leave of the Court of Chancery to bring the action, the plaintiff having, on a creditors' bill being there filed, been restrained from bringing an action against persons indebted to the estate without the leave of the court, were not allowed. Lipscombe v. Turner, 1 B. C. Rep. 101: 4 D. & L. 125; 15 L. J., Q. B. 410.

Where the costs of an ejectment have been taxed, the plaintiff cannot in an action for mesne profits recover costs as between attorney and client; and it makes no difference that the costs have been taxed on the application of the defendant. Doe v. Filliter, 2 D. & L. 186; 13 M. & W. 47; 13 L. J., Ex. 275.

iii. County Court Scale. See infra.

iv. Double Costs.

a. In what Cases.

Order LXV. r. 1—Discretion.]—Ord. LXV. r. 1, does not apply to costs which are given by a statute as a matter of right. Thus, in an action brought for anything done in pursuance of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, a successful defendant is entitled to double costs as a matter of right. Hasker v. Wood, 54 L. J., Q. B. 419; 33 W. R. 697—C. A.

—— Full and Reasonable Indemnity.]—The provisions of the Judicature Act and Order LXV. r. 1, do not apply to costs which are specially given by statute to a particular individual as a matter of right, and therefore in an action brought to recover penalties for infringement of dramatic copyright under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 2. a successful plaintiff is entitled, as a matter of right, to the full and reasonable indemnity as to costs, substituted by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 2, for the double costs given by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 2. Hasker v. Wood (54 L. J., Q. B. 419) followed. Reeve v. Gibson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 451; [1891] 1 Q. B. 652; 39 W. R. 420—C. A.

Before 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97.]—A magistrate who obtained a verdict in an action against him for an act done in his judicial capacity, there being nothing upon the face of the record to show that he was sued as a magistrate, must have procured the certificate of the judge who tried the cause, as a condition precedent, to have enabled him to obtain double costs under 7 Jac. 1, c. 5. Penny v. Slade, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 469: 7 Scott, 484; 7 D. P. C. 440; 2 Arn. 75; 8 L. J., C. P. 221.

A justice of the peace was not entitled to have a suggestion entered on the roll, that the action was brought against him for an act done by him as a justice of the peace, in order to obtain double costs. Fosbrook v. Hall, 1 M. & W. 205; 4 D. P. C. 701; 1 Gale, 440; 1 Tyr. & G. 464; 5 L. J., Ex. 152.

A suggestion was only necessary when there would otherwise be an inconsistency on the record, and was not necessary to be entered to give a party double costs. Maberly v. Titterton, 7 M. & W. 540; 9 D. P. C. 234; 10 L. J., Ex. 172; 5 Jur. 250.

A court of requests act enacted, that, in any action for any thing done in pursuance of the act, if upon a verdict or demurrer judgment should be given against the plaintiff, the defendant should recover treble costs:—Held, that the defendant, who had obtained a verdict without calling witnesses, the plaintiff having failed to establish his case, was entitled to treble costs, without having entered any suggestion on the roll, or given the act of parliament in evidence at the trial. Forman v. Dawes, 1 D. & L. 299; 11 M. & W. 730; 12 L. J., Ex. 437.

The court would not, on the last day of term, grant a rule nisi for the plaintiff to bring in the record, in order to enter a suggestion to entitle the defendant to double costs. Anon., 4 Man. & G. 906.

b. How Computed.

The true mode of estimating the amount of double costs, is, first, to allow the defendant the single costs, including the expenses of witnesses, counsel's fees, &c., and then to allow him one-half of the amount of the single costs, without making any deduction on account of counsel's or court fees. Stanniland v. Ludlam, 7 D. & R. 484; 4 B. & C. 889.

Where treble costs are given by an act of parliament to parties sued for anything done in pursuance of the act, in the event of a verdict passing in favour of the defendants, if there are some issues found for the plaintiff and others for the defendants, the proper mode of taxing the costs is first to calculate those of the defendants and treble them, and from the amount subtract the single costs due to the plaintiff on the issues on which he has succeeded. Wilson v. Dunn River Co., 7 D. P. C. 369; 5 M. & W. 89; 8 L. J., Ex. 161; 3 Jur. 343.

The double costs given to magistrates by 21 Jac. 1, c. 12, s. 5, were those costs only which were recoverable in the ordinary course of law, doubled. Thomas v. Saunders, 3 N. & M. 572; 1 A. & E. 552.

I. EFFECT OF COUNTY COURTS ACT.

Section 116, 51 & 52 Vict. c. 43.

1. In what Cases Applicable.

Claim on Contract, and Counterclaim.]—In an action of contract the defendant counterclaimed. By the award of a special referee it was found that the plaintiffs were entitled on their claim to 13*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, and that the defendant was entitled on the counterclaim to 63*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*:—Held, that by reason of the provisions of s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the costs of the issues found for them on the claim. Lund v. Campbell (14 Q. B. D. 821) distinguished. Ahrbecker v. Frost, 55 L. J., Q. B. 477; 17 Q. B. D. 606; 55 L. T. 264; 34 W. R. 789.

In an action tried by a jury, in which the plaintiff proves a claim, but a counterclaim of less amount is proved by the defendant, the plaintiff recovers judgment for the balance only, and if no order as to costs is made, the plaintiff's right to costs under the County Courts Act, 1867, and Ord. LV. of the Judicature Acts, must be decided with reference to that balance and not to the amount of the claim proved. Staples v. Young, 2 Ex. D. 324; 25 W. R. 304. S. P., Ryan v. Fraser, 16 L. R. Ir. 253—C. A.

The plaintiff claimed on a balance of account a sum of money exceeding 50*l.* The defendant pleaded a set-off, and also made a counterclaim for goods supplied to the amount of about 24*l.* The action was referred to a master, the costs of the action to abide the event. The master certified that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiff on the claim 16*l.*, and from the plaintiff to the defendant on the counterclaim 23*l.*, and that the balance due from the plaintiff to the defendant was 7*l.*:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to his costs. Chatfield v. Sedgwick, 4 C. P. D. 459; 27 W. R. 790—C. A.

An action was brought claiming, first, 10*l.* for rent; secondly, 100*l.* as damages for breach of covenant in a lease of premises; and, thirdly, 30*l.* for conversion of the plaintiff's goods. The defendant pleaded, admitting that the rent was due, but denying the breach of covenant and conversion, and setting up a counterclaim for 100*l.* damages for breach of covenant by the plaintiff, and 15*l.* for money due for the use and occupation of other premises. The action was referred to an arbitrator by an order made by consent upon the terms that "the costs of the action should abide the event of the award, and that the costs of the reference and award should be in the discretion of the arbitrator." The arbitrator found that the plaintiff was entitled to 10*l.* for rent; that the defendant had broken his covenant in the lease, and had been guilty of the conversion charged, and he awarded that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of such breach of covenant and conversion the sum of 25*l.*, making together 35*l.* awarded to the plaintiff; that the plaintiff had broken his covenant, and that the defendant was entitled to recover in respect of that breach 20*l.*; and upon the whole matter he found that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in the action 15*l.* and no more:—Held, that the provision in the order of reference as to costs did not alter the rights of the parties, and that upon the true construction of s. 67 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the plaintiff was entitled to the costs on the claim, and the defendant to his costs on the counterclaim. Staples v. Young (2 Ex. D. 324) questioned. Chatfield v. Sedgwick (4 C. P. D. 459) discussed. Stooke v. Taylor, 49 L. J., Q. B. 857; 5 Q. B. D. 569; 43 L. T. 200; 29 W. R. 49; 44 J. P. 748.

The plaintiff claimed a balance of 114*l.* 8*s.*, and the defendant established a counterclaim to the extent of 109*l.* 16*s.*; whereupon the judge directed the jury (as the result of their answers to certain questions submitted to them) to find a verdict for the plaintiff for the balance, 4*l.* 12*s.*, and no order was made as to costs. The court refused to alter the associate's certificate of the findings of the jury for the purpose of assisting the defendant to obtain costs upon his counterclaim. Staples v. Young (supra) and Blake v. Appleyard (supra) considered. Potter v. Chambers, 48 L. J., C. P. 274; 4 C. P. D. 69; 39 L. T. 350; 27 W. R. 414.

Where an action of contract is commenced in the High Court of Justice for a sum exceeding 50*l.*, and the plaintiff establishes his claim to the amount, but in consequence of a counterclaim being decided in favour of the defendant the plaintiff recovers judgment for a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, he is not deprived of his costs by virtue of the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, extended to actions in the high court by the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 67, for the relief sought by him could not, within the meaning of the latter section, have been given by a county court. Potter v. Chambers, 48 L. J., C. P. 274; 4 C. P. D. 457; 27 W. R. 414.

The plaintiffs claimed on a balance of account a sum of money exceeding 50*l.* The defendants denied their indebtedness, and pleaded by way of set-off and counterclaim that the plaintiffs were indebted to them for money advanced and money due for work done, and goods sold and delivered, and they claimed a balance on the accounts in their favour exceeding 50*l.* The cause was referred to an arbitrator, costs to abide the event. The arbitrator found that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiffs in a sum exceeding 50*l.*, and that the plaintiffs were indebted in like manner to the defendants in a sum exceeding 50*l.*, but that a balance was due to the plaintiffs on the whole account of 11*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.*:—Held, by Kelly, C.B., that the plaintiffs and the defendants were each entitled to the costs of the issues on which they had succeeded, on the ground that the relief sought could not be given in a county court; and by Hawkins, J., contrary to his own opinion, but on the authority of Potter v. Chambers (4 C. P. D. 457), that the plaintiffs were entitled to their general costs of action. Neale v. Clarke, 4 Ex. D. 286; 41 L. T. 438.

—— Distributing Findings.]—In an action for freight the plaintiff claimed about 50*l.*, and the defendants counterclaimed about 10*l.* for damage to the cargo, paying the remaining 40*l.* into court. The action was remitted to a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, and the registrar certified a verdict for the plaintiff for 16*s.*:—Held, that the court would alter the certificate by distributing the findings on the issues, so as to enable the defendant to be allowed the costs of his counterclaim. Davidson v. Gray, 5 Ex. D. 189, n.; 42 L. T. 834—C. A.

Reference back to find Specific Issues.]—The plaintiff, who had built two houses for the defendant at a contract price of 1,135*l.*, sued for 169*l.* 16*s.*, the balance of the price, and for other small items. The defendant raised various defences, and also counterclaimed 1,200*l.* for penalties for delay and for damages arising from bad work. The pleadings went as far as surrejoinder, after which the cause, with all matters in difference, was referred to an architect as arbitrator, upon the terms, inter alia, that the costs of action, reference, and award should follow the event, unless the arbitrator should otherwise order. The arbitrator by an award, silent as to costs, awarded 3*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* to the defendant in respect of the action and matters in difference:—Held, that the word "event" ought to be construed distributively, and the award remitted to the arbitrator to find specific issues. Ellis v. Desilva, 50 L. J., Q. B. 328; 6 Q. B. D. 521; 44 L. T. 209; 29 W. R. 493—C. A.

Claim that cannot be brought in County Court.]—A plaintiff recovered 76*l.* in contract, and the defendant 64*l.* The plaintiff is not deprived of his costs by s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, as such action, being for more than 50*l.*, could not have been brought in the county court. Goldhill v. Clarke, 5 R. 75; 68 L. T. 414.

The County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, applies to actions which cannot be brought in a county court. Sampson v. Mackay, 10 B. & S. 694; 38 L. J., Q. B. 245; L. R. 4 Q. B. 643; 20 L. T. 807; 17 W. R. 883. See now s. 116 of County Courts Act, 1888.

But the circumstance that the action could only be brought in a superior court is to be taken into consideration by the court or a judge in exercising their discretion under that section. Ib.

—— Slander.]—A. suing B. for an assault, with a count for slander, and obtaining a verdict on the first count for 5*l.*, but failing to establish a cause of action on the second count, is entitled to no costs. Smith v. Harnor, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 829.

In an action for slander commenced in a superior court after the passing of the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, a verdict was found for the plaintiff for 10*l.*, and the judge refused to certify. On an application to the court for costs:—Held, assuming s. 5 to apply to cases in which the county court had no jurisdiction, that, as the plaintiff had recovered an amount much beyond what would have entitled him to costs under the general law applicable to actions for slander, and as he could not have sued in the county court, he ought to be allowed his costs. Gray v. West, 9 B. & S. 196; 38 L. J., Q. B. 78; L. R. 4 Q. B. 175; 20 L. T. 221; 17 W. R. 497.

The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, applies to all actions, whether capable of being commenced or not in the county court. In an action for slander the plaintiff recovered 5*l.* damages in a superior court. On an application for a rule for costs:—Held, that inasmuch as he had necessarily brought his action in a superior court, and had recovered an amount of damages sufficient, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to warrant the inference that his conduct in bringing it was neither frivolous nor vexatious, he was entitled to a rule for costs. Craven v. Smith, 38 L. J., Ex. 90; L. R. 4 Ex. 146; 20 L. T. 400; 17 W. R. 710.

—— Title to Land.]—The provision of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, authorising a judge to grant a certificate for costs, where the cause of action is one for which a plaint could not have been brought in a county court, does not apply to the case where, to a good cause of action which might have been brought in the county court, the plaintiff joins a claim of title to land which, at the trial, proves to be unfounded. Blackmore v. Higgs, 33 L. J., C. P. 157; 15 C. B. (N.S.) 790; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 703; 10 L. T. 33; 12 W. R. 476.

In an action brought in the high court the plaintiff alleged that he was the owner in fee simple of certain premises the value of which exceeded 50*l.* by the year, and he claimed damages for the injury done to his reversion by the defendant's interference with the flow of water in a pipe laid through the defendant's land, to which the plaintiff claimed to be exclusively entitled in respect of his own premises. The defendant admitted the value of the premises, but by his pleading denied the plaintiff's title, and set up a title to the use of the water in himself:—Held, that, by reason of the question of title which was involved, the action was not one which could have been commenced in the county court, and consequently that the plaintiff, who had recovered less than 10*l.*, was not deprived of his costs by sect. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888. Howorth v. Sutcliffe, 64 L. J., Q. B. 729; [1895] 2 Q. B. 358; 14 R. 722; 73 L. T. 277; 44 W. R. 33; 59 J. P. 678—C. A.

A jury returned a verdict of 3*l.* 10*s.* in an action for damages to the plaintiff's reversion by removing stones, &c. The pleas denied his interest and set up a right under a crown lease. The defendant abandoned at the trial all questions as to the plaintiff's interest and grounded his right under a reservation in an inclosure act only:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to costs. Williams v. Jones, 15 L. T. 248; 15 W. R. 133.

That plaintiff would have got a very small sum in damages, or reported due to him upon the account, is not to preclude him from costs, if the title to the land is in question, and he proves his right. Plaintiff, if he chooses to waive it, cannot be compelled to go into the office to take the account. Hearne v. Riverston (Lord), 2 Moll. 487.

The plea of not possessed, to an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, does not oust the jurisdiction of a county court; and if the title did not come in question on the trial, and the plaintiff recovers a sum not exceeding 5*l.* he is not entitled to costs. Latham v. Spedding, 2 L. M. & P. 378; 17 Q. B. 440; 20 L. J., Q. B. 302; 15 Jur. 576.

In an action of trespass, where the main issue to be determined was one of title to land, the plaintiffs claimed an injunction and damages. The action was tried before a judge with a jury. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiffs with 40*s.* damages. The judge gave judgment for the plaintiffs, and granted the injunction, but made no order as to costs:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to costs. St. John's College, Cambridge v. Pierrepont, 61 L. J., Q. B. 19; 66 L. T. 88.

—— Breach of Promise of Marriage.]—By Ord. LXV. r. 12, in actions founded on contract in which the plaintiff recovers by judgment or otherwise a sum (exclusive of costs) not exceeding 50*l.*, he shall be entitled to no more costs than he would have been entitled to had he brought his action in a county court, unless the court or a judge otherwise orders:—Held, that this rule does not apply to actions which could not have been brought in a county court. Saywood v. Cross, 54 L. J., Q. B. 17; 14 Q. B. D. 53; 51 L. T. 601; 33 W. R. 135.

Counterclaim against Third Party.]—Semble, that when a counterclaim is against a person not a party to the action, s. 24, sub-s. 3, of the Judicature Act, 1883, and Ord. XXI. rr. 11, 12, 13, 14. do not render s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, applicable to such a counterclaim. Lewin v. Trimming, 21 Q. B. D. 230; 59 L. T. 511; 37 W. R. 16.

Not applying to Costs of Counterclaim.] — Ord. LXV. r. 12, by which a plaintiff, who recovers a sum not exceeding 50*l.* in an action of contract, is entitled only to costs on the county court scale unless the court or a judge otherwise orders, does not apply to the case of a counterclaim. Where, therefore, a plaintiff recovered 48*l.* on his claim, and also succeeded upon a counterclaim for 12*l.*:—Held, that for the purposes of taxation the claim and counterclaim must be treated as independent actions; that the costs of the counterclaim followed the ordinary rule as to costs, and that the plaintiff was entitled to have the costs of his defence to the counterclaim taxed on the high court scale. Aman v. Bobbett, 58 L. J., Q. B. 219; 22 Q. B. D. 543; 60 L. T. 912; 37 W. R. 329—C. A.

The County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, does not apply to counterclaims, so that where a plaintiff proves a claim for 40*l.*, and the defendant a counterclaim in tort for 10*l.*, the defendant in the absence of any order as to costs, will be entitled to the costs of proving his counterclaim and of the issues, so far as they relate thereto. Blake v. Appleyard, 47 L. J., Ex. 407; 3 Ex. D. 195; 26 W. R. 592.

In an action for work and labour done, the plaintiff recovered a verdict for 20*l.* and costs on his claim, and also obtained a verdict with costs on a counterclaim for board and lodging:—Held, that he was entitled to the full costs of the counterclaim, and, in addition thereto, the costs of the original action, in so far as the same were not included in the costs of the counterclaim. Griffiths v. Patterson, 22 L. R., Ir. 656—C. A.

Specific Performance.]—A suit for specific performance of sale of leasehold property for 150*l.*, subject to rent of 92*l.* 10*s.* and covenant to keep insured, is a proper case to allow full costs, notwithstanding 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142. Carpmael v. Carvell, 18 W. R. 513.

Foreclosure Action.]—In an action to foreclose a mortgage for 65*l.*, where both plaintiff and defendant resided at the same place:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled only to such costs as he would have obtained in the county court. Simons v. McAdam (L. R. 6 Eq. 324), followed. Crozier v. Dowsett, 55 L. J., Ch. 210; 31 Ch. D. 67; 53 L. T. 592; 34 W. R. 267.

In a suit to foreclose a mortgage for 40*l.*, where both plaintiff and defendant lived at the same place:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled only to such costs as he would have obtained in the county court. Simons v. Meldam, 37 L. J., Ch. 751 ; L. R. 6 Eq. 324 ; 18 L. T. 678 ; 16 W. R. 693.

Copyright—Infringement—Less than £10 recovered.]—Under the provisions of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 2, a successful plaintiff in an action for penalties for infringement of dramatic copyright was entitled to receive double costs. Double costs given by any public act are abolished by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 2, which substitutes for such costs a full and reasonable indemnity, to be taxed by the proper officer. In an action for infringement of dramatic copyright under the above act, the plaintiff claimed six penalties of 40*s.* each. The defendant paid into court 8*l.* in respect of four of such penalties, and the plaintiff took the money out of court in satisfaction of so much of the claim in respect of which it was paid in, and proceeded to tax his costs under Ord. XXII. r. 7. The master refused to tax on the ground that plaintiff, having recovered a sum of less than 10*l.* in an action founded on tort, was not entitled to costs by reason of the provision of s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888 :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have his costs taxed. Reere v. Gibson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 451 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 652 ; 64 L. T. 141 ; 39 W. R. 420.

Where Solicitor is Plaintiff.]—Section 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, which deprives plaintiffs in actions commenced in the high court of costs if less than 20*l.* in contract, or 10*l.* in tort, is recovered, applies to an action in which a solicitor is plaintiff. Blair v. Eisler, 57 L. J., Q. B. 512 ; 21 Q. B. D. 185 ; 59 L. T. 337 ; 36 W. R. 767.

Costs of Execution.]—Section 30 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, does not deprive a plaintiff of the costs of a writ of execution. Armitage v. Jessop, 36 L. J., C. P. 63 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 12 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 963 ; 15 L. T. 214 ; 15 W. R. 130.

Agreement to Refer.]—The parties by a reference in an action may contract themselves out of the provisions of the County Courts Act as to costs when less than 20*l.* is recovered. Lang v. Eakin, 16 W. R. 60.

Action against County Court Bailiff.]—A bailiff of a county court, who is sued for taking goods under an execution of that court, is within the exception of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128 ; and the plaintiff in such action, unless he recovers more than 20*l.*, or the judge certifies, is deprived of costs by s. 139. Man v. Buckerfield, 2 L. M. & P. 55 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 265 ; 15 Jur. 57.

Transfer to County Court—Less than £50 recovered.]—If in an action commenced in the high court and transferred to a county court less than 50*l.* is recovered, s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, applies, and not s. 65, and only county court costs can be given as to any part of the action—Per Kay, L.J. Harris v. Judge, 61 L. J., Q. B. 577 ; [1892] 2 Q. B. 565 ; 67 L. T. 19 ; 41 W. R. 9.

—— Less than £20 recovered.]—Where an action commenced in the high court is transferred to the county court under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and results in a judgment for the plaintiff for less than 20*l.*, the plaintiff is entitled to his costs subsequent to the transfer but not to his costs incurred before such transfer, unless he obtains a certificate under s. 116. Armitage v. Fison, 67 L. T. 415.

Section 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888 (relating to actions on contract in which less than 20*l.* is recovered), applies to actions brought in the high court and transferred to the county court under s. 65 ; it applies to all the costs in such actions, including those costs incurred after the order of transfer. Armitage v. Fison (67 L. T. 415) overruled. White v. Cohen, 62 L. J., Q. B. 274 ; [1893] 1 Q. B. 580 ; 4 R. 352 ; 68 L. T. 305 ; 41 W. R. 396—C. A.

Removal of Action to Superior Court.]—Although an action may have been moved from a county court into a superior court at the instance of the defendant, the judge may refuse to certify for the costs of a plaintiff recovering a sum insufficient to carry costs under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5. Flitters v. Allfrey, 44 L. J., C. P. 10, n. ; L. R. 10 C. P. 29 ; 31 L. T. 881.

A plaintiff commenced an action in detinue in the Mayor's Court. At the instance of the defendant it was removed by certiorari into the Queen's Bench, where the plaintiff recovered 3*l.* The judge who tried the cause refused to certify under s. 5. to give him his costs :—Held, that he was not entitled to his costs of the action. Pellas v. Breslauer, 40 L. J., Q. B. 161 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 438 ; 24 L. T. 762 ; 19 W. R. 779.

Order XIV.—Less than £50 recovered.]—By the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 116, if in an action founded on contract, the plaintiff shall recover a sum of 20*l.* or upwards, but less than 50*l.*, he shall not be entitled to any more costs than he would have been entitled to if the action had been brought in a county court. Provided that, if in any action founded on contract the plaintiff shall within twenty-one days after the service of the writ, or within such further time as may be ordered by the high court or a judge thereof, obtain an order under Ord. XIV. empowering him to enter judgment for 20*l.* or upwards, he shall be entitled to costs according to the scale for the time being in use in the supreme court. The plaintiff, in an action founded on contract, claimed 48*l.* He obtained leave under Ord. XIV. to sign judgment for 45*l.*, and proceeding to trial recovered the balance of his claim with costs :—Held, that he was entitled by s. 116 (2) of the County Courts Act, 1888, to the costs of the whole action on the high court scale, although he had recovered less than 50*l.* Barker v. Hempstead, 58 L. J., Q. B. 369 ; 23 Q. B. D. 8 ; 60 L. T. 640 ; 37 W. R. 685.

An action of contract brought in the high court for more than 50*l.* was remitted to the county court after the plaintiffs had recovered less than 20*l.* under Ord. XIV. They recovered in all less than 50*l.* :—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to costs on the supreme court scale in respect of the part of the proceedings which had taken place in the high court. Wilson v. Statham, 60 L. J., Q. B. 725 ; [1891] 2 Q. B. 261 ; 39 W. R. 686.

Effect of, on Arbitrations.]—See ARBITRATION.

Reference of Action—Costs to abide the Event—Sum Recovered.]—By an order made by consent of the parties, an action on a building contract was referred to an arbitrator to ascertain the amount, if any, due from the defendant to the plaintiff, "the costs of the action, reference, and award, to abide the event." The arbitrator found the sum due to the plaintiff was 19*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.*, upon which an order was made for judgment for the plaintiff for that sum without costs:—Held, that the plaintiff had recovered in the action by judgment a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, and that he was therefore deprived of his costs of the action by the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, unless he got a certificate or order under that section. Jones v. Jones (7 C. B. (N.S.) 832) overruled. Fergusson v. Davison, 51 L. J., Q. B. 266; 8 Q. B. D. 470; 46 L. T. 191; 30 W. R. 462—C. A.

The act does not apply to the case of a reference without any action. Ib.

Where a cause was referred, before trial, by a judge's order, with power to certify the costs of the cause, to abide the event of the cause, and the award was 3*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.* to the plaintiff, but without a certificate:—Held, that the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, did not apply, there being no recovery by judgment; and that he was entitled to the costs of the cause. Jones v. Jones, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 832; 29 L. J., C. P. 151; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 826; 1 L. T. 373; 8 W. R. 243. See preceding case.

Where a cause is referred, by consent of parties, after issue joined, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the arbitrator finds all the issues for the plaintiff, and awards that a sum not exceeding 20*l.* is due from the defendant to the plaintiff in respect of the breaches of contract alleged in the declaration, the plaintiff recovers that sum within 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, and is deprived of costs by that section. Cowell v. Amman Aberdare Colliery Co., 6 B. & S. 333; 34 L. J., Q. B. 161; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 687; 12 L. T. 451; 13 W. R. 715.

Where a plaintiff, upon a compulsory order of reference, by which the costs of the cause are to abide the event of the award, recovers less than 10*l.*, he is not entitled to costs, without an order. Robertson v. Sterne, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 248; 31 L. J., C. P. 362; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 332; 7 L. T. 462; 11 W. R. 94.

A plaintiff sued L. for 365*l.* for goods sold and delivered. On the day after the writ was issued L. paid to the plaintiff 319*l.* which he accepted on account of his claim. After declaration L. pleaded in abatement the non-joinder of H., whereupon the plaintiff amended the writ and declaration under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 38, by adding the name of H. as joint contractor. Both defendants pleaded never indebted, and also a plea that after the writ in the action had been issued against the defendant L. and before the action was commenced against the other defendant by amendment pursuant to s. 38, the defendants satisfied the plaintiffs' claim by payment. The cause having been referred to an arbitrator, costs to abide the event, with power to the arbitrator to certify as a judge at nisi prius, the arbitrator by his award found that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiff in 322*l.*, and that the defendants did, as in their plea alleged, satisfy 319*l.*, part of such debt, by payment, and the arbitrator directed that the verdict should therefore be entered for the plaintiff for 3*l.*, being the difference between the two sums of 322*l.* and 319*l.*, and he gave no certificate as to costs:—Held, that the only action in which the plaintiff recovered being the action against both defendants, he was deprived of his costs by the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, inasmuch as he recovered in that action less than 20*l.*, and he was not allowed to tax his costs of the cause against L. alone. Balmain v. Lickfold, 44 L. J., C. P. 94; L. R. 10 C. P. 203; 32 L. T. 67; 23 W. R. 310.

A cause having been referred, together with all matters in difference between the parties, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the reference, the arbitrator awarded—first, as to the cause, that there was due to the plaintiff from the defendant, the sum of 259*l.* 1*s.*; and, secondly, as to the matters in difference other than the cause, that there was due from the plaintiff to the defendant the sum of 242*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.*, and the arbitrator directed the latter sum to be allowed out of and deducted from the damages and costs recoverable by the plaintiff in the action, and the balance to be paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that the event of the reference was in favour of the plaintiff, and that he was not precluded from recovering his costs of the action by the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5. Stevens v. Chapman, 40 L. J., Ex. 123; L. R. 6 Ex. 213; 24 L. T. 478; 19 W. R. 958.

An action of slander after issue joined and before trial, was by agreement referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator found one issue for the plaintiff, with twenty shillings damages:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the cause. Frean v. Sargent, 2 H. & C. 293; 32 L. J., Ex. 281; 8 L. T. 467; 11 W. R. 808.

A verdict was taken at the trial for 13*l.*, subject to a reference. The costs of the cause were to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator ordered that the verdict should be reduced to 2*l.* 16*s.* 11½*d.*:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs, the reference having been after verdict given. Smith v. Edge, 2 H. & C. 659; 33 L. J., Ex. 9; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1300; 9 L. T. 445; 12 W. R. 133.

A cause was referred, and by the order of reference the party in whose favour the award should be made was to be at liberty to enter up judgment for the sum awarded, as if a verdict had been obtained. The arbitrator awarded 20*l.*:—Held, that the costs must be taxed according to the reduced scale. Waller v. Smith, 3 M. & W. 136; 6 D. P. C. 103; M. & H. 326; 7 L. J., Ex. 15.

Where a cause is referred at nisi prius, care should be taken to give the arbitrator the same power of certifying that it was a fit cause to be tried before a judge as the judge at nisi prius would have had; since otherwise, if he awarded to the plaintiff a sum under 20*l.*, the master will not be warranted in taxing the costs, either as between party and party, or between attorney and client, except according to the reduced scale. Wallen v. Smith, 5 M. & W. 159; 7 D. P. C. 394; 2 H. & H. 1; 8 L. J., Ex. 164.

In an action on an attorney's bill, to which there was a set-off, the cause, being partially heard, was referred to the master, who was to enter into the whole account. The master found a balance in favour of the plaintiff of 2*l.* 12*s.*:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs on the higher scale without a judge's certificate. Parker v. Serle, 6 D. P. C. 334.

—— Costs of Reference and Award.]—Where a cause is referred on the usual terms, costs to abide the event, the costs of the reference and award to be at the discretion of the arbitrator, and by the award less than the sum of 20*l.* is recovered, and the costs of the reference and award are awarded to be paid by the defendant, the costs of the reference are not to be taxed on the lower scale. Holland v. Vincent, 9 Ex. 274; 2 C. L. R. 407; 23 L. J., Ex. 78; 17 Jur. 1059: 2 W. R. 96. S. P., Nicholson v. Sykes, 9 Ex. 357; 2 C. L. R. 992: 23 L. J., Ex. 193.

An action of contract was compulsorily referred to a master, and it was ordered that the costs of the cause should abide the event, and that the costs of the reference should be in the discretion of the master. The master awarded to the plaintiff a sum less than 20*l.* and directed the defendant to pay the costs of the reference:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to these costs; for that they could only be recovered upon the judgment, entered on the award, and (the judgment being for a sum not exceeding 20*l.*) the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, deprived the plaintiff of costs. Moore v. Watson, 36 L. J., C. P. 122; L. R. 2 C. P. 314; 15 L. T. 662; 15 W. R. 429.

When an action is referred by consent to arbitration upon the terms that the costs of the cause shall abide the event, and the costs of the award shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator, if the arbitrator decides in favour of the plaintiffs he may lawfully direct the defendant to pay the cost of the reference and award, although the plaintiff may be deprived of the costs of the cause under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5. Whether Moore v. Watson (L. R. 2 C. P. 314) was correctly decided, quære. Gallatti v. Wakefield, 4 Ex. D. 249; 48 L. J., Ex. 70; 40 L. T. 30—C. A.

In an action of trover and of debt a verdict was taken for the plaintiff for the damages claimed, subject to a reference, "the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, and the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator." The arbitrator awarded that the verdict should be entered for 2*l.* 10*s.* as to the claim in trover, and for 7*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* as to the claim in debt, and directed the defendant to pay the costs of the reference and award. He had the power of certifying for costs, but gave no certificate. The master declined to tax on behalf of the plaintiff either his costs of the cause or of the reference and award:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the cause, but that he was entitled to those of the reference and award, although he had recovered in the cause sums not exceeding 10*l.* in tort and 20*l.* in contract. Forshaw v. De Wette, 40 L. J., Ex. 153; L. R. 6 Ex. 200; 24 L. T. 397; 19 W. R. 777.

2. Amount recovered.

Action on Contract—£50 Recovered.]—Order LXV. r. 12, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is not inconsistent with, nor superseded nor repealed by s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888. A plaintiff who has claimed and recovered the exact sum of 50*l.* in an action founded on contract in the high court, and who has obtained no certificate from the judge for high court costs, is only entitled to costs on the county court scale. Millington v. Harwood, 61 L. J., Q. B. 582; [1892] 2 Q. B. 166; 66 L. T. 576; 40 W. R. 481—C. A.

The judge before whom a cause is tried has power to certify for costs under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 12, where the verdict returned for the plaintiff is exactly 20*l.* in an action of contract, or exactly 5*l.* in an action of tort. Garby v. Harris, 7 Ex. 591; 21 L. J., Ex. 160; 16 Jur. 456.

Less than £50 recovered "in the Action."]—An action on a partnership account was by consent referred to an arbitrator. The terms of reference were that "all matters in difference between the parties in the action" were to be referred, and that "the costs of the action" should abide the award. Subsequently to this order of reference, the parties agreed to submit to the arbitrator a further matter of account outside the action. The arbitrator awarded 40*l.* to the plaintiff on his claim, and found that a further sum of 14*l.* 2*s.* was due to him on the subsequent account:—Held, that the plaintiff had recovered "in the action" less than 50*l.*, and therefore came under the provisions of Ord. LXV. r. 12, of the Rules of 1883, whereby the costs recoverable were limited to county court costs in actions of contract where less than 50*l.* is recovered, unless by leave of the court the high court scale is allowed. Emmett v. Heyes, 36 W. R. 237.

Nominal Damages—Bond—£20 Penalty.]—Judgment having been given for a plaintiff in an action on a bond in the penal sum of 20*l.* conditioned for payment of 12*l.*, he is deprived of costs by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, on the ground, first, that the nominal damages do not make the sum recovered exceed 20*l.*; and, secondly, per Pollock, C.B., and Watson, B., that the sum recovered within the meaning of that section was 12*l.* only. Gowens v. Moore, 3 H. & N. 540; 27 L. J., Ex. 391.

Sum claimed no Criterion.]—A plaintiff sued in trespass in the supreme court of the island of Jamaica, laying his damages at 3,000*l.*, a sum above the limit of the jurisdiction of the local courts in that island, and recovered a verdict for 40*s.*:—Held, that the sum recovered by the verdict, and sanctioned by the judgment, and not the sum laid in the declaration, was the test to be applied to ascertain the right to sue in the supreme court, and to entitle the plaintiff to supreme court costs. Emery v. Binns, 7 Moore, P. C. 195.

Proceedings stayed on Payment.]—There were counts for unliquidated and liquidated damages in a declaration. The defendant, after judgment by default and notice of executing a writ of inquiry, obtained an order to stay all further proceedings on payment of 16*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* and costs:—Held, that the costs must be taxed on the reduced scale. Horn v. Pocock, 2 D. (N.S.) 948; 12 L. J., Q. B. 274; 7 Jur. 813.

In such a case the defendant should get it made part of the judge's order, upon the application, that costs of the action should be taxed upon the higher scale. Ib.

Where, in an action for unliquidated damages, the defendant, just before the assizes, in order to save the expenses of the trial, agreed under a judge's order to withdraw his pleas, and that the plaintiff should be at liberty to sign judgment for 11*l.* 12*s.*, and that, on payment of that sum, with costs to be taxed, the proceedings should be stayed:—Held, that the costs must be taxed on the reduced scale. Cook v. Hunt, 5 M. & W.

161 ; 7 D. P. C. 397 ; 2 H. & H. 37 ; 8 L. J., Ex. 216 ; 3 Jur. 753.

Payment into Court.]—In an action for a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, the defendant paid the sum claimed into court, and the plaintiff took it out in satisfaction :—Held, that it was a sum recovered in the action within 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs. Parr v. Lillicrap, 1 H. & C. 615 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 150 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 80 ; 7 L. T. 425 ; 11 W. R. 24.

So where a defendant pays money into court which the plaintiff accepts in satisfaction of his claim, he recovers the amount within the meaning of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, which, in certain cases, deprives a plaintiff of costs if he "shall recover a sum not exceeding 20*l.*" Boulding v. Tyler, 3 B. & S. 473 ; 32 L. J., Q. B. 85 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 794 ; 11 W. R. 307. S. P., Arkins v. Armstrong, 17 W. R. 711.

But where in an action brought to recover a sum beyond the jurisdiction of the county court the defendant paid into court a sum under 20*l.* which the plaintiff accepted in satisfaction and discharge of his claim, and the parties dwelt more than twenty miles apart :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to his costs, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4. Waylett v. Windham, 2 H. & C. 982 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 172 ; 9 L. T. 725.

A plaintiff who recovers in an action for a debt a sum which, together with a sum paid into court on a plea of tender, exceeds 20*l.*, is entitled to the costs of the action, notwithstanding 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11. Crosse v. Seaman, 11 C. B. 524 ; 2 L. M. & P. 273.

In an action in which there were three counts, each in tort, and the parties resided within the jurisdiction of the civil bill court of the county in which the causes of action had arisen, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for 2*l.* damages on two counts, and that 5*l.*, which had been lodged in court by the defendant on foot of the third count, was sufficient :—Held, that the plaintiff had not recovered 7*l.*, and therefore was not entitled to any costs of the action. Myers v. Phelan, 26 L. R. Ir. 218—C. A.

"Admitted Set-off."]—A set-off admitted by the plaintiff on his writ is an "admitted set-off" within s. 57 of the County Courts Act, 1888, even although not admitted by the defendant, and if the amount recovered is, by such admission, reduced by 50*l.*, the plaintiff is only entitled to costs on the county court scale. Lovejoy v. Cole, 64 L. J., Q. B. 120 ; [1894] 2 Q. B. 861 ; 10 R. 482 ; 71 L. T. 374 ; 43 W. R. 48.

—— Amount "Recovered."]—In an action of contract a verdict was given for the plaintiff for 76*l.*, and for the defendant on a set-off, which was not admitted by the plaintiff, for 64*l.*, and judgment was given for the plaintiff for the balance of 12*l.* :—Held, that the amount "recovered" by the plaintiff within s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, was the balance only of 12*l.* for which judgment was given ; but as there was no admitted set-off under s. 57—which must be a set-off admitted by both parties—the action being for over 50*l.*, was one which could not have been brought in a county court, and therefore s. 116 did not apply to deprive the plaintiff of his costs on the high court scale. Goldhill v. Clarke, 5 R. 75 ; 68 L. T. 414.

If the amount of the plaintiff's claim is reduced by the defendant's set-off to a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, the plaintiff's costs are to be taxed on the lower scale. Tonge v. Chadwick, 5 El. & Bl. 950 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 128 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 232 ; 4 W. R. 266.

Where a plaintiff in an action in a superior court proves a debt exceeding 20*l.*, and the defendant proves a set-off, which reduces the verdict to a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, the plaintiff recovers the balance only, within 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, and therefore is not entitled to costs. Beard v. Perry, 2 B. & S. 493 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 180 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 914 ; 6 L. T. 352 ; 10 W. R. 619.

Action on the money counts. Pleas never indebted and set-off. The writ of summons had been indorsed for more than 20*l.* On the trial the jury found that the defendant was indebted in 24*l.* 13*s.*, and no further, and that there was a set-off of 19*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.* This finding was entered on the postea, and the plaintiff had a verdict for the balance, 4*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.* The master taxed the costs on the higher scale :—Held, that the plaintiff was not deprived of his costs by the county courts acts, as the amount of the debt exceeded 20*l.*, though reduced by set-off, but that he had recovered less than 20*l.*, and therefore his costs must be taxed on the lower scale. Tonge v. Chadwick, 5 El. & Bl. 950 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 128 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 232 ; 4 W. R. 266.

Unless a plaintiff, in an action of contract for which a plaint might have been entered in a county court, actually recovers more than 20*l.*, whatever the amount of his claim, and whether reduced by payment, by tender, or by set-off, he is by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, deprived of costs, unless the judge certifies at the trial under s. 12, or he obtains a rule or order under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4. Ashcroft v. Foulkes, 18 C. B. 261 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 202 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 449 ; 4 W. R. 457. S. P., Rumley v. Irwin, 18 C. B. 312 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 205, n. ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 450, n.

Tender.]—The act does not deprive the plaintiff of costs where the verdict is reduced to a sum under 20*l.* only by a tender, but which, with the amount tendered, is not less than 20*l.* Cross v. Seaman, 2 L. M. & P. 273 ; 11 C. B. 524 ; 15 Jur. 512.

A plea of tender is not a plea in bar ; therefore the sum paid into court under such plea is a sum recovered in the action. A plaintiff who in an action for more than 20*l.*, recovers a sum which, together with a sum paid into court under a plea of tender, exceeds 20*l.*, is entitled to have the costs taxed on the higher scale. Couch v. Maltby, 23 L. J., Q. B. 305 ; 2 W. R. 557 See next case.

Action to recover 28*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* for goods sold and delivered. Pleas, except as to 26*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*, never indebted ; and as to that sum a tender. The jury found for the defendant on the plea of tender, but that the plaintiff was entitled to 2*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* more. The plaintiff did not obtain a certificate that the cause was proper to be tried in a superior court :—Held, that his costs were to be taxed on the lower scale. James v. Vane (Lord), 2 El. & El. 883 ; 29 L. J., Q. B. 169 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 731 ; 2 L. T. 281 ; 8 W. R. 446.

Where a plaintiff claims more than 20*l.*, but obtains a verdict for a sum under 20*l.*, by reason of a tender of the remainder of the amount, claimed before action, his costs must be taken on the reduced scale. Dixon v. Walker, 7 M. & W. 214 ; 8 D. P. C. 87 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 43. S. P., Crosse v. Seaman, 11 C. B. 524.

3. WHETHER CONTRACT OR TORT.

Livery Stable Keeper.]—A declaration alleged that the plaintiff delivered a horse to the defendant as a livery and bait stable-keeper, to be taken care of, and kept in a separate stall: breach, that he did not take care of the horse or keep it in a separate stall, in consequence of which it was injured and kicked by other horses: —Held, that this was an action of contract; and consequently the plaintiff, having recovered by verdict less than 20*l.*, was, in the absence of a certificate from the judge who tried the cause, deprived of costs by the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, ss. 11 and 12. Legge v. Tucker, 1 H. & N. 500; 26 L. J., Ex. 71; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1235; 5 W. R. 78.

Injury to Subject of Bailment—Negligence.] —An action by a bailor against a bailee for reward for a breach of his common-law duty to keep safely the thing entrusted to his care is an action founded on tort within the meaning of s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and a plaintiff in such an action who recovers not less than 20*l.* is entitled to his full costs of the action. Turner v. Stallibrass, 67 L. J., Q. B. 52; [1898] 1 Q. B. 56; 77 L. T. 482; 46 W. R. 81—C. A.

Carriers—Goods.]—A declaration stated that goods were delivered to common carriers, to be safely carried and delivered: breach, that they, not regarding their duty, so carelessly and negligently conducted themselves that part of the goods was lost. The carriers suffered judgment by default, and the damages were assessed at 11*l.* 5*s.*:—Held, that this was an action on the case within 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, and was not an action of contract within 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 30, and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to costs. Tattan v. G. W. Ry., 2 El. & El. 844; 29 L. J., Q. B. 184; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 800; 8 W. R. 606. Contra, O'Sullivan v. Dublin, Wicklow and Waterford Ry., 16 W. R. 86.

A declaration alleged that the defendant at the time of the promise and negligence therein alleged, was the owner of a hackney cab, at the time of the promise conducted by his servant; that the plaintiff at his request hired it of him, and the defendant promised to convey the plaintiff's luggage safely, but not regarding his duty or promise, negligently lost the same:—Held, that the action was founded on contract, and that as a sum not exceeding 20*l.* was recovered, the plaintiff was deprived of costs under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5. Baylis v. Lintott, 42 L. J., C. P. 119; L. R. 8 C. P. 345; 28 L. T. 666.

A statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff, as vendor of goods, delivered them to the defendants, a railway company, as carriers for reward, the goods being consigned to the intending purchasers: that afterwards, and before the goods had been delivered to the consignees or claimed by them from the company, the plaintiff discovered that the consignees were insolvent, and, as unpaid vendor, gave notice to the company not to deliver the goods to the consignees, but to hold them to his order, and before the goods were delivered to the consignees, the plaintiff required the company to re-deliver them to him: that the company refused to do so, and delivered them to the consignees, who absconded without paying for the goods. The plaintiff claimed their value, viz. 12*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*, as damages. The company paid the sum into court, and the plaintiff took it out in satisfaction:—Held, that the action was founded on tort, and not on contract within s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, and that the plaintiff having recovered a sum exceeding 10*l.* was not deprived of costs by that section. Pontifex v. Midland Ry., 47 L. J., Q. B. 28; 3 Q. B. D. 23; 37 L. T. 403; 26 W. R. 209. S. C., and S. P., 35 L. T. 706; 25 W. R. 215.

But an action being brought against a railway company as a common carrier for damages for non-delivery of goods through negligence, the company paid into court a sum exceeding 10*l.*, but not exceeding 20*l.*, and the plaintiff took it out in satisfaction:—Held, that the action was founded on contract, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to costs under s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867. Fleming v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 4 Q. B. D. 81; 39 L. T. 555; 27 W. R. 481—C. A.

—— Injury to Passenger.]—An action in the high court brought by a passenger against a railway company for an injury sustained by him through the negligence, amounting to a positive misfeasance, of the company's servants, is "an action founded on tort" within the meaning of s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888; and the fact that the passenger has a contract with the company, and a right of action against them for a breach thereof, does not for the purposes of that section make his action "an action founded on contract." If, therefore, the passenger in such a case recovers 20*l.* or upwards, he is entitled to have his costs taxed on the high court scale. Taylor v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 6; [1895] 1 Q. B. 134; 14 R. 34; 71 L. T. 596; 43 W. R. 120; 59 J. P. 100—C. A.

An action in respect of personal injuries to a passenger caused by the negligence of a railway company is an "action founded on tort" within s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, although the negligence is also a breach of contract, and is so stated in the pleadings; and the action is equally one of tort whether the negligence consists in the doing or the omitting to do, an act. Kelly v. Metropolitan Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 568; [1895] 1 Q. B. 944; 14 R. 417; 72 L. T. 551; 43 W. R. 497; 59 J. P. 437—C. A.

Wrongful Conversion after Contract for Sale.] —The plaintiff, a dealer, bought an hydraulic press from the defendant, an auctioneer, at a sale, under conditions of sale requiring payment before delivery. Time was allowed for payment. Payment was tendered within the time allowed, but the defendant refused to deliver the press, having contracted to resell it, and in fact reselling it, subsequent to the tender. The plaintiff had also contracted to resell the press, after delivery, at a profit. In the action the sole issue in dispute—namely, whether there had been tender within the time allowed for payment—was found in favour of the plaintiff, and evidence of the plaintiff's loss of profit on resale having been given as a measure of damage, judgment was given for the plaintiff for 29*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* The defendant contended that the action was one for breach of contract, and that costs would therefore only be recovered on the county court scale:—Held, that the action was for a wrongful conversion subsequent to and independent of the contract passing the property, and that it was therefore an action of tort in which, more than 20*l.* having been recovered, costs followed on the high court scale. Cohen v. Foster, 61 L. J., Q. B. 643; 66 L. T. 616.

Detinue.]—A plaintiff by his statement of claim alleged that he was the owner and entitled to the possession of a picture, which the defendant detained from him, and the plaintiff claimed the picture or its value, and damages for its detention. At the trial the plaintiff recovered 10*l.* as the value of the picture, and 1*s.* damages for its detention:—Held, that the action was founded on tort within s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, so that the plaintiff, having recovered more than 10*l.* was entitled to his costs. Bryant v. Herbert, 47 L. J., C. P. 670; 3 C. P. D. 389; 39 L. T. 17; 26 W. R. 898—C. A.

The 34th section of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, does not apply to an action of detinue. Danby v. Lamb, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 423; 31 L. J., C. P. 17: 5 L. T. 353; 10 W. R. 43.

Compare Brown v. Boorman, 11 Cl. & F. 1; 3 Q. B. 511; Courtenay v. Earle, 10 C. B. 73; 20 L. J., C. P. 7; 15 Jur. 15; Wood v. Fennis, 7 Ex. 363; 21 L. J., Ex. 138; 16 Jur. 936; Govett v. Radnidge, 3 East, 62; Weall v. King, 12 East, 452; Brotherton v. Wood, 6 Moore, 141; 3 Br. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408.

4. CERTIFICATE OR ORDER.

Time for—When Arbitrator Functus Officio.]—An action having been referred, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 3, to a master, "with all the powers of certifying of a judge at nisi prius, the costs of the cause and of the reference to be in the discretion of the master," the master made his award in favour of the plaintiff for a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, and directed that the costs of the cause and of the reference should be paid by the defendant. After the award had been taken up, the master indorsed on the award a certificate that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court:—Held, that the certificate was bad, the master being functus officio when it was given. Bedwell v. Wood, 46 L. J., Q. B. 725; 2 Q. B. D. 626; 36 L. T. 213.

An action of trespass was referred by consent to an arbitrator, who was to have all the powers of a judge at nisi prius as to certifying, and the costs of the cause were to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded to the plaintiff 2*l.* 14*s.*, and gave no certificate for costs. After a considerable lapse of time the plaintiff obtained ex parte from the arbitrator a document in which he stated that it appeared to him at the reference that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action:—Held, that the court or a judge had power under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, to order that the plaintiff be allowed his costs, but that the court would not act upon the document merely, and that under those circumstances the award ought to be remitted to the arbitrator. Hartland v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne Corporation, 39 L. J., Q. B. 67.

—— In other Cases.]—Where an action is brought for a cause for which a plaint might have been entered in the sheriff's court under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 77, and the plaintiff recovers less than 20*l.*, a certificate for costs must be granted "forthwith" at the trial. But if the sum recovered is between 20*l.*, and 50*l.* the judge may certify within a convenient time after the trial. Chaplin v. Levy, 9 Ex. 673; 2 C. L. R. 1024; 23 L. J., Ex. 200.

Where an action is brought in a superior court for a cause for which a plaint might have been entered in the sheriff's city court, and the plaintiff recovers less than 20*l.*, a certificate for costs must be granted forthwith. But if, on the application for a certificate immediately after the trial, the judge takes time to consider, and the defendant does not object, he will be precluded from objecting that a certificate granted afterwards was not granted forthwith. Heden v. Atlantic Royal Mail Steam Navigation Co. 2 El. & El. 671; 29 L. J., Q. B. 191; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 677; 2 L. T. 170; 8 W. R. 410.

Under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 129, a judge of a superior court may certify for costs at any time before the costs are taxed. Tharratt v. Trever, 6 Ex. 187; 20 L. J., Ex. 189. S. P., Mason v. Tucker, 4 H. & N. 536; 28 L. J., Ex. 271.

So, under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 12, the certificate of the judge who tries an action brought in the superior court, that it appeared to him at the trial that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in that court, may be given and indorsed on the record at any time after the assizes and before taxation of costs. Bennett v. Thompson, 6 El. & Bl. 683; 25 L. J., Q. B. 378; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 670; 4 W. R. 609.

A cause in which the superior court and the county court had concurrent jurisdiction was brought in the former and tried in February, 1852, the defendant being then absent from England on a voyage to Australia; the plaintiff having obtained a verdict and accepted his damages, applied for costs under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, in January, 1853:—Held, not too late. Reid v. Gardner, 8 Ex. 651; 22 L. J., Ex. 253; 17 Jur. 442.

A cause was referred at the spring assizes, 1852, and on the 9th June the arbitrator awarded in favour of the plaintiff. An application by the plaintiff to a judge at chambers for costs, on the 7th February, 1853, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, was not too late. Morris v. Bosworth, 2 El. & Bl. 213; 22 L. J., Q. B. 276; 17 Jur. 438.

But the under sheriff on a writ of trial had no power to certify for costs after he had returned the writ. Knapman v. Pryer, 1 H. & N. 719; 26 L. J., Ex. 143.

By whom Granted.]—The judge who tries a cause is the only person who can certify to take a case out of the operation of the directions, where less than 20*l.* is recovered; and therefore, if the judge dies without making his certificate, the plaintiff has no remedy. Southwell v. Bird, 7 D. P. C. 557; 1 W. W. & H. 569.

So, where a cause was referred by order of nisi prius, with power to the arbitrator to certify whether the cause was a proper one to be tried before a judge, and the arbitrator certified to that effect, but the judge died before the arbitrator's certificate was made known to him:—Held, that the court had no power to make an order for full costs. Astley v. Jay, 1 P. & D. 460; 9 A. & E. 702; 2 W. W. & H. 85; 8 L. J., Q. B. 104.

It is not necessary for the judge who certifies to enable a plaintiff to obtain full costs so as to hear the cause throughout. Nokes v. Frazer, 3 D. P. C. 339.

—— Action remitted to County Court.]—The certificate as to costs in sect. 116 of the County

Courts Act, 1888, only applies to actions tried in the high court, and therefore the county court judge has no power under that section to grant the certificate in an action transferred under s. 65. Harris v. Judge ([1892] 2 Q. B. 565), discussed. White v. Cohen, 62 L. J., Q. B. 274; [1893] 1 Q. B. 580; 4 R. 352; 68 L. T. 305; 41 W. R. 396.

Where an action commenced in a superior court has been remitted to a county court under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, the superior court has no longer any jurisdiction to make an order for costs under s. 5. Moody v. Steward, 40 L. J., Ex. 25; L. R. 6 Ex. 35; 23 L. T. 465; 19 W. R. 161.

Where a cause in a superior court is by order of a judge sent to be tried in a county court, the judge of the county court who tries the cause has power, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, to certify that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court, so as to entitle the plaintiff to costs, and the issue sent down to the county court is the record on which he may certify. Taylor v. Cass, L. R. 4 C. P. 614; 20 L. T. 667; 17 W. R. 860.

An action was brought in the superior court, and sent down for trial in the county court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, when the plaintiff obtained a verdict for 6*l.* 15*s.* above the amount of 15*l.* paid into court. The registrar of the county court returned a certificate finding "a verdict for the plaintiff for 6*l.* 15*s.* with costs"; and the plaintiff ex parte obtained a fiat to sign judgment, with costs, and entered judgment. The plaintiff had previously taken out a summons at chambers to sign judgment with costs, but had abandoned it. The defendant applied to have the judgment amended by striking out the words relating to costs, and the plaintiff applied for costs, if he was not entitled to them under the judgment:—Held, that the county court had no jurisdiction over the costs, and the registrar had no power to certify for costs. Farmer v. May, 50 L. J., Q. B. 295; 44 L. T. 148; 29 W. R. 612. See also, Emeny v. Sandes, 54 L. J., Q. B. 82; 14 Q. B. D. 6; 51 L. T. 641; 33 W. R. 187—C. A.

—— Assessment of Damages—Under-Sheriff.]—An under-sheriff, before whom damages are assessed in an action brought in the high court under a judgment signed in default of pleading, has no power to certify for costs on the high court scale under s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, such power being now, under that section, exercisable only by the high court, or a judge of the high court. Cox v. Hill, 67 L. T. 26. See now s. 116 of County Courts Act, 1888.

The under-sheriff before whom a writ of inquiry is executed had the power of certifying on the record that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court, given to the judge by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5. Craven v. Smith, 38 L. J., Ex. 90; L. R. 4 Ex. 146; 20 L. T. 400; 17 W. R. 710. Contra, Ayres v. Lovelock, W. N. (1874) 29.

—— By Court.]—The court or a judge has the power of certifying to give costs under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, notwithstanding the power of certifying as a judge at nisi prius to give costs under s. 12, has by an order of reference been given to an arbitrator, who had failed to certify, the certificate under s. 13 being one which a judge or the court has power to give, and different from that which a judge at nisi prius is empowered to give under s. 12. Sharp v. Eveleigh, 20 L. J., Ex. 282.

Grounds for Granting.]—The court will not lay down any general rule with regard to giving a plaintiff costs under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 13. Palmer v. Richards, 2 L. M. & P. 376; 6 Ex. 335; 20 L. J., Ex. 323.

The refusal of the registrar of a county court to grant a summons under a mistaken idea of the court's jurisdiction, or the probability of greater costs by proceedings in the county court, is not a sufficient reason for a superior court allowing costs to a plaintiff in an action where the amount recovered is less than 20*l.* in contract, or 10*l.* in tort. Holborow v. Jones, 38 L. J., C. P. 22; L. R. 4 C. P. 14; 19 L. T. 320; 17 W. R. 54.

The distance at which a defendant resides from the plaintiff when the action is brought is not alone a ground for granting costs under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5. Thompson v. Dallas, 9 B. & S. 193; 37 L. J., Q. B. 133; L. R. 3 Q. B. 358; 18 L. T. 288; 16 W. R. 703.

An action claiming an injunction to restrain a trespass was tried in the high court, although the value of the property in dispute was within the limits fixed for the jurisdiction of the county court. The trial lasted some days, and ultimately the plaintiff succeeded, and was given 5*l.* as damage:—Held, that, notwithstanding that the action might have been tried in the county court, it had proved to be a proper one to be disposed of in the high court, and the court would, therefore, in the exercise of its discretion, allow the plaintiff high court costs. Williams v. Allen, 60 L. T. 103.

A. brought an action against B. in the high court, asking for an injunction to restrain the defendants from excavating so as to injure the plaintiff's premises, and for damages. The writ was issued on the 17th April, 1888. The action came on for trial by consent on affidavit evidence, and without pleadings. The damages amounted to less than 10*l.* The court granted an injunction, and assessed the damages at 5*l.*, and directed the defendant to pay the costs, but if the action could have been brought in the county court, then only such costs as would have been incurred in the county court. Cooper v. Streeter, 60 L. T. 95.

In considering whether to certify for costs upon a verdict being found for a plaintiff in an action for slander, the judge, although he disapproves himself of the action having been brought, will give effect to an indication by the jury of a contrary opinion, and will treat a verdict for 40*s.* as such an indication. Hume v. Marshall, 37 L. T. 711.

The judge's power to certify exists where the question whether the plaintiff had reasonable cause for suing was compounded of facts and a doubtful point of law; and his power was not confined to mere facts. Swift v. Jewsbury, L. R. 9 Q. B. 560.

Semble, where, in an action against a joint-stock company in a superior court, not having concurrent jurisdiction with a county court, it appears that, if the plaintiff had sued in the county court, he could not have obtained satisfaction from the property of the company, and that the shareholders reside out of the jurisdiction of the county court, that would afford sufficient ground for giving the plaintiff his costs. Taylor v. Crowland Gas and Coke Co., 11 Ex. 1; 24 L. J., Ex. 233; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 358.

A judge has no power to certify under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, where a right, though a small one, is really in issue. Gooding v. Britnall, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 148; 31 L. J., C. P. 5; 5 L. T. 397; 10 W. R. 79.

A plaintiff brought an action of trespass against the defendant in the county court, whereupon the defendant obtained a stay of proceedings in the county court. The action being then brought in a superior court, the jury found all issues of fact in favour of the defendant; but the verdict was ultimately entered in favour of the plaintiff upon a point of law decided in his favour by the court in banc. The judge who tried the action declined to certify for costs, and the court concurred in his adverse opinion to the plaintiff on the merits:—Held, that the fact of the defendant having moved the action into a superior court set no limit upon the discretion of the judge, and a rule to allow costs was refused. Flitters v. Allfrey, 44 L. J., C. P. 10, n.; L. R. 10 C. P. 29; 31 L. T. 881.

The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, gives to the court or a judge at chambers a power to review the decision of the judge at nisi prius; and, as the court takes into consideration all the circumstances of a case, the facts that the plaintiff could not sue but in a superior court, that he has recovered 10*l.* damages, that he has been put to unusual trouble and expense in bringing the action (although each, if it stood alone, might secure the plaintiff's costs), may, subject to such consideration, even when taken together, fail to entitle the plaintiff to costs. Kent v. Lewis, 21 W. R. 413.

The discretion of the court or a judge as to allowing or withholding costs, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, is to be exercised with reference to the propriety of bringing the action in the superior court at the time it is brought, and not with reference to the complications which may be introduced by the acuteness of a special pleader. Howlett v. Tarte, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 634.

In dealing with the County Courts Amendment Act, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, the question is not simply whether the action should have been brought in the superior court; but the judge is justified in declining to certify for costs, if he is reasonably satisfied that the action should not have been brought at all. Strachey v. Osborne (Lord), 44 L. J., C. P. 6: L. R. 10 C. P. 92; 31 L. T. 374; 23 W. R. 75.

Action of trover and detinue for a portmanteau. During the trial the defendant's counsel suggested that the portmanteau, with its contents (value 25*l.*), was in court, and that the plaintiff might have it there and then. The contents being found all right, the plaintiff accepted the offer and took it. A verdict was returned for 40*s.*, and the judge at the moment refused to certify for costs on the ground that the whole litigation had arisen out of a demand of 1*s.* 6*d.*, which it was conceded the defendant had no right to make. The plaintiff's counsel asked to have the verdict returned for the value of the portmanteau as well as 40*s.* damages, but it was too late, as some of the jury had left the court:—Held, that the plaintiff was deprived of costs by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, and that it was not a case in which the court could say, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in a superior court. Dimsdale v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 8 L. T. 453; 11 W. R. 729.

Where the plaintiff's affidavits disclosed some evidence that the defendant did not dwell or carry on his business within the jurisdiction of the county court within which the cause of action arose, and it appeared that after diligent inquiries the plaintiff was unable to ascertain the residence of the defendant, and his attorney refusing to give any information:—Held, that there was sufficient ground for an order that the plaintiff should recover his costs. Springbett v. King, 1 H. & N. 662; 26 L. J., Ex. 169.

Application, how made.]—An application to a judge by a plaintiff for costs need not be supported by affidavit, unless the facts are controverted by the defendant. Power v. Jones, 6 Ex. 121; 15 Jur. 66.

The 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, throws upon the plaintiff the onus of showing that he is entitled to costs in the cases mentioned in s. 11. Latham v. Spalding, 2 L. M. & P. 378; 20 L. J., Q. B. 302; 17 Q. B. 400; 15 Jur. 576.

On an application for costs it is sufficient for the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case, so as to call on the defendant for an answer. Springbett v. King, 1 H. & N. 662; 26 L. J., Ex. 169.

Statement in Case whether an Agreement not to apply.]—The plaintiff brought an action against G. for a misrepresentation made by him in his character of manager of a banking company, and joined as a defendant J., as the public officer of the company. At the trial a verdict was directed against both, with leave to move to enter the verdict for J. The rule was obtained accordingly, but the Court of Queen's Bench held both liable. A case was then stated on appeal in which the question for the court was, whether the defendant J., as public officer, was entitled to have the verdict entered for him. "If the court shall be of opinion in the affirmative, then the verdict is to be entered for the defendant, with costs of defence." The Exchequer Chamber (overruling the judgment of the Queen's Bench) directed the verdict to be entered for J. The plaintiff then applied to the judge who tried the cause, and he certified, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 32, that the plaintiff had reasonable ground for making J. a defendant:—Held, that the statement in the case was a mere conclusion of law, and could not be taken as an agreement by the plaintiff not to apply for a certificate. Swift v. Jewsbury, L. R. 9 Q. B. 560.

Discretion as to Scale.]—Ord. LXV. r. 1, has given a judge complete discretion, not only as to the incidence, but also as to the quantum, of the costs of an action in the superior court. Consequently, the costs of suit, which a judge at chambers may, by rule or order, allow a plaintiff, under s. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, are not confined to superior court costs, but may be costs on the county court scale. Neares v. Spooner, 58 L. T. 164; 36 W. R. 257—C. A.

An action of contract was referred by consent, the costs to abide the event of the award, and judgment on the award to be entered in the high court. The arbitrator found for the plaintiff for a sum less than 50*l.* and judgment was entered accordingly:—Held, that a judge at chambers had jurisdiction under Ord. LXV. r. 12, to order the plaintiff's costs to be taxed on the high court scale. Hyde v. Beardsley, 56 L. J., Q. B.

81; 18 Q. B. D. 244; 57 L. T. 802; 35 W. R. 140.

Contract—Over £20 and less than £50 recovered—Taxation—County Court Scale.]—Where an action on contract, which could have been commenced in the county court, is brought in the high court, and 20*l.* and upwards, but less than 50*l.*, has been recovered, costs, in the absence of special directions, are taxed on the county court scale, without regard to whether the work charged for has or has not been done. Cook v. Crews, 10 R. 315.

An order was made by a judge, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, directing an action to be tried in a county court. The order was silent as to the scale of costs. A verdict having been found for the defendant, the master allowed him only county court costs, so far as regarded the trial in the county court:—Held, that the taxation was right. Wheatcroft v. Foster, El. Bl. & El. 737; 27 L. J., Q. B. 277; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 896; 6 W. R. 651.

Order for New Trial—Costs of First Trial "to abide the Result."]—Where an order for a new trial provides that the costs of the first trial shall abide the result of the second, a plaintiff who obtains a verdict and judgment on the second trial, but is deprived of his costs by the refusal of the judge to certify under s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, will not be entitled to any costs of the first trial. Brotherton v. Metropolitan District Joint Committee, [1894] 1 Q. B. 666; 9 R. 154; 70 L. T. 218; 42 W. R. 273—C. A.

Binding Character of Certificate.]—When a superior court of record has jurisdiction to make upon motion an order or a certificate for costs, such order is binding and conclusive, and the master's taxation for such costs cannot be impugned except by a suggestion of error in fact upon the record that no order or certificate was made by the court. Scott v. Bennett, L. R. 5 H. L. 234; 20 W. R. 686.

Form of Certificate.]—In an action of debt the writ of summons was indorsed for 50*l.* 3*s.*, which was reduced upon the trial, by a set-off, to 15*l.*, and a verdict was entered for the plaintiff for the latter amount, the judge certifying under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court. He did not certify on the postea that the "cause was proper to be tried before him":—Held, that in the absence of the latter certificate, the plaintiff's costs were to be taxed under the 7th direction to the masters, H. T. 1853, upon the lower scale, the case not being one in which, "by reason of the nature of the action," no writ of trial could be issued. Smith v. Hailey, 42 L. J., Ex. 5; L. R. 8 Ex. 16; 27 L. T. 426; 21 W. R. 76.

Appeal from Discretion.]—Sect. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, gives the court or a judge a discretion to allow costs on the high court scale in actions brought in the high court and founded on contract, in which the plaintiff has recovered a sum of 20*l.* or upwards, but less than 50*l.*; so that by virtue of s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, no appeal lies from an order allowing such costs. Bazett v. Morgan, 59 L. J., Q. B. 44; 24 Q. B. D. 48; 61 L. T. 434; 38 W. R. 108; 54 J. P. 119.

If a plaintiff applies for costs to a judge at chambers, and is refused, he cannot afterwards apply to the court as having an independent jurisdiction to grant costs, but must come by way of appeal from the judge's decision. Warman v. Hulahan, 30 L. J., Q. B. 48; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1301; 3 L. T. 379; 8 W. R. 108. S. P., Pryce v. Griffiths, 9 L. T. 418; Meredith v. Gittens, 18 Q. B. 257; 21 L. J., Q. B. 273; 15 Jur. 564.

When an action is brought to try a right, and the right is of sufficient importance to make the action one proper to be brought in a superior court, the court will make an order for costs in favour of the successful plaintiff, although the judge at the trial has refused to certify. Hinde v. Sheppard, 41 L. J., Ex. 25; L. R. 7 Ex. 21; 25 L. T. 500; 20 W. R. 99.

A plaintiff brought an action to assert rights of trifling value and recovered 40*s.* damages; the judge at the trial refused to certify for costs:—Held, that this was not a case in which the court would grant a rule to allow the plaintiff his costs. Barlow v. Briggs, 27 L. T. 159; 20 W. R. 866.

The court required a strong case to be made out before it would overrule the exercise of a judge's discretion under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4. Dunston v. Paterson, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 267; 28 L. J., C. P. 97; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 6 W. R. 768. S. P., Courtenay v. Wagstaff, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 110; 9 L. T. 689; 12 W. R. 431.

When the judge, although a substantial claim of right was put in issue by the pleadings and contested at the trial, refused to certify for costs under s. 5 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, because he thought that the action was not bonâ fide brought to try the right, but merely to gratify an angry feeling against the defendant, the court declined to interfere, not being satisfied that the judge's discretion had been wrongly exercised. Strachey v. Osborne (Lord), 44 L. J., C. P. 6; L. R. 10 C. P. 92; 31 L. T. 374; 23 W. R. 75.

J. SET-OFF OF COSTS.

1. When Allowed.

In Same Action.]—Under Ord. VI. r. 19, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1875 (Costs)—by which, whenever, in cases specified, a party entitled to receive costs is liable to pay costs to the other party, the taxing-officer may adjust the costs by way of deduction or set-off—such set-off or deduction is limited to costs due to either party in respect of the same action, and cannot be enforced in respect of the costs of any separate proceeding between the same parties. Barker v. Hemming, 5 Q. B. D. 609; 43 L. T. 678—C. A. Affirming, 49 L. J., Q. B. 730; 28 W. R. 764.

It is a common practice of the court to award to each party a portion of the costs of a cause at the final hearing; and the court has jurisdiction to direct a set-off of costs awarded by the court itself as between two parties. Magrath v. Magrath, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 155.

Sums of costs incurred in the same suit or proceedings, though payable under different orders, may be set-off against each other; and this right of the parties is not affected by the solicitor's lien. So held, where the defendant, after becoming liable under orders in the suit, to pay costs to the plaintiff, had changed his solicitor, and subsequently under another order became entitled to receive a smaller sum of costs from the plaintiff, and although the application to set-off was made by the plaintiff after notice from the defendant's solicitor that he claimed a lien upon the smaller sum. Roberts v. Buce, 47 L. J., Ch. 411; 8 Ch. D. 198; 26 W. R. 393.

Costs in Chancery cannot be set-off against costs on a rule. Wenham v. Fowle, 2 D. P. C. 144.

—— Judgment against Married Woman.]—A judgment obtained against a married woman after the death of her husband in respect of a pecuniary liability incurred during coverture binds her personally, even though execution thereon is limited to her separate property not subject to any restriction against anticipation; and the costs incurred by the creditor in obtaining such judgment may, under the powers given by Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 21, be set-off on taxation against the costs for which such creditor is liable to the married woman. Holtby v. Hodgson (24 Q. B. D. 103, followed. Pelton v. Harrison, 61 L. J., Q. B. 114; [1892] 1 Q. B. 118; 65 L. T. 845—C. A.

Proceedings in Bankruptcy.]—The costs of bankruptcy proceedings cannot be set-off against the costs of proceedings not in bankruptcy. Bassett, In re, Lewis, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Q. B. 144; [1896] 1 Q. B. 219; 73 L. T. 736; 44 W. R. 240. And see Griffin, Ex parte, infra.

Former Practice.]—The costs of one judgment may be set-off against the debt and costs of another. Thrustout d. Barnes v. Crafter, 2 W. Bl. 826.

In an action against an attorney, he may set-off the full amount of costs as taxed, without deducting from such amount the costs of taxation payable by him. Field v. Besant, 2 N. & M. 207; 5 B. & Ad. 357.

Costs of action may be set-off against each other, though the nominal parties are different, if the expenses are to be defrayed out of the same funds. Gravatt v. Hall, 16 L. J., Q. B. 352.

In trespass against several defendants, they appeared by the same attorney:—Held, that the costs of the successful defendants might be set-off against the costs of those who were unsuccessful. Lee v. Kendall, 3 A. & E. 707; 5 N. & M. 340; 1 H. & W. 316; 5 L. J., K. B. 19. S. P., Norman v. Clemenson, 1 D. (N.S.) 718; 4 Scott (N.R.) 735; 1 Man. & G. 243; 11 L. J., C. P. 191.

Several actions brought on two policies of insurance, underwritten by the same parties (among whom were A. and B.), were consolidated. But in one of the causes which went to trial, A. was defendant, in the other B., and the plaintiff became entitled to costs in one action, and the defendant in the other:—Held, that the costs taxed and allowed to the defendant might be set-off against those taxed and allowed to the plaintiff. Nunez v. Modigliani, 1 H. Bl. 217.

But costs due from the plaintiff to A. cannot be set-off against the costs due from B. to the plaintiff. Holroyd v. Breare, 4 B. & Ald. 43, 700.

The costs of a suit in equity may be set-off against the costs of an action. Webber v. Nicholas, 4 Bing. 16; 12 Moore, 87; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 19.

The costs of a bill in chancery, dismissed in favour of the defendant may be set-off against the plaintiff's costs of a suit in K. B. for the same cause of action, and where he had recovered a verdict, subject to the general lien of the attorney, upon the sum for which judgment was obtained. Harrison v. Bainbridge, 4 D. & R. 363; 2 B. & C. 800; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 171. And see Hall v. Ody, 2 Bos. & P. 28.

A. brings an action against B., the expenses of defending which are borne by C. and D., but A. is nonsuited. Afterwards C. brings an action against A., in which D. is interested as well as C., and C. is nonsuited. The costs of the one nonsuit may be set-off against the other. O'Connor v. Murphy, 1 H. Bl. 657.

A plaintiff having been nonsuited, and costs taxed for the defendant, the court refused to allow the plaintiff to set them off against costs to be taxed for him in an ejectment, in which he had obtained a verdict, but which the defendant had obtained a rule nisi to set aside, and enter a nonsuit. Masterman v. Malin, 7 Bing. 435; 5 M. & P. 324; 1 D. P. C. 222; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 171

By a decree of the Court of Chancery, made in a suit to which A. and B. were parties, it was ordered that the former should pay to the latter certain costs, when taxed. In an action on an account stated, by A. against B.:—Held, that, the costs not having been taxed, B. was not entitled to set-off the sum claimed to be due on foot of them. Treacy v. Barnewall, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 325—Ex. Ch.

If, upon the reference of an action, the arbitrator awards the costs of a nonsuit to be paid by the one party, and a larger sum to be paid as a debt by the other party, the party awarded to pay the smaller sum is entitled to a set-off without motion. Eyes v. Adams, 4 Taunt. 632.

On a reference of an ejectment and all matters in difference between the parties, the arbitrator directed that a sum of money should be paid by the lessor of the plaintiff to the defendants by way of compensation for buildings erected by them, and that a verdict should be entered for the former. On motion, the court directed the sum awarded to the defendants to be set-off against the costs of the lessor of the plaintiff, saving the lien of their attorney. Doe d. Swinton v. Sinclair, 5 D. P. C. 27; 3 Scott, 42; 2 Hodges, 111; 5 L. J., C. P. 184.

Cross costs in two suits ordered to be set-off. Budge v. Bulge, 12 Beav. 385.

2. Bankruptcy of Party.

In What Cases.]—The Court of Bankruptcy will not allow costs of proceedings in the high court to be set off against costs of proceedings in bankruptcy. Griffin, Ex parte, Adams, In re, 49 L. J., Bk. 28; 14 Ch. D. 37; 42 L. T. 704; 28 W. R. 714—C. A. And see Bassett, In re, supra.

Costs to be paid to a party ordered, after his bankruptcy, to be set off against costs ordered to be paid by the same party before his bankruptcy. Lee v. Pain, 4 Hare, 225.

Costs ordered against bankrupt to be set off against those ordered in his favour. Hawley, Ex parte, Richards, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 572; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 59; 4 L. J., Bk. 17.

The court refused, but without costs, a motion for special direction to the master, requiring him to deduct in his taxation of the costs of the parties, the costs which he should allow to the plaintiff (who had become insolvent) after the decree had been passed and acted upon. Rumney

v. Beale, 10 Price, 113 ; Daniell, 35 ; Wils. Ex. Eq. 127.

Costs ordered to be paid, but not taxed until after the bankruptcy of the person to receive them, cannot be set off by the party from whom they were due, proving a debt under the commission. Rhodes, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 539.

3. Interlocutory Costs.

Right to Set off.]—Interlocutory costs may be set off against final costs, where the payment of them at the time they are adjudged, is not strictly a condition precedent to ulterior proceedings. Doe d. Hope v. Carter, 1 M. & Scott, 516 ; 8 Bing. 330 ; 1 D. P. C. 269 ; 1 L. J., C. P. 97.

A rule for staying proceedings in a second ejectment until the costs of the first have been paid will not be enlarged, in order to set off the costs claimed against any one to which the lessors of the plaintiff may become entitled on the trial of the second ejectment. Doe d. Maslin v. Packer, 4 Tyr. 144; 3 L. J., Ex. 148 ; 2 C. & M. 457.

A plaintiff, after having given notice of trial, withdrew his record, and the defendant obtained a rule for payment of the costs of the day, which were taxed. At the next assizes the plaintiff obtained a verdict, and a new trial was afterwards granted on payment of costs :—Held, that the defendant might set off the costs due to him against those payable on the rule for the new trial. Doe d. Dangerfield v. Allsop, 9 B. & C. 760.

A defendant, being taken in execution, on a ca. sa., applied to a judge for his discharge, on the ground of irregularity in the proceedings ; the plaintiff made a cross application to amend the proceedings, and the judge gave leave to amend, and ordered "that the plaintiff should pay the defendant the costs of both applications :" —Held, that these being interlocutory costs, arising in the same suit as the judgment, and the order not making the payment of them a condition precedent to the amendment, they might be set off against the judgment. Thompson v. Parish, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 685 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 153 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 986 ; 7 W. R. 210.

Final judgment in an action having been signed against the defendant, he was arrested under a ca. sa., and discharged by a judge's order, with costs, to be taxed, against the plaintiff ; and a summons by the plaintiff to stay taxation till the next term, in order to review the judge's decision, was discharged with costs :—Held, that both these costs were interlocutory costs, which might be set off against the judgment. Melville v. Leeson, E. B. & E. 324 ; 27 L. J., Q. B. 318 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1146.

Interlocutory costs may be set off against each other, although no express leave is given for the purpose. Levy v. Drew, 2 B. C. Rep. 142 ; 5 D. & L. 307 ; 12 Jur. 119.

Where the petitioner did not object, costs of unnecessary matter in a petition set-off against other costs, and respondents to pay costs proportionate to difference ; but where the parties objected, the court referred it to the master to tax, on the footing of the matter being unnecessary. Bedminster Charities, In re, 12 Jur. 665.

Exceptions for insufficiency were heard before the court in the first instance, under Sir G. Turner's Act ; the costs of those allowed were set off against those disallowed. Willis v. Childe, 13 Beav. 454.

Costs of exceptions allowed, and of those disallowed, apportioned and set off. Bally v. Worham, 32 Beav. 69.

Where a plaintiff is ordered to pay costs on interlocutory applications, which are partly in respect of matters in the suit itself, and partly in other suits, the defendant has a right to set off those costs against costs which he is ordered to pay, where the plaintiff is alone the applying party ; but where he is not, but others join with him as to their interests, there is no such right of set off. Jenner v. Morris, 11 W. R. 943, 2 N. R. 479.

4. Against Debt.

Costs given to the plaintiff out of the fund in question, directed to be set off against payment out of such fund erroneously made by the trustees to the use of the plaintiff. Cooper v. Pitcher, 4 Hare, 485.

By an order of the court, the costs to be incurred by a married woman, suing by her next friend in a future proceeding, were ordered to be paid to A. B., her solicitor. Pending the proceedings, A. B. was discharged, and C. D. appointed solicitor. A. B. received the whole costs :—Held, that A. B. could not set off, as against the amount, a debt due to him from the next friend. Bailey & Hope, Ex parte, 14 Beav. 18.

A defendant, with his mother's money, purchased leaseholds, which were assigned to him, and subsequently, at her request, he covenanted to hold them upon trust for her for life, and afterwards for himself and two others. He afterwards re-assigned them to his mother, who sub-let them to the plaintiff. The mother received the rents from the sub-lease during her lifetime, and on her death the plaintiff, in ignorance of the real nature of the lessor's title, paid the rent to her executrix. Disputes arose between the persons interested under the settlement, and a suit was instituted, in the course of which the defendant was declared to be a trustee of the leaseholds upon the trusts of the settlement. The defendant subsequently brought ejectment against the plaintiff, and failed in it, but succeeded in a replevin. The plaintiff then filed a bill for a declaration that he was entitled to set off the costs due to him in the ejectment and other items against the rent due from him to the defendant. The defendant demurred for want of equity :—Held, that the demurrer must be allowed. Pratt v. Keith, 33 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 305 ; 10 L. T. 15 ; 12 W. R. 394.

A decree was made, dismissing a bill with costs, against husband and wife, so far as it sought to charge the separate estate of the wife. The husband was also declared liable to the plaintiff for certain occupation rent :—Held, first, that the costs of dismissing the bill should be paid to the husband alone ; and, secondly, that the plaintiff was entitled to set off the occupation rent against the costs payable by him. Wright v. Chard, 4 Drew. 702 ; 1 L. T. 182 ; 8 W. R. 122.

The court will not order costs due from one party to another to be set off against a sum obtained from the former by the latter to obtain his liberation from an illegal arrest, but ordered by the court to be repaid. Pitt v. Coombes, 1 H. & W. 13 ; 2 A. & E. 459 ; 4 N. & M. 535 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 83.

Costs will not be set off against sums due on an unascertained account. Whalley v. Ramage, 8 L. T. 499.

5. When Right Lost.

The execution of a writ of attachment for costs does not deprive the party issuing it of any lien or right of set-off he may possess for the payment of such costs. Bawtree v. Watson, 2 Keen. 713 : 7 L. J., Ch. 183.

An order was made against a plaintiff for payment of the costs of an application for an injunction, and execution was issued upon failure of payment, but no return had been made to the writ. The defendant was subsequently ordered to pay the costs of an application to dismiss the bill. An appeal by the plaintiff against the first decision was still pending. The defendant moved to set off his costs against those ordered to be paid by the plaintiff. The motion was granted, upon the defendant undertaking not to levy for more than the balance; and as the defendant had not applied for a set off when the order was made against him, no costs as to the application were given on either side. Bryon v. Metropolitan Saloon Omnibus Co., 28 L. J., Ch. 798 ; 7 W. R. 423.

6. Staying Proceedings.

Interlocutory Costs and Costs of Appeal.]—A party, who under a former order in the action was entitled to certain costs out of the estate, appealed from an interlocutory order, and his appeal was dismissed with costs. The respondent asked that under Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-s. 21, these costs might be set-off against the costs which the appellant was entitled to receive, the certificate of the taxation of which was ready for signature. The court declined to order the set-off, but directed that no costs should be paid out to the appellant for a fortnight, so as to give the respondent time to carry in his bill of costs of the appeal, that the set off might be considered by the taxing-master. Crawshay, In re, Dennis v. Crawshay, 45 Ch. D. 318 ; 63 L. T. 597—C. A.

Probable Costs in another Action—Time for Application.]—An action for infringement of a patent, and a cross-action by the defendant for groundless threats, had been set down together for trial. The judge held at the trial of the first action that the defendant had infringed, and gave judgment for the plaintiff in the first action, and as a consequence dismissed the cross-action of the defendant. On appeal, the Court of Appeal held there had been no infringement, and dismissed the first action with costs, and ordered the cross-action to be remitted for trial again to the judge below. Though the defendant in the first action had been ordered to give security for the costs of the appeal, the plaintiff in the first action did not, on the occasion of the judgment of the Court of Appeal, apply to the Court of Appeal for a stay of taxation in order that any costs which the defendant in the first action might become liable to pay, if his cross-action for threats were not successful, might be set off against the costs ordered to be paid by the plaintiff in the first action to the defendant; but, on a subsequent occasion, the plaintiff did make such an application :—Held, that the application must be refused, as the defendant in the first action had then, by the judgment of the Court of Appeal, obtained a present right, which he could not be deprived of, to payment of the costs in the first action. Automatic Weighing Machine Co. v. Combined Weighing and Advertising Machine Co., 58 L. J., Ch. 647 ; 61 L. T. 536 ; 37 W. R. 636—C. A.

Semble, if the application for stay of taxation for the purposes of set-off had been made on the occasion of the delivery of the judgment in the first action by the Court of Appeal, it would probably under the circumstances of the case, have been granted. Ib.

In a suit for tithes, the plaintiff obtained a decree with costs, for part of his demand. As to the remainder, issues were directed, which issues were afterwards found for the defendants. The court stayed the payment of the costs decreed to the plaintiff, in order that the defendants might have an opportunity to set off, as against those costs, the costs of the issues. Taylor v. Cook, Younge, 201.

7. Solicitor's Lien.

Distinct Proceedings.] — Ord. LXV. r. 14, allowing a set-off for costs notwithstanding the solicitor's lien, applies only to costs in the same proceeding. Hassell v. Stanley, 65 L. J., Ch. 194 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 607 ; 74 L. T. 375 ; 44 W. R. 405.

Under Ord. LXV. r. 14, the costs of an unsuccessful application by a defendant for a certiorari to remove a county court action to the high court cannot be set-off against the costs subsequently ordered to be paid by the plaintiff on the action in the county court being dismissed, inasmuch as the application for the certiorari and the county court action are distinct and independent proceedings. Ib.

Cross-Judgments in Distinct Actions—Discretion.]—Whether r. 14 of Ord. LXV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, does or does not apply to the case of cross-judgments in distinct actions between the same parties, the allowing a set-off for damages or costs between parties is a matter in the discretion of the court. Edwards v. Hope, 54 L. J., Q. B. 379 ; 14 Q. B. D. 922 ; 53 L. T. 69 ; 33 W. R. 672—C. A.

The plaintiff in a patent action brought a separate trade mark action against the same defendant. An appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment in the patent action was dismissed with costs. Under an order in the trade-mark action, certain costs in that action were ordered to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff. The defendant in the patent action having issued execution for the costs of the appeal in that action, the plaintiff paid the same to the sheriff under protest. The plaintiff in that action then moved, under Ord. LXV. r. 14, that, notwithstanding a lien claimed by the defendant's solicitor on the costs ordered to be paid by him, the plaintiff, on the appeal, he might set off against those costs, the costs ordered to be paid by him in the trade-mark action, as well as certain costs in the patent action which, prior to the appeal in that action, had been ordered to be paid to him by the defendant :—Held (following Edwards v. Hope, supra), that Ord. LXV. r. 14, applied only to costs in the same action, and not to costs in different actions : and that, accordingly, the plaintiff's right to set off his costs in the trade-mark action against the appeal costs in the patent action was intercepted by the solicitor's lien ; but that his right of set-off as to the costs in the patent action only was not so intercepted. Blakey v. Latham, 41 Ch. D. 518 ; 60 L. T. 624 ; 37 W. R. 569.

If A. recovers against C., and C. recovers against A. and B., the court will permit C. to set off the damages which he has recovered against those obtained by A., on his undertaking that the bill of A.'s solicitor in the first action shall be satisfied, he having a lien on the judgment for his costs. Mitchell v. Oldfield, 4 Term Rep. 123; 2 R. R. 342.

The lien of the plaintiff's solicitor upon the debt and costs recovered in the cause after affirmance upon a writ of error, must be satisfied before the defendants are entitled to set off against them a judgment recovered by them in another cause against the plaintiff. Middleton v. Hill, 1 M. & S. 240; 14 R. R. 422.

No set-off of judgments will be allowed, even though they arise out of the same award, without satisfying the solicitor's lien. Domett v. Hellyer, 2 D. P. C. 540.

The right of setting off one judgment against another is not a legal right, but is given by the equitable jurisdiction of the court with reference to all the circumstances of the transaction, and will not be allowed so as to defeat the solicitor's lien for costs. Simpson v. Lamb, 7 El. & Bl. 84; 26 L. J., Q. B. 121; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 412; 5 W. R. 227.

Where Plaintiff's Solicitor really Plaintiff.]—Plaintiffs in an ejectment at law recovered against the defendants with costs, which they assigned to their solicitor, the plaintiff in the suit in equity, against the same defendants; but the assignment was not executed by all the parties. The bill in equity was dismissed, with costs, amounting to less than the costs at law:—Held, that the solicitor was not entitled to set off the costs of dismissing the bill against so much of the costs of the action at law, either in his character of solicitor or assignee of the plaintiffs at law. Gwynn v. Kroms, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 271.

A successful defendant's costs will be set off against the costs of the plaintiff, without regard to the lien of such plaintiff's solicitor, if shown that the solicitor is substantially the plaintiff in the cause. Pocock v. O'Shaunessy, 6 A. & E. 807.

Costs against Debt.]—An order having been obtained in 1847, superseding a commission of bankruptcy against B., with costs, to be paid by the petitioning creditors, and, before those costs were paid, B. in 1849 was discharged under the Insolvent Act:—Held, that the assignee, who had been one of the petitioning creditors in bankruptcy, took, as ordered in 1847, subject to the lien of the solicitor who obtained the order, and could not be allowed to set off against that lien a debt due to himself by the insolvent when those costs were incurred. Orr, Ex parte, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 102.

A rule was obtained by the defendant's solicitor to set aside the service of the writ for irregularity with costs. The defendant afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the plaintiff might set off his debt against the costs of that rule, and that the defendant's solicitor had no lien upon those costs. Marshall v. Geary, 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 9.

A., being at the time a creditor of B., presented a petition in bankruptcy against B., which was dismissed with costs. A., before the final taxation of the costs, having executed a creditor's deed in the form of Schedule D to the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, B. applied for leave to issue execution for the costs on which his solicitor claimed a lien:—Held, that there could have been no set off in respect of two such debts in equity; and that B.'s solicitor having, in consequence of his lien, a joint interest with B. in the costs, and B. being thus pro tanto a trustee for his solicitor for the costs when paid, there could be no set off in bankruptcy. Davies, In re, Cleland, Ex parte, 36 L. J., Bk. 45; L. R. 2 Ch. 808; 15 W. R. 1160.

Money in Solicitor's Hands.]—A solicitor who receives rents in a cause, without the authority of the court, will be ordered to pay them over to the receiver, and cannot retain them on the ground of lien, or set them off against costs alleged to be due to him from the plaintiff. Wilkins v. Townshend, 1 Russ. & M. 361.

A liquidator is not entitled to make any payment to his solicitor without the sanction of the court; nor may such solicitor set off his costs against funds recovered through his own exertions. All moneys must in the first instance be paid into court. Union Cement and Brick Co., In re, 26 L. T. 240; 20 W. R. 361.

Effect of Attachment.]—The solicitor is not deprived of his lien on the funds in court, for his costs in the cause, by having issued an attachment against his client, and committed him to gaol for non-payment of his bill; but the costs which he may receive in the cause are to be taken in discharge of the attachment, pro tanto. Davies v. Bush, Younge, 358.

The Lord Chancellor on the 8th November ordered the defendant to pay costs to the plaintiff, but the order was not completed till the 23rd December. The Master of the Rolls on the 15th December ordered the plaintiff to pay costs to the defendant, and on the 19th the plaintiff offered to set off the costs. The defendant in January following issued an attachment for the costs:—Held, that the plaintiff, notwithstanding he was in contempt, might, under these circumstances, move to set off the costs. Cuttell v. Simons, 6 Beav. 304.

The execution of a writ of attachment for costs does not deprive the party issuing it of any lien or right to set off he may possess for the payment of such costs. Bawtree v. Watson, 2 Keen, 713; 7 L. J., Ch. 183.

Property Preserved.]—A lien on an estate for costs, as between solicitor and client, allowed to a solicitor, the property having been preserved for the benefit of all parties interested, notwithstanding an order directing payment of the costs out of the estate to the client, and an alleged set off in respect of a debt due from him to the estate. Bailey v. Birchall, 2 Hem. & M. 371; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 57.

And see SOLICITOR.

Trust Estate.]—Where a person, at the time of an order being made for the payment of his costs by trustees on a petition in the matter of a trust, is indebted to the trust estate, although the amount is not then ascertained, he cannot get any of such costs until he has paid the amount due from him to the trust, and the trustees, therefore, can set off the costs payable by them against the amount due from him. His solicitor cannot be in a better position than he is himself, and has no lien on such costs. Harrald, In re, Wilde v. Walford, 53 L. J., Ch. 505; 51 L. T. 441—C. A. Reversing 31 W. R. 318.

Secus, as to the costs of the trustees incurred in recovering such amount. Ib.

In same Action]—By an arbitrator's award in an action, the plaintiff was ordered to pay a sum of money to the defendant, and the defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiff a part of his costs when taxed:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the debt set off against the taxed costs, and that the right of set off in such a case was not interfered with by the ordinary solicitor's lien for costs. Pringle v. Gloag, 48 L. J., Ch. 380; 10 Ch. D. 676; 40 L. T. 512; 27 W. R. 574.

Where there are costs in equity and at law due from the opposite parties, the court will not set off the costs at law against those in equity, if the solicitor in equity claims his lien on the latter. Smith v. Brocklesby, 1 Anstr. 61; 3 R. R. 547.

Rule 63 of Hilary Term, 1853, does not prohibit the setting off mutual claims for costs between the parties in the same suit. In an action against three, a verdict was found against one and in favour of the other two:—Held, that the costs of the successful defendants might be deducted from the amount of damages and costs payable to the plaintiff by the other defendant, without regard to the lien of the plaintiff's solicitor. George v. Elston, 1 Scott, 518; 3 D. P. C. 419; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 513; 1 Hodges, 63; 4 L. J., C. P. 167. See Lee v. Kendall, 5 N. & M. 340; 3 A. & E. 707; 1 H. & W. 316; 5 L. J., K. B. 19, and Norman v. Cimenson, 1 D. (N.S.) 718; 4 Scott (N.R.) 735; 4 Man. & G. 243; 11 L. J., C. P. 191.

Rule 63 of Hilary Term, 1853, only applies to cases in which the court has a discretion to allow costs or damages of different actions to be set off against each other, and where there has been an application to allow such set-off. Dunn v. West, 10 C. B. 420; 1 L. M. & P. 608; 20 L. J., C. P. 1; 15 Jur. 88.

The lien of the plaintiff's solicitor upon the debt and costs recovered in the cause must be satisfied before the defendant is entitled to set off the costs recovered by him in another cause against the plaintiff. Randle v. Fuller, 6 Term Rep. 456; 3 R. R. 230. And see Glaister v. Hewer, 8 Term Rep. 69.

Costs receivable and payable by two parties ordered to be mutually set off without regard to the lien of the solicitors. The Master of the Rolls has jurisdiction to direct costs which have been ordered by the Lord Chancellor to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff to be set off against costs ordered by the Master of the Rolls to be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant. Cattell v. Simons, 6 Beav. 304.

The court made absolute without costs, a rule for setting off the costs of a successful defendant against the damages and costs awarded for the plaintiff against the other defendant, disregarding the solicitor's lien. Rawlings v. Sowell, 7 Scott, 231.

Where a party in a suit has a right of set off, it has priority over the lien of the solicitor, which is always subject to the equities between the parties. Jenner v. Morris, 11 W. R. 943.

In equity, the solicitor's lien is only upon the balance of costs arranged according to the equities of the parties. Taylor v. Popham, 15 Ves. 72.

Sums of costs incurred in the same suit or proceedings, though payable under different orders, may be set off against each other; and this right of the parties is not affected by the solicitor's lien. So held, where the defendant after becoming liable under orders in the suit to pay costs to the plaintiff, had changed his solicitor, and subsequently under another order became entitled to receive a smaller sum of costs from the plaintiff; and although the application to set off was made by the plaintiff after notice from the defendant's solicitor that he claimed a lien upon the smaller sum. Roberts v. Bute, 47 L. J., Ch. 414; 8 Ch. D. 198; 26 W. R. 393.

In an action containing several counts in the declaration, some issues were found for the plaintiff and some for the defendant:—Held, that the master was correct in deducting the costs of the defendant's issues from the plaintiff's costs, and that the lien of the plaintiff's attorney was only upon the balance coming to the plaintiff. Eades v. Everatt, 3 D. P. C. 687.

A partnership suit having been compromised upon the terms of the plaintiff taking the assets, and covenanting to pay thereout and to the extent thereof the costs of the suit, etc., and the defendant covenanting, so soon as these liabilities had been discharged, to pay in a certain event a sum of money to the plaintiff, by an order in the suit the compromise was confirmed, and the plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs as covenanted out of assets to be received by him. An account was afterwards settled between the parties which showed assets in excess of liabilities including the costs; but the plaintiff afterwards alleging that the moneys had become payable under the defendant's covenant, claimed to set them off against the defendant's costs. Upon an application by the defendant and his solicitor for an order for payment of his costs:—Held, that, apart from other considerations, the solicitor intervening had such a lien on the defendant's costs payable under the order as precluded the set-off. Herron v. Hobson, 47 L. J., Ch. 574.

—— Interlocutory Costs.]—By a judge's order, the defendant was allowed to go to trial upon payment of a certain sum of money, together with the costs of the cause up to the date of the order; and the defendant having recovered a verdict without previously complying with the terms of the order:—Held, that the costs taxed in his favour on the postea could not be set off against the interlocutory costs, so as to deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his lien. Aspinall v. Stamp, 4 D. & R. 716; 3 B. & C. 108.

The plaintiff having succeeded upon issues of fact joined upon two counts, but judgment having been given upon a demurrer to a third for the defendant, obtained a rule to show cause why satisfaction should not be entered upon the roll as to the defendant's costs, and those costs be deducted from his own damages and costs, without regard to the lien of the defendant's attorney. The rule was made absolute:—Held, that in such case the defendant's costs were "interlocutory costs in the same suit," within the rule of court, and that the former part of the rule, prohibiting the allowance of any set-off of costs to the prejudice of the attorney's lien, applied only to the case of costs of different suits. Scott v. De Richebourg, 2 L. M. & P. 421; 11 C. B. 447; 20 L. J., C. P. 263; 15 Jur. 882.

Interlocutory costs may be set off against final costs in the same cause, without reference to the attorney's lien. Halliday v. Lawes, 5 D. P. C. 636: 3 Bing. (N.C.) 774; 4 Scott, 475; 3 Hodges, 130.

After verdict, a rule nisi for a new trial was granted, and on the hearing, the cause and another cause between the same parties then pending in a county court, and all matters in difference between the parties to these causes, were by consent referred, the costs of the cause respectively, and of the rule to abide the event, and the costs of the reference and the award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, the attorney for the plaintiff in both actions being the same. The arbitrator decided the cause in the superior court in favour of the defendant, and the cause in the county court in favour of the plaintiff, with damages 45*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*, and gave the plaintiff the costs of the reference, and divided the costs of his award:—Held, that the costs of the cause and of the rule could not be set off against the money and costs payable to the plaintiff in the other cause, to the prejudice of the lien of the plaintiff's attorney, as they were not interlocutory costs in the same suit awarded to the adverse party, within the proviso to the rule. Little v. Philpotts, 2 B. & S. 383; 31 L. J., Q. B. 125; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1175.

To what Costs applicable.]—The solicitor's lien does not extend beyond his taxed costs in the particular cause, where one judgment is set off against another. Watson v. Maskall, 1 Scott, 658; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 366; 3 D. P. C. 638; 1 Hodges, 73; 4 L. J., C. P. 266.

But such lien only extends to the general balance of the costs. Howell v. Harding, 8 East, 362; 9 R. R. 468.

K. RECOVERY OF COSTS.

1. BY APPLICATION TO THE COURT.

Where there are several defendants, each is liable for the whole costs; and if, after satisfaction from any one, the plaintiff takes it against another, such defendant may apply to the court. Wilson v. Foot, Bull. N. P. 335.

One of several defendants, who had given a general release to the plaintiff after the costs of a nonsuit had been taxed, was ordered to pay to the other defendants their shares. Darlow v. Collinson, Bull. N. P. 335.

Action for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close and cutting heath; plea, not guilty, and verdict for the plaintiff. On the trial it appeared that the trespasses were committed by the direction of A., and the heath taken to his premises. On a motion being made that A. should pay the plaintiff the damages and taxed costs, the court refused the application, as the plaintiff ought, before he brought the action, to have ascertained who was the substantial defendant. Berkeley v. Dimery, 10 B. & C. 113.

Ne exeat does not lie in respect of costs taxed in a chancery suit. Goodman v. Sayers, 5 Madd. 471.

Mode of proceeding to compel payment of costs by one not a party to the suit. Att.-Gen. v. Skinners' Co., C. P. Coop. 1.

How payment of costs enforced by and against persons not a party to the suit. Sanger v. Gardiner, C. P. Coop. 262.

Order against two persons jointly to pay costs: the process for giving it effect may be joint or several. Ib.

When a plaintiff has given notice to the defendant to discontinue the action, and the costs have been taxed, no further order of the court is required to enable the chief clerk to issue a writ to enforce payment, and the writ may be varied to suit the circumstances of the case. Ord. XXIII. (Judicature Act) has the force of an order of the judge or court. Bolton v. Bolton, 35 L. T., 358; 24 W. R. 663.

Proceedings stayed—Dismissal of Action.]—The defendant succeeded on a demurrer to the plaintiff's statement of claim, and plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs of the demurrer, liberty being given to him to amend. He amended accordingly, and the action was set down for trial. The plaintiff failed to pay the costs, and the defendant obtained an order to stay proceedings until payment. Five months after the date of this order, the costs being still unpaid, the court ordered the action to be dismissed unless the costs were paid within a month from the date of the notice of motion. White v. Bromige, 26 W. R. 312.

2. BY ACTION.

In what Cases.]—An action will lie on a final order of the Privy Council for payment of costs, notwithstanding the order is made in a proceeding collaterally to the original suit, and that suit is still undetermined. Hutchinson v. Gillespie, 11 Ex. 798; 25 L. J., Ex. 103: 2 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 4 W. R. 302.

A motion made by a defendant in an action pending in the Queen's Bench in Ireland to set aside proceedings was dismissed with costs to the plaintiff:—Held, that no action would lie for those costs in this country, and that the order awarding them could only be enforced by attachment in Ireland. Sheehy v. Professional Life Assurance Co., 2 C. B. (N.S.) 211; 26 L. J., C. P. 301; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 748.

An action will lie on an order of the House of Lords directing an unsuccessful appellant to pay the respondent's costs. Marbella Iron Ore Co. v. Allen, 47 L. J., C. P. 601; 38 L. T. 815.

An order of the President of the Probate Division that defendant pay plaintiff a named sum, being the amount of plaintiff's taxed costs of a discontinued probate action which defendant had been ordered to pay, may be enforced by an action in the Queen's Bench Division. Norton v. Gregory, 14 R. 735; 73 L. T. 10—C. A.

An action lies to recover the costs on an indictment for libel given by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8. Richardson v. Willis, 42 L. J., Ex. 68; L. R. 8 Ex. 69; 28 L. T. 71; 12 Cox C. C. 351.

Costs payable under a judge's order can be recovered by action or counterclaim. Philpott v. Lehain, 35 L. T. 855.

An order made by the court, upon an application to strike a solicitor off the rolls for misconduct, that the solicitor shall pay the costs of the proceedings may, by virtue of Ord. XLII. r. 24, be enforced by an action upon the order. Godfrey v. George, 65 L. J., Q. B. 249; [1896] 1 Q. B. 48; 73 L. T. 599; 44 W. R. 245—C. A.

An unsuccessful application by the person to whom the costs are ordered to be paid to attach the solicitor for disobedience to the order is no bar to a subsequent action upon the order. Ib.

Agreement Binding on Parties.]—The quarter sessions, on appeal, quashed an order made against the defendant by the petty sessions, subject to a case for the consideration of the Queen's Bench Division, and further ordered that the costs of the appeal then before it should abide the event of the decision of that court. The case, which was stated and signed by the chairman of the quarter sessions, after stating the question submitted to the Queen's Bench Division, contained (inter alia) the following clause:—"The court are . . . in all respects to exercise the power of the sessions to confirm, amend, alter, vary, modify, or reverse their decision in such manner and to such extent as to such court shall seem expedient and proper; costs to follow the event." At the hearing of the case, the Queen's Bench Division quashed the order of the quarter sessions, but the judgment was silent as to costs. In an action brought to recover the costs incurred in the argument of the case, and also the costs of certain applications made to the quarter sessions from time to time until the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division in the plaintiff's favour was obtained:—Held, that the words "costs to follow the event" referred, and were intended to refer, to costs such as were claimed by the plaintiff in the action. Lear v. Botting, 44 L. T. 58; 45 J. P. 240.

Held, also, that these words, although contained in a case stated and signed only by the chairman of the quarter sessions, amounted to an agreement which was binding on the parties to the case, and that the defendant was therefore liable to pay the costs so incurred. Ib.

Taxation not a Condition Precedent.]—An award for costs generally, without ascertaining the amount, is good under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 127, and the party to receive, after delivering his bill for the amount, may maintain an action to recover them. The party to pay may have the costs taxed, but the taxation is not a condition precedent to the other party's right to bring an action to recover them. Holdsworth v. Wilson, 4 B. & S. 1; 32 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 171; 8 L. T. 434: 11 W. R. 733—Ex. Ch.

The right to costs is entirely independent of the taxation of them, and an action can be maintained for costs though the amount of them has not been previously settled or ascertained by taxation. Metropolitan District Ry. v. Sharpe, 50 L. J., Q. B. 14; 5 App. Cas. 425; 43 L. T. 130; 29 W. R. 617; 44 J. P. 716—H. L. (E.)

Taxation of the costs is not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to bring an action to recover them. Lear v. Botting, 44 L. T. 58; 45 J. P. 240.

3. By Attachment or Charging Order on Shares.

Attachment of Debts.]—The order for costs on dismissing an action for want of prosecution is not enforceable by attachment of debts under Ord. XLV. r. 2. Cremetti v. Crom, 18 L. J., Q. B. 337; 4 Q. B. D. 225; 27 W. R. 411.

Under sub-s. 8 of s. 25 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the Divorce Court has power to attach a debt due to a respondent in order to compel obedience to an order of that court for payment of costs. Whittaker v. Whittaker, 51 L. J., P. 80; 7 P. D. 15; 47 L. T. 131; 30 W. R. 431. But see preceding case.

Attachment of Persons for Non-Payment of.]—Upon a motion for attachment, no order was made, except that the respondent pay the costs of the motion. Upon default in payment:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to commit to prison for the default. Micklethwaite v. Fletcher, 27 W. R. 793.

Where costs are directed to be paid to A. or his solicitor, a personal demand by A. alone is sufficient ground for an order of committal against the party for non-payment of such costs. Diack, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 53.

See also Debtors Act.

Charging Property with.]—A plaintiff's bill having been dismissed with costs, an order nisi charging railway shares belonging to the plaintiff with the amount of the defendant's costs when taxed was made before taxation. Burns v. Irving, 46 L. J., Ch. 423; 3 Ch. D. 291; 34 L. T. 752; 25 W. R. 66. See further Execution.

Where a motion was dismissed with costs, and every endeavour made to serve the party with a subpœna for them had failed, the court enforced the order by charging government stock of the party, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Blake v. White, 3 Y. & Coll. 434; 3 Jur. 749.

A decree declaring a plaintiff entitled to one-fifth of the proceeds of sale of chattels, and directing an account to be taken of what was due, and payment of such amount together with the costs of the action to him, does not entitle him to a charging order under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, or to a stop order against funds in court in another suit belonging to the same defendant. Widgery v. Tepper, 6 Ch. D. 364; 37 L. T. 297; 25 W. R. 872.

Parties interested in a fund standing in the name of the accountant-general in one suit were ordered to pay the defendants in another suit their costs. These being taxed, and a minute having been left with the senior master of the Common Pleas, the court on petition made a charging order on the fund for such costs, and granted an interim stop order. Wells v. Gibbs, 22 Beav. 204.

A master's allocatur, and a fortiori, a mere rule for taxation of costs, is not an order whereby money is payable, so as to operate as a judgment within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 113, s. 18. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635.

A plaintiff who had obtained an order for payment of costs was held entitled under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, to rank as an incumbrancer upon the defendant's estate from the date of the first resignation of the certificates of taxation only. Hargrave v. Hargrave, 25 Beav. 484.

4. By Execution.

A rule for taxation of costs, and the allocatur, do not amount to a rule or an order whereby money is payable within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, so as to operate as a judgment. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635.

When a rule of court for the payment of money has the effect of a judgment, under the above section, a rule nisi calling upon the parties to shew cause why the amount should not be paid is unnecessary. Doe d. Harrison v. Hampson, 4 C. B. 745.

Where a defendant is entitled to costs against an infant who sues by his prochein amy, the court will not grant a rule calling on the prochein amy to pay those costs, unless it is made to appear that he has been served with the allocatur in the same manner as is required in order to ground an attachment. Abrahams v. Taunton, 1 D. & L. 319: 12 L. J., Ex. 417; 7 Jur. 678.

The trial of a cause at the assizes was postponed by order of nisi prius on payment by the defendant of the costs of the day, to be taxed. The defendant died before any verdict in the cause, and before the order of nisi prius was made a rule of court. The suit having abated (17 Car. 2, c. 8, s. 1), the court discharged a rule calling on the executrix of the defendant to shew cause why the costs should not be taxed, the remedy for recovering the cost under the above section not being clear as against an executrix. Hill v. Brown, 16 M. & W. 796: 11 Jur. 290.

In ejectment there was a verdict for the defendant, and an allocatur given for the costs under the consent rule, which ordered, that, if a verdict should be given for the defendant, the lessors of the plaintiff should pay to the defendant costs to be adjudged. A fi. fa., issued pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, was regular. Doe d. Pennington v. Barrell, 16 L. J., Q. B. 296.

5. By Mandamus.

A plaintiff who had recovered a judgment for debt and costs in a county court, and had received the debt out of court, was entitled to have a writ of execution issued for the costs, and the Queen's Bench would grant a mandamus to the clerk of the county court, commanding him to issue such writ. Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 El. & Bl. 279; 21 L. J., Q. B. 310; 7 Jur. 179.

6. By Sequestration.

It is not necessary that the applicant for a writ of sequestration should be able to point to some particular property which may be made available for the payment of the costs due to him. When the court or the judge to whom the application is made has exercised a discretion and made an order, that order ought not to be interfered with by a superior court, unless it is shown that the tribunal below has acted upon an erroneous principle, or has improperly exercised its discretion, or that there has been some miscarriage of justice. Hulbert v. Cuthcart, 65 L. J., Q. B. 644; [1896] A. C. 470; 75 L. T. 302—H. L. (E.)

When a deposit on an appeal had been ordered to be returned to the appellant, and before it was paid to him sequestration was issued against him for non-payment of costs previously due, the deposit was ordered to be paid to the sequestrators instead of the appellant. Conn v. Garland, L. R. 9 Ch. 101; 22 W. R. 175.

Costs of a sequestration as between solicitor and client will not be taxed. Shapland, In re, Hunt, Ex parte, 23 W. R. 40.

In a proceeding in which a married woman and her husband are co-plaintiffs or co-petitioners, a sequestration cannot issue for costs against her separate estate; semble, it is otherwise if she sues by her next friend. Keogh v. Cuthcart, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 215.

On a motion the court gave leave in its discretion, under the Rules of Court of April, 1880, to issue a sequestration for the payment of costs. Snow v. Bolton, 50 L. J., Ch. 743; 17 Ch. D. 433; 44 L. T. 571; 29 W. R. 538.

Where such application is made in an action which is transferred, for hearing only, to a judge who does not sit in chambers, it is properly made to such judge in court; otherwise in chambers. Ib.

L. INTEREST ON COSTS.

Mortgage.]—The court will not allow interest on the costs of a judgment for foreclosure to be charged against the mortgaged estate. Eardley v. Knight, 58 L. J., Ch. 622; 41 Ch. D. 537; 60 L. T. 780; 37 W. R. 704.

Where a mortgagee has been empowered to add his taxed costs of appeal to his security, interest is chargeable on the costs of the appeal, not from the date of the judgment, but only from the date of the taxing-master's certificate. Ib.

A deed after reciting that A. had agreed to charge certain property with all sums which B. should pay as surety for a third party, together with interest on all such payments, and all such costs, &c., as he might sustain, &c., proceeded to charge the property with the payment of all such sums, costs, &c., with interest as aforesaid: —Held, that interest was not payable on the costs, &c. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen, 704; 7 L. J., Ch. 5.

Costs out of Estate.]—Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 17, 18, interest is recoverable on costs which one party is ordered to pay another, but not on costs directed to be raised out of an estate. Att.-Gen. v. Nethercote, 11 Sim. 529; 10 L. J., Ch. 162.

Administration Action.]—The rule that interest on costs in an administration action ordered to be raised out of a fund is not recoverable except by express provision to that effect contained in the order is not affected by the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, General Order VII., nor by the rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XLI. r. 3, and XLII. r. 16. Marsden's Estate, In re, Withington v. Neumann, 58 L. J., Ch. 260; 40 Ch. D. 475; 60 L. T. 696; 37 W. R. 525.

Where Appeal Heard.]—In a suit by the purchasers of certain mines to set aside a sale, a decree with costs was made in favour of the plaintiffs. The House of Lords reversed the decree, and remitted the cause to the court below. That court directed the costs to be repaid to the defendants, but without interest. Where money is paid out of court through the erroneous order of the court, the party who receives it, and is called upon to refund, is not liable to pay interest upon it. Small v. Attwood, 3 Y. & Coll. 105.

The superior courts have no power to give interest on costs incurred on appeal from the Exchequer Chamber for such time as may elapse between the judgment of that court and its affirmance by the House of Lords. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Gidlow, 43 L. J., Ex. 1; L. R. 9 Ex. 35; 29 L. T. 399; 22 W. R. 17.

Disbursements.]—The 33 & 34 Vict. c. 28, s. 17, which enables the master upon a taxation of costs to allow interest on moneys disbursed by a solicitor for his client, is intended to apply only as between a solicitor and his own client, and does not apply to a taxation of costs to be paid as between solicitor and client out of a fund in court belonging wholly or partly to other persons than the client. Hartland v. Murrell, 43 L J. Ch. 94; L. R. 16 Eq. 285; 28 L. T. 725; 21 W. R. 781.

From what Time Running—Judgment.]—By a judgment delivered before the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, came into operation, an action was dismissed and the plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs, but the judgment contained no direction as to the date from which interest on the costs was to run. Taxation took place, and the taxing-master's certificate was made after the rules of 1883 had come into operation:—Held, that the rules of 1883 applied to the taxation proceedings and therefore that interest on the costs ran, not from the date of the taxing-master's certificate as the rules of 1875 provided, but from the date of the judgment as the form No. 1, Appendix H. to the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, directs. Boswell v. Coaks, 57 L. J., Ch. 101; 57 L. T. 742; 36 W. R. 65—C. A.

Where costs are given by a judgment and taxed, interest on such costs is payable, not from the date of the taxing-master's certificate but from the date of the judgment. London Wharfing Co., In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 1137; 53 L. T. 112; 33 W. R. 836.

Where a decree was pronounced for the payment to the plaintiffs of a sum of money and costs, the costs do not bear interest (under s. 27 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105) from the date of the decree, but from the date of the certificate of taxation of the costs. Lidwell v. Lidwell, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 91.

Interest on a judgment for costs runs from the date of the master's certificate of taxation, and not from the time of entering up the judgment. Schröder v. Cleugh, 46 L. J., C. P. 365; 35 L. T. 850.

—— Interlocutory Order.]—An interlocutory order in an action for the payment of taxed costs falls within s. 18 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and consequently such costs carry interest from the date of the order. Taylor v. Roe, 63 L. J., Ch. 282; [1894] 1 Ch. 413; 8 R. 295; 70 L. T. 232; 42 W. R. 426.

Rate.]—As a general rule, in the absence of any special order, interest at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum is payable on the costs of an action from the date of the judgment. Landowners' West of England Drainage Co. v. Ashford, 33 W. R. 41.

A party was directed to pay certain costs and make other payments, but was declared to be entitled to be indemnified out of the funds in court:—Held, that he was entitled to interest at 4*l.* per cent. on all sums paid for costs or otherwise. Wainman v. Bowker, 8 Beav. 363.

M. REVIVOR FOR COSTS.

See PRACTICE (Parties).

N. APPEAL FOR COSTS.

1. GENERALLY.

Under former Practice.]—There shall not be an appeal for costs only. Newton v. Bennet, 1 Bro. C. C. 140; Dick. 594.

Where a question arises as to an interest in a trust fund, separated from general residue, the costs must come out of the particular fund, and having been given by decree as specifically prayed by the bill out of the general personal estate, the decree, although affirmed in other respects, was corrected in that particular, being considered as relief prayed, and therefore not within the rule against appeal for costs only. Jenner v. Jenour, 10 Ves. 562.

A court of appeal will not entertain an appeal for costs alone. Home v. Pringle, 8 Cl. & F. 264.

On Question of Principle.]—A question of the principle on which costs are awarded is subject to appeal, notwithstanding s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873. The City of Manchester, 49 L. J., P. 81; 5 P. D. 221; 42 L. T. 52—C. A.

Although an appeal will not be allowed in respect of costs only, yet where there has been a mistake upon a matter of law which governs or affects the costs, the party prejudiced is entitled to have the benefit of correction by appeal. Yeo v. Tatem, The Orient, 40 L. J., P. 29; L. R. 3 P. C. 696; 24 L. T. 918; 20 W. R. 6; 8 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 74. S. P., Perks v. Starkert, 3 N R. 545; 8 L. T. 858; 11 W. R. 1016.

An appeal will not lie for costs only, where costs are in the discretion of the court; but where the court is directed by an act of parliament to give costs, it is a proper subject of appeal, if they are not given according to the requisitions of the act. Tod v. Tod, 1 Bligh, (N.S.) 639.

An appeal lies from an order refusing a party his costs, where the costs have been withheld, not on the ground of the conduct of the party, but by reason of the application of a supposed rule of law. Cockle v. Treacy, [1896] 2 Ir. R. 267—C. A.

As a general rule, where a plaintiff's title to equitable relief depends on a legal right, on the establishment of such right, either by an action or an issue, he will be entitled to the costs both at law and in equity. After an issue had been directed and found in favour of the defendant, the plaintiff applied for a new trial which was refused; the cause was then brought to a hearing, when the bill was dismissed with costs. The plaintiff then appealed from the decree, as well as the order refusing the new trial. On that appeal the bill was retained for a year, with liberty for the plaintiff to bring an action. An action was accordingly brought, and a verdict was found in the plaintiff's favour; but a new trial of the action was subsequently granted, on the ground of misdirection of the judge. The plaintiff having been successful in the second action, the cause was brought before the Vice-Chancellor Knight-Bruce, on the equity reserved, when he made a decree in conformity with the result of the trial at law, but did not think fit to make any order as to costs:—Held, on an appeal from that decree, that the appeal involved so much of principle as to render it an exception to the ordinary rule, which prohibits an appeal for costs alone. Rochester Corporation v. Lee, 2 De G. M. & G. 427.

A decree which involves much principle as to payment of the costs, may be appealed from, as to the question of costs only. Taylor v. Southgate, 4 Myl. & C. 203; 8 L. J., Ch. 137; 3 Jur. 214.

The general rule of the court is, that there cannot be a re-hearing for costs alone, unless some principle is involved in the mode of dealing with them, and it is only in extreme cases that the court will re-hear the merits on the question of costs. Chappell v. Gregory, 2 De G. J. & S. 111.

Error apparent on Order.]—The rule which prohibits an appeal for costs alone, is confined to those cases in which the correctness of the decision as to costs cannot be judged of without re-hearing the cause upon the merits, and therefore does not apply to a cause in which the error of such decision is apparent on the face of the decree or order appealed from. Where a bill to restrain an alleged infringement of a copyright is retained, at the hearing, with liberty to the plaintiff to bring an action, and the action is accordingly brought and fails, it is of course that the bill should be dismissed with costs: and therefore, if dismissed without costs, it is error on the face of the decree. Chappell v. Purday, 2 Ph. 227; 16 L. J., Ch. 261: 11 Jur. 256.

The Court of Appeal refuses to inquire into the various causes which may have influenced the decision of the court below in awarding costs, and therefore an appeal for costs will not generally be entertained; but where the judge of the court below placed on record on the face of the decree the reason why he ordered the party to pay the costs, and such reason was founded on the determination of a question of law, the Court of Appeal allowed the question of law to be argued on the appeal, that it might determine whether the reason embodied in the decree by the judge below was well founded. Walker v. French, 21 W. R. 493.

Application to Commit for Contempt of Court.]—The power of a judge to order payment of costs in cases where an application is made to commit a person for contempt of court depends on the question whether or not the contempt has been committed, and therefore where on such an application an order has been made that the person shall pay costs of the application, an appeal from such an order is not an appeal for costs only. Emmerson, In re, Rawlings v. Emmerson, 57 L. J., P. 1—C. A.

A motion to commit a defendant for breach of an injunction having been refused without costs, the defendant appealed:—Held, that there is no rule that a motion to commit, if refused, must be refused with costs, and that an appeal as to costs in such a case will not be entertained. Hope v. Carnegie, L. R. 4 Ch. 264; 20 L. T. 5; 17 W. R. 363.

An order declaring that the defendant had committed a breach of an injunction, but giving no directions, except that he should pay the costs of the application to commit, may be appealed from, and is not within the rule against appeals for costs. Witt v. Corcoran, 45 L. J., Ch. 603; 2 Ch. D. 69; 34 L. T. 550; 24 W. R. 501—C. A.

A plaintiff moved to commit the defendant for contempt in having sold property of the intestate in the cause in disobedience to an order that she should deliver up to the receiver all property of the intestate in her hands, but the notice did not ask for restitution of the property. The vice-chancellor refused to commit, and made the costs of the application costs in the action:—Held, that an appeal would not lie from this order. Ashworth v. Outram, 5 Ch. D. 943—C. A.

Costs directed to be Paid out of Fund.]—The respective rights of incumbrancers on a fund having been determined in an action brought by one of them, the court below directed that the costs of all parties should be paid first out of the fund, and that the residue should go to the incumbrancers in order of their priorities. It was found that the fund would be insufficient, after payment of such costs, to satisfy in full K., the incumbrancer, who had been declared entitled to priority:—Held, that an appeal by him was not an appeal as to costs only, and might be brought without special leave. Johnstone v. Cox, 19 Ch. D. 17; 45 L. T. 657; 30 W. R. 114—C. A.

The costs of the suit, which the order of the court below had thrown exclusively on the excess of accumulations arising from the annual produce of the trust estate, after the period allowed by the Thellusson Act, were, upon appeal, directed to be paid out of the general estate of the testator, including the fund accumulated within the permitted period, except the costs incurred in the separation of the excessive accumulation, which costs were directed to be paid out of such excessive accumulations. An appeal against such an order is an exception to the ordinary rule prohibiting appeals merely upon costs. Eyre v. Marsden, 4 Myl. & C. 231; 3 Jur. 450.

Appeal for costs where the question is which of two funds shall bear the costs, where the costs are the whole question, and the object of the motion is to ascertain by whom they are to be paid. Malone v. Clarke, 1 Moll. 15.

Semble, that the fact that costs have been ordered to be paid to a trustee out of a particular fund or by a particular person will not render an appeal from the order the less an appeal for costs, such a direction being a mere incident of the order as to the mode of payment. Chennell, In re, Jones v. Chennell, 47 L. J., Ch. 80; 8 Ch. D. 492; 38 L. T. 494; 26 W. R. 595.

Interpleader Issue.]—No appeal lies from a judge's order dealing with the costs of an interpleader issue made as between the parties. Hartmont v. Foster, 51 L. J., Q. B. 12; 8 Q. B. D. 82; 45 L. T. 429; 30 W. R. 129—C. A.

Action for Receiver.]—A suit was instituted for the appointment of a receiver pending proceedings in the Probate Court to impeach a will which had been already proved. A motion for a receiver was refused. The will was afterwards declared void, and the plaintiff then moved that the executors might pay the costs of the suit for a receiver. Malins, V.-C., made an order staying all proceedings in the suit without costs, except as to some infant defendants, whose costs the plaintiff was ordered to pay. On appeal:—Held that the appeal was one for costs only, and that therefore it could not be entertained. Grimston v. Timms, 18 W. R. 781.

Payment of Costs—Condition Precedent to Appeal.]—An appeal must not be brought for costs, or in relation to costs. But an appeal against an order which imposes, as a condition to having a new trial, the payment within a certain time, of the costs of the first trial, does not fall within that principle. The competency of the appeal being established, the costs of the cause were reserved till the hearing of the case itself. Metropolitan Asylum District Managers v. Hill,

Change of Position before Appeal.]—On appeal from an order of the county court registrar dismissing a bankruptcy petition presented by the appellant against the debtor, the objection was taken that as the petitioning creditor's debt had been paid since the order appealed from was made, the appeal was as to costs only:—Held, that the ground of the appeal was not as to costs only, but that the order dismissing the petition was wrong. Ross, Ex parte, Sartoris, In re, 8 Morrell, 25.

Where a second suit for administration of a deceased person's estate was instituted after decree in a previous suit, for objects which could have been well attained in the first suit, and a decree had been pronounced dealing with the costs of the second suit on a different principle, an appeal for costs only was held not within the rule which prohibits such appeals. Menzies v. Connor, 3 Macn. & G. 648.

Where the parties to a suit have by their conduct, after decree, reduced the question between them to one of costs only, the court will not entertain a petition of re-hearing. Perks v. Wycombe Ry., 1 N. R. 1.

Lunacy Inquiry.]—An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the Lords Justices sitting in Lunacy, where the latter have made an order under s. 109 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, dealing with the costs of a lunacy inquiry. Cathcart, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 320; [1893] 1 Ch. 166; 2 R. 268; 68 L. T. 358; 41 W. R. 277—C. A.

Order on Solicitor personally to Pay Costs.]—An order that the costs of an application at chambers on behalf of a client shall be paid by his solicitor personally is not within the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 49, and therefore is subject to appeal without leave. Bradford, In re, 53 L. J., Q. B. 65; 15 Q. B. D. 635; 50 L. T. 170; 32 W. R. 238—C. A.

Referee's Report.]—The court in adopting a referee's report left the costs of the reference to be dealt with by the taxing-master, an appeal from such an order is for costs only. Leigh, In re, Rowcliffe v. Leigh, 26 W. R. 729.

2. Varying Orders of Court below as to Costs.

Where Appeal on Merits fails.]—If we were to vary the order of the court below as to costs when an appeal on the merits fails, we should practically be allowing an appeal for costs only, and appeals would be brought nominally on the merits, but really only for the purpose of varying the order as to costs—Per Jessel, M.R. Harpham v. Shacklock, 19 Ch. D. 215; 15 L. T. 572; 30 W. R. 50—C. A. S. P., Llanover v. Homfray, 19 Ch. D. 232—C. A.

Under the new practice and notwithstanding Ord. LVIII. r. 5, the Court of Appeal will not open a decision, which it otherwise affirms, for the mere purpose of making a different order as to costs. New Gas Co., In re, 5 Ch. D. 703; 37 L. T. 111; 25 W. R. 643—C. A.

A bill was dismissed by a vice-chancellor without costs. The plaintiff appealed against the whole decree, and his appeal was dismissed:—Held, that the court had no power to vary the order of the vice-chancellor by directing that the bill should be dismissed with costs. Harris v. Aaron, 46 L. J., Ch. 488; 4 Ch. D. 719; 36 L. T. 43; 25 W. R. 353—C. A.

Unless the appellant can succeed on the questions of substance he cannot ask the Court of Appeal to review the question of costs. There is no fixed rule of law on this point. The rule is that inasmuch as costs are not the subject of appeal, unless a substantial variation is made in the order appealed from, the fact that a substantial question has been raised will not of itself be enough to allow the question of costs to be gone into on the appeal. Games v. Bonnor, 54 L. J., Ch. 517; 33 W. R. 64—Per L. C.

Where there is a fair and substantial question to be argued on appeal, the decree may be varied as to costs, though affirmed in every other point; but it will not be varied as to costs, where the point which is presented as the ground of appeal has no substance. Att.-Gen. v. Butcher, 4 Russ. 180.

In an action for specific performance of an alleged contract for sale the plaintiff obtained an ex parte injunction to restrain the defendant from parting with the subject-matter of the contract. A motion to extend the injunction not coming on for hearing through pressure of business in the court, the plaintiff obtained a further ex parte injunction on the usual undertaking as to damages. At the hearing Malins, V.-C., dismissed the action without costs, but refused the defendant an inquiry as to damages: The defendant appealed on the ground that there ought to have been an inquiry as to damages, and that he ought to have had his costs, and there was a cross-appeal by the plaintiff:—Held, that the Court of Appeal was precluded by the provisions of the Judicature Act from varying the decree as to costs, though it had been necessary to hear the whole case by reason of the cross-appeal, as the defendant's appeal was merely one for costs, the inquiry as to damages being a wholly collateral matter. Graham v. Campbell, 47 L. J., Ch. 593; 7 Ch. D. 490; 38 L. T. 195; 26 W. R. 336—C. A.

A defendant having during a suit offered to pay all that was ultimately found due from him, the plaintiff was ordered to pay all the subsequent costs of the suit. On appeal, it was decided that costs being in the discretion of the judge, the Court of Appeal would not vary the order of the Master of the Rolls as to them on the mere ground that if the case had originally been before the Court of Appeal, it might have arrived at a different result as to the costs. Remnant v. Hood, 30 L. J., Ch. 71; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1173; 3 L. T. 485—L.JJ.

A vice-chancellor ordered the costs of two inquiries, which had been prosecuted in his chambers, to be costs in the cause, although his decision as to one of the inquiries was favourable to one of the parties litigant, and his decision as to the other of the inquiries was in favour of the other party litigant. On appeal the court decided that the costs, being in respect of matters purely personal between the two litigants, should be borne personally respectively by them, and that the question of these costs was a proper subject of appeal. Horn v. Coleman, 26 L. J., Ch. 544; 5 W. R. 409.

Where the Master of the Rolls or the Vice-Chancellor has given substantial relief against a defendant, with costs against him personally, it is competent to the court, upon a re-hearing by way of appeal, affirming the decree as to the relief, to vary it as to the costs; but such a variation should only be made where the appeal court, clearly and without doubt, dissent from the decision of the court below as to the costs. Reynell v. Sprye, 8 Hare, 277, n. Affirmed 1 De G. M. & G. 600; 21 L. J., Ch. 664.

Where a court of appeal agrees with the main relief given in the court below, it requires a very strong and clear case at the hearing of the cause to depart from the adjudication of the former court as to costs. Blenkinsopp v. Blenkinsopp, 1 De G. M. & G. 495; 21 L. J., Ch. 401; 16 Jur. 787.

Parties cannot appeal for costs, and it is indispensably necessary to maintain the rule that parties appealing should not be permitted to mix up their appeal with matter of merits, in order to cover an appeal for costs. Clyne's Trustees v. Dunnett, Macl. & R. 28.

The rule with respect to costs in the House of Lords, as in the privy council and in chancery, is, that one cannot appeal for costs alone; but if an appeal be brought on the merits, not on colourable grounds of appeal, for the purpose of raising the question of costs, the house will not treat that as an appeal for costs, but will, even in affirming the judgment of the court below, consider the question of costs as fairly raised; and where there is hardship on the appellant, will reverse so much of the judgment of the court below as gave costs against him. Inglis v. Mansfield, 3 Cl. & F. 362.

An appeal for costs does not lie, yet if an appeal be brought on a substantial question not colourable, the court of appeal may deal with the costs awarded by the court below. Macaulay v. Adam, 3 Cl. & F. 385.

The rule which forbids an appeal on the question of costs alone, does not preclude the court, where the appeal embraces other matters also, from varying the decree as to costs, though it affirm it as to such other matters. Lewes v. Smith, 1 Macn. & G. 417.

Order varied, on appeal, as to costs, in a case in which they formed the sole subject matter of the appeal. Angell v. Davis, 4 Myl. & C. 360; 9 L. J., Ch. 3; 3 Jur. 838.

Decree varied on appeal in respect of costs only. Burkett v. Spray, 1 Russ. & M. 113.

Though no appeal is allowed in matters of costs only, they may be considered in an appeal on other grounds. Fitzgibbon v. Scanlan, 1 Dow, 270; 14 R. R. 62.

Interlocutory Proceedings Inconsistent with Final Judgment.]—The court has no power to annul a direction in a judgment previously delivered, that a third party shall pay the costs of the interlocutory proceedings taken to bring him before the court, although by the judgment in the action it is ordered that he be dismissed from the action with costs to be paid by the defendants. Beynon v. Godden, 48 L. J., Ex. 80; 4 Ex. D. 246—C. A.

Of Master or District Registrar.]—The enactment in s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, that no order by the high court, or any judge thereof, as to costs only which by law are left to the discretion of the court shall be subject to any appeal, does not apply to the order of a master or district registrar, and therefore a judge of such court has power to vary as to costs an order of a district registrar dismissing the action without costs. Foster v. Edwards, 48 L. J., Q. B. 767. Sed quære.

3. Jurisdiction and Discretion of Court Below.

Trial by Jury—"Good Cause" not shown.]—In an action for the recovery of several closes of land the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for about half the land claimed, and for the defendant for the remainder. The judge before whom the action was tried ordered that the costs of both parties should be added together, divided equally, and that each party should pay half the total thus arrived at:—Held, that an appeal could be brought from this order, for that good cause must exist before the jurisdiction to make the order could arise, and that whether facts did or did not exist which would constitute good cause could be the subject of an appeal. Jones v. Curling, 53 L. J., Q. B. 373; 13 Q. B. D. 262; 50 L. T. 349; 32 W. R. 651—C. A.

And see ante, col. 694.

Interpleader Summons—Costs of Action.]—Where a master has exceeded his jurisdiction by ordering one party to pay the costs of the action on an interpleader summons, an appeal will lie. Hanson v. Maddox, 53 L. J., Q. B. 67; 12 Q. B. D. 100; 50 L. T. 123; 32 W. R. 183.

Payment of Costs ordered by way of Penalty.]—Where the court ordered that the action be dismissed without costs; that the costs of the plaintiffs of this action and counter-claim be taxed, and that the counter-claim be dismissed with costs, and in case such last-mentioned costs shall not amount to one-half of the plaintiff's costs of the action and counter-claim, then it was ordered that the defendant pay to the plaintiffs such a sum as will with such costs amount to such one-half of the entire costs of the action and counter-claim:—Held, that the court had no power to order any party to pay a sum by way of penalty, and that an appeal would lie though in substance it was only an appeal for costs. Willmott v. Barber, 17 Ch. D. 772; 45 L. T. 229—C. A.

Order on Persons not Liable.]—An officer of the crown, suing on behalf of the crown, or in matters in which the crown is interested, is not liable to pay costs to the opposite party, even though the suit may have been improperly instituted. Against any judgment awarding such costs an appeal may be brought, notwithstanding the general rule that no appeal lies for costs. Lord Advocate v. Douglas (Lord), 9 Cl. & F. 173.

Where tenant by elegit has received rents and profits beyond the debt, though he shall account to the debtor, yet he shall not pay costs. In such case appeal may be for the costs only, where defendant decreed to pay them. Owen v. Griffith, Ambl. 520; 1 Ves. sen. 249.

—— Defendant ordered to pay Costs when Plaintiff unsuccessful.]—In an action for infringement of alleged copyright in the title of a novel, the defendant, before trial, discontinued the use of the title. At the trial the judge held that the plaintiff had established his claim to copyright, and that the defendant had invaded it, but he made no order except that the defendant should pay the costs of the action. The defendant appealed, contending that the plaintiff had no title, and that the action ought to have been dismissed:—Held, that it is not within the discretion of the court to make a defendant pay the whole costs of an action if the plaintiff had no right to sue, that there was therefore implied in the order a declaration that the plaintiff had a good cause of action, that this was not an "order as to costs only" under s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that the defendant could appeal against the order. Dicks v. Yates. 50 L. J., Ch. 809; 18 Ch. D. 76; 44 L. T. 660—C. A.

—— Ascertainment of Costs Payable out of Fund.]—By articles of partnership between three partners, on the death of any partner the survivors were entitled to take his share at a valuation. One of the partners having died, his executrix brought her action to have it declared that the goodwill was to be included in the valuation, and to have the value of the deceased partner's share in the assets ascertained. A decree was made declaring that the goodwill must be valued as part of the assets, and directing accounts. The chief clerk made his general certificate, finding (inter alia) that two specified leaseholds belonging to the partnership were of no value. The plaintiff took out a summons to vary the certificate by estimating these leaseholds as worth a considerable sum. The summons was adjourned into court, and Bacon, V.-C., refused to vary the certificate, but ordered the costs of both parties to be paid out of the estate. The defendants appealed:—Held, that the case did not come within the rule in Foster v. G. W. Ry. (8 Q. B. D. 25, 515), viz. that the court cannot make a successful defendant pay the costs of a plaintiff who has wholly failed; but that it was within the discretion of the court to order all costs reasonably incurred in ascertaining the sum to be paid out of the fund, and that an appeal would not lie. Butcher v. Pooler, 52 L. J., Ch. 930; 24 Ch. D. 273; 49 L. T. 573; 32 W. R. 305—C. A.

Order on Third Party to Pay Costs of Unsuccessful Defendant.]—The high court has jurisdiction to order a third party to pay to an unsuccessful defendant the costs payable by such defendant to the plaintiff. On an appeal against such an order:—Held, that these costs were within the discretion of the high court, and, therefore, the order was not appealable. Hornby v. Cardwell, 51 L. J., Q. B. 89; 8 Q. B. D. 329; 45 L. T. 781; 30 W. R. 263—C. A.

Discretion not Exercised.]—By Ord. LXV. r. 1, the costs of all proceedings are in the discretion of the court, and therefore the general rule of practice in the admiralty court as to the costs of references, viz. that when more than a fourth is struck off a claim each party pays his own costs, and when more than a third the claimant pays the other party's costs, may be appealed against and is wrong, and the court must exercise its discretion according to the circumstances of each particular case. The Friedeberg, 54 L. J., P. 75; 10 P. D. 112; 52 L. T. 837; 33 W. R. 687; 5 Asp. M. C. 426—C. A.

Action Dismissed for want of Prosecution.]—The statutable right of a defendant to the costs of an action in the Chancery Division which had been dismissed for want of prosecution was repealed by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, which repeals so much of 4 & 5 Anne, c. 3, as gives such costs, and though the practice in accordance with such statutable right, and as regulated by Ord. XXXIII. r. 10, of the Chancery Consolidation Orders of 1860, was preserved by s. 4 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, yet Ord. LXV. r. 1, of the rules of 1883 has changed such practice, so that the costs of a defendant where such action has been dismissed for want of prosecution are now in the discretion of the judge, and therefore his order as to such costs is by s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, not subject to appeal. Snelling v. Pulling, 29 Ch. D. 85; 52 L. T. 335; 33 W. R. 449—C. A.

Judgment in Default of Defence.]—When a plaintiff moves for judgment in default of a defence, under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, the judge, in deciding the issues between the parties, must look to the statement of claim, and nothing else; but he has the same discretion as to costs, under Ord. XLV. r. 1, in cases coming under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, as in all other cases; and the court of appeal will not review his discretion, even though there has been leave to appeal, unless there has been a disregard of principle or misapprehension of facts. Young v. Thomas, 61 L. J., Ch. 196; [1892] 2 Ch. 134; 66 L. T. 575; 40 W. R. 168—C. A.

Confessing Defence.]—By Ord. XX. r. 3 [Ord. XXIV. r. 3 (1883)], the plaintiff may, after delivering a confession of defence, "sign judgment for his costs up to the time of the pleading of such defence, unless the court or a judge shall, either before or after the delivery of such confession, otherwise order":—Held, that there is no appeal, without leave, to a divisional court from the refusal of a judge at chambers to deprive the plaintiff of his costs under the above rule. It is an appeal as to costs only, left to the discretion of the judge within the meaning of s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Perkins v. Beresford, 47 L. T. 515.

—— Delegation of Discretion.]—In an application by the plaintiff to have all proceedings stayed in the action, the defence having been admitted, the judge made an order, under Ord. XXVI. r. 1, that all proceedings should be stayed, each party to bear his own costs, except such as in the opinion of the master to whom the matter was referred for taxation were occasioned by any proceedings unnecessarily taken by the plaintiff:—Held, that the judge had jurisdiction to make such an order; and that it was no delegation of his discretion to the master to do so. Musman v. Boret, 66 L. T. 171; 40 W. R. 352. See Leigh, In re, Rowcliffe v. Leigh, 26 W. R. 729.

Inspection of Property.]—An order was made in chambers for the inspection of the defendants' property, the costs of the inspection to be paid by the plaintiff:—Held, that under Ord. LII. r. 3, the judge had a discretion to order the plaintiff to pay the costs, and the order being made in his discretion, the plaintiff had no right without leave to appeal from it. Mitchell v. Darley Main Colliery Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 394; 10 Q. B. D. 457; 31 W. R. 549.

Taxation.]—Two sets of defendants having put in separate answers, on the taxation of their costs the master refused to allow more than one set :—Held. that there was no appeal. Beattie v. Ebury (Lord), 29 L. T. 419 ; 22 W. R. 68.

See also ante, col. 715.

County Courts Act—Action on Contract.]—A writ in an action founded on contract, was specially endorsed for a sum of 49*l.* More than 21 days after service of the writ, the plaintiff obtained judgment under Ord. XIV. for 23*l.*, leave to defend as to the remainder being given. An order was afterwards made, directing the case to be tried in the county court, but subsequently the plaintiff abandoned the remainder except 4*l.* which was by consent ordered to be paid to the plaintiff with costs to be taxed. A judge at chambers gave the plaintiff his costs on the high court scale, and the defendant appealed :—Held, that under s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the judge at chambers had a discretion to give costs on the high court scale, and that no appeal lay from the exercise of his discretion. Bazett v. Morgan, 59 L. J., Q. B. 44 ; 24 Q. B. D. 48 ; 61 L. T. 434 ; 38 W. R. 108 ; 54 J. P. 119.

Costs as between Solicitor and Client.]—The Court of Chancery formerly had, and the High Court of Justice now has in matters of equitable jurisdiction, a general discretionary power to give costs as between solicitor and client. Whether the high court has the same power in matters of common law jurisdiction, quære. Cockburn v. Edwards (18 Ch. D. 449) questioned. Mordue v. Palmer (L. R. 6 Ch. 22) approved. Andrews v. Barnes, 57 L. J., Ch. 691 ; 39 Ch. D. 133 ; 58 L. T. 748 ; 36 W. R. 705 ; 53 J. P. 4—C. A.

An action was brought by the vicar and churchwardens of a parish to recover from the defendants a fund of small amount which had been handed over to them upon trust for a charitable purpose connected with the parish, but, as the plaintiffs alleged, upon a condition which had become incapable of fulfilment. The plaintiffs failed to make out their case. The court, in dismissing the action, being of opinion that it had been brought wholly without justification, ordered the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the defendants as between solicitor and client ; and the Court of Appeal refused to interfere with the judgment. Ib.

Payment into Court.]—In an action for libel the defendant tendered an apology and paid money into court in satisfaction of the claim. After certain further proceedings the plaintiff accepted the money paid into court in full satisfaction, and the judge at chambers allowed him all costs before and after payment into court :—Held, that there is no provision whereby "good cause" in such a case can be shown to deprive the plaintiff of his costs, that the costs were in the discretion of the judge, and that no appeal would lie. Marriage v. Wilson, 53 J. P. 120.

Lunacy Inquiry—Verdict of Sanity.]—Where the result of a lunacy inquiry is that the person who was alleged to be a lunatic is found to be of sound mind, the judges sitting in lunacy, in exercising their discretion over the costs of the inquiry under s. 109 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, may, if the application for the inquiry seems to them to have been prompted by a desire to protect the person and property of he alleged lunatic, and to have been made on reasonable grounds and in a reasonable manner, order the costs of the application to be paid by the person who was alleged to be a lunatic. Cuthbert, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 320 ; [1893] 1 Ch. 466 ; 2 R. 268 ; 68 L. T. 358 ; 41 W. R. 277—C. A.

Injunction—Damages.]—An action was commenced against A. and B. for a mandatory injunction to compel them to pull down a wall. The defendant A. then took out a summons to stay the action by offering to pull down the wall, to consent to a perpetual injunction, to an inquiry as to damages and to pay the plaintiff's costs. This offer was refused by the plaintiff, but the defendant A. pulled down the wall and completed his building. At the trial damages were assessed at 40*s.* without costs. The plaintiff appealed and asked that the defendants should be ordered to pay the costs of the action inasmuch as damages had been assessed at 40*s.* : —Held, that these costs were in the discretion of the judge, and that there was no appeal by reason of s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Cooper v. Whittingham (15 Ch. D. 501) distinguished. Florence v. Mallinson, 65 L. T. 354—C. A.

—— Summons.]—A judge at chambers having refused to allow a railway company their costs of resisting an unsuccessful summons for an injunction under the Railway Traffic Act, 1854, the court refused to review his decision. Ilfracombe Public Conveyance Co., In re, L. R. 4 C. P. 151.

Breach of Injunction.]—When the jurisdiction of a judge to inflict costs on a party arises from his being guilty of a breach of an injunction or other misconduct, an appeal lies as to costs, although the judge makes no order except that the party shall pay costs. Stevens v. Metropolitan District Ry., 29 Ch. D. 60 ; 52 L. T. 832—C. A.

Where the subject of Relief claimed.]—If the nature of the case be such as to render costs a matter of discretion with the court, the mere circumstance that they form part of the relief specifically prayed by the bill, does not make them a substantive matter of appeal from the decree. Lancashire v. Lancashire, 2 Ph. 657 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 270 ; 12 Jur. 363.

Distinction where costs are disposed of as a subject of relief ; an appeal not open to the objection upon an appeal for costs only. Taylor v. Popham, 15 Ves. 72.

Where question arises on interest in a trust fund, separated from general residue, the costs must come out of the particular fund ; and having been given by decree, as specifically prayed by the bill, out of the general personal estate, the decree, although affirmed in other respects, was corrected in that particular, being considered as relief prayed, and therefore not within the rule against appeal for costs only. Jenour v. Jenour, 10 Ves. 562.

Judicial Separation—Wife's Costs of Unsuccessful Suit.]—An order having been made in a wife's suit for judicial separation that the costs should be paid by her, her solicitor subsequently applied for taxation and payment of the wife's costs to the extent of a bond given to him by the husband under the usual order for security.

This application was refused on the ground that the wife had the means of paying the costs herself:—Held, that the matter was within the discretion of the judge, and that no appeal lay. Russell v. Russell, 61 L. J., P. 45; [1892] P. 152; 66 L. T. 436—C. A.

Divorce—Rescission of Decree Nisi.]—A wife petitioned for divorce, and there was a cross-petition by the husband. Under an order of the court, the husband paid a sum of money into court to provide for the wife's costs. A decree nisi was pronounced on the wife's petition, and costs were given her; but before the decree was made absolute the Queen's Proctor intervened. The husband under an order paid a further sum into court to provide for the wife's costs. Upon the trial of the issue with the Queen's Proctor, it was found that there had been collusion at the first trial, and the decree nisi was rescinded. The Court of Appeal affirmed this order. The wife then applied for payment out of the money deposited in court to meet her costs, but the application was refused on the ground that the original order as to costs was gone when the decree nisi was rescinded. The wife appealed without having obtained leave:—Held, that the wife's costs were in the discretion of the court, and there was no right of appeal either as to the sum paid in before decree nisi or upon the intervention of the Queen's Proctor. Butler v. Butler, 15 P. D. 126; 62 L. T. 477—C. A.

Mortgagee or Trustee—Granting or Refusing Costs to.]—A mortgagee will not be deprived of his costs in a redemption suit because he has overstated the amount due to him. Cotterell v. Stratton, 42 L. J., Ch. 417; L. R. 8 Ch. 295.

The disallowance of a mortgagee's costs, incurred in a suit for redemption, is not within the discretion of the judge, but is a matter for his judgment, and must be based on sufficient facts to warrant such disallowance; and therefore, where costs were disallowed to a mortgagee, though no misconduct was alleged against him either in the pleadings or evidence:—Held, that an appeal lay on the sole question of disallowance. Nothing short of misconduct can deprive a mortgagee of his costs in a redemption suit. McDonnell v. McMahon, 23 L. R. Ir. 283.

The master of a ship belonging to a company drew a bill on the company for necessaries supplied to the ship, which was accepted, but was dishonoured at maturity. He paid the bill, and claimed repayment from mortgagees who had taken possession of the ship. On the following day an order was made for winding up the company. The master then applied in the winding up for leave to take proceedings in the Admiralty Court, and obtained an order giving him leave. The liquidator applied to discharge this order, and an order was made for the liquidator to pay into court to a separate account to meet the claim 150*l.*, which exceeded the principal and interest, the master undertaking not to proceed in the Admiralty Court; the payment to be without prejudice to any application by him to increase the amount. The 150*l.* was paid in, and he applied to increase the amount so as to cover the costs of defending an action brought against him by the holder of the bill, and his costs of the application in the winding-up. Bacon, V.-C., ordered the principal and interest on the bill to be paid to the master out of the 150*l.*, and the residue to be paid to the liquidator:—Held, that though if there had not been mortgagees in possession of the ship the proper mode of enforcing the master's lien on the ship would have been by application in the winding-up, the order giving leave to proceed in the Admiralty Court was a proper order, the mortgagees not being parties to the winding-up; and that the master was entitled to all his costs before the Vice-Chancellor as costs properly incurred by a mortgagee in enforcing his security. Rio Grande Do Sul Steamship Co., In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 277; 5 Ch. D. 282; 36 L. T. 603; 25 W. R. 328.

Held, also, that the case was not within the rule that an appeal will not lie as to costs. Ib.

The right of a trustee to his costs, like that of a mortgagee, is a matter of contract, and is not in the discretion of the judge; although he may be deprived of them for misconduct. Therefore the costs of a trustee are not within s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and an appeal may be brought from the decision in respect of them. Cotterell v. Stratton (L. R. 8 Ch. 295) and Farrow v. Austin (18 Ch. D. 58) followed. Hoskin, In re (6 Ch. D. 281), disapproved. Turner v. Hancock, 51 L. J., Ch. 517; 20 Ch. D. 303; 46 L. T. 750; 30 W. R. 480—C. A.

The case of a trustee ordered to pay costs personally forms in general no exception to the rule that an appeal will not be allowed for costs only. Hoskin's Trusts, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 817; 6 Ch. D. 281; 25 W. R. 779—C. A. But see preceding case.

Although a mortgagee who has been deprived of his costs on the ground of misconduct may appeal from the order of the judge, yet if the judge, notwithstanding charges of misconduct, allows a mortgagee his costs, the mortgagor has no right of appeal; because the fact of the misconduct, if proved, would bring the costs within the discretion of the judge. Charles v. Jones, 56 L. J., Ch. 161; 33 Ch. D. 80; 55 L. T. 331; 35 W. R. 88—C. A.

A trustee may appeal from an order depriving him of costs on the ground of misconduct, notwithstanding r. 1 of Ord. LXV. Knight's Trusts or Will, In re, 26 Ch. D. 82; 50 L. T. 350; 32 W. R. 417—C. A.

An order giving one set of costs between two trustees who have severed in their defence to an action, and directing such costs to be certified as payable to one only of the trustees, is, as regards the other, an order depriving him of costs within the meaning of Ord. LXV. r. 1, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, and an appeal from such an order will lie. Isaac, In re, Cronbach v. Isaac, 66 L. J., Ch. 160; [1897] 1 Ch. 251; 75 L. T. 638; 45 W. R. 262—C. A.

An action was brought by a married woman and her infant children by their next friend against a trustee an executor, asking for administration of the trusts of a will and settlement, and for accounts of the principal and income of the trust property, making charges of misconduct against the defendant and seeking to charge him with the costs of the action. At the trial an order was made for administering the trusts, with special inquiries as to the alleged acts of misconduct. On taking the accounts it appeared that the defendant had before action given a correct account of the capital, but that in the accounts he had rendered of the income he had not accounted for nearly so much as he ought. The special cases of misconduct alleged against him were not substantiated. The court ordered the plaintiffs' costs relating to the income account, and the defendant's costs of the rest of the action, to be taxed and set off against each other. The plaintiffs appealed, asking that their costs, or at all events those incurred before the Rules of 1883, except those ordered to be paid by the defendant, might be paid out of the trust property:—Held, that the order was not appealable, for that the costs of a hostile action, seeking to charge the defendants with costs on the ground of acts of misconduct, were not within the old rule of the Court of Chancery that the plaintiff in an administration action was entitled to costs out of the fund unless there were special grounds for depriving him of them, but were in the discretion of the judge. Williams v. Jones, 56 L. J., Ch. 1014; 34 Ch. D. 120; 56 L. T. 68—C. A.

The decision of a judge of the High Court of Justice, ordering a defendant executor to pay the costs of an administration action, on the ground that he has caused litigation by refusing to furnish accounts, is subject to appeal. Pugh, In re, Lewis v. Prichard, 57 L. T. 858—C. A.

Costs incurred by a trustee in actions relating to the estate are not "costs" in administration proceedings, but only "charges and expenses," and therefore an appeal lies from an order of the judge in such administration proceedings, allowing a trustee his costs of such actions out of the estate. Charles v. Jones (33 Ch. D. 80) explained; Chennell, In re (8 Ch. D. 492), approved. Beddoes, In re, Downes v. Cottam, 62 L. J., Ch. 233; [1893] 1 Ch. 547; 2 R. 223; 68 L. T. 595; 41 W. R. 177—C. A.

An order directing payment to a trustee of his "costs, charges, and expenses" of action, properly incurred, is not an order as to "costs only," which are "left to the discretion of the court," within the meaning of s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873. And, therefore, an appeal from such an order will lie without the leave of the court. Chennell, In re, Jones v. Chennell, 47 L. J., Ch. 80; 8 Ch. D. 492; 38 L. T. 494; 26 W. R. 595—C. A.

Where an action against a trustee has been occasioned by the trustee's own misconduct, his costs before and subsequent to judgment are in the discretion of the court. Hewett v. Foster (7 Beav. 348) explained. Easton v. Landor, 62 L. J., Ch. 164; 2 R. 176—C. A.

Where a settlement is set aside, the trustee has no claim to his costs as a matter of right, and therefore, if costs are given against him, he has no right of appeal. Dutton v. Thompson, 52 L. J., Ch. 661; 23 Ch. D. 278; 31 W. R. 596—C. A.

A married woman who was one of the executors of a testator and also tenant for life of the residue, filed a bill for administration of the estate. Upon the accounts being taken it turned out that the residuary estate was insufficient for payment of debts and costs, and that it would be necessary to resort to specifically bequeathed property. Malins, V.-C., on further consideration, refused to give the plaintiff any costs of the suit, and ordered the next friend to pay the costs of taking an account of what, if anything, was due from another of the executors on an account current between him and the testator. The plaintiff appealed:—Held, that as a residuary legatee or executor filing a bill for administration is entitled to costs out of the estate, unless some special grounds are shown for depriving him of them, the costs in question were not costs in the discretion of the court within the meaning of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 49, and that an appeal would lie. Farrow v. Austin, 18 Ch. D. 58; 45 L. T. 227; 30 W. R. 50—C. A.

Order LXV. r. 1, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, directing that the costs of all proceedings in the Supreme Court, including the administration of estates and trusts, shall be in the discretion of the court or a judge, applies, in the case of causes and matters pending on the 24th of October, 1883, when those rules came into operation, only to the costs of proceedings taken on and after that day; and the costs incurred in proceedings taken in such causes and matters before that day, although not adjudicated upon until afterwards, are not within that rule. In an action for administration by one of several residuary legatees, all the proceedings except those on subsequent further consideration were taken before Ord. LXV. r. 1, came into operation, though the costs were not adjudicated upon until the order on further consideration, which was made afterwards:—Held, that an appeal would lie as to the costs of such prior, though not as to the costs of such subsequent, proceedings. Farrow v. Austin (18 Ch. D. 58) followed. McClellan, In re, McClellan v. McClellan, 54 L. J., Ch. 659; 29 Ch. D. 495; 52 L. T. 741; 33 W. R. 888—C. A.

—— Costs of Parties where Joinder unnecessary.]—In an action by trustees of a will against mortgagees of part of the estate, the other beneficiaries of the will were made co-defendants, and it was ordered that the mortgagees must pay the plaintiff's costs of the action, and also the costs of the co-defendants:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that, inasmuch as, by virtue of r. 7 of Ord. XVI., trustees may sue on behalf of their cestuis que trustent, the beneficiaries ought not to have been made parties to the action. Consequently, the order that the mortgagees should pay their costs could be appealed from, and that order was discharged. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862; 20 Ch. D. 611; 47 L. T. 89; 30 W. R. 648—C. A.

Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—A trustee in bankruptcy had been ordered to personally bear his own costs:—Held, that in such a case an appeal would lie. Wainwright, Ex parte, Wainwright, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 67; 19 Ch. D. 140; 45 L. T. 562; 30 W. R. 125—C. A.

Official Liquidator.]—An official liquidator is a person who, as a general rule, is entitled to his costs out of the estate, and therefore an appeal for costs will lie. Silver Valley Mines, In re, 21 Ch. D. 381; 31 W. R. 96—C. A.

Special Leave—Interfering with Discretion.]—Where an appeal from an order as to costs, which are left by law to the discretion of the judge, is brought by leave of the judge, under s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the Court of Appeal will still have regard to the discretion of the judge, and will not overrule his order unless there has been a disregard of principle or misapprehension of facts. Gilbert, In re, Gilbert v. Huddlestone, 54 L. J., Ch. 751; 28 Ch. D. 549; 52 L. T. 8; 33 W. R. 832—C. A. S. P., Young v. Thomas, 61 L. J., Ch. 496; [1892] 2 Ch. 134; 66 L. T. 575; 40 W. R. 468—C. A.

O. UNDERTAKING AS TO COSTS.

A man cannot be made liable for the costs of another by a parol undertaking. Howell v. Edmunds, 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 147.

An undertaking to indemnify in costs, being annexed as a condition on an order, it is sufficient if a personal undertaking in court: Lord Chancellor refusing a reference on the ground that parties ought not to be put to the cost of going before the master for matters of that kind. Caine v. Bloomfield, 1 Moll. 501.

Divisions.]—7 & 8 Vict. c. 92, enables the Queen by order in council to direct that any county shall be divided into districts, to each of which a separate coroner is to be appointed; and where "any such county has been customarily divided into districts for the purpose of holding inquests during seven years before the passing of the act, and it shall seem expedient to her Majesty that the same division of the county be made under the act, each of such districts shall be assigned to the coroner usually acting in and for the same district; but if it shall appear expedient to her Majesty that a different division of such county be made, and any coroner shall present a petition praying for compensation for the loss of his emoluments arising out of such change, her Majesty may direct the Lords of the Treasury to assess the amount of such compensation." The power to direct compensation to be assessed extended only to those cases where a county had been customarily divided into districts for seven years before the passing of the act, and where a different division is ordered under the act. Reg. v. Lechmere, 16 Q. B. 284; 20 L. J., Q. B. 169; 15 Jur. 558.

—— Isle of Ely.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 87, the Isle of Ely has a separate commission and clerk of the peace, a separate county rate, and a separate custos rotulorum, from the county of Cambridge. By 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 53, s. 7, under statutes theretofore passed or thereafter to be passed respecting counties, ridings or divisions, the Isle of Ely shall be deemed and taken to be a division of a county:—Held, that the word division in this section must be understood in the large sense in which it is equivalent to riding; and that the word riding in 22 Hen. 8, c. 5, is not limited to districts called by that name, but includes any division of a county which corresponds in its definition with that of a riding. Reg. v. Isle of Ely, 4 New Sess. Cas. 222; 15 Q. B. 827; 19 L. J., M. C. 223; 14 Jur. 956.

—— Isle of Wight.]—The Isle of Wight is a division of the county of Southampton, but has no separate commission of the peace, and the county is legally liable to repair the bridges in the island. Reg. v. Southampton, 18 Q. B. 841; 21 L. J., M. C. 201; 17 Jur. 254.

—— Cinque Ports.]—Where the moiety of a penalty is given by statute to the treasurer of a county, riding, or division, the word "division" does not apply to small districts, such as the Cinque Ports of Seaford in Sussex, but must be construed with reference to county and riding, and means something analogous to them. Evans v. Stevens, 4 Term Rep. 224, 456.

—— Berwick-on-Tweed.] — The town and liberties of Berwick-upon-Tweed are not for any purpose within, or part of the county of Northumberland. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation v. Shanks, 11 Moore, 372; 3 Bing. 459; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 152.

Riding.]—The word "riding" in the Statute of Bridges (22 Hen. 8, c. 5, s. 3) is not confined to districts called by that name, but includes any division of a county which corresponds in its definition to a riding. Reg. v. Isle of Ely, 4 New Sess. Cas. 222; 15 Q. B. 827; 19 L. J., M. C. 223.

A. OFFICERS.

1. JUDGES.

County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), ss. 8—24.

Appointment.]—The same person may, at the discretion of the lord chancellor, be appointed to be judge of two different county courts. Reg. v. Parham, 13 Q. B. 858; 18 L. J., Q. B. 281; 13 Jur. 981.

By an order in council made in pursuance of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, the county court of Worcestershire was directed to be held at several towns and places specified in the order, and the county court of Herefordshire was also to be held at several places. Afterwards the lord chancellor appointed the same person to be judge of the county court of Herefordshire to be holden at A., and of the county court of Worcestershire to be holden at B., C. and D., the places specified in the order in council:—Held, that the appointment was good. Ib.

By the County Courts Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), s. 9, after a county has been divided into districts by order in council, for the purposes of the act, it is in the discretion of the lord chancellor either to make many judges of the same county court, and, by limiting the jurisdiction of each in his appointment to one district, to prevent them from having any joint or co-ordinate jurisdiction, or to appoint one person to be the judge of the county court, and to hold it in as many districts as, by the appointment, he is directed. Ib. See County Courts Act, 1888, s. 13.

Removal.]—Upon an application for a criminal information against a judge of a county court for misconduct in his office, it appeared that the applicant had addressed a memorial to the lord chancellor to remove the judge from his office for the same misconduct, and that the lord chancellor had declined to interfere:—Held, that the applicant was disqualified from making the application. Reg. v. Marshall, 3 C. L. R. 676; 4 El. & Bl. 475; 24 L. J., Q. B. 242; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 676; 3 W. R. 170.

Application was made for a quo warranto against a county court judge, on the relation of a person who had held the office immediately before him, and who had been removed for inability and misbehaviour by the chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. It appeared that on a memorial addressed to the chancellor charging the relator with general misbehaviour, and particularising one instance more strongly, and praying for his dismissal, the chancellor had held an inquiry, which was attended by the relator and his counsel, and had heard evidence on the charges, not on oath or affirmation, and, within a few days of the close of the inquiry, had dismissed the relator by an instrument finding inability and misbehaviour, but not specifying any particular instance. Affidavits denying the inability and misbehaviour in the cases adduced on the inquiry, and generally, were put in. The court refused the rule, it not appearing that the relator had not been fully heard, or that the charges, if true, did not show inability, and the decision of the chancellor being therefore final. And the court held it not necessary that after the inquiry had closed, a fresh notice to the relator should have been given, to show cause against his being dismissed. Ramshay, Ex parte, 18 Q. B. 173; 21 L. J., Q. B. 238; 16 Jur. 684.

Pension.]—Judgment having been obtained against a county court judge for a large sum, a judge's order, under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 5, was made for payment of the judgment debt by quarterly instalments of 50*l.* each on days named Default being made in the payment of some of these instalments, and there being no other means of enforcing obedience to the order, writs of sequestration were issued under Ord. XLVII. The debtor having resigned his office, a pension of 1,000*l.* per annum was granted to him under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 15, charged upon and payable out of the consolidated fund —Held, that this pension, being a reward for past services only, was liable to seizure under the writ of sequestration; and the court, at the instance of the judgment creditor, made an order to restrain the debtor from receiving the quarterly payments, and empowering the sequestrators to receive the same, to the extent of the moneys due and payable under the judge's order. Willcock v. Terrell, 3 Ex. D. 323; 39 L. T. 84—C. A.

Liability to Action.]—No action will lie against the judge of a county court for words spoken by him while trying a cause, although they are alleged to be spoken falsely and maliciously and without any reasonable or probable cause, and not bonâ fide in discharge of his duty. Scott v. Stansfield, 37 L. J., Ex. 155; L. R. 3 Ex. 220; 18 L. T. 572; 16 W. R. 911.

The judge of a county court is not answerable at common law in an action of trespass for an erroneous judgment, or for the wrongful act of his officer, done not in pursuance of, though under colour of, a judgment; but he is responsible in an action for an act done by his command and authority when he has no jurisdiction. Houlden v. Smith, 14 Q. B. 841; 19 L. J., Q. B. 170; 14 Jur. 598.

In an action against a judge of the county court of S., in Lincolnshire, to which he pleaded only not guilty, the facts were, that the plaintiff being resident and carrying on his business in Cambridgeshire, had been sued, by leave of the judge, in the county court of S., where judgment was given against him by default. A summons, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 98, was afterwards, and while the defendant resided and carried on business in Cambridgeshire, issued by order of the judge, calling on the plaintiff to appear at the county court of S. to be examined as to his not paying debt and costs. This summons was served on the plaintiff in Cambridgeshire, and on his non-appearance at S., the judge, bonâ fide believing that he had power to do so, made a minute in his book, ordering the plaintiff to be committed to Cambridge gaol, and he was so committed accordingly:—Held, that the commitment was without jurisdiction, and that the judge must be taken to be aware of the want of jurisdiction, and was therefore liable in trespass. Ib. But by the County Courts Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 108), s. 48, jurisdiction was given to a county court judge in such circumstances.

In the case of an action against a county court judge for disobeying a writ of prohibition in proceeding with a matter therein referred to, such judge is entitled to notice of action under the County Courts Act, 1846, s. 138, if he proceeded honestly, believing that his duty as a judge called upon him to do so, since in that case the act done by him must be considered as done in pursuance of the act. Booth v. Clive, 2 L. M. & P. 283; 10 C. B. 827; 20 L. J., C. P. 151; 15 Jur. 563.

Liability to Criminal Proceeding.]—In the absence of a direct allegation of a corrupt motive the court will not grant a criminal information against a county court judge, however wrongly he may have acted. Where, therefore, a criminal information was moved for against a county court judge for committing a judgment debtor to prison without first hearing him on his offering to show cause why he should not be so committed, but there was no imputation of any corrupt motive, the rule was refused. County Court Judge, In re, 16 Jur. 995; 1 W. R. 38.

See infra, col. 986.

Deputy Judge.]—A deputy judge has no authority to deliver judgment after the expiration of the period for which he was appointed, or after the death of the judge who appointed him; and if a deputy judge sends his judgment in writing to the registrar after such event, and after the appointment of a new judge of the county court, such judge ought not to enter up the judgment, but to rehear the cause. Hoey v. Macfarlane, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 718; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 785.

An action in which there could not have been an appeal before the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), s. 13, was tried in the sheriffs' court by a deputy of the judge in his absence, who took time to consider: the judge on his return in August, 1867, read the decision of his deputy, but in order to give the defendant power of appealing, postponed the formal delivery of judgment until the 1st January following, when he delivered judgment and gave leave to appeal, and the parties not agreeing a case was stated by the deputy and signed by the judge:—Held, first, that the judgment of the deputy was the judgment of the court, and the postponement of its formal delivery made it a judgment of the 1st January, 1867. Rathbone v. Munn, 9 B. & S. 708; 18 L. T. 856.

Held, secondly, that the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 13, affected procedure, and not the rights of the parties, and therefore was retrospective, and gave an appeal in the action.

2. Registrars and Clerks.

County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 25—32.

Appointment.]—B. held the office of clerk of a court of requests; but owing to illness his son, who was in partnership with him as an attorney, had been appointed his deputy, and was acting as such at the time of the passing of the County Courts Act, 1846:—Held, that the son was not entitled, by virtue of s. 34, to be the first clerk of the county court, as performing the duties of clerk at the time when the local act was repealed. Reg. v. Edye, 12 Q. B. 936; 18 L. J., Q. B. 6; 15 Jur. 8.

Under an appointment, pursuant to the County Courts Act, 1846, s. 25, of two, to execute jointly the office of clerk to a county court, the death of one does not vacate the office as to the other. Reg. v. Wake, 8 El. & Bl. 348; 27 L. J., Q. B. 11; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 68; 6 W. R. 36.

Removal.]—A county court clerk removed for inability or misbehaviour may question the validity of such removal by quo warranto against his successor. Reg. v. Owen, 15 Q. B. 476 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 490 ; 14 Jur. 953.

A plea to an information alleged that the clerk was removed for inability. By a special verdict it was found that the clerk was dismissed for inability ; that such inability was very great pecuniary embarrassment and want of money to pay his debts existing before and at the time of his dismissal ; that no other inability existed, and that he was not, nor had been imprisoned for debt, or physically disabled from performing his duties . —Held, that such pecuniary embarrassment did not of itself constitute inability. Ib.

A registrar who has been appointed to his office by virtue of having been clerk to a court of requests, abolished by the County Courts Act, 1846, schedule (A), is liable to be removed for not giving security, although under the local act he was not required to give security. Wilkins, Ex parte, 1 L. T. 61.

City of London Court.]—The county court acts do not affect the jurisdiction of the mayor, aldermen, and commons to remove the Registrar of the City of London Court, conferred by 15 & 16 Vict. c. lxxvii., s. 11. Osgood v. Nelson, 41 L. J., Q. B. 329 ; L. R. 5 H. L. 636. Affirming, 10 B. & S. 119 ; 20 L. T. 958 ; 17 W. R. 895.

Fees—Right to sue for—Return to Writ of Certiorari.]—The making a return to a writ of certiorari is a "proceeding in the county court," so that the commissioners of the treasury may impose a fee upon it under the County Courts Act, 1856, s. 79. The registrar of the county court may sue in respect of such fees when not paid at the time when the return is made or other proceeding taken. Batt v. Price, 45 L. J., Q. B. 170 ; 1 Q. B. D. 264 ; 33 L. T. 808 ; 24 W. R. 318.

Liability to Action—Issuing Warrant of Commitment.]—The clerk of a county court is only a ministerial officer to carry into effect the order of the judge, and is not therefore liable to an action for signing and issuing a warrant of commitment, in conformity with an order of the judge, although such order may be bad. Dews v. Ryley, 2 L. M. & P. 544 ; 11 C. B. 434 ; 20 L. J., C. P. 264 ; 15 Jur. 1159.

In an action against a clerk for so issuing such warrant, he may, by virtue of the County Courts Act, 1850, s. 19, plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence ; such section applying to clerks as well as bailiffs. Ib.

—— Omission to give Notice of Judgment.]—The County Courts Act, 1846, imposes no duty upon the clerk of the court to prepare or cause to be prepared notices of judgments or orders of the court for the payment of money (whether by instalments or otherwise) for service on the defendant. Robinson v. Gell, 12 C. B. 191 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 155 ; 16 Jur. 615.

No action therefore lies against a clerk for omitting to prepare such a notice, or for negligently preparing it, whereby the defendant was misled as to the time of payment of certain instalments ordered by the judge, and had his goods taken in execution. Ib. S. P., Ely v. Moule, 5 Ex. 918 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 29.

—— For Expenses of Court.]—A., by direction of a registrar of a county court, supplied stationery for the court ; a balance being left unpaid by the registrar :—Held, that a mandamus would not lie to the lords of the treasury to pay the balance out of moneys voted by parliament for the expenses of the county court, in pursuance of the County Courts Act, 1856, s. 85. Walmesley, Ex parte, 1 B. & S. 81 ; 7 Jur (N.S.) 1010 ; 4 L. T. 212 ; 9 W. R. 599.

A clerk of a county court employed A. to fit up a court house and offices It having been left to the jury to say whether or not the clerk contracted on the footing of personal liability, and they having found for A., the court declined to enter a nonsuit, the defendant's personal liability not being excluded by his position as clerk of the court, or negatived by the nature or by the terms of the particular contract. Auty v. Hutchinson, 6 C. B. 266 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 304 ; 12 Jur. 962.

Redemption Suit against Transfer of Action.]—When a redemption suit is commenced in the Court of Chancery against the registrar of the county court, within the jurisdiction of which the property dealt with by the suit lies, an order may properly be made under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 8, to transfer the suit to the county court of the adjoining district, as the word action in 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 21, includes suit. Linford v. Gudgeon, 40 L. J., Ch. 514 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 359 ; 19 W. R. 577.

Deputy—Remuneration.]—The judge of the City of London court, on finding that the registrar was not present at the sitting of the court, appointed a deputy under r. 8 of the County Court Rules of 1867 ; the registrar, half-an-hour afterwards, was present in the court buildings transacting such business of his office as was transacted out of court ; and at the sitting of the court an assistant clerk was present and ready to act. The deputy brought an action against the registrar to recover remuneration for acting as deputy :—Held, that, even if r. 8 were within the jurisdiction given for making county court rules by the County Courts Act, 1856, s. 32 (which the court thought not to be so), still there was no such absence of the registrar as to justify the appointment of a deputy, so as to cast on the registrar an obligation to remunerate the deputy. Wetherfield v. Nelson, 28 L. J., C. P. 220 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 571 ; 20 L. T. 366 ; 17 W. R. 651.

Assistant Clerk practising as an Attorney.]—The assistant clerk is an officer of the county court within the County Courts Act, 1846, s. 29, especially as explained by the County Courts Act, 1850, s. 4, and is therefore liable to be sued for the penalty imposed by s. 30 of the former statute for practising as attorney in any proceeding in the court. Ackroyd v. Gill, 5 El. & Bl. 808 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 111 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 184 ; 4 W. R. 204.

3. Bailiffs.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 33, et seq.

a. The High Bailiff.

Title of Bailiff of Court of Requests to Appointment.]—At the passing of the County Courts Act, 1846, A. was the high bailiff of the court of requests, held at Kidderminster, for the borough of Kidderminster, in the county of Worcester, by virtue of a local act, cited in schedule (A). By an order in council of the 10th March, 1847, it was directed, that on and from the 13th March, 1847, the several courts holden for the recovery of small debts under the provisions of any act or acts cited in schedule (A) should be abolished: and that from the 15th March, 1847, the county court for the county of Worcester should be holden, amongst other places, at Kidderminster:—Held, that the county court so held at Kidderminster was not, within the meaning of the County Courts Act, 1846, s. 34, the same court as the old court of requests; and that therefore A. was not entitled, as of right, to be appointed high bailiff of the county court. Reg. v. Dyer, 13 Q. B. 851; 18 L. J., Q. B. 285; 13 Jur. 364.

Fees—Poundage—Landlord's Claim for Rent on Levy of Execution.]—Where a bailiff has levied execution under a fi. fa., and has also received a notice under s. 160 of the County Courts Act. 1888, of the landlord's claim to rent, and has distrained therefor, he is entitled to poundage or possession fees in respect of both proceedings. Brooter, In re, Pruddah, Ex parte, 66 L. J., Q. B. 766; [1897] 2 Q. B. 429; 76 L. T. 692; 45 W. R. 576; 4 Manson, 212.

—— Withdrawal of Execution Creditor on Claim made—Right to Sue for Possession Fees.]—Where a claim is made to goods taken in execution by the high bailiff of a county court, and the execution creditor sends notice, under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, of the County Court Rules, 1886, of his admission of the claim to the high bailiff, who withdraws from possession, the judge of the county court has power to award possession-money up to the time of the receipt of such notice to the high bailiff, and the high bailiff can recover such possession-money from the execution creditor by action in the county court, if the judge in the exercise of his discretion is of opinion that the circumstances of the case are such that possession-money ought to be awarded. Thomas v. Peek, 57 L. J., Q. B. 497; 20 Q. B. D. 727; 36 W. R. 606.

Interpleader Costs.]—A claim having been made to goods taken in execution under a judgment in a county court, the high bailiff took out an interpleader summons, and ultimately the claim was disallowed, and the claimant was ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings. The high bailiff paid the amount of the levy into court, deducting the fees and expenses incidental to the levy, but not his costs incident to the interpleader proceedings, and the balance was paid out of court to the execution creditor:—Held, that the high bailiff could not maintain an action against the execution creditor for the interpleader costs. Bloor v. Huston, 3 C. L. R. 222; 15 C. B. 266; 24 L. J., C. P. 26; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 256; 3 W. R. 113.

Liability to Action—Wrongful Act of Underbailiff.]—The high bailiff of a county court is liable, to the same extent as the sheriff, for the wrongful act of a person employed by one of his sub-bailiffs, to whom a warrant is delivered for execution. Burton v. Le Gros, 34 L. J., Q. B. 91.

—— Warrant beyond Jurisdiction of Court.]—Section 19 of the County Courts Act, 1850, and s. 6 of the County Courts Act, 1852, protect the registrar of a county court and the bailiff and his assistants from liability to be sued in an action for seizing the goods of a party under a warrant of the court signed by the registrar and under the seal of the court, even assuming that the judge had no jurisdiction to make the order upon which the warrant is founded. Aspey v. Jones, 54 L. J., Q. B. 98; 33 W. R. 217—C. A.

Section 6 of the County Courts Act, 1852, also affords a like protection to any person who acts under a warrant so issued. Ib.

—— Seizure of Implements of Trade.]—The high bailiff of a county court who in levying execution seizes and sells implements of trade without any wrongful intent is not guilty of "misconduct" within s. 59 of the County Courts Act, 1888, even though he acted recklessly and committed a serious error of judgment. Moore v. Brompton County Court Bailiff, 62 L. J., Q. B. 498; 5 R. 427; 69 L. T. 140; 41 W. R. 557; 57 J. P. 742.

—— Seizure by Mistake.]—Where, on a claim being made to goods seized by mistake by a bailiff, the execution creditor does not direct the bailiff to give up the goods to the claimant, but appears and contests his title in interpleader proceedings:—Held, no evidence of a ratification by the execution creditor of the bailiff's detention. Toppin v. Buckerfield, 1 Cab. & E. 157.

—— Seizure of Goods of Stranger—Liability of Execution Creditor.]—The defendant, having a county court judgment against C., caused the following letter to be written and delivered to the high bailiff of the county court:—"The plaintiff in this action has some reason to believe in the possibility of a third person claiming the goods, at the address given on the back of the execution. He will, however, contest any claim that may be made, and he desires that the high bailiff at Liverpool should be so informed, that the officer who levies may not in any way be deterred from putting the warrant in force by reason of any party setting up a claim." The address on the back of the warrant was that of a house in the occupation of a brother of the judgment debtor; but the name of the judgment debtor was on the door, and he had a considerable quantity of property in the house. The bailiff entered the house, and seized property of the execution debtor, and also of the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was not responsible for the act of the bailiff in seizing the plaintiff's goods. Cronshaw v. Chapman, 7 H. & N. 911; 31 L. J., Ex. 277; 5 L. T. 54; 10 W. R. 323.

—— Distraining Goods of Stranger for Rent.]—If a bailiff seizes under a warrant of a county court goods belonging to a stranger, he cannot under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 75, distrain such goods for the rent of the landlord; and if he does so, the true owner is entitled to have his goods back. Beard v. Knight, 8 El. & Bl. 865; 27 L. J., Q. B. 359; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 782; 6 W. R. 226. S. P., Foulger v. Taylor, 5 H. & N. 202; 29 L. J., Ex. 154; 1 L. T. 481; 8 W. R. 279.

—— Wrongful Entry.]—An owner of a chattel, taken on his own premises, under a county court execution against a third party, cannot sue the bailiff for taking the chattel, though he may for the wrongful entry. Lewis v. Cole, 3 F. & F. 17.

On the hearing of an interpleader summons in the county court, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 118, in respect of goods taken in execution under a judgment of the court, the judge ordered that the goods were the property of the claimant, and that the execution creditor should pay the costs of the proceedings, with 1*s.* damages for the seizure of the goods, and that the high bailiff should pay 1*s.* damages for the seizure of the goods:—Held, that the proceedings in the county court did not bar the plaintiff's right of action against the high bailiff for the trespass to his house, in respect of which no damages had been awarded, and that the county court had no jurisdiction to entertain the question of trespass. Jousiffe v. Bayley, 15 L. T. 219.

—— Action for Wrongful Entry—Right of Successful Plaintiff to Costs.]—To an action for entering the plaintiff's house, and carrying away his goods, the defendant pleaded a justification, as high bailiff, under a fi. fa., issued out of the county court against the plaintiff's goods. The plaintiff admitted the issuing of the writ, and replied de injuriâ to the rest of the plea. At the trial the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with 10*l.* damages:—Held, upon the construction of s. 139 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, taken in connection with ss. 128 and 129, that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Mann v. Buckerfield, 2 L. M. & P. 55; 20 L. J., Q. B. 265; 15 Jur. 57.

—— Arrest of Debtor after Payment]—On the hearing of a summons under 9 & 10 Vict c. 95, s. 98, the debtor did not attend, and on proof of service the judge, under s. 99, ordered him to be committed for seven days. The clerk to the court issued to the bailiff a warrant of commitment, under which the debtor was arrested. Before his arrest, but after the warrant was issued, the debtor paid the debt and costs to the judgment creditor, who wrote a letter to the clerk of the court informing him of the fact. The debtor having sued the clerk and bailiff for false imprisonment:—Held, that the action could not be supported, as the order and warrant were regularly issued and in force at the time of the arrest. Davis v. Fletcher, 2 E. & B. 271; 22 L. J., Q. B. 429.

—— Damages for Neglect to levy Execution.]—Where judgment has been recovered in a county court, the plaintiff may maintain an action in that court against the high bailiff of another county court for neglecting to levy upon the goods of the defendant under a warrant of execution delivered to such high bailiff for that purpose. Watson v. White, 65 L. J., Q. B. 492; [1896] 2 Q. B. 9; 74 L. T. 702; 44 W. R. 525.

Action against for not Executing Warrant—Issue of Summons in Adjoining District.]—Under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 21, where an action is brought against the high bailiff for not executing a warrant, a summons may issue in any adjoining district, the judge of which is not the judge of a court of which the high bailiff is an officer, whether or not such adjoining district is in the same county in which he neglected to execute the warrant. Partridge v. Elkington, 40 L. J., Q. B. 49; L. R. 6 Q. B. 82; 19 W. R. 385.

Warrant sent for Execution to another Court—Liability for act of Under-bailiff of other Court.]—Where a warrant issues upon a judgment of a county court against a party resident within another jurisdiction, and is sealed by the court there, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 104, the high bailiff of the court out of which the warrant was originally issued is not responsible for any irregularities in its execution by the under-bailiff of the foreign jurisdiction, even though his own under-bailiff assists therein. Smith v. Pritchard, 8 C. B. 565; 19 L. J., C. P. 53; 14 Jur. 224.

Under a warrant so issued by one court and sealed by the clerk of another court, the officers broke and entered the premises of a third person, under a mistaken impression that the party against whom the warrant was directed was there; and upon the owner of the premises resisting their entry, the bailiffs took him into custody and carried him before a magistrate:—Held, that the high bailiff of the court from which the warrant was reissued was liable with the under-bailiffs for the breaking and entering, which was an act done by the latter under the supposed authority of the writ, but not for the assault which was committed in the assertion of a power given by the statute to the individual officer. Ib.

—— Negligence of High Bailiff of other Court—Jurisdiction of Judge to order Payment of Damages.]—Where execution was issued in a county court and the warrant was sent for execution to another county court, and the high bailiff of such court was guilty of negligence in levying under it:—Held, that the judge of the home court had no power, under s. 115 of the County Courts Act, 1846, to order the high bailiff of the foreign court to pay damages to the plaintiff, who had been injured by his negligence, and that the high bailiff was entitled to a prohibition. Reg. v. Shropshire County Court Judge, 57 L. J., Q. B. 143; 20 Q. B. D. 242; 58 L. T. 86: 36 W. R. 476.

Acting for Party on Application for Warrant under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52—Liability for Penalty.]—Under the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, the issuing of a warrant by a county court judge is not a proceeding in the county court, and therefore, if a high bailiff of a county court acts for the party applying for the warrant, he is not thereby liable to a penalty under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 29, 30. Warden v. Stone, 7 El. & Bl. 603; 26 L. J., Q. B. 200; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 491; 5 W. R. 501.

But it is more fitting that a bailiff should not so act. Ib.

Action against—Right to Notice.]—The fact of the bailiff having, in taking goods under process from the county court, acted under an indemnity from the execution creditor, does not deprive him of the protection of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138; which entitles him to a notice of action for anything done by him in pursuance of the act. White v. Morris, 11 C. B. 1015; 21 L. J., C. P. 185; 16 Jur. 500.

A bailiff, who, under a warrant of execution upon a judgment of the court against A., takes the goods of B., under the bonâ fide belief that they are the goods of A., is entitled to the protection of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138, as in respect of a thing done in pursuance of the act.

Burling v. Harley, 3 H. & N. 271 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 258 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 789.

—— Notice of Statutory Defence.]—The defence accorded to county court bailiffs by s. 54 of the County Courts Act, 1888, being a statutory defence, notice must be given as provided by the County Court Rules, 1889, Ord. X. rr. 10, 18A, if a county court bailiff intends to rely on the section as a defence to an action against him. Denny v. Bennett, 44 W. R. 333.

Motion against, under s. 46 of Bankruptcy Act, 1883—Right to Notice.]—The word "action" in ss. 53 and 54 of the County Courts Act, 1888, being the sections which require notice and other formalities to be gone through before proceedings can be taken against a person for anything done in pursuance of that act, will not be enlarged so as to include a motion by a trustee in bankruptcy against a high bailiff, under s. 46 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, for a declaration that he was entitled as against the high bailiff to certain goods taken in execution, on the ground that the execution had not been completed by seizure and sale. Poppleton, Ex parte, Locke, In re, 62 L. T. 942 ; 63 L. T. 320 ; 39 W. R. 15 ; 7 Morrell, 184.

b. Under Bailiffs.

Assault upon—Execution of Duty.]—A defendant was arrested by a bailiff under a warrant of the county court good on its face. He assaulted the bailiff in resisting the arrest. On an indictment against him for a common assault on the bailiff :—Held, that it was not necessary to prove the proceedings in the county court, but that proof of the warrant alone was sufficient to show that the officer was justified in arresting the defendant, and to sustain a conviction of the defendant for the assault. Reg. v. Davis, L. & C. 64 ; 30 L. J., M. C. 159 ; 4 L. T. 559 ; 9 W. R. 711 ; 8 Cox, C. C. 486.

A county court bailiff, while acting in the course of his duty, was assaulted by F., who was summoned for the assault under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 114 :—Held, that that section was not impliedly repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, and that the justices could not decline jurisdiction on the ground that a question might arise as to the execution under the process of a court of justice. Reg. v. Briggs 47 J. P. 615.

C., being under-bailiff of county courts, was left on certain premises in execution of a warrant to levy on goods of D. Having no refreshment provided for him, he went out to a public-house, a mile distant, and took his warrant with him. On his return he was assaulted by D., to prevent his re-entry :—Held, that C. was in the execution of his duty in returning, and that D. was liable to be convicted under 9 & 10 Vict c. 95, s. 114. Coffin v. Dyke, 48 J. P. 757.

Bond—Alteration of Nature of Office.]—A bond was executed by G., and two sureties, conditioned for indemnifying the high bailiff of a county court against liabilities from the misconduct in his office of G , who was appointed by the high bailiff one of the bailiffs. At the time the bond was executed the jurisdiction of the county court was regulated by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. After the execution of the bond, the jurisdiction of the county court was extended and increased by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 102, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 101, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52 :—Held, that these statutes had so materially altered the nature of the office of bailiff that the sureties were no longer liable to indemnify the high bailiff, even though the misconduct of G. was in respect of a matter within the jurisdiction conferred by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, in respect of which the duty of the bailiff was not altered by the subsequent acts. Pybus v. Gibb, 6 El. & Bl. 902 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 41 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 315 ; 5 W. R. 44.

Embezzlement by.]—See CRIMINAL LAW.

c. Special Bailiffs.

Appointment where High Bailiff Interested.]—When the judgment debtor under county court process is himself the high bailiff of the court, a special bailiff may be appointed to levy execution, and the warrant may be directed to him and others, although 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, contain no express provision upon the subject. Bellamy v. Hoyle, 44 L. J., Ex. 169 ; L. R. 10 Ex. 220 ; 33 L. T. 21 ; 23 W. R. 754.

The judge of a county court made an order against the high bailiff for payment of certain sums of money and costs, the costs to be settled by the registrar. The amount of costs was settled by the registrar, but not formally approved by the judge. Orders for payment were drawn up under seal of the court, and served on the high bailiff. Default having been made in payment, the registrar issued a warrant of execution for the sums and costs. The registrar, after consulting the judge, specially appointed W. R., who was not a bailiff of the court, to act as assistant bailiff in the execution of the warrant which was given under the seal of the court, directed to "W. R. and others, the bailiffs thereof," and signed by the registrar. Acting under this warrant, W. R levied on the goods of the high bailiff, who thereupon brought an action against the registrar :—Held, that, although the judge had not personally exercised his discretion as to the amount of costs, yet there was a valid order in existence, and the court had inherent power to enforce its process, and the right mode of doing so had been adopted, inasmuch as the analogy afforded by the practice of the superior courts, which appoint coroners or elisors to execute judgments against sheriffs, had been followed by appointing a special person to levy the execution ; that the registrar was therefore justified in making that appointment, and consequently that he was not liable for the acts of W. R. done in pursuance thereof. Ib.

4. TREASURERS.

Right of Access to Books.]—A registrar rented offices in which he carried on his business as a solicitor and also the county court business, he being allowed by the Treasury an annual sum for the part of the offices used for county court purposes. The treasurer of the county court gave the registrar notice of his intention to audit the accounts on a Saturday, when, by a county court rule, the office closed at one o'clock. The treasurer went to the office after one o'clock, and finding it closed, broke the locks of an inner door and a cupboard in which the books were kept, and having taken away the books and audited them, returned them to the office. The registrar having brought an action of trespass against him:—Held, that the treasurer was justified in so doing under the county court acts. Burridge v. Nicholetts, 6 H. & N. 383; 30 L. J., Ex. 145; 3 L. T. 703; 9 W. R. 345.

The 29 & 30 Vict. c. 11, provides for the abolition of these officers.

B. JURISDICTION.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 5.

1. District in which Action Commenced.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 74.

a. Defendant dwelling in District.

Body Corporate—Gas Company.]—A corporation dwells, within the meaning of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128, at the place where its business is carried on. Taylor v. Crowland Gas & Coke Co., 11 Ex. 1; 24 L. J., Ex. 233; 3 C. L. R. 865; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 358; 3 W. R. 368.

—— Railway Company.]—The Great Western Railway Company has its principal station at Paddington, where the directors meet, the secretary resides, general meetings are held, and whence orders emanate:—Held, that the company dwells at Paddington within the meaning of that word in the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128, and consequently that, where a plaintiff in an action against the company dwelt more than twenty miles from Paddington, the superior courts had concurrent jurisdiction. Adams v. G. W. Ry., 6 H. & N. 404; 30 L. J., Ex. 124; 3 L. T. 631; 9 W. R. 254.

—— Manufacturing Company.]—A company incorporated for the manufacture and sale of goods dwells at the place of manufacture and sale, and not at its registered office. Keynsham Blue Lias Lime Co. v. Baker, 2 H. & C. 729; 33 L. J., Ex. 41; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1346; 9 L. T. 418; 12 W. R. 156.

A joint-stock company sold and delivered goods to the defendant at its works at Keynsham, in Somersetshire, seven miles distant from the place where the defendant resided and carried on his business. The registered office of the company, where the directors met and transacted all its business, was in London. The company being in the course of winding-up, the official liquidator, who dwelt and carried on business in London, sued the defendant in a superior court for the price of the goods, and recovered judgment by default for a sum under 20*l.*:—Held, that he was not entitled to costs. Ib.

—— Joint Stock Company.]—A joint stock company dwells where the substantial business of the company and its negotiations are carried on, and not necessarily in the locality where its property is situated and its immediate objects carried out. Aberystwith Promenade Pier Co. v. Cooper, 35 L. J., Q. B. 44; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 995; 13 L. T. 273; 14 W. R. 28.

A promenade pier company, whose objects were the erection and maintenance of a pier and the reception of tolls thereon at Aberystwith, but whose registered offices were at Westminster, where the substantial business of the company and its negotiations were carried on, dwells at Westminster, and not at Aberystwith. Ib.

Temporary Residence.]—A defendant who, at the time of an action brought, has no permanent residence, dwells at the place of his temporary residence. Alexander v. Jones, 4 H. & C. 204; 35 L. J., Ex. 78; L. R. 1 Ex. 133; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 13 L. T. 719; 14 W. R. 400.

Where a plaintiff has a permanent dwelling more than twenty miles from the defendant, the superior courts have concurrent jurisdiction, although the plaintiff has also lodgings for a temporary purpose, at the time the action is brought, within twenty miles of the defendant. Macdougall v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 755; 2 L. M. & P. 681; 21 L. J., C. P. 27; 15 Jur. 1108.

A plaintiff is entitled to costs though he obtains a verdict for 40*s.* only, if his permanent place of residence is more than twenty miles from the place where the defendant dwells or carries on his business, although at the time of the commencement of the action he was, for a temporary purpose, residing within that distance. Marsh v. Conquest, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 432.

—— Gaol.]—A temporary or compulsory residence, at the time of the commencement of an action, in a gaol, does not constitute the place of detention the dwelling of the party. Dunston v. Paterson, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 267; 28 L. J., C. P. 97; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 6 W. R. 768.

Residence for purpose of Founding Jurisdiction.]—It is no objection to the jurisdiction of a county court, that the plaintiff has become resident within the district of the court for the very purpose of giving it jurisdiction, provided that the residence was actually and bonâ fide, and not colourably and collusively acquired before issuing the summons. Massey v. Burton, 2 H. & N. 597; 27 L. J., Ex. 101; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1130; 6 W. R. 108.

On the 22nd of September a plaintiff took lodgings, and went to reside within the Bloomsbury district, and on the 23rd a summons issued from the Bloomsbury county court, in respect of a cause of action which had arisen in the Marylebone district, where the defendant resided. The defendant objected to the jurisdiction, but upon hearing the evidence the county court judge decided that the plaintiff dwelt within the district of the Bloomsbury county court.—Held, that the plaintiff did dwell within the Bloomsbury district, and, therefore, that the judge had jurisdiction. Ib.

Two Residences.]—A plaintiff had two permanent places of residence; one in London, where the defendant dwelt, and where the cause of action accrued; the other more than twenty miles from London. At the time of bringing the action the plaintiff was living with his family at his country residence:—Held, a case of concurrent jurisdiction, and that he was entitled to costs. Butler v. Ablewhite, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 740; 28 L. J., C. P. 292; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1268; 7 W. R. 583.

A plaintiff, having hired a house at Margate, occupied it, with his wife, family, and servants, as their home; at the same time the plaintiff, carrying on business in London, occupied two houses there for the purpose of his business, and passed three or four days and nights of each week there, occupying two rooms in one of the houses, which had been fitted up for his residence while staying in town :—Held, that he dwelt at Margate alone. Kerr v. Haynes, 29 L. J., Q. B. 70; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 169; 2 L. T. 211; 8 W. R. 277.

A writ of summons issued against a defendant on the 5th of January, 1865. He had two residences, one in London, the other in Kent, more than twenty miles distant from the plaintiff's residence, which was in London. On the 4th of January the plaintiff's attorney received a letter from the defendant, dated from his residence in Kent, referring him to his attorneys in London to accept service of process for him. The defendant's attorneys, on the day of the issuing of the writ, gave an undertaking to appear, and on that day one of them had an interview with the defendant at his London residence :—Held, that the defendant was residing in Kent at the time of the commencement of the action, and consequently that there was concurrent jurisdiction, and the plaintiff was entitled to his costs. Pilgrim v. Knatchbull, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 798; 34 L. J., C. P. 257; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 389; 12 L. T. 383; 13 W. R. 657.

One of two plaintiffs was a member of parliament, and had a residence in London within twenty miles from the residence of the defendant, which he occupied for about three months, for the purpose of attendance in parliament; he resided the rest of the year at his ironworks in Wales, and was dwelling there when the action was brought :—Held, that the plaintiff "dwelt" in London. Bailey v. Bryant, 1 El. & El. 340; 28 L. J., Q. B. 86; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 468.

Residence of nominal Defendant.]—In order to bring a plaint within the jurisdiction of a county court on the ground of a defendant residing in the district of that court, such defendant must be a substantial defendant, and where a plaint was issued in the Bristol county court to charge the separate estate of a married woman with a sum secured by her acceptance, upon the ground that the bill of exchange was drawn and made payable at Bristol, and that one of the defendants resided there, on its appearing that this defendant was in the same interest as the plaintiff, it was held that the county court had no jurisdiction, and an order was made to remove the plaint to the court of chancery. Baker v. Watt, 39 L. J., Ch. 204; L. R. 9 Eq. 103; 21 L. T. 632; 18 W. R. 185.

b. Defendant Carrying on Business in District.

Railway Company.]—A railway company does not carry on business at a receiving-house or a booking-office, kept by an agent for the receipt and booking of parcels and packages for all the railways generally. Minor v. L. & N.-W. Ry., 1 C. B. (N.S.) 325; 26 L. J., C. P. 39; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1168; 5 W. R. 122.

A railway company carries on business only at the place where the general management of its different lines and stations is carried on; and a station, however extensive and important, so long as those under whose immediate supervision it is are themselves under superior control, is not within s. 60 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. Brown v. L. & N.-W. Ry., 4 B. & S. 326; 32 L. J., Q. B. 318; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 234; 11 W. R. 884.

A railway company carries on its business at its principal station, and not at the intermediate stations on its line; and where a cause of action arises in a district of one of such intermediate stations, and no leave of the court of such district has been obtained to sue in such district, a plaint must be brought in the district of such principal station. Shiels v. G. N. Ry., 30 L. J., Q. B. 331; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 631; 4 L. T. 479; 9 W. R. 739. S. P., Taylor v. Crowland Gas and Coke Co., 11 Ex. 1; 3 C. L. R. 865; 24 L. J., Ex. 233; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 358; 3 W. R. 368. And Le Taillieur v. S. E. Ry., 3 C. P. D. 18; and Rogers v. L. C. & D. Ry., 26 W. R. 192.

Surgeon.]—A surgeon, who was also an apothecary and an accoucheur, residing at C., in the district of county court A., and daily attending to patients requiring his advice residing in the district of county court B., carries on his business within the jurisdiction of the county court B. Mitchell v. Hender, 2 C. L. R. 460; 23 L. J., Q. B. 273; 18 Jur. 430; 3 W. R. 411.

Deputy Sealer in Court of Chancery.]—The duty of the deputy sealer in the court of chancery is to affix the great seal to instruments to which it is appropriated, and to attend the lord chancellor for that purpose; and when the lord chancellor does not sit judicially, he attends at the Great Seal Patent Office, in Chancery Lane :—Held, that he did not carry on his business at any fixed place, within 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128, so as to deprive the plaintiff of costs, under ss. 128, 129. Rolfe v. Learmonth, 14 Q. B. 196; 19 L. J., Q. B. 10; 13 Jur. 986.

Clerk in Government Office.]—A clerk in the privy council office is not a person who carries on a business. Sangster v. Cave or Kay, 5 Ex. 386; 19 L. J., Ex. 311. S. C., nom. Glennie v. Delmar, 1 L. M. & P. 402.

To entitle a defendant to enter a suggestion on the roll to deprive the plaintiff of costs under this act, on the ground that the defendant carried on his business within the jurisdiction of the court thereby established, it is not sufficient to show that the defendant is a clerk attending a public office within the jurisdiction, but residing elsewhere. Buckley v. Hann, 7 D. & L. 188; 5 Ex. 43; 19 L. J., Ex. 151; 14 Jur. 226.

Branch Office of Scotch Firm.]—Where a Scotch firm carrying on business in Scotland with a branch office situate within the jurisdiction of a county court were sued in the firm's name, and the summons was served at the branch office :—Held, that the firm "carried on business" within the jurisdiction, that the service was good, and that the county court judge was wrong in declining to exercise jurisdiction; that, if the service had been bad, it amounted to a mere irregularity, which might be waived by the conduct of the defendants. Weatherley v. Calder, 61 L. T. 508.

—— Acting through Agent.] — A company carrying on business in London, which employs in a country town a general commission agent, who transacts the company's business in such town, in an office for which the company pay him rent, does not carry on business in that town within the meaning of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128. Corbett v. General Steam Navigation Co., 4 H. & N. 482; 28 L. J., Ex. 214; 7 W. R. 498.

A commission agent sold, in his own name, goods to the defendant, at a place within twenty miles of the defendant's residence. The principal, a company which carried on its business at a place more than twenty miles from the defendant's residence, sued him in a superior court, and recovered 6*l.*:—Held, that the court had concurrent jurisdiction with the county court, and that the company was entitled to costs. Oldham Building and Manufacturing Co. v. Heald, 3 H. & C. 132; 33 L. J., Ex. 236; 10 L. T. 534.

One who resides in Scotland, and carries on business in London by means of an agent, is not bound to sue in the City Small Debts Court for a debt not exceeding 20*l.* Sheils v. Rait, 7 C. B. 116.

c. Cause of Action arising wholly or in part in District.

Sale of Goods—Order in District.]—A verbal offer to buy goods for more than 10*l.* having been made to the vendor's agent within the district of a county court, was communicated to the vendor at his residence outside the district, where he accepted it and signed a memorandum within s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds. This memorandum, with a counterpart, he sent by post to the purchaser, who signed the counterpart within the district. The vendor having delivered the goods to the plaintiff's agent outside the district, the purchaser issued a plaint in the county court against the vendor to recover damages for deficiency in weight:—Held, that the cause of action arose in part in the district so as to give the county court jurisdiction under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 1. Green v. Beach, 42 L. J., Ex. 151; L. R. 8 Ex. 208; 21 W. R. 850.

A., carrying on business in Manchester, by his traveller, sold goods to B., at Oxford, which goods were to be forwarded by the London and North-Western Railway. The goods were accordingly packed and sent by A. to the railway station at Manchester, addressed to B., at Oxford:—Held, that as the order for the goods was received at Oxford, the whole cause of action did not arise in Manchester, so as to give the county court there jurisdiction to try it under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60. Borthwick v. Walton, 15 C. B. 501; 3 C. L. R. 364; 24 L. J., C. P. 83; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 142; 3 W. R. 203.

Where goods were ordered at Leeds, deliverable at Manchester, the judge of the county court at Leeds has no jurisdiction to try the case, as the whole cause of action did not arise within his jurisdiction within the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60. Jackson v. Beaumont, 24 L. J., Ex. 301.

A defendant entered into a written agreement to take 20,000 bricks of the plaintiff at a stated price. After the delivery of 3,000 he refused to take any more, or to pay for those already delivered, alleging that they were not the sort specified in the agreement. The plaintiff and the defendant resided more than twenty miles apart. The bricks were delivered at the plaintiff's place of business, but the agreement was signed by both parties within the jurisdiction of the court. The plaintiff sued the defendant in the superior court to recover the price of the 3,000 bricks delivered, and recovered less than 20*l.* At the trial the agreement was put in as part of the plaintiff's case:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover his costs, as the cause of action arose in some material point within the jurisdiction of the county court, within 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128, and the action ought not to have been brought in the superior court. Norman v. Marchant, 7 Ex. 723; 21 L. J., Ex. 256.

—— Delivery in District.]—On an application by a plaintiff in an action for goods sold and delivered for costs under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 30, on the ground that the cause of action did not wholly, or in a material part, arise within the jurisdiction of the county court of the district in which the defendant resided, it appeared by the affidavits of the defendant as to the principal parcel of goods that they were delivered there by a carrier, who was to be paid by the plaintiff (there being, on the part of the plaintiff, no positive affidavit as to the disputed facts, but only an affidavit of information and belief):—Held, that the delivery must be deemed to have been in that district in which the defendant resided, and therefore that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Arndt v. Porter, 30 L. J., Ex. 19.

—— Breach of Contract to Deliver.]—A plaint was issued by leave of the judge against a defendant not resident in the jurisdiction. The particulars were, for not delivering a cargo of corn bought by the plaintiff of the defendant by a contract in writing. The plaintiff, within the jurisdiction, made a contract with a broker, who professed to act for the defendant, in these terms: "Sold the cargo of corn, per T., now at Q., at 27*s.* per quarter, including cost, freight and insurance to a safe port in the United Kingdom. Payment, cash in exchange for shipping documents and policy of insurance." Q. was out of the jurisdiction; and so was the ship. The plaintiff requested that the ship should be sent to D., a port also out of the jurisdiction. The defendant sold the cargo to another person, delivered him the shipping documents, and caused the cargo to be delivered to him:—Held, that the non-delivery of the cargo was a breach of the contract, and a cause of action, but out of the jurisdiction of the county court, and that the rule must be absolute to prohibit proceeding in the plaint for that; but held, that the non-delivery of the shipping documents was also a breach of the contract, and a cause of action within the jurisdiction, and that the rule must be modified so as to allow the plaintiff to proceed for that, if the judge in his discretion thought fit to amend the particulars. Walsh v. Ionides, 1 El. & Bl. 383; 22 L. J., Q. B. 137; 17 Jur. 596.

—— Non-payment in District.]—In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, non-payment of the price is part of the cause of action, and therefore the county court of the district in which the plaintiff resides has (on leave being given by the registrar) jurisdiction under s. 74 of the County Courts Act, 1888. Northey Stone Co. v. Gidney, [1894] 1 Q. B. 99; 10 R. 16; 70 L. T. 82; 42 W. R. 99.

—— Part Delivery outside District.]—Orders were given for goods at Poplar to be delivered to a carrier named by the buyer and to be paid by him. The goods were received by the carrier, on delivery orders handed to him by the seller in the city of London, partly within and partly without the City. An action having been brought for the price in the Mayor's Court:—Held, that part of the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction of the court, and therefore the defendant was entitled to prohibition. Gold v. Turner, L. R. 10 C. P. 149 ; 23 W. R. 732.

The plaintiff, a carrier and wharfinger at Swindon, agreed in writing with the defendant, living in Surrey, to carry his timber by barge to London at 16*s.* per ton, including all charges but wharfage. It was necessary to haul the timber from the place where it lay to the wharf, and the plaintiff provided horses for the purpose when the defendant's horses were absent. The plaintiff sued in the Swindon county court for the balance of his account for the carriage, including a separate charge for hauling :—Held, that the hauling and the carriage formed one cause of action, that such cause of action was not complete until the timber was delivered in London, and that therefore the judge of the county court had not jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60. Burnes v. Marshall, 18 Q. B. 785 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 388 ; 16 Jur. 1086.

Work done—Order by Letter.]—A plaintiff brought an action in the county court within the district of which he carried on business, to recover a trade debt collected by the defendant at his place of business out of the district. The employment of the defendant by the plaintiff was by letter, written and posted within the district, but not answered by the defendant, who had never before the action been himself within the district. Upon a rule for a writ of prohibition to the county court judge, obtained by the defendant :—Held, that the cause of action or suit did not, in the words of s. 1 of the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), wholly or in part arise within the plaintiff's county court district ; and that the action could not be proceeded with. Rennie v. Ratcliff, 35 L. T. 833 ; 25 W. R. 319.

A defendant, residing and carrying on business in London, wrote to the plaintiffs, residing and carrying on business in S., ordering them to do work for him. The letter was received by the plaintiffs, and the work was done, in S. A summons having issued upon their application against the defendant, in the county court of S., by leave of the registrar, to recover the amount due for such work :—Held, that the whole cause of action arose within the district of that court, and that the registrar therefore had jurisdiction to issue the summons, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 15. Newcomb v. De Roos, 2 El. & El. 271 ; 29 L. J., Q. B. 4 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 68 ; 8 W. R. 5.

—— Retainer of Solicitor.]—A defendant within a district of a county court at B., agreed with A. to give C. a mortgage security for a debt due to C. from the defendant ; and A. afterwards, at a place beyond the district of such county court, retained the plaintiff, a solicitor, to prepare such mortgage deed. The plaintiff having brought an action in the superior court against the defendant for his charges of preparing the deed, and obtained a verdict for less than 20*l.* :—Held, that the cause of action arose in a material point within the jurisdiction of the county court of B., and therefore, as the superior court had not concurrent jurisdiction within the county court, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover his costs. Jackson v. Grinley, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 380 ; 33 L. J., C. P. 238 ; 10 L. T. 340 ; 12 W. R. 686.

Breach of Warranty.]—A plaintiff went to the defendant's residence, which was beyond the jurisdiction of a particular county court, and there verbally agreed to purchase of him a horse for 28*l.*, to be delivered on the following day at the plaintiff's residence, which was within the jurisdiction of the county court. On that day the defendant brought the horse to the plaintiff's residence, when he required a warranty, which was given, and the price paid. The plaintiff afterwards sued the defendant in the county court for a breach of the warranty :—Held, that there was no complete contract until the warranty was given, and consequently the "whole cause of action," arose within the jurisdiction of the county court. Aris v. Orchard, 6 H. & N. 163 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 21 ; 3 L. T. 143 ; 9 W. R. 106.

Bill of Several Items.]—If the items in a plaintiff's bill under 20*l.* are so connected together as to form one cause of action, and any one item arises within the jurisdiction of a county court within which the defendant dwells or carries on his business at the time of the action brought, and the parties do not dwell more than twenty miles apart, the cause of action, "in some material point,' arises within such jurisdiction, and the superior court has no concurrent jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128, and the case falls within s. 129. Wood v. Perry, 3 Ex. 442 ; 6 D. & L. 194 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 161.

The fact of one item in a tradesman's bill being separated from the rest by an interval of several years does not prevent its operating (if accruing within the jurisdiction of the county court within which the defendant dwells) to take the case out of the concurrent jurisdiction clause of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128. Copeman v. Hart, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 731 ; 33 L. J., C. P. 107.

The plaintiff was a butcher, carrying on his business within the jurisdiction of the county court of A. The defendant resided within the jurisdiction of the county court of B. The plaintiff sued the defendant in the superior court for a bill, some of the items of which consisted of goods which had been ordered in the A. district, but delivered in the B. district :—Held, that the whole formed one cause of action, and as a part of it arose in the jurisdiction within which the defendant resided (and within twenty miles), there was no concurrent jurisdiction, and consequently the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs. Bonsey v. Wordsworth, 18 C. B. 325 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 205 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 494 ; 4 W. R. 566.

Composite Cause of Action—Action for Advertised Reward.]—The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60, which gives jurisdiction to the county court of the district "in which the cause of action arose," means the district in which the whole cause of action arose. Hernaman v. Smith, 10 Ex. 659 ; 3 C. L. R. 435 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 175 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 190 ; 3 W. R. 208.

Therefore, where a cause of action is made up of several things, the county court of a district has no jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60, unless they all occur within the district. Ib.

It makes no difference in this respect that of the matters thus making out the cause of action, those occurring within the district constituted all that was necessary to be done on the part of the plaintiff to entitle him to recover, and that those occurring without it were contingencies on which his right of action depended, but over which he had no control. Ib.

A number of persons formed themselves into an association for the detection, apprehension and prosecution of felons, issued a placard offering rewards for apprehending any person committing certain specified offences on any or either of their respective persons or properties; the rewards to be paid on conviction of the offenders, by application to the treasurer of the association. A felony having been committed against the property of one of the association, the offender was apprehended by a party within the jurisdiction of the county court of N., and tried and convicted at H., which is out of the jurisdiction of that court:—Held, that the county court of N. had no jurisdiction over an action brought for the reward offered by the placard. Ib.

Action against Administrator.]—A. bequeathed to his servant F. 20*l.*, and appointed executors. The will was made in the district of the county court of H., and the testator died there. The executors renounced probate; and M. took out letters of administration with the will annexed in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. M. resided in London. F., by leave of the judge of the county court of H., sued M. in that court for the 20*l.*:—Held, that the grant of letters of administration was part of the cause of action, and that the judge of the county court of H. had not, under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60, jurisdiction in respect of it over M., who was not within his district. Fuller v. Mackay, 2 El. & Bl. 573; 1 C. L. R. 1021; 22 L. J., Q. B. 415; 17 Jur. 989; 1 W. R. 447.

Bills of Exchange.]—Action in a superior court by the drawer against the acceptor of a bill for 12*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*, accepted within the jurisdiction of a county court, within which the defendant dwelt, but delivered to the plaintiff without:—Held, that the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction. Roff v. Miller, 19 L. J., C. P. 278; 14 Jur. 746.

A bill was drawn and accepted, and the indorser put his name upon it within the city of London, but it was delivered to the indorsee in the county of Middlesex:—Held, that the cause of action did not arise within the city of London. Buckley v. Hann, 5 Ex. 43; 7 D. & L. 188; 19 L. J., Ex. 151; 14 Jur. 226.

An action was brought by a second indorsee of a bill against the drawer. The bill was drawn and indorsed, and notice of dishonour given, within the jurisdiction of a county court within which the defendant dwelt:—Held, that the cause of action arose in some material point within the jurisdiction of the county court. Huth v. Long, 1 L. M. & P. 333; 19 L. J., Q. B. 325; 15 Jur. 511.

If a bill is drawn and indorsed within the jurisdiction of a county court, an indorsee is not at liberty to sue in the superior courts by reason of his not knowing where the bill was drawn and indorsed. Ib.

The plaintiff, residing at N., drew a bill of exchange upon the defendant, who resided at L., and without the jurisdiction of the county court of N. The defendant accepted the bill at L., and returned it to the plaintiff at N., and was afterwards sued upon it in the county court of N., under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60:—Held, that the county court had no jurisdiction, the whole cause of action not having arisen within that district. Wilde v. Sheridan, 1 B. C. C. 56; 21 L. J., Q. B. 260; 16 Jur. 426.

—— Notice of Dishonour.]—In an action by an indorsee against the drawer of a bill of exchange for a sum less than 20*l.*, the defendant traversed the notice of dishonour, and it appeared at the trial that the bill had been drawn and indorsed within the jurisdiction of a county court where the defendant resided, but that the notice of dishonour was given elsewhere:—Held, that the plaintiff was deprived of his costs by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 129. Betteley v. Buck, 13 Jur. 368.

By the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), s. 1, an action may be brought in the county court "in the district of which the cause of action wholly or in part arose." The plaintiff drew in Norwich a bill of exchange upon the defendant, which he accepted and made payable in London. The bill being dishonoured, the plaintiff sued the defendant thereon in the county court at Norwich, and the judge found in favour of the plaintiff for the amount of the bill:—Held, that the cause of action arose in part within the jurisdiction of the Norwich county court. Trevor v. Wilkinson, 31 L. T. 731.

Promissory Note.]—A party suing in a superior court on a promissory note, and recovering less than 20*l.*, might be deprived of costs under s. 113 of 10 & 11 Vict. c. lxxi., though the cause of action had no locality. Lowley v. Rossi, 12 Q. B. 952.

d. Leave of Judge.

Leave in Discretion of Judge or Registrar.]—The judge or registrar of a county court in the district of which the cause of action wholly or in part arises has a discretion under s. 74 of the County Courts Act, 1888, to grant leave to commence an action or matter in that court; and Ord. V. r. 9*a*, of the County Court Rules, 1889, is not ultra vires. Reg. v. Turner, 66 L. J., Q. B. 417; [1897] 1 Q. B. 445; 76 L. T. 556; 45 W. R. 316.

Leave not obtained—Appearance by Defendant—Waiver.]—A defendant was, without any leave having been obtained pursuant to s. 74 of the County Courts Act, 1888, sued in the district of a county court where he was non-resident, but in which he had carried on business within six months before the commencement of the action. When the case had been heard and partially decided the defendant took objection to the jurisdiction, which was overruled by the county court judge. An application for a prohibition having been afterwards made:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to a prohibition, inasmuch as he had waived the objection to the jurisdiction by appearing and contesting the action. Moore v. Gamgee, 59 L. J., Q. B. 505; 25 Q. B. D. 244; 38 W. R. 669.

—— Rule to Judge to issue Execution Refused.]—In order to give jurisdiction to a county court on the ground that the cause of action arose within the district, it is a condition precedent that leave to issue the summons is granted pursuant to s. 60 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, or s. 15 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108; and an action having been tried and judgment given without such leave, the court refused to rule the judge of the county court to issue execution, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction. Brown v. L. & N.-W. Ry., 4 B. & S. 326; 32 L. J., Q. B. 318; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 234; 8 L. T. 695; 11 W. R. 884.

2. IN PERSONAL ACTIONS.

County Courts Act, 1828, s. 56.

a. Generally.

Detinue.]—The county court has jurisdiction to try cases of detinue. Taylor v. Addyman, 13 C. B. 309; 22 L. J., C. P. 94; 17 Jur. 461.

False Imprisonment — Malicious Prosecution.]—A plaintiff issued a plaint in a county court for false imprisonment, with a notice appended that he did not claim for malicious prosecution. It was proved at the trial that he lodged at the defendant's; that the defendant had removed the plaintiff's goods on a claim of money owing; that the plaintiff broke open a door of a room in the house to get them, upon the defendant's wife refusing to give them up; that she gave him in charge; that at the police station the defendant signed the charge-sheet, on the police saying that everything must be on his responsibility; and that the plaintiff was kept in charge, taken before justices, and discharged. The judge nonsuited, on the ground that, though there was evidence of false imprisonment till the signing of the charge, the case then became one of malicious prosecution, over which he had no jurisdiction, and the whole evidence was inseparable, and had been heard by the jury: —Held, that the false imprisonment lasted till the plaintiff was before the magistrates, and that the judge should not have nonsuited the plaintiff, but told the jury to exclude from their consideration anything that then occurred. Austin v. Dowling, 39 L. J., C. P. 260; L. R. 5 C. P. 534; 22 L. T. 721; 18 W. R. 1003.

Patent — Action for Infringement.] — The jurisdiction of the county courts to try an action for infringement of patent is ousted by the Patents Act, 1883, which confines the trial of such an action to the High Court of Justice. Reg. v. Halifax County Court Judge, 60 L. J., Q. B. 550; [1891] 2 Q. B. 263; 65 L. T. 104; 39 W. R. 545—C. A.

—— Validity—"Franchise."]—The grant of letters patent for an invention is a "franchise" within s. 56 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and therefore a county court judge has no jurisdiction to try an action in which the validity of a patent is in dispute. Ib.

Slander.]—In an action of slander, commenced after the passing of the act 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, the plaintiff recovered 10*l.*; the judge refused to certify that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court:—Held, that, inasmuch as by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 58, the plaintiff could not bring an action of slander in the county court, and as he could only proceed in the superior court, the court would order that he should be allowed his costs. Gray v. West, 9 B. & S. 196; 38 L. J., Q. B. 78; L. R. 4 Q. B. 175; 20 L. T. 221; 17 W. R. 427.

Where, in an action of slander, a plaintiff recovers less than 10*l.*, and the judge declines to certify, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 5, that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the superior court, the court, if called upon to determine whether costs should be allowed or not, will consider all the circumstances under which the action was brought, the amount of damages recovered, the fact of the judge declining to certify, and the fact that the action could not have been brought in the county court. Sampson v. Mackay, 10 B. & S. 694; 38 L. J., Q. B. 245; L. R. 4 Q. B. 643; 20 L. T. 807; 17 W. R. 883.

The 5th section is general in its application, and applies to all actions, whether they can be brought in a county court or not. Ib.

b. Amount of Debt, Demand, or Damages.

Balance of Account.]—In a plaint, the plaintiff, in his particulars, set forth a debt of 57*l.* 4*s.* for services rendered to the defendant, allowing 15*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.* as paid by the defendant on the plaintiff's behalf at different times, and 4*l.* as received by cash at different times, stating the balance as 38*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*; but there was no evidence of an account stated, or of any agreed or settled balance between the parties, nor did the defendant at the trial admit the 15*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.* as constituting a part payment:—Held, that the demand was a claim for 57*l.* 4*s.*, and consequently that the county court had no jurisdiction over the cause. Avards v. Rhodes, 22 L. J., Ex. 106; 8 Ex. 312; 17 Jur. 71.

Action for Detinue—Value of Goods.]—In an action for the hiring of two pianos, with a count in detinue for the pianos themselves, the defendant paid into court the amount due for the hire, and (after the commencement of the action) delivered up the pianos. At the trial the jury found that the value of the pianos was 130*l.*, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff for 1*s.* damages on the count in detinue:—Held, that he was entitled to costs, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, the cause of action, at the time of its commencement, not being one for which a plaint could have been entered in a county court. Leader v. Rhys, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 369; 30 L. J., C. P. 345; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1199; 4 L. T. 330; 9 W. R. 704.

The test of the jurisdiction of the county court is the actual value of the goods sought to be recovered. Ib.

—— Deposit Note for over £50.]—The plaintiff brought an action in a county court for the delivery up to him of a deposit note for 65*l.* which was detained by the defendants. Upon an objection as to the jurisdiction:—Held, that, the value to the plaintiff of the deposit note being merely the amount represented by the cost and trouble he would be put to in proving his title to the money in the event of the note being withheld, the county court had jurisdiction to try the case. Clegg v. Baretta, 56 L. T. 775.

Action for Penalties.]—By 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, a penalty of 20*l.* is imposed on any person practising as an apothecary without having obtained a certificate. In a plaint, the summons to appear stated it to be to recover 20*l.* for illegally practising as an apothecary, and the particulars mentioned the names of four persons whom the defendant had attended and supplied with medicines:—Held, that on these proceedings the plaintiff could only recover one penalty of 20*l.*, and consequently that in entertaining the plaint the county court did not exceed its jurisdiction. Apothecaries Company v. Burt, 1 L. M. & P. 405; 5 Ex. 363; 19 L. J., Ex. 334; 14 Jur. 487.

Evidence of more than £50 Damages in Tort.]—When, in an action of tort in a county court, the plaintiff, who by his plaint claims 50*l.*, puts, in his evidence, the damage sustained by him at a higher sum, the jurisdiction of the county court is not thereby ousted. Bodger v. Nicholls, 28 L. T. 441.

It is not necessary, in such a case, that the plaintiff should have abandoned the excess before the trial. The county court judge may at the trial make the requisite amendment in the particulars. Ib.

c. Set-off.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 57.

Admitted by both Parties.]—A demand exceeding 20*l.*, and reduced by an unadmitted set-off to a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, was not within the jurisdiction of the county courts under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. Beswick v. Capper, 7 C. B. 669; 18 L. J., C. P. 216, n.

A defendant was not entitled to enter a suggestion to deprive a plaintiff of costs under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 129, where the debt or demand originally exceeding 20*l.* was reduced below that sum by a claim of set-off. Woodhams v. Newman, 7 C. B. 654; 6 D. & L. 683; 18 L. J., C. P. 213; 13 Jur. 456.

If a plaintiff claims more than 50*l.* without admitting any set-off to reduce it to that amount, and the defendant, by proof of a set-off, reduces the amount recovered below 20*l.*, the plaintiff is entitled to costs, as there is no admitted set-off, reducing the claim to 50*l.*, so as to give the county court jurisdiction. Walesby v. Gouldstone, 35 L. J., C. P. 302; L. R. 1 C. P. 567; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 873; 14 L. T. 662; 14 W. R. 899.

By s. 57 of the County Courts Act, 1888, where in any action the debt or demand claimed consists of a balance not exceeding 50*l.* after an "admitted set-off of any debt or demand claimed or recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff," the court shall have jurisdiction to try such action:—Held, that the "set-off" referred to in the section is a set-off the existence of which is admitted by both parties, and not merely by the plaintiff. Hubbard v. Goodley, 59 L. J., Q. B. 285; 25 Q. B. D. 156; 62 L. T. 763; 38 W. R. 639.

d. Splitting Claim.

"Cause of Action"—Items of Tradesman's Bill.]—The expression "cause of action" in s. 63 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, meant in general "cause of one action," and was not limited to an action on one separate contract. Grimbley v. Aykroyd, 1 Ex. 479; 3 D. & L. 701; 17 L. J., Ex. 157; 12 Jur. 357.

Where a tradesman has a bill against a party for an amount exceeding 20*l.*, in which the items are so connected with each other that the dealing is not intended to terminate with one contract, but to be continuous, so that one item if not paid shall be united with another and form one continuous demand, if he divides that demand in order to bring several suits in the county court, a prohibition will be issued. Ib.

A tradesman's bill for a series of articles delivered continuously cannot be split into different causes of action. Bonsey v. Wordsworth, 18 C. B 325; 25 L. J., C. P. 205; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 494; 4 W. R. 566.

A defendant was indebted to the plaintiff for liquors supplied, and money lent at different times. The plaintiff had been in the habit of marking down the separate items, and afterwards entering them in his book as one account, and sent the defendant an account including the whole, amounting to 36*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* The plaintiff levied a plaint in a county court for 20*l.* for goods sold, the particulars comprising no items for money lent. Having recovered judgment, and obtained payment of this amount, he levied another plaint for 5*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* for money lent, being the amount of the loans included in the account of 36*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* At the hearing of the first plaint there was no abandonment:—Held, that these were distinct demands. Brunskill v. Powell, 1 L. M. & P. 550; 19 L. J., Ex. 362.

Money due in different Rights.]—The plaintiff was in the employment of the defendant as manager of a mine of which the defendant was the contractor. He issued two plaints in a county court against the defendant, one for 30*l.* due to him for salary, and the other for 30*l.* money paid by him at the mine for and at the request of the plaintiff:—Held, that these two claims were separate and distinct, that there was no splitting of claims, and that the two plaints could issue. Richards v. Marten, 23 W. R. 93.

A. having a cause of action against B. for 19*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* for money lent between 1846 and 1849, and also a cause of action against him on a separate account for goods sold and delivered, work and labour and money paid between 1845 and 1849, amounting to 19*l.* 19*s.*, after deducting a payment on account of 8*l.* 5*s.* 3*d.*, levying two plaints in respect of them in a county court is not a splitting or a dividing of a cause of action. Kimpton v. Willey, 9 C. B. 719; 1 L. M. & P. 280; 19 L. J., C. P. 269; 14 Jur. 765.

Rent in arrear and a demand for double value for holding over after the expiration of a notice to quit, under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 1, are separate causes of action, and therefore may be sued for by separate plaints in a county court. Wickham v. Lee, 12 Q. B. 521; 18 L. J., Q. B. 21; 12 Jur. 628.

A court of requests act enacted that it should not be lawful for any plaintiff to divide any cause of action into two or more suits, for the purpose of bringing the same within the jurisdiction of the court:—Held, that where a plaintiff had three demands, one for a horse sold, another for rent due, and a third for goods sold and delivered, he was not precluded from suing in the superior court for the two last-named demands by the fact of his having sued for and recovered the price of the horse in the inferior court, for that the three demands were separate and distinct, and were not all one cause of action within the meaning of the act. Neale v. Ellis, 1 D. & L. 163; 12 L. J., Q. B. 329; 7 Jur. 929.

Work and Labour in different Places.]—A plaintiff was employed by the defendant to paint and repair houses belonging to the defendant, situate some in Northumberland and some in Durham, under a general agreement at a fixed rate. The course of dealing was that the plaintiff called every Saturday at the defendant's office for guidance and direction as to the work, and payments on account were from time to time made. On the 9th July, 1877, the plaintiff issued a summons in the Newcastle County Court for 15*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* for work done and materials supplied, and on the 13th August recovered judgment for 10*l.* On the 24th September the plaintiff issued a second summons for 37*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.* for work done and materials supplied. The hearing of this cause was adjourned, and the defendant applied for a prohibition. The defendant swore that the greater part of the amount claimed was due when the first summons was issued, and that the plaintiff had been employed to work on all the houses indiscriminately. The plaintiff alleged that the first claim had been confined to the Northumberland houses, and the second to those in Durham:—Held, that, without deciding how far the two claims were so connected as to form in reality a single cause of action, the objection to the jurisdiction could not be taken at that stage and in that mode, and that a rule for prohibition must consequently be discharged. Adkin v. Friend, 38 L. T. 393.

e. Abandoning Excess of Claim.

The levying in a county court of a plaint for a sum less than 20*l.*, part of a larger demand exceeding that amount, is not, per se, an abandonment of the excess. Vines v. Arnold, 7 D. & L. 277; 8 C. B. 632; 19 L. J., C. P. 98; 14 Jur. 350. And see Avards v. Rhodes, ante, col. 894, and Bodger v. Nicholls, ante, col. 895.

Where a party sued in a county court to recover 50*l.* in respect of a right of action to a greater amount, the abandonment of the excess required by 9 and 10 Vict., c. 95, s. 63, might be made at any time on or before the hearing of the cause, provided it was by some act in court. Isaacs v. Wyld, 2 L. M. & P. 676; 7 Ex. 163; 21 L. J., Ex. 46; 15 Jur. 1135.

Where at the hearing the excess was abandoned, and a minute made by the judge of the abandonment:—Held, that he had jurisdiction to give judgment and grant execution for 50*l.* Ib.

The abandonment of the excess above 50*l.* of the claim of a plaintiff, in order to give the court jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Vict., c. 95, s. 63, and 13 & 14 Vict., c. 61, s. 1, must be the act of the plaintiff himself or some person authorised by him, and not the act of the judge. Hill v. Swift, 10 Ex. 726; 3 C. L. R. 724; 24 L. J., Ex. 137; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 167; 3 W. R. 171.

When a judge, of his own authority, and without the consent of the plaintiff, amended the particulars, so as to reduce the plaintiff's claim to 50*l.*, and thus gave himself jurisdiction, a prohibition was issued. Ib.

f. Payment on Account before Action.

Balance of Account.]—The words "on balance of account or otherwise," in s. 58 of 9 & 10 Vict., c. 95, have reference to a debt reduced by payments, or a balance settled, and ascertained before action. Woodhams v. Newman, 7 C. B. 654; 6 D. & L. 683; 18 L. J., C. P. 213; 13 Jur. 456.

The words balance of account are not limited to cases where the parties have met and settled an account, but include a debt reduced below 20*l.* by payment on account, and in such case where in an action in a superior court less than the sum of 20*l.* is recovered by the verdict, the plaintiff is not entitled to costs. Turner v. Berry, 1 L. M. & P. 744; 5 Ex. 858; 20 L. J., Ex. 89; 14 Jur. 1099.

In an action for a debt of 50*l.*, the defendant pleaded, as to 15*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*, non-joinder of a creditor, and as to the residue, never indebted. The defendant obtained a verdict upon the non-joinder. As to the residue, the plaintiff proved a debt for 35*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*, reduced by payments to 11*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to a suggestion to deprive the plaintiff of costs, under 9 & 10 Vict., c. 95, s. 129. Hudspeth v. Yarnold, 9 C. B. 625; 19 L. J., C. P. 321; 14 Jur. 378.

A party who sued in a superior court a defendant residing within the jurisdiction of a court of requests for a debt being the balance of account on a demand originally exceeding 5*l.*, but reduced below that amount by payments before action, was not liable to costs, though he recovered less than 40*s.* Elsley v. Kirby, 9 M. & W. 536; 1 D. (N.S.) 946; 12 L. J., Ex. 96.

3. Actions of Ejectment and for Recovery of Premises.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 59 and ss. 138—145.

Test of Value—9 & 10 Vict. c. 95.]—Under s. 122 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, by which the landlord of any house, land or other hereditament might, after the interest of the tenant had expired, enter a plaint in a county court to recover possession of the premises where the value of the premises or the rent payable in respect of such tenancy did not exceed 50*l.*, the court had jurisdiction if either the rent, no fine having been paid, or the annual value of the premises, did not exceed 50*l.* Harrington (Earl) v. Ramsay, 8 Ex. 879; 22 L. J., Ex. 326; 1 W. R. 456; S. C. and S. P., 2 El. & Bl. 669; 22 L. J., Q. B. 460; 1 W. R. 470.

The judges of the county courts had jurisdiction in all cases under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 122, whatever might be the value of the premises, if the rent did not exceed 50*l.* per annum, and there was no fine. Fearon v. Norvall, 5 D. & L. 445; 2 B. C. Rep. 333; 18 L. J., Q. B. 9; 13 Jur. 325.

By a written agreement the plaintiff let to the defendant premises at a rent of 20*s.* a week payable as demanded; four weeks' notice to quit from any day to be sufficient. During the continuance of this tenancy, the plaintiff verbally agreed with the defendant to accept 16*s.* a week, which was accordingly paid, and, on two occasions, the defendant submitted to a distress for that amount: Held, that no new demise was thereby created, and consequently the county court had no jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 122, the rent being above 50*l.* Crowley v. Vitty, 7 Ex. 319; 21 L. J., Ex. 135.

—— 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 11.]—Under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 11, the test of the jurisdiction of the county court was the value or rent as between the litigant parties, and not the value or rent as between the lessee and a sub-lessee. Brown v. Cocking, 9 B. & S. 503; 37 L. J., Q. B. 250; L. R. 3 Q. B. 672; 18 L. T. 560; 16 W. R. 933.

Where a judge had decided that the annual value did not exceed 20*l.*, and there was evidence to support his decision, the court could not grant a prohibition. Ib.

In ejectment against the occupier by the assignee of a term subject to a ground-rent, the county court judge was of opinion that by deducting the ground-rent the annual value of the premises was reduced below 20*l.*, and therefore he had jurisdiction:—Held, first, that the value intended in s. 11 was the marketable value of which the rent paid by the tenant to the immediate landlord is, in the absence of exceptional circumstances, a fair criterion. Livtone v. Rose, 3 B. & S. 509; 38 L. J., Q. B. 6; L. R. 4 Q. B. 4; 19 L. T. 280; 17 W. R. 52.

Held, secondly, that the county court judge having adopted an erroneous test of value, the court would grant prohibition. Ib.

——Effect of Dismissal of Summons for Prohibition.]—A plaintiff having sued in a county court to recover possession of hereditaments, the defendant applied by summons to a judge of the High Court of Justice sitting at chambers for a prohibition, on the ground that the annual value was greater than 20*l.*: the judge dismissed the summons, and the defendant did not appeal from his decision. At the trial of the action the judge of the county court refused to receive evidence from the defendant that the hereditaments were of greater value than 20*l.* a year, and he gave judgment for the plaintiff:—Held, that the decision of the judge of the county court was right, for by the dismissal of the summons the value of the hereditaments was conclusively ascertained for the purposes of the action, which therefore must be assumed to be within his jurisdiction. Symons v. Rees, 1 Ex. D. 416; 25 W. R. 116.

Ouster of Jurisdiction by Claim of Title.]—A summons was taken out in a county court under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 122, by A. against B., to recover land. On application for a prohibition by B., it appeared that B. held as tenant to C., in his lifetime, two farms, C. being leaseholder of one, and tenant in fee of the other. C. died; and A. produced a will by which he was devisee of all C.'s real estate, and appointed executor. A. proved the will and gave B. notice to quit. B. bonâ fide disputed the validity of the will:—Held, that the restriction contained in s. 58 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, as to the jurisdiction of the county court when title to corporeal hereditament comes in question, applies to proceedings under s. 122. The title to the leasehold could not come in question, inasmuch as the probate was conclusive that the title to that was in A., but that the title to the freehold did come in question; and a prohibition went as to the freehold farm, and was refused as to the leasehold. Kerkin v. Kerkin, 3 El. & Bl. 399; 18 Jur. 813.

The jurisdiction of the county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 50, was ousted if in proceedings under that section it appeared that the party in possession of the premises disputed the existence of any tenancy and bonâ fide claimed to be the owner. Pearson v. Glazebrook, 37 L. J., Ex. 15; L. R. 3 Ex. 27; 17 L. T. 260.

In a plaint in a county court for the recovery of premises by a landlord against his tenant, the court is not necessarily deprived of its jurisdiction by the judge being satisfied from the evidence that there is a bonâ fide claim of title to the premises by a third person, who has not only given notice to his tenant not to pay rent, but who has succeeded in obtaining possession from him. It is the duty of the judge, before he declines to try such cause, to ascertain whether the person so claiming title has obtained possession under circumstances which would amount to an eviction by title paramount; for if the tenant voluntarily gave up possession, the cause could have been tried without the judge having to determine any question of title. Emery v. Barnett, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 423; 27 L. J., C. P. 216; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 634; 6 W. R. 634.

A. was let into possession of premises as tenant to B., and paid him rent, C. claiming title. A. gave up possession to him in consideration of a sum for crops. In an action in a county court by B. against A. to recover arrears of rent, and also possession of the premises:—Held, that whether C.'s title could be set up or not, depended upon whether A. had been evicted by title paramount, or had voluntarily yielded up possession. Ib.

Relation of Landlord and Tenant.] — The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 122, only applies where the relation of landlord and tenant exists; and therefore a mortgagee cannot recover possession under that section from a person who has entered into the occupation as tenant of the mortgagor subsequently to the mortgage and has not become tenant to the mortgagee. Jones v. Owen, 5 D. & L. 669; 18 L. J., Q. B. 8; 13 Jur. 261.

By an agreement in writing, R. sold a house to S. for 150*l.*; the house was to be conveyed upon the payment of that sum; but in the meantime, and until the payment, a weekly rent was reserved. S. afterwards married the defendant. The purchase money was satisfied, and R. died. The executors then proceeded in the county court against the defendant to recover possession of the house:—Held, that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist. Banks v. Rebbeck, 2 L. M. & P. 453; 20 L. J., Q. B. 476; 15 Jur. 657.

In 1857 a defendant was entitled to 500*l.* with interest, charged on Whiteacre, belonging to A., and it was verbally arranged that the defendant should rent Blackacre from A., and deduct the interest of the 500*l.* from the rent. In 1858 A. conveyed the reversion of Blackacre to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was a mere tenant of Blackacre, and that the plaintiff could determine the tenancy by notice merely, and recover possession. Jones v. Thomas, 4 L. T. 210.

Determination of Tenancy—Legal Notice to Quit.]—The judge of a county court has jurisdiction to inquire whether the tenancy has been determined by legal notice to quit, and his decision on that fact is conclusive, and cannot be questioned on a motion for a prohibition, and the jurisdiction of the county court is not ousted by the tenant appearing and showing cause. Fearon v. Nowall, 5 D. & L. 439, 445; 17 L. J., Q. B. 161; 18 L. J., Q. B. 9.

The plaintiff let to the defendant a house for three years at a rent of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* a month, payable monthly; the agreement of tenancy contained a power of re-entry on non-payment of any part of the rent for twenty-one days after the day of payment, or in case of the breach or non-performance of any of the conditions in the agreement. A month's rent having been in arrear for more than twenty-one days, the plaintiff gave the defendant notice to quit at the end of the next month of the term, alleging as breaches non-payment of rent and a breach of a condition in the agreement:—Held, that a "legal notice to quit" within the meaning of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 50, must be taken to mean the notice to quit required by law and not one depending on the express stipulation of the parties; that the tenancy had not, therefore, been determined within the meaning of the section, and that an action to recover possession of the premises could not be brought in the county court. Friend v. Shaw, 57 L. J., Q. B. 225; 20 Q. B. D. 374; 58 L. T. 89; 36 W. R. 236; 52 J. P. 438.

Pendency of other Proceedings.]—The fact of the pendency of an action of ejectment is not a bar to the plaintiff proceeding in a county court for the recovery of possession of the same tenements. Williamson v. Bissill, 7 H. & N. 391; 31 L. J., Ex. 131; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 42; 5 L. T. 321; 10 W. R. 109.

Warrant of Possession—Where Available.]—Although the plaintiff and the defendant both reside within the jurisdiction of a county court, if property sought to be recovered is situate without the jurisdiction, a warrant of possession cannot be executed. Ellis v. Peachey, 5 D. & L. 675; 18 L. J., Q. B. 137; 13 Jur. 564.

—— Evidence of Title.]—A warrant of possession obtained under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 50, by a landlord proceeding in the county court against his tenant, but not against the person actually in possession, is not conclusive against the latter, who may, notwithstanding the warrant, bring an action of trespass against the landlord, if the landlord had not in fact a right to the possession of the premises. Per Channell, B., and Pigott, B.; contra by Martin, B. Hudson or Hodson v. Walker, 41 L. J., Ex. 51; L. R. 7 Ex. 55; 25 L. T. 937; 20 W. R. 489.

A county court order for giving up possession of premises, made against a person holding under the tenant, is not conclusive evidence of title in a subsequent action against him for mesne profits. Campbell v. Loader, 3 H. & C. 520; 34 L. J., Ex. 50; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 11 L. T. 608; 13 W. R. 348.

4. ACTIONS IN WHICH TITLE IS IN QUESTION.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 60.

Question, how raised.]—A mere statement of the party claiming, unsupported by other evidence, is not sufficient to oust the court of its jurisdiction. Lilley v. Harvey, 5 D. & L. 648; 2 B. C. Rep. 312; 17 L. J., Q. B. 357; 12 Jur. 1026.

Duty of Judge.]—Where a question is raised incidentally before the judge of a county court, on the trial of an action over which he has originally jurisdiction, under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 58, whether title to land is in dispute between the parties, the judge has jurisdiction to inquire and decide whether title really is in dispute, but his decision is not final; and if he decides that title did not come in dispute, and the superior court is satisfied that title did come in dispute, a prohibiton will issue against him. Thompson v. Ingham, 14 Q. B. 710; 19 L. J., Q. B 189; 14 Jur. 429.

Claim in Good Faith.]—To oust the jurisdiction of a county court the claim set up must be a bonâ fide one, and the right one which can exist in point of law. Lloyd v. Jones, 6 C. B. 81; 5 D. & L. 784; 17 L. J., C. P. 206; 12 Jur. 657.

The proviso in the 58th section of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, deprives the county court of jurisdiction in all cases where the title to real estate is the matter in question, however fraudulent or malâ fide the claim of either party may be. Marsh v. Dewes, 17 Jur. 558.

Claim material to Issue.]—The court will not grant a prohibition to restrain a judge from proceeding in a plaint where evidence respecting title to land is given, unless such question of title is material to the decision of the case. Morton v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 6 W. R. 543.

Landlord and Tenant.]—A tenant, sued for use and occupation of premises by the landlord of whom he took them on lease, is at liberty to show that the latter's title expired during the tenancy, even though the tenant continued to enjoy or occupy the premises for the whole term, without being subjected to any eviction from the real owner; and if the tenant sets up such a defence when so sued in a county court, that court has no longer any jurisdiction to decide the cause, as title to land has come in question. Mountney v. Collier, 1 El. & Bl. 630; 22 L. J., Q. B. 124; 17 Jur. 503; 1 W. R. 179.

A party sued in a county court for rent and double value cannot oust the court of jurisdiction, by alleging title to the premises in himself, if it is proved that he has admitted himself to have been tenant to the plaintiff at the times when the rent accrued, and from which the holding over commenced. Wickham v. Lee, 12 Q. B. 521; 18 L. J., Q. B. 21; 12 Jur. 628.

On the trial of a plaint for a trespass committed by breaking the doors of certain rooms in a cottage of the plaintiff, his case was, that he had let to the defendant a portion only of the cottage, and had reserved to himself the rooms in which the trespass was committed. The defendant's case was, that the plaintiff had let him the whole of the cottage:—Held, that title to an incorporeal hereditament was in dispute, and that the county court had no jurisdiction. Chew v. Holroyd, 8 Ex. 249; 22 L. J., Ex. 95; 1 W. R. 68.

Trespass.]—A plea of not possessed, to an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, takes the case out of the jurisdiction of the county courts. Timothy v. Farmer, 7 C. B. 814.

But not unless a question of title in fact comes in question. Latham v. Spedding, 2 L., M. & P. 378; 17 Q. B. 440; 20 L. J., Q. B. 302; 15 Jur. 576.

A summons had been served to answer a plaint in the nature of an action on the case, for an injury to the plaintiff's reversionary interest in land. The injury complained of, as set forth in the particulars, was the removal of a boundary fence between the lands of the plaintiff and the defendant, cutting down trees, &c., and the erection of a new fence in such a manner as to make it appear that a portion of the plaintiff's land belonged to the defendant:—Held, that the defendant, upon showing that the title to land was bonâ fide in dispute, was entitled to a prohibition, and that he was not bound to wait till the county court had proceeded to hear the case.

Sewell v Jones, 1 L M & P 525, 19 L J, Q B 372, 15 Jur 153

False Imprisonment]—A was found taking sand from premises in the occupation of B (under a lease) and was given into custody by B on a charge of stealing it On appearing before a magistrate, A denying that B had any right to the land, the charge was dismissed, as involving a question of title A afterwards sued B in a county court for false imprisonment A prohibition having issued, the court set it aside on the ground that no question of title could arise on the hearing Eversfield v Newman, 4 C B (N S) 418

Replevin]—If a plea asserting a title to the freehold be pleaded in a county court, the court is immediately ousted of its jurisdiction, and should not proceed Therefore, where the defendant in replevin made cognizance for the taking of cattle that the place in which they were taken was the freehold of a corporation, and that he, as the bailiff of the corporation, took them damage feasant to which the plaintiff pleaded that the defendant was not such bailiff, and did not take them as such bailiff on which issue was joined after verdict and judgment for the plaintiff in the county court, it was held that such judgment was erroneous Tennyswood v Pattison, 3 C B 243, 15 L J, C P 231, 10 Jur 572

—— Jurisdiction notwithstanding Title]—Where an action of replevin is commenced in a county court, and the defendant does not take steps to remove it under 19 & 20 Vict c 108, s 67, the county court has power to try the action notwithstanding title to an incorporeal hereditament comes in question, the 9 & 10 Vict c 95, s 58, not applying to an action of replevin Fordham v Akers, 4 B & S 578, 33 L J, Q B 67, 9 L T 478, 12 W R 201 And see post, col 915

Liability in Respect of Ownership.]—The 11 & 12 Vict c 123, s 3, which directs that the amount paid for carrying into force an order of justices under that statute to abate a nuisance may be recovered from the owner of the premises where the nuisance existed, either in the county court or by proceeding before two justices, gives those tribunals exclusive jurisdiction, and therefore the county court has jurisdiction in such case, although title to land comes in issue Hertford Union v Kempton, 11 Ex 295, 25 L J, M C 41, 3 W R 521.

Where a party is charged in a county court with a liability arising from his being owner of land, and he disclaims being the owner of that land, this raises a question of title Reg v Harden, 2 El & Bl 189, 22 L J, Q B 299, 17 Jur 804.

Hereditaments — Leasehold Property.] — By the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 56, except as in this act provided, the court shall not have cognizance of any action "in which the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments shall be in question", and by s 60 jurisdiction is given to try such actions where neither the value of the hereditaments in dispute, nor the rent thereof, shall exceed 50*l* by the year. Where the defendant disputed the plaintiffs' title to houses held by them under leases for years, and exceeding the specified yearly value —Held, that the title to "hereditaments was in question within the meaning of s 56 and therefore that the county court had no jurisdiction to try the action Lumbers v Jones 58 L J Q B 222 22 Q B D 599, 60 L T 939, 37 W R 328—C A

Easement]—The plaintiff sued in the High Court for damage to his reversion by reason of the defendant's interference with the flow of water through a pipe under the defendant's land to which the plaintiff claimed to be entitled in respect of his premises The defendant, by his defence, refused to admit the plaintiff's title to the easement claimed, pleaded leave and licence from the plaintiff's tenant, and, while denying liability, brought 40*s* into court The plaintiff took the 40*s* out of court in satisfaction of his claim The yearly value of the premises in respect of which the easement was claimed exceeded 50*l* —Held, that the action could not have been commenced in the county court, because a question of title to a hereditament arose which the county court had no jurisdiction to try Howarth v Sutcliffe, 61 L J, Q B 729, [1893] 2 Q B 358, 14 R 722, 73 L T 277, 44 W R 33, 59 J P 678

—— User by Public of Navigable Water]—In an action in a county court for damage done to the plaintiff's oyster bed by the defendant's barge, the plaintiff gave evidence of fourteen years' possession of the oyster-bed The defendant, prior to the hearing, gave notice to the plaintiff to produce his documents of title, and at the hearing cross examined him as to his title, but tendered no evidence in contradiction of it. The value of the oyster bed exceeded 50*l* by the year —Held, on application for prohibition, that no question of title to hereditaments, within the meaning of s 56 of the County Courts Act, 1888, arose, and that the word 'easement" in s 60 of the same act applies only to an easement over a servient tenement in respect of a dominant tenement, and does not apply to the user of a navigable water by the public, and that the county court judge, therefore had jurisdiction to entertain the action Hawkins v Rutter, 61 L J, Q B 146, [1892] 1 Q B 668, 40 W R 238

Church Rates]—By a local act of parliament for rebuilding a church, trustees were employed to levy rates upon all houses in the parish, one half to be paid by the landlord and the other half by the tenant, the tenants to pay the whole rate in the first instance, and to deduct a moiety out of the rent, and the landlord to allow of such deduction accordingly, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary After the passing of this act a lease was granted in the parish to a tenant who covenanted to pay all parliamentary and other taxes and rates. The tenant paid the full rent and the rate, but the landlord refused to deduct a moiety of it from the plaintiff, on the ground that the act only applied to agreements in existence at the time it was passed The tenant having sued the landlord in a county court for a moiety of the amount so paid for rates —Held, that as no question was raised as to the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments, there was no ground for a writ of prohibition. Gwynne v Knight, 1 Ex. 802, 17 L. J., Ex. 168; 12 Jur. 101.

Paving Rates]—Paving rates assessed under the authority of an act of parliament are not incorporeal hereditaments and may therefore be sued for in a county court Baddeley v Denton, 7 D & L 210, 4 Ex 504 19 L J, Ex 44

Custom]—The county courts are not precluded from trying a disputed custom Davis v Walton, 8 Ex 153, 22 L J, Ex 25 16 Jur 954, 1 W R 8

Therefore they have power to try a custom for the occupier of a wharf on a public navigable river to cause vessels coming to his wharf to unload to overlap the adjoining wharf of another Ib

In an action in a county court for fishing in the plaintiff's river the defendant set up a custom for all the inhabitants of the town to fish in such river, and claimed the privilege to himself as such inhabitant, as a defence to the action — Held that the custom being bad, as a profit à prendre, the jurisdiction of the county court could not be excluded by setting it up Lloyd v Jones 5 D & L 781, 6 C B 81, 17 L J, C P 206 12 Jur 657

Held also that the right claimed was not an hereditament, and therefore not within the proviso to s 58 of 9 & 10 Vict c 58 ousting the county court of its jurisdiction Ib

Office]—A plaintiff sued in a county court, as chapel clerk of a parochial chapelry for arrears of an ancient customary yearly sum due from each inhabitant householder of the chapelry The defendant disputed the title of the plaintiff to the office of chapel clerk, and also his right to the customary payment —Held, that the title to an incorporeal hereditament was in question, and therefore the county court had not jurisdiction Stephenson v Raine, 2 El & Bl 744 2 C L R 234, 23 L J, Q B 62, 18 Jur 176, 2 W R 77

If the question of title to an office is not raised on the hearing of a plaint but the party is taken to be duly appointed the court will not afterwards grant a writ of prohibition Stevenson v Stickle, 13 Jur 1103

Railway Tolls]—In a plaint in a county court against a railway company to recover damages for expense and loss of time sustained by a party in consequence of the improper omission of the company to convey goods on their line, a question was raised as to the right of the company to charge toll for empty waggons —Held that the title to toll did not thereby come in question within the meaning of the proviso in 9 & 10 Vict c 95, s 58 Hunt v G N Ry, 10 C B 900 S P and S C, 2 L, M & P 268, 20 L J, Q B 349, 15 Jur 400

Harbour Dues]—In a plaint in a county court against a collector of the trustees of Ramsgate Harbour to recover back a sum paid as a duty imposed by statute on vessels passing within certain limits the question was raised as to the right of the trustees to take a second rate or duty for vessels repassing as well as passing —Held, that the title to toll thereby came in question Adey v Trinity House Deputy Master, 22 L J, Q. B 3, 17 Jur 489 1 W R 53 S C, nom Reg v. Everett, 1 El & Bl 273

Annual Value—Party-wall]—The plaintiff was the lessee of certain premises at an annual rental of 36*l*, including a party-wall which separated his house from that of the defendant, who denied the plaintiff's title to the wall and committed a trespass upon it —Held, that inasmuch as the only portion of the premises the title to which was in dispute was under the annual value of 20*l* the county court had jurisdiction to try the action Stolworthy v Powell, 55 L J, Q B 228, 54 L T 795

—— Arrears of Rent-charge] — A county court has jurisdiction within s 60 of the County Courts Act 1888, to try an action for recovery of arrears of a rent charge of 10*l* a year issuing out of land the value whereof exceeds 50*l* by the year, inasmuch as in such action the title to the rent charge is in question, and not the title to the land out of which it issues and therefore the value of the hereditaments in dispute does not exceed the sum of 50*l* by the year Bassano v Bradley, 65 L J, Q B 479 [1896] 1 Q B. 645, 74 L T 353, 44 W R 576

Practice—Nonsuit—Costs]—In a plaint in a county court when on the hearing it appears that title to land is disputed the judge has no power to nonsuit the plaintiff and before the County Courts Act, 1867 s 14 he had no power to award costs against him Linford v Partridge, 1 H & N 621 26 L J, Ex 147, 3 Jur. (N S) 271, 5 W R 235

5 In Equity Matters

County Courts Act, 1888, ss 67, 75

Administratio]—The county courts have power, under the County Courts Equitable Jurisdiction Act (1865, 28 & 29 Vict c 99), to entertain administration suits instituted by the assignees and representatives of next of kin, and of the other classes of persons specified in s 1, sub-s 1, of that act Turner v Reynolds, 42 L J, Ch 510, L R 16 Eq 37, 28 L T 530, 21 W R 558

—— Order within Discretion of Judge]—A person interested in the estate of a deceased person is not entitled as of right to an administration order in a county court the combined effect of Ord VI r 6 and Ord XXII r 11, of the County Court Rules, 1886, being to place the granting of such order within the discretion of the county court judge Pearson v Pearson, 56 L T 445

—— Proceedings, where taken—Metropolitan District]—Section 75, sub-s 3 of the County Courts Act, 1888, which provides that proceedings for the administration of the assets of a deceased person are to be taken in the court within the district of which the deceased had his last place of abode in England, or in which the executors or administrators, or anyone of them, have their or his place of abode, does not apply to the metropolitan county court districts named in s 84 of that act Where therefore the plaintiff in such proceedings dwells or carries on business in any of such districts and the defendant dwells or carries on business in any other of such districts, the proceedings may be taken in the court within the district of which either the plaintiff or the defendant dwells or carries on business Reg v Bloomsbury County Court Judge, 24 Q B D 309, 62 L T 286, 38 W. R. 320

—— Practice—Statement of Value of Estate.]—An administration plaint need not contain a specific statement that the estate to be administered does not exceed in amount or value 500*l.* Cheeseyright v. Thorn, 38 L. J., Ch. 615; 20 L. T. 152.

—— Transfer where Estate exceeds 500*l.]—A plaint was instituted in the county court for the administration of the estate of a testator, alleging (as the plaintiff then believed to be the fact) that the estate was worth less than 500*l.* Previously to the hearing, notice was given by the defendant to the plaintiff that the estate was worth more than 500*l.*, and at the hearing this was proved to be the case. The judge made an order transferring the suit to the Court of Chancery:—Held, that he was right in so doing. Birks v. Silverwood, 41 L. J., Ch. 638; L. R. 14 Eq. 101; 27 L. T. 18.

—— Staying Proceedings in High Court.]—Since the Judicature Act, 1873, a county court before which an administration suit is pending has no power to stay proceedings in the High Court, in respect of claims provable in the administration suit. Cobbold v. Pryke, 49 L. J., Ex. 8; 4 Ex. D. 315; 28 W. R. 259; cp. Allison, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 755; 8 Ch. D. 4; 38 L. T. 304; 26 W. R. 450.

—— Restraining Creditor's Action.] — Notwithstanding that, by Ord. 1, r. 8, of the County Court Orders in Equity, 1865, a decree cannot be made till a month after the plaint has been filed, a county court judge has not jurisdiction under Ord. XII. r. 1, of the County Court Orders in Equity, 1865, in a creditor's administration suit, before decree, or on an ex parte application, to restrain a creditor's action commenced previously to the institution of the suit. Nokes v. Gandy, 43 L. J., Ch. 276; L. R. 17 Eq. 297; 29 L. T. 828; 22 W. R. 293.

—— Action for Legacy — Residuary Bequest.]—A residuary bequest is a legacy within 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 65. Pears v. Wilson, 2 L. M. & P. 515; 6 Ex. 833; 20 L. J., Ex. 381; 15 Jur. 932.

—— Bequest payable through Trustee.]—A bequest of money may be a legacy within the meaning of the section, although payable through the intervention of a trustee. Ib.

—— Trust for Investment.] — But a bequest of money in trust to invest the same during the minority of an infant, and pay it to him when of age, with power to apply it towards his education and advancement, is not. Phillips v. Hewston, 11 Ex. 699; 25 L. J., Ex. 133; 4 W. R. 293.

Where property was left in trust to invest in government securities, to pay the dividends to the widow during her life, and after her death to dispose of the estate in a certain way, paying certain legacies, and then with a bequest of a certain sum to be divided equally among the four children of a certain party:—Held, in a plaint by one of them for his share, that this was so far a matter of trust that it was not a fit subject for a county court, the widow not being shown to be dead. Beard v. Hine, 10 W. R. 45.

—— Devastavit.] — Where a plaint is brought for a legacy, and the executor shows that he has paid for the testator's debts exceeding the amount of the assets, and the plaintiff contends that the executor has been guilty of a devastavit, and on that account seeks to charge him with assets, the county court judge has jurisdiction to try the question of the devastavit. Winch v. Winch, 13 C. B. 128; 22 L. J., C. P. 104; 17 Jur. 88; 1 W. R. 131.

An action in a county court, by a legatee, to recover a legacy under 50*l.*, will be stayed by a court of equity, and the legatee restrained from proceeding, after a decree for the administration of the testator's assets, although the legatee submitted to take a judgment against the executor de bonis propriis only on the allegation of a devastavit. Ratcliffe v. Winch, 17 Beav. 217; 22 L. J., Ch. 915; 17 Jur. 586.

—— Mortgage of Legatee's Interest.] — So legatees, who have mortgaged their interest in a legacy, will be restrained by a court of equity from prosecuting a suit in the county court to obtain payment from the executors. Neighbour v. Brown, 26 L. J., Ch. 670.

—— Action on Condition of Bequest.]—A plaintiff in a county court claimed, by his particulars of demand, 17*l.* 18*s.* "due from the defendant as administratrix of D., for that W., by his will, bequeathed to D. certain freehold hereditaments, and also leasehold and other personal estate, on condition of D. paying unto the plaintiff 4*s.* a week during her life. And D., on on the death of W., accepted the bequest and entered into possession, and enjoyed the aforesaid freehold and personal estate, and duly paid the weekly sum during his life; but since his death the defendant, although she has possessed herself of the hereditaments, goods, chattels, and effects of D. to an amount more than sufficient for the purpose, has refused to pay the plaintiff." On the death of D. the freehold estates so bequeathed descended to his nephew and heir-at-law, a minor:—Held, that the sum in question was claimed as a debt, and consequently the county court had jurisdiction. But the court ordered a certiorari to issue on account of the legal difficulties in the case. Longbottom v. Longbottom, 8 Ex. 203; 22 L. J., Ex. 74.

—— Proceedings, where taken.]—A testator gave a legacy in the following words:—"Likewise, should my executors think proper, to S. I give 20*l.* conditional on his continuing to conduct himself faithfully in all respects." The executors having renounced, letters of administration were granted to the defendant by the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. The will was made within the jurisdiction of the county court of Kent. The estate of the testator was being administered in London, where the bulk of the assets would be realised:—Held, that the cause of action did not arise in the district of the county court of Kent, within 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60. Fuller, In re, 2 El. & Bl. 573; 22 L. J., Q. B. 415; 17 Jur. 989; 1 W. R. 447.

Execution of Trusts.]—The county courts have power, under 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, to decree execution of constructive or implied trusts, when the trust estate or fund does not exceed in amount or value the sum of 500*l.* Clayton v. Renton, 36 L. J., Ch. 428; L. R. 4 Eq. 158; 16 L. T. 48.

Mortgage — Foreclosure — Concurrent Jurisdiction of Superior Court.]—The 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, does not oust the jurisdiction of the superior courts of equity in the matters to which its provisions apply. They retain a concurrent jurisdiction, and it is not obligatory upon a plaintiff to resort to the county court. Scotto v. Heritage, 36 L. J., Ch. 123; L. R. 3 Eq. 212; 15 L. T. 349; 15 W. R. 168.

A plaintiff, residing more than twenty miles apart from the defendant, filed a bill to foreclose a mortgage for 50*l.*, upon which a few pounds as interest were due. The court held him entitled to select his tribunal; and, considering it doubtful, under the circumstances, that less expense would have been incurred by proceeding in the county court, gave him a decree for foreclosure with the ordinary costs. Ib.

—— Bankruptcy of Mortgagor.] — B. advanced 100*l.* to C. upon the security of a deposit of the title deeds of real estate. C. subsequently became bankrupt, and therefore B. filed a plaint in the county court to enforce the payment of his money:—Held, that the county court had jurisdiction to grant the relief prayed; and that B. having two jurisdictions, viz. the bankruptcy court and the county court, to choose from, had a right to go to either. Medhurst v. Golder, 16 L. T. 50.

A married woman advanced 250*l.* upon the security of a deposit of title deeds of real estate. Her husband died, and she married a second time. Shortly after the second marriage her husband borrowed money upon a deposit of the deeds. Subsequently she separated from her husband, and a deed was then executed, whereby he released to his wife all his interest in her real and personal estate. The husband became bankrupt, and his assignee, having paid off the second mortgage, obtained possession of the deeds. Upon the death of the first mortgagee the bankrupt's assignee filed a plaint in the county court, making the mortgagee's executors the only defendants, and claiming to be paid the 250*l.*, or in default that the property might be sold. The judge, overruling an objection taken that the wife was a necessary party, made the order prayed:—Held, that she was a necessary party, and that the case must stand over in the county court, with liberty to the plaintiff to amend his plaint by adding parties. Robinson v. O'Kell, 22 L. T. 399.

—— Redemption Suit.]—A suit for redemption, in which the right to redeem is resisted, and a sale of the mortgaged hereditaments is sought to be set aside, is within the jurisdiction in equity, conferred upon the county courts by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, s. 1. Powell v. Roberts, 39 L. J., Ch. 44; L. R. 9 Eq 169; 21 L. T. 451; 18 W. R. 84.

—— Improper Exercise of Power of Sale—Action for Damages.]—Sub-s. 2 of s. 21 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, provides that "any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper, or irregular exercise of the power"—that is, the power of sale conferred by the act—"shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power":—Held, that this remedy in damages may be obtained by means of a common law action brought in the county court, under s. 56 of the County Courts Act, 1888, where the amount claimed is under the county court jurisdiction. Ames v. Higdon, 69 L. T. 292.

Specific Performance—Agreement for Lease.]—Agreements for leases are within the 4th clause of s. 1 of the 28 and 29 Vict. c. 99, authorising decrees for specific performance. Willcox v. Marshall, 36 L. J., Ch. 358; L. R. 3 Eq. 270; 15 L. T. 527; 15 W. R. 333.

—— Agreement for Use of Footpath.]—A plaint was entered in a county court claiming specific performance of an agreement that the plaintiff should have the free and exclusive use of a footpath, and that the defendant would not grant permission to any other person to use it, and also claiming damages for an alleged breach of the agreement:—Held, on rule for prohibition, that the agreement was not "for the sale, purchase, or lease of any property" within the meaning of s. 9 of the County Courts Act, 1867, and that prohibition must therefore issue as to the claim for specific performance, but that the action must proceed as to the claim for damages. Reg. v. Westmoreland County Court Judge, 58 L. T. 417; 36 W. R. 477.

The defendant entered on premises under an executory agreement for a lease. He subsequently gave six months' notice to quit, as if on a yearly tenancy, and left the premises. An action was brought in the county court for a quarter's rent, accruing due after the defendant had given up possession. The value of the premises exceeded 50*l.*, so that the judge had no jurisdiction to decree specific performance of the agreement; but he was of opinion that it was a case in which specific performance would be decreed, and that he was therefore bound to treat the defendant as tenant under the terms of the agreement, and he gave judgment for the plaintiff:—Held, that the equitable doctrine that a person who enters under an executory agreement for a lease is to be treated as in under the terms of the agreement, can only be applied where the court in which the action is brought has concurrent jurisdiction in law and equity, and that the plaintiff could not recover in the action. Foster v. Reeves, 61 L. J., Q. B. 763; [1892] 2 Q. B. 255; 67 L. T. 537; 40 W. R. 695; 57 J. P. 23—C. A.

6. Where Special Statutory Provisions as to Proceedings.

Bills of Exchange.]—The 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 4, has not deprived the county court of its jurisdiction to issue a summons under the Bills of Exchange Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 67). Holbrow v. Jones, 38 L. J., C. P. 22; L. R. 4 C. P. 14; 19 L. T. 320; 17 W. R. 54.

Bills of exchange are within the jurisdiction of the county courts. Waters v. Handley, 6 D. & L. 88.

Section 129 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, which prohibits a plaintiff from recovering costs in an action brought in a superior court for which a plaint might have been entered in the county court, applies to actions on negotiable instruments in the same manner as to other actions. Nind v. Rhodes, 17 L. J., Q. B. 179; 2 B. C. Rep. 226.

—— Defences.]—In an action on a bill of exchange in a county court, the defendant may avail himself of any defence of which the facts admit, and is not confined to the particular defence disclosed in the affidavit on which he is let in to defend. Saul v. Jones, 1 El. & El. 59; 28 L. J., Q. B. 37; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 220; 7 W. R. 47.

Whether Claim arises within District.]—See Cases ante, col. 891.

Demands under Public Health Act — Six Months after Cause of Complaint arose.]—A local board brought an action in a county court to recover 13*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*, the share apportioned to, and payable by, the defendant of the expenses of certain works executed by the board under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 69. By ss. 69 & 129, the expenses were to be recovered in a summary manner before two justices, and by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, the time for making complaints before justices (unless specially limited), is limited to six months after the cause of complaint arose. By the Local Government Act, 1858, and Amendment Act, 1861, s. 24, proceedings for the recovery of demands below 20*l.*, which local boards could then recover in a summary manner, might, "at the option of the local board, be taken in the county court as if such demands were debts." The action was commenced more than six months after the cause of complaint arose:—Held, that, according to the true construction of the above enactments, the option to proceed in the county court could only be exercised for as long a time as the right to proceed before justices existed, and therefore that the action, having been commenced more than six months after the cause of complaint arose, could not be maintained. Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell, 46 L. J., Ex. 432; 1 Ex. D. 514; 35 L. T. 887; 25 W. R. 135—C. A.

—— Title to Land.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 123, s. 3, all costs and expenses incurred in obtaining an order, for the removal of a cause of complaint, or in carrying the same into effect, shall be deemed to be money paid for the use and at the request of the owner or occupier of the premises in respect whereof such costs and expenses shall have been incurred, and may be recovered as such, by the guardians of the union, in any county court, or, if the guardians think fit, before two justices, and a county court has jurisdiction over a suit for such costs and expenses, though title to land is in question, notwithstanding the proviso in s. 58 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. Reg. v. Harden, 2 El. & Bl. 189; 22 L. J., Q. B. 299; 17 Jur. 804.

Local Sewers Act.]—By a local act, passed before the County Courts Act, rates for cleansing and sewering a town might be recovered by action "in any of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster":—Held, that the county court had jurisdiction to hear a plaint brought to recover a sum under 20*l.* due in respect of a rate under the local act. Stewart v. Jones, 1 El. & Bl. 22; 22 L. J., Q. B. 1; 16 Jur. 1020.

Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847.]—When the annual value of a tenement charged with water rate is bonâ fide disputed before action, it is a condition precedent to the right of suing for the rate that the water company should procure the dispute to be determined by summoning before justices the party liable, under the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, s. 68. New River Co. v. Mather, 44 L. J., M. C. 105; L. R. 10 C. P. 442; 32 L. T. 658.

A water company, in January, 1874, sued the defendant in the county court for a balance of two years' water rate, due Christmas, 1872. The defendant had from April, 1873, up to the time of action, disputed the claim as excessive, on the ground that annual value meant net annual value after deduction made for repairs, and paid into court a sum calculated upon an annual value of 18*l.* The company based their claim upon a gross annual value of 22*l.* Neither party had summoned the other before justices for the purposes of having the dispute as to annual value determined:—Held, that the county court judge had no jurisdiction to determine the question as to annual value. Ib.

Building and Friendly Societies—Winding up.]—The Companies (Winding Up) Act, 1890, applies to the winding up in county courts of building societies registered under the Building Societies Act, 1874, and the county court judge has power to state the facts in the form of a special case for the opinion of the High Court under s. 3, sub-s. 3 of the act of 1890. Semble, r. 146 of the County Court Rules of February, 1892, is ultra vires. Portsea Island Building Society, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 845; [1893] 3 Ch. 205; 3 R. 646; 69 L. T. 138; 41 W. R. 587.

A county court has power, under the Building Societies Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 42), s. 32, to make an order for winding up a building society. Andrew v. Swansea Cumbrian Benefit Building Society, 50 L. J., Q. B. 428; 44 L. T. 106; 29 W. R. 382; 46 J. P. 507.

—— Rule referring Disputes.]—On a rule for a mandamus to the judge of a county court to hear a plaint brought by a member of a building society within 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 32, against an officer of that society, under a rule of the society directing a reference of all disputes to two justices of the peace:—Held, that the right to bring an action was taken away, and that the County Courts Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), s. 58, did not operate to revive a power of bringing actions in the county courts which had been taken away from all courts generally. Payne, Ex parte, 5 D. & L. 679; 18 L. J., Q. B. 197; 13 Jur. 634.

—— Unregistered Society—Rules.]—In the case of an unregistered society under s. 30, sub-s. 10, of the act of 1875 (explained by 42 Vict. c. 9), the right of appeal to a county court or court of summary jurisdiction overrides any rules of the society to the contrary. Knowles v. Booth, 32 W. R. 432.

See also BUILDING SOCIETY—FRIENDLY SOCIETY.

Master and Servants Act, 1867.]—Journeymen painters sued their former employer in a county court for wages claimed upon a concluded contract of service. The defendant shewed that a magistrate had on the merits heard and dismissed summonses for the same wages taken out under the Master and Servants Act, 1867. The county court judge refused on that ground to entertain the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that the magistrate had jurisdiction to hear such a claim under that act, and that the decision of the county court judge was right. Millett v. Coleman, 44 L. J., Q. B. 194; 33 L. T. 204.

In Admiralty—Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, s. 49, sub.-s. 6—Salvage.]—The Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), ss. 458, 460, entitles a person by whom services are rendered to a ship in distress to a reasonable amount of salvage, which in case of dispute, within certain limits as to amount, shall be referred to the arbitration of justices of the peace. By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63, s. 49 (6), it shall be competent for any county court judge to exercise the same jurisdiction in salvage cases as is given to two justices. By r. 276 of the rules, orders and forms for regulating the practice of the county courts, 1867, "In proceedings in the county courts under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63, a plaint shall be entered, and a summons shall be issued thereon, and the rules and practice of the court shall be adopted with respect to such proceedings, so far as the same are applicable." A plaint was entered and summons issued in a county court, and the particulars claimed "250*l.*, the amount agreed to be paid" for getting the defendant's schooner off the shore. The value of the schooner was under 1,000*l.*:—Held, first, that by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63, s. 49 (6), the jurisdiction was given to the county court judge as an independent arbitrator, and not as judge of the county court. Beadnell v. Breeson, 9 B. & S. 315; 37 L. J., Q. B. 171; L. R. 3 Q. B. 384; 16 W. R. 1008.

Held, secondly, that the proceeding before him was properly commenced by plaint and summons, in pursuance of the County Court Rules, 1867, r. 276. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that this was a claim for salvage, the amount of which was to be determined notwithstanding the bargain for a fixed sum, and therefore the county court judge had exclusive jurisdiction. Ib.

—— Breach of Charterparty.]—The 2nd section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869, gives the county courts jurisdiction in cases of claims arising out of charterparties or other agreements for the use or hire of ships, although the Court of Admiralty may have no original jurisdiction in such cases. Cargo ex Argos (L. R. 5 P. C. 134) followed. Simpson v. Blues (L. R. 7 C. P. 290) and Gunnestad v. Price (L. R. 10 Ex. 65) disapproved. The Alina, 49 L. J., P. 40; 5 Ex. D. 227; 42 L. T. 517; 29 W. R. 94—C. 7. CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Power to Commit—Extent.]—A county court judge has no power to commit anyone for contempt which has not occurred in the face of the court. Reg. v. Lefroy, 42 L. J., Q. B. 121; L. R. 8 Q. B. 134; 28 L. T. 132; 21 W. R. 332.

The fact that the County Courts Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), ss. 113, 114, gives a limited power of summarily dealing with contempt committed in face of the court, but is silent as to contempt committed out of court, is a strong, if not conclusive argument against the summary power of a county court judge to punish for such contempt. Ib.

Wilful Insult.]—Action for false imprisonment against the bailiff of a county court and the gaoler. Pleas justifying under a warrant under the hand of the judge and seal of the county court, directed to them, which, after reciting that the plaintiff did wilfully insult the judge during his sitting, and thereupon he ordered him to be taken into custody, and detained till the rising of the court, therefore required the bailiff and gaoler to take and imprison the plaintiff for seven days:—Held, that the ground of commitment was not uncertain. Lery v. Moylan, 10 C. B. 189; 1 L. M. & P. 307; 19 L. J., C. P. 308; 14 Jur. 983.

The recital, that the plaintiff had insulted the judge, was a direct adjudication that he had done so. Ib.

It was not necessary to set forth in the warrant the nature of the insult. Ib.

—— Sentence before Warrant.]—A warrant for the committal to prison of a person guilty of a wilful insult during the sitting of a county court, issued at the rising of the court, is regular, although the judge orally sentenced him to pay a fine, with imprisonment in default, and the sentence was entered in the registrar's book. Reg. v. Staffordshire County Court Judge or Jordan, 57 L. J., Q. B. 483; 36 W. R. 796—C. A.

Form of Order—Particulars should be stated.]—An order was made in an action in a county court upon one Harris, as acting manager of a certain partnership fund, to pay into court within fourteen days the sum of 65*l.* odd, and to deliver up certain documents. Harris did deliver up the documents, but failed to pay in the money, whereupon an order of committal was made out by the county court judge, on the ground that Harris in his fiduciary position had been guilty of contempt of court by neglecting to obey the previous order. The committal order merely recited the terms of the original order, and did not specify any particular breach:—Held, that it was immaterial whether the process of committal was by an order of committal or a writ of attachment, since the distinction no longer existed in chancery practice, according to Harvey v. Harvey (26 Ch. D. 644); but that the above order was bad for uncertainty, since it did not specify in what particular Harris was guilty of contempt, so as to enable him to purge such contempt. Reg. v. Lambeth County Court Judge, 36 W. R. 475.

Unqualified Person practising as Solicitor.]—The judge of a county court has no jurisdiction to commit for contempt a person who has acted as a solicitor in an action in his court without being duly qualified. Reg. v. Brompton County Court Judge, 62 L. J., Q. B. 604; [1893] 2 Q. B. 195; 5 R. 462; 68 L. T. 829; 41 W. R. 648; 57 J. P. 648.

8. EXEMPTIONS.

Solicitors.]—Before the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 101, the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, did not deprive attorneys of their privilege of suing in the superior courts, but by s. 18, no privilege shall be allowed to any attorney, solicitor or other person, to exempt him from the provisions of the act. Jones v. Brown, 2 Ex. 329; 5 D. & L. 716; 17 L. J., Ex. 163; 12 Jur. 380. S. P., Lewis v. Hance, 11 Q. B. 921; 5 D. & L. 641; 17 L. J., Q. B. 172; 12 Jur. 375.

The privilege of an attorney to be sued in the superior court of which he was an attorney, was taken away by the London Small Debts Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 71, s. 49). Jeffreys v. Beart, 5 D. & L. 646; 2 B. C. Rep. 296; 17 L. J., Q. B. 290; 12 Jur. 1003.

The Small Debts Extension Act, 1852, did not deprive an attorney suing for a bill of costs in a superior court of the costs of the action, where he recovered a sum exceeding 20*l*. Borradaile v. Nelson, 14 C. B. 655; 2 C. L. R. 740; 23 L. J., C. P. 159; 18 Jur. 431; 2 W. R. 470.

Working Tinners in Stannaries.]—By a charter of Edw. I, working tinners in the stannaries of Cornwall have the privilege of being sued only in the court of the vice-warden, in certain causes; and there is in it a grant that the vice-warden may hold pleas between the persons and in the causes specified. By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 67, no privilege, "except as hereinafter excepted," shall be allowed to any person to exempt him from the jurisdiction of the county court; and by s. 141, nothing in the act shall be construed to affect the court of the vice-warden; but this provision shall not be deemed to prevent the establishment of a county court within the stannaries, or to limit or affect the jurisdiction of such court:—Held, that the personal privilege of the working tinner to plead to the jurisdiction of the county court was taken away; and that as regards the parties to the suit, the county court had concurrent jurisdiction with the stannary court. Newton v. Nancarrow, 15 Q. B. 144; 19 L. J., Q. B. 314; 14 Jur. 911.

By the Stannaries Court (Abolition) Act, 1896, and an order of the Lord Chancellor thereunder, the jurisdiction and powers of the Stannaries Court has been transferred to the county courts of Cornwall.

C. REPLEVIN.

County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 133—136.

1. Generally.

Under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 119 and 121, a county court had jurisdiction to try an action of replevin for an alleged illegal distress for rent, although the title to the premises, in respect of which the rent distrained for was due, appeared to be in dispute; the steps necessary for the removal of the action under s. 121 not having been taken. Reg. v. Raines, 1 E. & B. 855; 22 L. J., Q. B. 223.

Before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108 and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126 after freehold pleaded a county court was ousted of its jurisdiction. Tenniswood v. Pattison, 3 C. B. 243; 15 L. J., C. P. 231; 10 Jur. 572.

But since those statutes a county court has jurisdiction to try an action of replevin though title is in question, subject to the power of removal by the defendant under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 67. Fordham v. Akers, 4 B. & S. 578; 33 L. J., Q. B. 67; 9 L. T. 478; 12 W. R. 201.

Certiorari.]—The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 90, which takes away the writ of certiorari in plaints for debt or damages, does not apply to plaints in replevin. Mungean v. Wheatley, 6 Ex. 88; 2 L. M. & P. 30; 20 L. J., Ex. 106; 15 Jur. 110.

Notice by Infant.]—Service of notice of replevy by an infant, and who is neither a bailiff nor a sheriff's officer, is illegal and void. Cuckson v. Winter, 2 M. & Ry. 313.

2. Bond or Security.

In what Cases.]—A rent-charge is within the meaning of the 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 23, upon a replevin. Short v. Hubbard, 2 Bing. 349; 10 Moore, 107; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 35. S. P., contra, Bulpit v. Clarke, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 56.

Growing crops may be considered in the nature of goods and chattels, under the 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 23, as they may be distrained in the same manner as articles of the latter description. Glover v. Coles, 7 Moore, 231; 1 Bing. 6.

Form and Mode of taking before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108.]—On the removal of an action of replevin from a county court, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 121, 127, the judge of the county court, instead of taking the bond to the other party to the suit, as directed by the latter of those sections, took it, through mistake, to himself, as a trustee for him. That party having succeeded in the court above:—Held, first that the bond, though irregular, was not void, but might be sued on by the judge as a voluntary bond. Stansfield v. Hellawell, 7 Ex. 373; 21 L. J., Ex. 148; 16 Jur. 317.

Held, secondly, that by declaring in the court above, the opposite party had waived the objection to the want of a regular bond. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the obligee of the bond was entitled to recover under it, as a trustee of the party, the amount of the costs incurred by him in the replevin suit. Ib.

A plaint in replevin for an excessive distress having been entered in a county court against a landlord and bailiff, they by leave of a judge, on an affidavit that the rent exceeded 20*l*., sued out a writ of certiorari, to remove the cause into the Exchequer. The writ was returnable on the day the plaint stood for trial, and the defendant's attorney then presented the writ to the judge, and offered on the part of the landlord to make the declaration required by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 121, stating that the bailiff was unable to make it. The landlord was too ill to attend, but he had executed a power of attorney to W., authorising him to sign and seal the bond, and generally to perform such acts about the conduct of the writ as he should think proper. The defendant's attorney tendered the bond, which was conditional, to prove in the superior court that the rent exceeded 20*l*., but the clerk of the court did not approve of the sureties in consequence of not having had notice of them in time to inquire into their sufficiency. The judge refused to allow the certiorari, and tried the cause on the ground of the want of time for the clerk of the court to inquire into the sufficiency of the sureties, but he did not fix the amount for which they were to be responsible:—Held, first, that there was no ground for quashing the certiorari. Mungean v. Wheatley, 6 Ex. 88; 2 L. M. & P. 30; 20 L. J., Ex. 106; 15 Jur. 110.

Held, secondly, that the judge was liable to an attachment for not receiving and returning the writ, although his disobedience was not wilful, but originated in an erroneous construction of an obscure statute. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the declaration required by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. s. 121, might be verbally made either by the attorney in the cause or the party, and that it was sufficient if made by one of several defendants; and that the person named in the power of attorney was authorised, not only to sign and seal the bond, but also to make the declaration. Ib.

Cattle Damage Feasant.]—It was sufficient if the sheriff took one pledge on a replevin for distraining cattle damage feasant. Hucker v. Gordon, 1 C. & M. 58; 3 Tyr. 107; 2 L. J., Ex. 47.

In City of London.]—One of the sheriffs of London, without his companion, may take and assign replevin bonds in his own name only. Thompson v. Farden, 1 Man. & G. 535; 8 D. P. C. 815; 1 Scott (N.R.) 275; 9 L. J., C. P. 284; 4 Jur. 600.

Inquiry into Sufficiency.]—A sheriff was not bound to warrant or inquire into the actual sufficiency of the pledges in a replevin bond; if they were apparently responsible it was sufficient. Hindle v. Blades, 5 Taunt. 225; 1 Marsh. 27. S. P., Sutton v. Waite, 8 Moore, 27.

In taking sureties the sheriff was to exercise a reasonable discretion in deciding upon their sufficiency; and in an action for taking insufficient sureties, it was for the jury to decide whether he had used that discretion or not. Jeffery v. Bastard, 4 A. & E. 823; 6 N. & M. 303; 2 H. & W. 60.

In proof of the insufficiency of the circumstances of them, it was good evidence to show that they were in debt, had been applied to for payment, and had promised payment, but did not pay. Gwyllim v. Scholey, 6 Esp. 100.

A fi. fa. executed in an action for use and occupation, brought by the now plaintiff against the plaintiff in replevin, to recover the rent which had been distrained for, was evidence in an action against the sheriff to show that such execution having been unproductive, the plaintiff had failed to obtain satisfaction of the rent after taking the bond, though the plaintiff in replevin was no party to the present action. Plumer v. Briscoe, 11 Q. B. 46; 17 L. J., Q. B. 158; 12 Jur. 351.

The plaintiff having brought actions against the sureties, without notice to the sheriff, which actions had proved unproductive, might recover the costs from the sheriff, their amount not exceeding, with the other damages proved, the penalty of the bond. Ib.

Proceedings against Sheriff for Insufficiency.]—The high and under sheriff and replevin clerk were all answerable to a defendant in replevin for the sufficiency of the pledges de retorno habendo. Richards v. Acton, 2 W. Bl. 1220.

If insufficient pledges de retorno habendo were taken by the officer of the court below in replevin, the remedy against him was by action, and the court would not order him to pay the costs recovered by the defendant in replevin. Tessyman v. Gildart, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 292.

The court refused an attachment against a sheriff, for neglecting to take a replevin bond, as the party injured might bring his action. Rex v. Lewis, 2 Term Rep. 617.

If a defendant in replevin elects to proceed on the 17 Car. 2, c. 7, he is not confined to his execution under that statute, but may sue the sureties on the replevin bond, or the sheriff in an action on the case, for negligence in losing the bond. Perreau v. Bevan, 8 D. & R. 72; 5 B. & C. 284; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 177.

A count stating that a sheriff, instead of taking a bond from the plaintiff in replevin, and two sufficient sureties, took a bond from the plaintiff in replevin and one surety, who was alleged to be insufficient, is bad, for not alleging that the plaintiff in replevin was insufficient. Hucker v. Gordon, 3 Tyr. 107; 1 C. & M. 58; 2 L. J., Ex. 47.

A declaration against a sheriff for taking insufficient pledges in replevin should show that a writ of retorno habendo had been issued, and elongata returned thereon. Ib.

A count against a sheriff for not restoring the goods was bad, for his duty, under 13 Edw. 1, West, 2nd, c. 2, was only to take pledges for that object. Ib.

In an action against a sheriff for taking insufficient pledges in a replevin bond, the court would not stay proceedings on an affidavit that the cause was referred without the consent of the sureties, that being matter of defence. Dale v. Gordon, 2 M. & Scott, 532.

—— Amount of Sheriff's Liability.]—In an action against a sheriff, for taking insufficient sureties in a replevin bond, the penalty of the bond was the limit of liability. Jeffery v. Bastard, 4 A. & E. 823; 6 N. & M. 303; 2 H. & W. 60.

He was liable to the amount of the penalty in the bond, viz. double the value of the goods distrained. Paul v. Goodlake, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 224; 1 Hodges, 370; 2 Scott, 363; 5 L. J., C. P. 10.

In an action against a sheriff for taking insufficient sureties in replevin, the assignee of the replevin bond could not recover, as special damage, beyond the penalty of the bond, the costs incurred by him in suing the sureties without effect, unless notice of his intention to sue them had been previously given to the sheriff. Baker v. Garratt, 10 Moore, 324; 3 Bing. 56; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 145.

The amount of rent for which the distress is made, plus the expenses of the distress, is a proper measure of damages in an action by the landlord against the sheriff for granting an insufficient replevin bond. Edmonds v. Challis, 6 D. & L. 581; 7 C. B. 413; 18 L. J., C. P. 164; 13 Jur. 389.

Forfeiture of Bond before the Statute.]—To an action on a replevin bond, conditioned for the defendant to prosecute his suit below with effect, and alleging a breach in his not prosecuting it according to the tenor and effect of the condition, but therein failing and making default, it is a good defence to plead that the defendant did appear at the next county court, and there prosecute his suit which he had there commenced against the now plaintiff, and which suit was still depending and undetermined; and such plea is not avoided by replying that the defendant did not prosecute his suit as in the plea mentioned, but wholly abandoned the same, and that the suit is not still depending, without showing how it was determined and ceased to depend Brackenbury v. Pell, 12 East, 585. See Ryder v. Edwards, 3 Scott (N.R.) 456; 3 Man. & G. 202; 10 L. J., C. P. 237; 5 Jur. 728.

The condition in a replevin bond, for prosecuting the suit with effect, means the prosecuting it to a not unsuccessful termination. Jackson v. Hanson, 8 M. & W. 477; 1 D. (N.S.) 69; 10 L. J., Ex. 396.

In a declaration in an action on a replevin bond, a breach that the defendant did not appear at the next county court, and then and there prosecute his suit with effect, was not well assigned, it being consistent therewith that the suit might have been begun at the next county court, and was still pending. Ib.

If judgment was given against a plaintiff in replevin for not prosecuting his suit with effect, his sureties on the bond were answerable to the avowant, notwithstanding he had afterwards proceeded on the 17 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 2, and obtained a judgment under a writ of inquiry, to recover the arrearages of rent and costs. Turnor v. Turner, 4 Moore, 606; 2 Br. & B. 107.

—— Delay.]—Allowing two years to elapse without proceedings was a breach of the condition of a replevin bond to prosecute the replevin without delay. Axford v. Perrett, 4 Bing. 586; 1 M. & P. 476; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 116.

In an action on a replevin bond conditioned to prosecute with effect and without delay, it is a sufficient breach of the condition that the plaintiff in replevin did not use due diligence in the prosecution of the suit. Harrison v. Warale, 2 N. & M. 703; 5 B. & Ad. 146.

It was no breach of a bond conditioned to appear at the next county court and "then and there to prosecute the suit with effect," that the plaint had been removed by a recordari facias loquelam; and that after the removal the suit abated by the death of the plaintiff in replevin. Morris v. Matthews, 2 Q. B. 293; 1 G. & D. 677; 11 L. J., Q. B. 57; 6 Jur. 600.

The condition in a replevin bond, to prosecute the suit without delay, may be broken by a delay which does not exceed the time allowed by the ordinary practice of the courts if the defendant in replevin is unduly prejudiced by such delay. Gent v. Cutts, 11 Q. B. 288; 17 L. J., Q. B. 55; 12 Jur. 113.

—— After 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95.]—A plaintiff giving a bond, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 121, to prosecute his suit with effect and without delay, and proving that the title to corporeal property was in question, was not entitled to obtain a certificate from the judge at nisi prius that he had done so, if he did not succeed in the cause; and not having done so, he had not prosecuted his suit with effect. Tunnicliffe v. Wilmot, 2 Car. & K. 626.

Where a party to a suit in replevin in a county court, whether plaintiff or defendant, removed the case, and gave, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 121, a bond conditioned for prosecuting the suit with effect, the bond is forfeited if the obligor does not succeed in the suit. Tummons v. Ogle, 6 El. & Bl. 571; 25 L. J., Q. B. 403; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 82; 4 W. R. 596.

Former Proceedings against Sureties.]—A replevin bond might be assigned to the avowant only, who might bring an action upon it without joining the party making cognizance. Archer v. Dudley, 1 Bos. & P. 381, n

And both avowant and person making cognizance might take an assignment of the bond and sue jointly upon it. Phillips v. Price, 3 M. & S. 180.

If a plaintiff in replevin was nonsuited for want of a plea in bar, the avowant might sue the sureties on the bond, and need not execute a writ of inquiry for his damages. Waterman v. Yea, 2 Wils. 41.

If a plaintiff in replevin was nonsuited the defendant was not bound to have his damages assessed by the jury, under 17 Car. 2, c. 7, or to take the earliest moment to prosecute his writ de retorno habendo. And he might again distrain the same goods for rent subsequently accrued, previously to executing his retorno habendo, without waiving his action against the sureties in the bond. Hefford v. Alger, 1 Taunt. 218.

Staying Proceedings against Surety.]—The court will not, in general, stay proceedings on a replevin bond, unless it clearly appears that the application is made on behalf of the sureties, and not of the principal. Warton v. Blicknell, 1 D. & L. 650; 12 M. & W. 558; 13 L. J., Ex. 112.

The court stayed proceedings, where the defendant had not been able to declare in the replevin suit, owing to the plaintiff's neglect to appear in that action. Evans v. Bowen, 7 D. & L. 320; 19 L. J., Q. B. 8.

A bill in equity will not lie by a tenant against his landlord to restrain proceedings upon a replevin bond on the ground of set-off against the rent distrained for. Pratt v. Keith, 3 N. R. 264; 33 L. J., Ch. 528; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 305; 10 L. T. 15; 12 W. R. 394.

Proceedings may be stayed on payment of the penalty and costs, though the plaintiff's costs in the replevin suit much exceed the penalty. Branscombe v. Scarbrough, 6 Q. B. 13; 13 L. J., Q. B. 247.

A judge may order such stay of proceedings. Ib.

The terms on which the court will stay proceedings on a replevin bond, at the instance of the sureties, are the payment of the appraised value of the goods if that is less than the amount of rent due and the costs of the application. Miers v. Lockwood, 9 D. P. C. 975.

An action on a replevin bond was stayed, on the application of the sureties, upon their paying into court the value of the goods distrained, together with the costs; such value to be ascertained by the prothonotary. Gingell v. Turnbull, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 881; 5 Scott, 153.

—— Execution by one Surety only.]—It is no plea that the bond purports to be entered into by two sureties, but is executed only by one. Austin v. Howard, 7 Taunt. 28: 2 Marsh. 352.

—— Nature of Proceedings.]—The court will not set aside proceedings on a replevin bond because the action is commenced before breach, for it may be pleaded. Anon., 5 Taunt. 776.

The court refused to set aside an execution in an action on a replevin bond, upon an objection to the proceedings which might have been taken before judgment. Short v. Hubbard, 2 Bing. 445 ; 9 Moore, 667 ; 10 Moore, 107.

—— Fraud.]—In an action by the assignee of a replevin bond against the surety, the declaration alleged that a return of the goods was adjudged, but that S., the plaintiff in replevin, did not make return. The defendant pleaded, first, that the judgment was obtained by the plaintiff by fraud, in collusion with S. ; and secondly, that before judgment obtained, all matters in difference between the plaintiff and S. were referred to arbitration, pending which the proceedings were stayed :—Held, that the first plea, not stating that the judgment was obtained for the purpose of defrauding the sureties, was no answer to the action ; and that the second plea was bad, since the reference was as much for the benefit of the sureties as of the principal, and therefore no prejudice could arise to them from the delay. Moore v. Bowmaker, 2 Marsh 392 ; 7 Taunt. 97 ; 4 Price, 223. But see S. C., 6 Taunt. 379 ; 3 Price, 214 ; 16 R. R. 628 ; S. C. nom Bowmaker v. Moore, 1 Daniel, 264 ; 21 R. R. 758.

—— Arbitration.]—It is no plea to an action against sureties that the replevin cause was referred to an arbitrator, and that he, without their knowledge, enlarged the time for making his award. Aldridge v. Harper, 10 Bing. 118 ; 3 M. & Scott, 519 ; 2 L. J., C. P. 274.

But where the plaintiff and the defendant referred the cause to an arbitrator, and agreed without the privity of the sureties that the bond should stand as a security for the performance of the award :—Held, that the sureties were discharged. Archer v. Hall or Hale, 4 Bing. 464 ; 1 M. & P. 285 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 79.

Where parties had agreed to be bound by an award and after the award was made treated it as invalid, it was ordered that the replevin bond should be delivered up. Leicester Waterworks Co. v. Cropstone Overseers, 44 L. J., M. C. 92 ; 32 L. T. 567.

Amount of Liability of Surety.] — The two sureties in a replevin bond are together liable only to the amount of the penalty in the bond, and the costs of the suit on the bond. Hefford v. Alger, 1 Taunt. 218.

The liabilities of sureties in a replevin bond is limited to the amount of rent in arrear at the time of the distress and costs ; and they are not liable for subsequent rent. Ward v. Henley, 1 Y. & J. 285 ; 30 R. R. 781.

The sureties are only liable for the value of the goods seized ; and if that value exceeds the amount of rent due, they will only be liable for the rent. Hunt v. Round, 2 D. P. C. 558.

If a sheriff took a replevin bond from one surety only, and he was sued thereon by the person making cognizance for having taken insufficient pledges, who recovered damages and costs in such action :—Held, that the sheriff having sued the surety on the bond for not having returned the goods, and suggested breaches according to the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, was not entitled to recover the costs incurred in defending the action against him as such sheriff ; and that as the surety was deprived of calling on his co-surety for contribution, he was only liable to a moiety of the damages awarded by the jury in the action against the sheriff. Austen v. Howard, 1 Moore, 68 ; 7 Taunt. 327.

Replevin bonds are not an exception to the rule, that, on a bond, the plaintiff cannot recover more than the penalty and costs of suit on the bond. Branscombe v. Scarbrough, 6 Q. B. 13; 13 L. J., Q. B. 247. S. P., Plumer v. Briscoe, 11 Q. B. 46 ; 17 L. J., Q. B. 158 ; 12 Jur. 351.

Refunding Overplus.]—Where more is levied under a replevin bond than the assignee of the sheriff was entitled to, the court would not grant a rule to make the assignee refund, though the overplus was alleged to be due to a second execution creditor of the same defendant. Bowser v. Lloyd, 9 D. P. C. 1029 ; 5 Jur. 826.

D. TRANSFER OF ACTIONS AND MATTERS FROM HIGH COURT.

1. Actions of Contract.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 65.

Section Retrospective.]—Section 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, applies to actions commenced before the act came into operation. Curtis v. Stovin, 58 L. J., Q. B. 174 ; 22 Q. B. D. 513 ; 60 L. T. 772 ; 37 W. R. 315.

The 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 24, applied to an action commenced before the passing of the act. Kimbray v. Draper, 9 B. & S. 80 ; 37 L. J., Q. B. 80 ; L. R. 3 Q. B. 160 ; 17 L. T. 340 ; 16 W. R. 539.

Claims outside Jurisdiction—Claim for Interest.]—A claim indorsed on a writ of "50*l.* and interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum from the date hereof until payment or judgment," is a claim exceeding 50*l.* within the meaning of the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 7, and the action cannot be sent to a county court under that section. Insley v. Jones, 48 L. J., Ex. 222 ; 4 Ex. D. 16 ; 27 W. R. 111.

—— Unliquidated Demand.]—There is no power under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, or the Judicature Act, 1875, to order an action for unliquidated damages to be tried in a county court, even where the writ is indorsed with a claim for a specified sum. Knight v. Abbott, 52 L. J., Q. B. 131 ; 10 Q. B. D. 11 ; 31 W. R. 505.

An action on contract in the high court cannot be sent for trial in a county court under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, if the claim indorsed on the writ, although for a specified sum, is for unliquidated damages. Bassett v. Tong, 63 L. J., Q. B. 653 ; [1894] 2 Q. B. 332 ; 10 R. 212 ; 71 L. T. 16 ; 42 W. R. 668.

Claim Reduced by Payment—Judgment under Order XIV. for Part.]—By the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 65, where in any action of contract brought in the high court the claim indorsed on the writ does not exceed 100*l.*, or where such claim, though it originally exceeded 100*l.*, is reduced by payment, an admitted set-off, or otherwise, to a sum not exceeding 100*l.*, an order may be made for the trial of the action in a county court. In an action of contract brought in the high court, in which the claim indorsed on the writ, though it originally exceeded 100*l.*, had been reduced to a sum not exceeding 100*l.* by a payment made by the defendant to the plaintiff in pursuance of a judgment under Ord. XIV. for part of the plaintiff's claim :—Held, that "payment" in s. 65 meant payment before action, and there was therefore no jurisdiction, under that section, to order the trial of the action in the county court. Hodgson v. Bell, 59 L. J., Q. B. 231; 24 Q. B. D. 525; 62 L. T. 481; 38 W. R. 325—C. A —— Payment after Writ.]—A plaintiff brought an action to recover 66*l.* 18*s.* The defendant obtained an order from the master that upon payment of 43*l.* 10*s.* to the plaintiff, the case should be sent down to the county court under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 7:—Held, that the order was wrong, as the words "reduced by payment to a sum not exceeding 50*l.*" meant a payment before action brought. Osborne v. Homburg, 45 L. J., Ex. 65; 1 Ex. D. 48; 33 L. T. 534; 24 W. R. 161.

Payment by the defendant of part of the plaintiff's claim pursuant to a judgment under Ord. XIV. r. 4, was a reduction of such claim within s. 26 of the County Courts Act, 1856, and when the claim was reduced by such payment to a sum not exceeding 50*l.*, the action might be remitted to a county court for trial. Gray v. Hopper, 57 L. J., Q. B. 505; 21 Q. B. D. 246; 59 L. T. 286; 36 W. R. 746—C. A.

An action for a liquidated demand exceeding 50*l.* cannot be remitted to the county court, though the amount of the claim has been reduced below that sum by payment made before service, but after the issuing of the writ of summons. Donohoe v. Donohoe, 16 L. R. Ir. 135.

When a claim indorsed on a writ of summons originally exceeds 50*l.*, and is reduced below that sum by a payment of money into court after action brought, a judge has no jurisdiction, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 7, to order that the action be tried in a county court. Foster v. Usherwood, 47 L. J., Ex. 30; 3 Ex. D. 1; 37 L. T. 389; 26 W. R. 94—C. A.

—— Claim reduced by admitted Set-off.]—By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 24, where in any action the debt or demand claimed consists of a balance not exceeding 50*l.*, after an admitted set-off of any debt or demand claimed or recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff, the county court shall have jurisdiction:—Held, that "admitted set-off" meant a set-off admitted by the plaintiff at the time of the action brought. Walesby v. Gouldstone, 1 H. & R. 625; 35 L. J., C. P. 302; L. R. 1 C. P. 567; 14 L. T. 662; 14 W. R. 899.

By County Courts Act, 1867, s. 7, where in any action of contract brought in any of the superior courts of common law the claim indorsed on the writ does not exceed 50*l.*, or "where such claim, though it originally exceeded 50*l.*, is reduced by payment, an admitted set-off, or otherwise, to a sum not exceeding 50*l.*," the defendant may apply to a judge at chambers, who may order the action to be tried in the county court:—Held, that the section applies where a payment or set-off reducing the claim below 50*l.* appears on the writ to be admitted by the plaintiff, although such payment or set-off is not also admitted by the defendant. Percival v. Pedley, 18 Q. B. D. 635; 35 W. R. 566.

—— Counter-claim.]—A plaintiff claimed for 22*l.* The defendant denied the claim in toto, and counter-claimed for 20*l.* The plaintiff admitted the counter-claim, and applied to a judge at chambers for the remittal of the cause to the county court under s. 26 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, as for a claim not exceeding 17*l.*, and obtained an order therefor:—Held, that the judge was right in remitting the action, inasmuch as the amount in dispute did not exceed 50*l.*, and that the fact that the defendant "counter-claimed" for the amount due to him did not prevent the amount being treated as a "set-off" against the plaintiff's claim under s. 18 of the Judicature Act, 1884. Lewis v. Lewis, 57 L. J., Q. B. 38; 20 Q. B. D. 56; 57 L. T. 715; 36 W. R. 63.

—— Counter-claim for Unliquidated Damages.]—The jurisdiction of the high court to remit an action to a county court under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, is not taken away by the fact that the defendant sets up a counter-claim, though the same be for unliquidated damages. Guilford v. Lambeth, 64 L. J., Q. B. 95; [1895] 1 Q. B. 92; 14 R. 86; 71 L. T. 738; 43 W. R. 97—C. A.

Where an action has been remitted under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, by consent of the defendant, to the county court for trial, and the defendant has appeared in the county court, a writ of prohibition will not be granted, even though there be a counter-claim for unliquidated damages. Mouflet v. Washburn, 54 L. T. 16.

An action, although for a sum not exceeding 50*l.*, could not be remitted under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, to the county court for trial if there was a counter-claim for unliquidated damages. Mackay v. Banister, 55 L. J., Q. B. 106; 16 Q. B. D. 174; 53 L. T. 567; 34 W. R. 121.

Discontinuance by Plaintiff—Jurisdiction to try Counter-claim.]—An action commenced in the high court cannot be sent down for trial in a county court under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, where the plaintiff has discontinued and only a counter-claim by the defendant remains to be tried. Reg. v. City of London Court Judge, 60 L. J., Q. B. 575; [1891] 2 Q. B. 71; 64 L. T. 869.

Death of one Defendant—Summons to proceed or Dismiss—Jurisdiction of High Court.]—An action was brought in the high court against several defendants whom it was sought to make severally liable on a contract. One of the defendants having died, the plaintiff obtained an order remitting the action to the county court under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888:—Held, that the high court had no jurisdiction to make an order under Ord. XVII. r. 8, that the plaintiff should proceed with the action against the deceased defendant's administrator, or that, in default, the action might be dismissed against him. Duke v. Davis, 62 L. J., Q. B. 549; [1893] 2 Q. B. 260; 4 R. 518; 69 L. T. 490; 41 W. R. 673—C. A.

Court to which Transfer made—Court in which Action might have been commenced.]—By s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, "where in any action of contract brought in the high court the claim indorsed on the writ does not exceed 100*l.*, . . . it shall be lawful for either party to the action at any time, if the whole or part of the demand of the plaintiff be contested, to apply to a judge of the high court at chambers to order such action to be tried in any court in which the action might have been commenced, or in any court convenient thereto; and on the hearing of the application the judge shall, unless there is good cause to the contrary, order such action to be tried accordingly." By s. 56, "All personal actions, where the debt, demand, or damage claimed is not more than 50*l.*, . . . may be commenced in the court." By s. 186 the word "court" or "county court" "shall mean and include any court held under this act, and also the City of London Court, and shall include and mean the judge or registrar of the court":—Held, that s. 65 gives power to order the trial to take place in any county court in which the action (if the amount claimed had been such that it could have been commenced in a county court) might have been commenced. Curtis v. Stovin, 58 L. J., Q. B. 174; 22 Q. B. D. 513; 60 L. T. 772; 37 W. R. 315.

By the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 74 an action may be commenced in any county court of the district in which the defendant, or one of the defendants, dwells or carries on business, or by leave of the judge or registrar, in the court of the district in which the cause of action wholly or in part arose. An action of contract was brought in the high court in which the claim did not exceed 100*l.* The defendant dwelt and carried on business in London, but a part of the cause of action arose in Yorkshire. On an application by the plaintiff for an order that the action may be tried in Yorkshire:—Held, that such an order could be rightly made under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, as the expression "the court in which the action might have commenced" included all courts in which the action might have commenced under s. 74 of the act, either as of right, or by leave of the judge or registrar. Burkill v. Thomas, 61 L. J., Q. B. 322; [1892] 1 Q. B. 312; 66 L. T. 150; 40 W. R. 250—C. A.

Making the Order—Jurisdiction of Master of High Court.]—By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 68, the judges are authorised to delegate to the masters such powers as are now exercised by the judges at chambers. The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 7, which was passed after the above statute, enables the judges at chambers to send certain causes down to the county courts:—Held, that the masters have power to send such causes for trial at the county courts. Walsh v. Smith, 30 L. T. 304; 22 W. R. 576. S. P. Palmer v. Roberts, 29 L. T. 403; 22 W. R. 577, n.

——Order before Issue joined.]—An order to try in the county court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, will not be rescinded, or the subsequent proceedings set aside, on the ground that it was made before issue joined, where the cause has been tried, and both parties have appeared at the trial without objecting to the validity of the order or to the case being heard. Tomkins v. Beard, 18 L. T. 363; 16 W. R. 720.

——Dismissal of Application—Power of Judge to impose Condition as to Costs.]—If an action is brought for more than 50*l.*, the order dismissing the defendant's application to have it tried in the county court cannot go on to provide that if only 50*l.* is recovered the plaintiff shall be entitled only to county court costs. Insley v. Jones, 48 L. J., Ex. 222; 4 Ex. D. 16; 27 W. R. 111.

Order binding on County Court Judge.]—When an order purporting to be made by a judge at chambers, and bearing the signature of the judge impressed by a stamp, in the usual way, transferring a cause from the superior court to the county court, is served on the judge of the county court, he is bound to obey the order, and he cannot inquire into the circumstances under which it was made. Blades v. Lawrence, 43 L. J., Q. B. 133; L. R. 9 Q. B. 374; 30 L. T. 378; 22 W. R. 643.

Practice after Action Remitted—Amendment of Proceedings.]—When an action is sent for trial in a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, the judge may, by virtue of s. 57, amend all defects and errors in the proceedings, such as variances and accidental mistakes, but cannot add a new plea, as that would be raising a different issue from that which the judge of the superior court in his discretion sent down to be tried. Thomas v. Purcell, 22 L. T. 474.

But, per Hannen, J., in such a case the judge of the county court may not only amend variances and accidental mistakes, but may exercise the same powers of amendment as a judge at nisi prius. Ib.

—— —— At the Trial.]—When a cause is ordered to be tried in a county court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, the judge of the county court has at the trial the same power of amending a misjoinder of defendants as a judge of a superior court sitting at nisi prius has under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 37. Rennison v. Walker, 41 L. J., Ex. 43; L. R. 7 Ex. 143; 26 L. T. 167; 20 W. R. 471.

The county court judge has no power to amend the issue. Bain v. Gregory, 14 L. T. 601; 14 W. R. 845.

—— Notice of Trial.]—There was no rule respecting the notice of trial necessary when a cause commenced in a superior court was ordered to be tried in a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26; it was enough that the notice was reasonable. Ipswich Gaslight Co. v. Norman, 7 B. & S. 847; 15 L. T. 290.

—— Right to try by Jury.]—When a cause was sent to a county court for trial, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, and no special terms were imposed by the order, the parties were entitled (the demand being of sufficient amount) to have it tried by a jury; and this notwithstanding a second trial was directed in a case where the first trial was by the judge, without a jury. Ford v. Taylor, 47 L. J., C. P. 116; 3 C. P. D. 21; 37 L. T. 431; 26 W. R. 170. See also post, col. 943.

—— Judgment—No Motion Necessary.]—Ords. XXXVI. and XL. do not repeal the enactment in 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, by which, where a cause is ordered to be tried in a county court, the registrar is to certify the result of the trial to the superior court, and judgment is to be signed according to such certificate; and no motion for judgment is necessary. Scutt v. Freeman, 46 L. J., Q. B. 173; 2 Q. B. D. 177; 35 L. T. 939; 25 W. R. 251.

—— Judgment, how Signed.]—Where an action brought in the high court is ordered, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, to be tried in a county court, and after the hearing the registrar of the county court certifies the result to the master's office, judgment may be signed in accordance with such certificate without taking out a summons for an order to sign judgment. Scutt v. Freeman (35 L. T. 989) approved. Johnson v. Wilson, 46 L. T. 647—C. A.

—— Application for New Trial.]—Where a cause, commenced in a superior court, was tried in a county court, under a judge's order, in pursuance of 19 & 20 Vict. 108, s. 26, an application for a new trial was made to the superior court, in whose jurisdiction the cause remained. Balmforth v. Pledge, 6 B. & S. 425; 35 L. J., Q. B. 169; L. R. 1 Q. B. 427; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 644; 14 L. T. 361.

—— Jurisdiction of High Court after Transfer —Costs.]—After an action has been transferred from the high court to a county court under section 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the high court has no further original jurisdiction in it, and a judge of that court cannot make any order as to the taxation of the costs of the action. In such an action the rules as to costs contained in section 116 of the act must be applied by the judge of the county court to which it has been transferred, and not by a judge of the high court, who can only exercise jurisdiction under that section in an action remaining in the high court and tried there. Harris v. Judge, 61 L. J., Q. B. 577; [1892] 2 Q. B. 565; 67 L. T. 19; 41 W. R. 9—C. A.

—— —— Appeal.]—Where an action brought in the superior court was, after issue joined, remitted for trial to a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, the action still remained in the superior court, and an appeal to the court of appeal would lie without special leave from the refusal of a divisional court to grant a new trial. Babbage v. Coulbourn, 52 L. J., Q. B. 50; 46 L. T. 515. But see Bowles v. Drake and Moody v. Steward, infra, col. 932.

—— —— Further Direction.] — When an action was commenced in the high court, remitted for trial to a county court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, the division of the high court in which it was instituted still retained it for purposes of further directions. Swan v. Inglis, 36 L. T. 114.

—— Costs — Taxation — Scale — Balance of Claim only remitted.]—Where in an action brought in the high court a portion of the amount is recovered and the action is remitted to the county court under the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 65, for trial as to the balance, in deciding the scale on which the costs in the county court should be taxed, account must be taken of the whole amount recovered in the action. Keeble v. Bennett, 63 L. J., Q. B. 694; [1894] 2 Q. B. 329; 10 R. 290; 71 L. T. 247; 42 W. R. 539.

—— Costs in High Court before Transfer.]—A plaintiff brought an action of contract in the high court which could have been commenced in a county court. The action was transferred to a county court under the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 65, and the plaintiff recovered less than 20*l.*: —Held that the County Courts Act, 1888, s. 116, which provides that if in an action on contract brought in the high court which could have been commenced in a county court, the plaintiff recovers a sum less than 20*l.*, he shall not be entitled to any costs of the action, applies to all actions brought in the high court which might have been commenced in the county court, and to all costs of such actions, and not only to so much of them, as in a case ordered to be tried in the county court have been incurred before the order, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to any costs of the action. Armitage v. Fison (67 L. T. 415) overruled. White v. Cohen, 62 L. J., Q. B. 274; [1893] 1 Q. B. 580; 4 R. 352; 68 L. T. 305; 41 W. R. 396.

The certificate as to costs in s. 116 of the County Courts Act, 1888, only applies to actions tried in the high court, and a county court judge has no power to grant the certificate in an action transferred under s. 65. Ib.

The provisions of section 118 of the County Courts Act, 1888, as to taxation, do not apply to costs incurred in the high court up to the date of an order remitting to the county court an action commenced in the high court. Boydell v. Millar (60 L. J., Q. B. 251) approved. Cubison v. Mayo, 65 L. J., Q. B. 267; [1896] 1 Q. B. 246; 74 L. T. 65; 44 W. R. 473; 60 J. P. 212—C. A.

A judge ordered under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, that a trial in an action brought in the Queen's Bench should be had in a county court. The action having been tried, the costs were taxed by the master according to the scale of the superior courts, so far as regarded the proceedings in the Queen's Bench; but, so far as regarded the proceedings in the county court, according to the county court scale:—Held, that he was justified in so far adopting the county court scale as his guide. Wheatcroft v. Foster, El., Bl. & El. 737; 27 L. J., Q. B. 277; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 896; 6 W. R. 651.

2. Actions of Tort.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 66.

What Actions—Trover.]—An action of trover may be remitted under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, although it is not specially mentioned. Clapham v. Oliver, 30 L. T. 365; 22 W. R. 655.

—— Action for Slander.]—Notwithstanding the provisions of s. 67 of the Judicature Act, 1873, which applies the provisions of s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867, to "all actions in the High Court in which any relief is sought which can be given in a county court," there is still jurisdiction, under s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867, to remit an action for slander to a county court for trial. Stokes v. Stokes, 56 L. J., Q. B. 494; 19 Q. B. D. 419; 36 W. R. 28—C. A. Affirming 56 L. T. 712.

—— Counter-claim where Action stayed.]—A counter-claim is not an "action" within s. 66 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and therefore there is no jurisdiction to remit a counter-claim for trial to the county court where the original action has been stayed, and the counter-claim is the only matter remaining to be tried. Delobbel Flipo v. Varty, 62 L. J., Q. B. 398; [1893] 1 Q. B. 663; 5 R. 347; 68 L. T. 797; 42 W. R. 48.

—— Security for Costs—"Visible Means."]—By the term "visible means" as used in s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867, is intended such means as could be fairly ascertained by a reasonable person in the position of the defendant. On the filing of the affidavit the jurisdiction of the judge arises, and he is to satisfy himself not merely whether the plaintiff has any "visible means," but whether he has any means at all of paying the costs, and the judge has a judicial discretion whether he will make the order. On an application under the above section, it appeared from the affidavit that the defendant was in possession of certain property of the plaintiff under a claim for rent for 5,929*l.*; that the plaintiff had no property upon which an execution under a judgment for 2,404*l.* could be levied; that his furniture had been sold under an execution, and that he had assigned his property for the benefit of his creditors. It also appeared that the plaintiff was being employed as a colliery manager at a weekly wage of 4*l.*, the employment being determinable upon three months' notice, or on payment of three months' salary in lieu of notice, or without notice in the event of wilful misconduct:—Held, that whether or not the salary could be attached, the plaintiff had no substantial means of paying the costs of the action in the event of the verdict being for the defendant, and that an order was rightly made under s. 10. Counsel v. Garvie, (Ir. R. 5 C. L. 74) considered. Lea v. Parker, 54 L. J., Q. B. 38; 13 Q. B. D. 835; 33 W. R. 101—C. A.

Possession of movable chattels, the full value of which would merely suffice to cover the probable amount of the defendant's costs, does not constitute "visible means" within the meaning of s. 6 of the Common Law Procedure (Amendment) Act (Ireland), 1870 (equivalent to s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867), so as to prevent the action from being remitted to the county court. Watson v. McCann, 6 L. R. Ir. 21.

The plaintiff who was manager of his father's business of cabinet maker at a salary of 120*l.* per annum was held not to have visible means within s. 6 of the Common Law Procedure Amendment Act, 1870. Torkington v. Connor, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 340.

An affidavit by a defendant merely stating that he has been informed and believes that the plaintiff has no visible means, is defective for not showing the source whence he has derived his information; but that defect may be cured by the affidavit in reply of the plaintiff attempting to show he has visible means and failing to do so. Mohun v. Creedon, 2 L. R. Ir. 115.

Cause of Action fit to be Prosecuted.]—Section 66 of the County Courts Act, 1888, provides that in certain cases actions of tort may be remitted to the county court for trial, unless the plaintiff satisfies the judge of the high court that he has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in the high court. It is not, however, necessary for the plaintiff to show that he has a cause of action which must succeed, but rather that he must satisfy the judge that he has a cause of action of superior fitness to be tried in the high court. Farrer v. Lowe, 53 J. P. 183.

Before the Judicature Acts a judge sitting at chambers for all the courts, although not a judge of the particular court in which the action was brought, had jurisdiction to make an order for trial of an action in the county court. But the order made by the judge was open to review by the court; and his decision was not final as to whether the plaintiff had a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in the superior court. Owens v. Woosman, 9 B. & S. 243; 37 L. J., Q. B. 159; L. R. 3 Q. B. 469; 18 L. T. 357; 16 W. R. 932.

Discretion as to Remitting — Appeal.] — Making the order remitting an action to the county court under s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867, is a question for the discretion of the master, and the court will not, unless strong cause is shown for so doing, interfere with the exercise of that discretion. Clapham v. Olirer, 30 L. T. 365; 22 W. R. 655.

—— Power to make Order without Affidavit.]—The high court has no jurisdiction to remit an action of tort to the county court under s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867, without an affidavit under such section as to the plaintiff's want of means. Reg. v. Marylebone County Court Judge, 30 L. T. 97.

—— Judge at Chambers requiring Affidavits in Answer.]—A judge at chambers may properly decline to remit an action to a county court under s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867, without requiring an affidavit from the plaintiff in answer to the defendant's affidavit under that section. Cowell v. London General Omnibus Co., 27 W. R. 381.

—— Appearance entered by one Defendant—Motion to remit by another Defendant.]—A writ was issued against A, as sole defendant in an action of tort, and served upon him; and an appearance was entered by A., requiring a statement of claim. Subsequently the plaintiff obtained leave to amend the writ by adding B. as a co-defendant in the action, and the writ, so amended, was served upon B. B., within the prescribed period (eight days), moved that in default of the plaintiff giving security for costs, the action should be remitted to the civil bill court in which the defendants were described in the writ as residing, grounding the motion on the usual affidavit, that the plaintiff had no visible means:—Held, that in default of the plaintiff giving security for costs the action should be remitted; but that such security should be given for the costs of the defendant B. only. Fagan v. Monks, 20 L. R., Ir. 1—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Superior Court over Action until Order Lodged in County Court.]—An order was made under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 10, remitting an action to the county court unless security was given for the costs within a week. The plaintiff did not give security within the time limited, but after that time applied for and obtained an order extending the time for giving security:—Held, that until the plaintiff had lodged the writ and order remitting the action with the registrar of the county court in accordance with the section, the action remained in the superior court, and consequently there was jurisdiction to make the order extending the time for giving security. Welply v. Buhl, 47 L. J., Q. B. 151; 3 Q. B. D. 253; 38 L. T. 115; 26 W. R. 300—C. A.

Where the time limited by an order made under s. 66 of the County Courts Act, 1888, remitting an action commenced in the high court for trial to a county court, has expired, the action nevertheless remains in the high court until the plaintiff has lodged the original writ and such order with the registrar of the county court; and until that has been done a master of the high court has jurisdiction on the application of the plaintiff to make an order for further and better answers to interrogatories. Welply v. Buhl (47 L J., Q. B. 151) followed. D'Errico v. Samuel, 65 L. J., Q. B. 197; [1896] 1 Q. B. 163; 73 L. T. 680; 44 W. R. 356—C. A.

Delay in Lodging Writ and Order.]—Where an action is remitted to the county court under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, and the plaintiff does not lodge the original writ and the order with the registrar of the county court, the proper course for the defendant to pursue is to apply by summons at chambers to compel the plaintiff either to proceed with the action or abandon it. The county court judge cannot refuse to hear the action on the ground that there has been delay in lodging the writ and order with the registrar. Driscol v. King, 49 L. T. 599; 32 W. R. 370.

Appeal from Order.]—Upon an order made by a judge at chambers under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, directing a cause to be tried in a county court in default of security being given for the defendant's costs, or of satisfying the judge that the plaintiff has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in the superior court, an appeal lies to the superior court. But such court, although entertaining an opinion that the cause is one which might be fit to be tried in the superior court, will not interfere with the decision of the judge at chambers unless it is of opinion that such decision is obviously wrong. Jennings v. London General Omnibus Co., 30 L. T. 266.

Before the court will review the discretion of a judge in remitting an action to the county court, on the plaintiff failing to give security for costs, it must be very clearly shown that the judge wrongly exercised such discretion. Roppon v. Joyce, 31 L. T. 475.

An action for seduction was remitted to the county court by a judge at chambers, under the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, by which the judge has power to remit such action to the county court on the application of the defendant, unless the plaintiff shall give security for costs, or "satisfy the judge that he has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in a superior court." The plaintiff deposed that he was advised that it was expedient, as a matter of law, that the action should be tried in a superior court. The court was equally divided in opinion as to whether the discretion of the judge had been rightly exercised, but refused a rule to review it. Ib.

—— Affidavits to be Produced.]—A cause had been, by order, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, remitted to the county court upon an affidavit of the defendant, stating the nature of the action, and that the plaintiff had no visible means of paying the costs. The plaintiff, in appealing against the order, did not bring the affidavit before the court:—Held, that the rule of practice being that all relevant affidavits used at chambers must be referred to on appeal to the court, this was a relevant affidavit, because it disclosed the nature of the cause of action. Holmes v. Mountstephen, L. R. 10 C. P. 474; 33 L. T. 351.

Practice after Action Remitted—Pleadings to be Regarded.]—When an action is remitted from the high court, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, for trial, and the writ and statement of claim, if any, are lodged in the county court, together with particulars given under the County Court Rules, 1875, Ord. XX. r. 1, the county court judge ought not to restrict the plaintiff to proof of the claim as indorsed on the writ or stated in the particulars, but should take cognizance of the statement of claim, and, if asked to do so, receive evidence in support of the allegations therein. Johnson v. Palmer, 4 C. P. D. 258; 27 W. R. 941.

—— Power of County Court Judge to add Defendant.]—Where an action has been remitted for trial in the county court under section 10 of the County Courts Acts, 1867, the county court judge has no power to add a defendant without his consent. Mullenciesen v. Coulson, 57 L. J., Q. B. 334; 20 Q. B. D. 667; 36 W. R. 524.

—— Power to Stay Proceedings.]—Where an action, commenced in the high court, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, the county court judge has power to make an order staying the proceedings until the plaintiff has paid the costs of a previous action brought by him in the high court against the same defendant. Reg. v. Bayley, 51 L J., Q. B. 244; 8 Q. B. D. 411; 30 W. R. 522.

—— Appeal.]—Where a case was remitted for trial before a county court under the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142) s. 10, it became a county court cause, and the determination of a divisional court on appeal from the decision of the county court judge was within s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore final, unless special leave to appeal was given. Bowles v. Drake, 51 L. J., Q. B. 66; 8 Q. B. D. 325; 45 L. T. 576; 30 W. R. 333.

——. Costs.]—The judge of a county court, to which an action of slander has been referred from a superior court, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10, has jurisdiction over the costs of suit, both before as well as after such order. The last words of the section indicate the scale on which such costs are to be allowed, and do not mean that the superior court is to exercise any jurisdiction over them. Moody v. Steward, 40 L. J., Ex. 25; L. R. 6 Ex. 35; 23 L. T. 465; 19 W. R. 161.

—— Costs of Appeal to Court of Appeal after Order to Remit—Taxation.]—After an order has been made remitting an action of tort to the county court, under s. 66 of the County Courts Act, 1888, but before the writ and order were lodged with the registrar, an interlocutory appeal was taken by the plaintiff to the Court of Appeal, and was allowed with costs. The action was subsequently tried in the county court, and the plaintiff succeeded:—Held, that the provisions of s. 66 of the County Courts Act, 1888, did not apply to the costs in the Court of Appeal, and that those costs must be taxed by the taxing officer of the high court, and not by the registrar of the county court. D'Errico v. Samuel, 75 L. T. 59—C. A.

3. Equity Matters from Chancery Division.

County Courts Act, 1888, s. 69.

Special Reason Necessary.]—Although the subject-matter of a suit is within the jurisdiction of the county court, the court, in the absence of any special reason, will not order the suit to be transferred to the county court. Picard v. Hine, 18 L. T. 705.

Obedience to previous Orders of Court required.]—Where a party to a suit in the court of chancery has not obeyed an order of that court, although the subject-matter may be under 500*l*., the judge to whose court the suit is attached will not order a transfer of it to the county court under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 8. Maudesley v. Maudesley, 18 L. T. 51.

Jurisdiction of High Court until Transfer completed.]—Where an order was made transferring an action commenced in the chancery division to a county court, and the plaintiff failed to enter the action in the county court:—Held, on motion by the defendant, that the superior court had jurisdiction to vary the order of transfer by directing the plaintiff within one week from service of this order to lodge the necessary documents with the registrar of the county court to complete the transfer, the costs to be in the discretion of the county court. David v. Howe, 53 L. J., Ch. 1053; 27 Ch. D. 533; 50 L. T. 753; 32 W. R. 844.

Redemption Suit against Registrar of County Court—Transfer to Court of adjoining District.]—When a redemption suit is commenced in the court of chancery against the registrar of the county court, within the jurisdiction of which the property dealt with by the suit lies, an order may properly be made under 30 & 31 Vict., c. 142, s. 8, to transfer the suit to the county court of the adjoining district, as the word action in 19 & 20 Vict., c. 108, s. 21, includes suit. Lunford v. Gudgeon, 40 L. J., Ch. 514; L. R. 6 Ch. 359; 19 W. R. 577.

Winding-up.]—See Reg. v. East Stonehouse County Court Judge, 65 L. T. 730.

E. PRACTICE.

1. PARTIES.

The Crown.]—The prerogative of the crown to remove into the court of exchequer a cause in another court touching the crown revenues is not affected by the 9 & 10 Vict., c. 95. Mountjoy v. Wood, 1 H. & N. 58; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 452.

Corporations and Companies.]—A corporation may be sued in a county court. Taylor v. Crowland Gas and Coke Co., 11 Ex. 1; 3 C. L. R. 865; 24 L. J., Ex. 233; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 358; 3 W. R. 368.

In such an action the corporation may be deemed to dwell at the place where it carries on business. Ib. S. P., Adams v. G. W. Ry., 6 H. & N. 404; 30 L. J. Ex. 124; 3 L. T. 631; 9 W. R. 254.

Paupers.]—A judge of a county court has power to allow parties to sue in formâ pauperis. Chinn v. Bullen, 8 C. B. 447; 7 D. & L. 297; 19 L. J., C. P. 42; 14 Jur. 201.

Joinder of Plaintiffs—Action under Employers' Liability Act, 1880.]—Ord. III, r. 1 of the County Court Rules, 1889, does not authorise the joinder of the legal personal representatives of persons, whose deaths are alleged to have resulted from the same act of negligence, as plaintiffs in an action to recover compensation, the cause of action in respect of the death of each person being separate. Carter v. Rigby, 65 L. J., Q. B. 537; [1896] 2 Q. B. 113; 74 L. T. 744; 44 W. R. 566; 60 J. P. 581—C. A.

Joinder of Husband as Plaintiff]—The judge of the sheriff's court in London has no power to amend a summons issued upon a judgment recovered in a plaint by a single woman, by adding the name of a man whom she had married subsequently to obtaining the judgment. Reg. v. Pearce, 2 B. & S. 531; 32 L. J., M. C. 75; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 647; 7 L. T. 597; 11 W. R. 235; 9 Cox, C. C. 258.

Non-joinder of Wife as Plaintiff.]—A married woman advanced 250*l*. upon the security of a deposit of title-deeds of real estate. Her husband died, and she married a second time. Shortly after the second marriage her husband borrowed money upon a deposit of the deeds. Subsequently she separated from her husband, and a deed was then executed, whereby he released to his wife all his interest in her real and personal estate. The husband became bankrupt, and his assignee, having paid off the second mortgage, obtained possession of the deeds. Upon the death of the first mortgagee the bankrupt's assignee filed a plaint in the county court, making the mortgagee's executors the only defendants, and claiming to be paid the 250*l*., or in default that the property might be sold. The judge, overruling an objection taken that the wife was a necessary party, made the order prayed:—Held, that she was a necessary party and that the case must stand over in the county court, with liberty to the plaintiff to amend his plaint by adding parties. Robinson v. O'Kell, 22 L. T. 399.

Change of Parties—Assignee of Judgment Debt—Judgment Summons.]—By Ord. XXV. r. 9, of the County Court Rules of 1889, where any change has taken place after judgment by death or otherwise in the parties entitled to take proceedings to enforce the judgment, the party alleging himself to be entitled to execution must apply to the judge or registrar for leave to issue execution accordingly. An assignee of a judgment debt took out a judgment summons under s. 5 of the Debtors' Act, 1869, in the name of the judgment creditor, without having previously obtained leave under the above rule:—Held, that the assignee of the judgment having failed to comply with Ord. XXV, r. 9, the county court judge had no jurisdiction to hear the summons. East End Building Society v. Slack, 60 L. J., Q. B. 359.

2. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE TRIAL.

a. Notice of Action.

Sufficiency of Notice of Action.]—A lessee of a tithe commutation rent-charge having distrained on an occupier, the occupier gave notice of action as under 5 & 6 Vict., c. 54, s. 19, "for entering upon my premises at," &c., "on the 11th day of March instant, and then and there seizing two heifers belonging to me, and continuing on my premises for several days; and also for that you, against my will and consent, on the 17th day of March instant, did at," &c.,

"then and there seize, sell and drive away and remove from my premises at," &c., "aforesaid, three heifers belonging to me." The action was brought in a county court, and the following particulars of demand were stated:—1. For unlawfully entering the plaintiff's premises, and continuing thereon, seizing and distraining three cattle of the plaintiff, under colour of a distress. 2. For unlawfully selling three other cattle of the plaintiff's, not distrained. And, 4. For continuing on the plaintiff's premises, and proceeding to sell the plaintiff's cattle, after an abandonment of distress:—Held, that evidence might be given of the fourth particular; for that, if any notice was necessary of the cause of action referred to in the fourth particular, the notice given comprehended such cause. Howard v. Remer, 2 El. & Bl. 915; 23 L. J., Q. B. 60; 2 W. R. 55.

b. Plaint and Summons.

Causes of Action.]—Separate plaints may be issued in the county court for two or more causes of action, which would require to be stated in distinct counts, though they might be included in the same declaration. Wickham v. Lee, 12 Q. B. 521; 18 L. J., Q. B. 21; 12 Jur. 628.

In Action transferred from High Court by Consent.]—When an action has been commenced in a superior court, and afterwards it has been agreed between the parties that it shall be brought into the county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 23, no jurisdiction is given to the county court judge to try such action in the county court without the usual preliminaries, but the action must be commenced again in the county court by summons and plaint. Pearce v. Winkworth, 28 L. T. 710.

Executors and Administrators.]—After judgment of assets quando acciderint on a plea of plene administravit in a county court, the proper method of proceeding for assets received by the defendant since plea pleaded is not by a suggestion of a devastavit, but by a summons, stating the judgment quando, and suggesting assets after plea pleaded. Ellis v. Watt, 7 D. & L. 299; 8 C. B. 614; 19 L. J., C. P. 113.

Default Summons—Assignee of Debt.]—Semble, per Cave, J., that the summary procedure by default summons in the county court is not available to the assignee of a debt. Reg. v. Pontypool County Court Judge, 63 L. J., Q. B. 702; 10 R. 356; 71 L. T. 17.

Issue of Summons by Leave.]—Before county court r. 42 (1856), a summons issued by leave of the court need not have stated on the face of it that it was so issued. Waters v. Handley, 6 D. & L. 88.

—— Form of Affidavit.]—In applying for leave to issue a default summons in a county court for service out of the jurisdiction to recover a claim exceeding 5*l.* the affidavit in support of the application need not contain a statement that the defendant does not follow any of the occupations specified in Ord. V. r. 10 of the County Court Rules, 1889. Gordon v. Evans, 63 L. J., Q. B. 329; [1894] 1 Q. B. 248; 9 R. 129; 70 L. T. 70; 42 W. R. 193—C. A.

Service of Summons—Proof of where Notice to Defend.]—It is not necessary for a plaintiff to prove personal service on a defendant of a summons to obtain judgment by default in schedule B, 30 & 31 Vict., c. 142, on the hearing of an action brought in a county court for goods sold in the way of his trade, when the defendant has given notice to defend. Davis v. Pearce, L. R. 5 C. P. 435; 22 L. T. 441; 18 W. R. 736.

—— Sufficiency.]—The proof of the service of a summons is entirely a question for the discretion of the judge of the county court; and where such discretion has been exercised, the court will not interfere. Zohrab v. Smith, 2 B. C. Rep. 231; 5 D. & L. 635; 17 L. J., Q. B. 174; 12 Jur. 603. S. P., Waters v. Handley, 6 D. & L. 88.

It is the cause of action, and not the sufficiency of the service of the summons, which gives a county court its jurisdiction to hear a given cause. Ib.

In a suit in a county court the summons and judgment order were served at a wrong place, so that the defendant knew nothing of the cause until his goods were taken in execution; but the judgment on which the execution proceeded was given on proof made to the satisfaction of the judge that the summons had been duly served. The county court having refused to set aside the proceedings unless the defendant would undertake to appear and defend the cause on the merits, and also to bring no action against the plaintiff or any officer of the court with reference to any proceedings in the cause:—Held, that no prohibition lay, as the county court had followed the provisions of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 80. Robinson v. Lenaghan, 2 Ex. 333; 5 D. & L. 713; 17 L. J., Ex. 174; 12 Jur. 399.

—— Action of Ejectment—Delivery to Bailiff "Forty clear Days at least before Return Day"—Power to Waive.]—In an action of ejectment properly brought in the county court, the summons must be delivered to the bailiff forty clear days at least before the return-day, under Ord. VIII. r. 7 of the County Court Rules, 1875, and the judge of the county court has no power to waive this condition even where, though the bailiff has not received the summons forty days, he has yet served it on the defendant thirty-five days before the return-day as required by the latter part of the same rule. If under such circumstances the judge proceeds to hear the case, the defendant not consenting, the high court, on appeal by the defendant, will set aside the judgment. Semble, such a case is not matter of prohibition. Barker v. Palmer, 8 Q. B. D. 9; 45 L. T. 480; 30 W. R. 59.

—— Waiver.]—A defendant who resided out of the jurisdiction of the county court was served with a summons on the part of the plaintiff, dated the 3rd of January, 1850, calling on him to appear before that court on the 25th January, 1850. The defendant was served at the same time with an order of the judge at that court, dated the 30th October, 1847, giving the plaintiff leave to issue a summons: it did not appear whether any plaint had been issued before the making of that order. On the 19th January the defendant left a notice with the clerk, stating that he intended to rely on the Statute of Limitations as a bar to the action. The court refused an application of the defendant for a prohibition to prevent the judge from proceeding in the suit, because, assuming it to be doubtful whether the order was valid, and authorised the summoning the defendant, the latter, by taking the step of serving the notice, relying on the Statute of Limitations, had waived the right of examining into the regularity of the process by which he had been summoned to appear. Jones v. James, 1 L. M. & P. 65 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 257.

Action in rem—Warrant of Arrest addressed to High Bailiff—Executed by Clerk—Effect of.]—A warrant of arrest issued in an action in rem, instituted for collision, in the City of London Court, and directed to the high bailiff of the said court and others the bailiffs thereof, is not duly executed if executed by a clerk in the bailiff's office who is not a bailiff, and hence the master of the vessel so arrested is not guilty of contempt of court in removing her. The Palomares, 52 L. T. 57 ; 5 Asp. M. C. 343.

Semble, if the warrant had been addressed to the clerk as an officer of the court, it might, under the provisions of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, s. 23, have been duly served by him. Ib.

Construction and Sufficiency of Summons.]—The summons and particulars of a plaintiff's demand should not be construed too strictly, but should have a reasonable construction. Stanclife v. Clarke, 7 Ex. 439 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 129 ; 16 Jur. 430.

What should be considered in such case is, whether an inaccuracy in them could have misled the defendant as to the nature of the plaintiff's demand. Ib.

An erroneous reference to the statute, under which the action has been brought, does not operate as a valid objection to the proceedings ; it being the duty of the court to take notice of the proper statute. Thorn v. Chinnock, 1 Man. & G. 216 ; 1 Sc. (N.R.) 138 ; 8 Dowl. P. C. 585 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 263.

A summons, stating that the defendant was summoned to answer a claim of the plaintiff to recover 40*l.* 10*s.*, and the particulars being :—"To sinking a shaft at," &c. ; "Cr.—Cash on account, —l." &c., making the balance the same as the sum claimed, shows a sufficient ground of action, without stating that the shaft was sunk for the defendant, or further disclosing how he was sought to be made liable for it. Wedlake v. Sargent, 15 Jur. 1134.

A summons in the following terms :—"For that your wife assaulted the wife of the plaintiff, and maliciously caused the plaintiff to be wrongfully charged with stealing, and to be detained in custody, whereby the plaintiff was put to expenses in producing witnesses and other persons in clearing the plaintiff's wife from the malicious assault and charge." Particulars were annexed in terms similar to the summons, claiming 10*l.* for damages :—Held, that this was an action for a malicious prosecution, and the county court had no jurisdiction. Jones v. Currey, 2 L., M. & P. 474 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 438 ; 15 Jur. 610.

Amendment of.]—A county court judge has power at the trial to amend the particulars filed with the plaint. Doughty v. Firbank, 48 L. T. 531, n.

But where a county court judge, at the hearing of a plaint, of his own accord, and against the consent of the defendant, amended the particulars, by reducing the claim to 50*l.*, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for that amount, the court granted a prohibition. Hill, In re, 10 Ex. 726.

A plaintiff entered two plaints in a county court of which he was bailiff. By the particulars in one plaint he claimed 5*l.* for an assault, and by the particulars in the other he claimed 5*l.* for a fine in respect of the same assault upon him as bailiff. A certiorari having issued to remove these plaints, on the ground that they consisted of a claim arising out of the same transaction, and exceeding 5*l.*, and which had been split into two :—Held, that the latter plaint was only an informal mode of claiming the fine imposed by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 114, for assaulting an officer in the execution of his duty ; and therefore the claim did not, in fact, exceed 5*l.*, and consequently that the certiorari was improperly issued. Box v. Green, 9 Ex. 503 ; 2 C. L. R. 528 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 219.

—— Matter beyond Jurisdiction.]—If the particulars of a plaintiff's claim, served on a defendant with the summons, do not disclose a matter of complaint within the jurisdiction of the county court, the judge cannot amend the particulars so as to turn the complaint into one over which he has cognizance, and he has no power to hear and decide on the case. Hopper v. Warburton, 32 L. J., Q. B. 104 ; 7 L. T. 722 ; 11 W. R. 384.

Therefore particulars attached to a county court summons as follows : "To damages sustained by me by reason of your making a false charge of stealing a tobacco pouch and silk pocket handkerchief, at the Clerkenwell police court, and loss of character, 50*l.* :" do not disclose a cause of action for false imprisonment, but rather for malicious prosecution or slander, and the judge has no power to amend them by substituting the words "false imprisonment." Ib.

—— Name and Capacity of Defendant.]—On the 30th March, 1848, a plaint was entered in a county court, wherein E. F. was plaintiff, and H. T., executor of F. W. Taylor, defendant. On the 3rd April the defendant was served with a summons numbered A. 3967, dated 30th March, in which he was summoned as executor of W. Thompson. The cause of action arose on the 9th April, 1842. At the hearing on the 14th April, 1848, the defendant objected to any evidence being given against him, except as executor of W. Thompson. The judge held the summons a nullity ; and, on the application of the plaintiff, directed a fresh summons to be issued, numbered and dated as the first summons, summoning defendant as executor of F. W. Taylor :—Held, that the judge was right. Foster v. Temple, 5 D. & L. 655 ; 17 L. J., Q. B. 230 ; 12 Jur. 654.

c. Defences, Counterclaims, and Payment into Court.

Tender of Payment of Damages—Time for.]—Tender of payment of damages by way of defence to an action in a county-court cannot be made after the question of liability has already been determined by judgment. The Recepta, Gordon v. Francis, 62 L. J., P. 118 ; [1893] P. 255 ; 1 R. 644 ; 69 L. T. 252 : 41 W. R. 561 ; 42 W. R. 73 ; 7 Asp. M. C. 359—C. A.

Notice of Special Defence—Want of Notice under Employers' Liability Act, 1880.]—A defence to an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, that the plaintiff has failed to give notice of injury within the six weeks required by s. 4 is a special defence under a statute, and a defendant cannot avail himself of such defence (no adjournment being asked for) unless he has filed the five-days notice required by Ord. X. r. 10 of the County Court Rules, 1889. Conroy v. Pearcock, 66 L. J., Q. B. 425; [1897] 2 Q. B. 6; 76 L. T. 465; 45 W. R. 502; 61 J. P. 310.

Counterclaims.]—Under ss. 89 and 90 of the Judicature Act, 1873, county courts may give effect to counterclaims relating to matters beyond the jurisdiction of the court, by way of defence to, and to the extent of, the plaintiff's claim, but such courts have no power to award to a defendant, in respect of such counterclaim, damages in excess of the claim. Davis v. Flagstaff Silver Mining Co. of Utah, 47 L. J., C. P. 503; 3 C. P. D. 228; 38 L. T. 769; 26 W. R. 431—C. A.

Payment into Court—Detinue]—Money may be paid into court in detinue in a county-court. Taylor v. Addyman, 13 C. B. 309; 22 L. J., C. P. 94; 17 Jur. 461.

Payment into Court with Denial of Liability—Effect of.]—The defendant in an action in a county-court paid money into court, stating at the same time in a memorandum addressed to the registrar that the payment was made "without prejudice to the defendant's defence to this action and while denying the plaintiff's cause of action":—Held, that the payment into court was not an admission of liability, and that the defendant was entitled to dispute his liability at the hearing. Harper v. Davis, 56 L. J., Q. B. 444; 19 Q. B. D. 170; 36 W. R. 77.

The County Court Rules, 1886, embody the results of the decision in Berdan v. Greenwood (3 Ex. D. 251), and apart from the notice the defendant was entitled to pay money into court and afterwards to dispute his liability at the hearing.—Per Wills, J. Ib.

—— Costs.]—Where the defendant in an action in the county court pays money into court with a denial of liability, and the plaintiff does not take the money out, but goes on with his action and recovers no more than the amount paid in, the defendant is entitled to the costs of the action. The practice of the high court is, by s. 164 of the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), to be followed in county courts, where there is nothing to the contrary or inconsistent therewith in the County Court Rules. Wood v. Leetham, 61 L. J., Q. B. 215.

Payment into Court without Denial of Liability—Effect of.]—In an action brought in a county court for work and labour done, the claim contained several items: the defendants paid money into court without denying liability:—Held, that the payment into court was an admission of some liability but not that something was due on every item of the account. Stevenson v. Berwick Corporation (1 Q. B. 154) followed. Hennell v. Davies, 62 L. J., Q. B. 220; [1893] 1 Q. B. 367; 5 R. 209; 68 L. T. 220; 41 W. R. 284.

Payment into Court—Time—Return Day.]—By the County Court Rules, Ord. IX. r. 11, a defendant must pay money into court, if he desires to do so, at least five clear days before the "return day." A summons in the action was issued out of the B. County Court on the 14th March, and was returnable on the 12th April. On the 1st April the action was transferred to the M. County Court, and the return day in that court was the 15th April. On the 8th April the defendants paid money into court:—Held, that the 15th April was the "return day," and that the payment into court on the 8th April was therefore not too late. Stevens v. Hounslow Burial Board, 61 L. T. 839; 38 W. R. 236; 54 J. P. 309.

d. Transfer to High Court.

Certiorari—Application, how made.]—An application under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 121, to remove a cause from the county court into a superior court, ought to have been made to a judge at chambers, and not to the court. Bowen v. Evans, 5 D. & L. 193; 3 Ex. 111; 18 L. J., Ex. 38. S. P., Robertson v. Womack, 19 L. J., Q. B. 367.

The application may, however, be ex parte. Symonds v. Dimsdale, 6 D. & L. 17; 2 Ex. 533.

Service of Writ—Sufficiency.]—The delivery of a writ of certiorari to a person acting as clerk in the public office of the county court is a sufficient delivery to the judge; but such service is not sufficient for the purpose of an attachment against the judge for disobedience. Brookman v. Wenham, 2 L. M. & P. 233; 20 L. J., Q. B. 278; 15 Jur. 249.

Where the writ has not been delivered to the judge personally, he should, semble, be ruled to return it before proceedings are taken by way of attachment against him. Ib.

Bond for security for costs—Corporation]—Where in a plaint in a county court the plaintiff claims more than 5*l.* damages for a tort, and the defendant (a corporation) seeks to have the case tried in a superior court, under the 19 and 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 39, and tenders to the registrar a bond executed by it and two sureties, the registrar's duty is only to inquire into the sufficiency of the sureties; and he cannot refuse to receive the bond, on the ground that the defendant, by law, is incapable of executing a valid bond. Young v. Brompton, &c., Waterworks Co., 1 B. & S. 675; 31 L. J., Q. B. 14; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 176; 5 L. T. 310; 10 W. R. 57.

Discovery in Action of Ejectment Transferred.]—An action for ejectment, commenced in the county court, was transferred to the high court under s. 3 of the County Courts Act, 1865. After transfer, but before delivery of any statement of claim, the plaintiff moved for discovery and production of documents under Ord, XXXI. r. 12, R. S. C., 1875:—Held, that after transfer the proceedings must be regulated by the practice of the high court, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to discovery before delivery of a statement of claim. Davies v. Williams, 49 L. J., Ch 352; 13 Ch. D. 550; 42 L. T. 469; 28 W. R. 223.

Transfer to High Court—Winding-up Petition.—The high court has jurisdiction to order the transfer of a winding-up petition from the county court to itself, notwithstanding that the petition has been opened in the county court. East Dulwich Building Society, In re, 39 W. R. 32.

Transfer to High Court—Winding-up.]—See Laxon & Co., In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 79; [1892] 3 Ch. 31; 2 R. 7; 67 L. T. 584; 40 W. R. 614. Real Estates Co., In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 213; [1893] 1 Ch. 398; 3 R. 192; 68 L. T. 24; 41 W. R. 157.

Employers' Liability Act — Removal into Superior Court.]—Sect. 39 of the County Courts Act, 1856, entitles the defendant "in any action of tort" where the claim exceeds 5*l.* to a stay of proceedings upon certain conditions as to giving security for the amount claimed, and the costs of trial in one of the superior courts of common law:—Held, that this section was intended to apply only to actions which could be brought either in one of the superior courts or in a county court, and therefore did not apply to an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, which by s. 6 of that Act must be brought in a county court. Reg. v. City of London Court Judge or Claxton v. Lucas, 54 L. J., Q. B. 330; 14 Q. B. D. 905; 52 L. T. 537; 33 W. R. 700—C. A. Affirming 49 J. P. 407.

An action to recover damages for personal injuries occasioned through the negligence of a fellow servant of the plaintiff's having been brought in the county court, under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the plaintiff obtained a conditional order to have it removed into a superior court, the plaintiff's wages were 60*l.* a year, and he claimed 180*l.* damages. There was medical evidence showing that he had sustained serious and permanent injury, and it was admitted that more than 50*l.* might reasonably be awarded; but there were not any other special circumstances shown in support of the application:—Held, that the county court would have power to award damages exceeding 50*l.*, and for any amount within the statutory limit of three years' wages, and per Dowse, B. (diss. Andrews, J.), that no sufficient grounds were shown for the removal of the action from the county court. M'Evoy v. Waterford Steamship Co., 16 L. R. Ir. 291.

In an action commenced in the civil bill court to recover damages for the death of the plaintiff's late husband, who had died from injuries sustained while employed as second mate and pilot on board a steamer of the defendants, and also in superintendence of the loading and discharging of cargo, the plaintiff applied to move the action into the superior court:—Held, that it did not sufficiently appear from the plaintiff's affidavit, which described the employment of the deceased as above stated, that the deceased was a workman within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, and that the application should therefore be refused. It lies upon the party making such application to show distinctly that the case comes within the statute. Hanrahan v. Limerick Steamship Co., 18 L. R. Ir. 135.

Equity Matters—Transfer to Chancery Division—Administration Action—Assets exceeding £500.]—A plaint was instituted in the county court for the administration of the estate of a testator, alleging (as the plaintiff then believed to be the fact) that the estate was worth less than 500*l.* Previously to the hearing, notice was given by the defendant to the plaintiff that the estate was worth more than 500*l.*, and at the hearing this was proved to be the case. The judge made an order transferring the suit to the court of chancery:—Held, that he was right in so doing. Birks v. Silverwood, 41 L. J., Ch. 638; L. R. 14 Eq. 101; 27 L. T. 18.

A county court plaint alleged that the subject-matter of the suit was less than 500*l.* in value, but upon the suit coming on for hearing it was proved that the value exceeded 500*l.*, whereupon the county court judge, acting under s. 14 of the County Courts Act, 1867, dismissed the plaint with costs:—Held, that he ought to have directed the suit to be transferred to the court of chancery, under the County Courts Act, 1865. s. 9. Sect. 14 of the Act of 1867 applies only to actions and suits relating to matters over which the county courts have no jurisdiction. Thomson v. Flinn, 43 L. J., Ch. 256; L. R. 17 Eq. 415; 29 L. T. 829; 22 W. R. 293.

—— Objection to Order for Service out of Jurisdiction — Untenable in County Court — Allowed after Transfer.]—An action commenced in the county court, in which the summons was by order served on the defendant out of jurisdiction, was, for lack of jurisdiction (the estate which it was sought to administer exceeding 500*l.*), transferred to the high court. An objection, in respect of the service out of jurisdiction, which had been raised by the defendant in the county court, but not decided, was again raised in the high court:—Held, that though, if the action had remained in the county court, the objection could not, having regard to Ord. LI. r. 2 of the County Court Rules 1889, have been successfully urged, yet the defendant, having throughout objected to the jurisdiction, ought to have an opportunity of showing in the high court that the action was one which could not be prosecuted there. Wood v. Middleton, 66 L. J., Ch. 149; [1897] 1 Ch. 151; 75 L. T. 480; 45 W. R. 184.

The defendant, after having given notice to the plaintiff's solicitor that the objection would be raised when the case came on for trial in the county court, had answered interrogatories:—Held, that there had been no waiver of the right to raise the objection in the high court. In.

—— Proceedings carried on till only Small Sum remaining in Court—Discretion to Refuse Transfer—Assets exceeding £500.]—In an administration action commenced in a county court the gross assets of the testator exceeded 500*l.*; the proceedings were carried on in the county court, no party objecting, and the only sum remaining in court to the credit of the action was 58*l.*; no application had been made to vary the registrar's certificate:—Held, that the county court judge was right in refusing to direct the action to be transferred to the chancery division under s. 68 of the County Courts Act, 1888. Reg. v. Ramsey County Court Judge, or Prangnell v. Prangnell, 62 L. J., Q. B. 346; 5 R. 275.

—— One Defendant only resident in District.]—When plaint had been filed in a county court against five defendants, of whom one only, who was in the plaintiff's interest, had a residence in the county court district, all the others being resident in other districts, the plaint was ordered to be transferred to the court of chancery. Baker v. Wait, 39 L. J., Ch. 204 ; L. R. 9 Eq. 103 ; 21 L. T. 632 ; 18 W. R. 185.

—— Costs in County Court.] — After an order by a county court to transfer a cause to the court of chancery, the jurisdiction of the county court is gone, and an order by it that the plaintiff should pay costs was discharged without prejudice to any order the court of chancery might make as to the costs. Hares v. Lea, L. R. 10 Eq. 683 ; 22 L. T. 776 ; 18 W. R. 1083.

When a plaintiff commences a suit in the county court, which at the hearing is transferred to the high court of justice because the subject-matter exceeds in amount 500*l*., the plaintiff, though he succeeds and obtains the general costs of the suit, must pay the costs of the hearing before the county court. Ward v. Wyld, 5 Ch. D. 779 ; 37 L. T. 68 ; 25 W. R. 866.

e. Demand of Jury.

Special Jury.]—A special jury, as such, cannot be had in the county court. Armitage, Ex parte ; Learoyd, In re, 17 Ch. D. 13 ; 44 L. T. 262 ; 29 W. R. 772.

Action on Admiralty side.]—Sect. 101 of the County Courts Act, 1888, does not confer a right upon the plaintiff or the defendant in an action on the admiralty side of a county court under s. 2 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869, to have the case tried by a jury. The Theodora, 66 L. J., P. 50 ; [1897] P. 279 ; 76 L. T. 627 ; 46 W. R. 157.

Notice of Demand of Jury—Fifteen Clear Days before "Return-day."—Under Ord. XXXIX. (b), r. 4 of the County Court Rules, 1875, notice of demand for a jury in actions brought under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, must be given to the registrar of the court "fifteen clear days at least before the return-day":—Held, that "return-day" in the above rule meant the day originally fixed for the hearing as distinguished from the day of actual hearing. Reg. v. Leeds County Court Registrar, 55 L. J., Q. B. 365 ; 16 Q. B. D. 691 ; 54 L. T. 873 ; 34 W. R. 487.

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 70, 71, and County Court Rule 104, notice of demand of a jury must be made and five shillings paid to the registrar of the court three clear days before the day originally fixed for the hearing ; and if a notice has not been given in due time, and the hearing is adjourned to a subsequent day, the party cannot demand a jury as of right ; but it is in the judge's discretion, under r. 105, whether he will allow the jury to be summoned or not. Fletcher v. Baker, 43 L. J., Q. B. 112 ; L. R. 9 Q. B. 370 ; 30 L. T. 675 ; 22 W. R. 646.

Second and Subsequent Trials.]—The right of parties to actions for more than 5*l*. in a county court to a trial by jury is not limited to the original trial of the cause, but extends to every subsequent trial. Reg. v. Harwood, 1 B. C. C. 144 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 127 ; 17 Jur. 87 ; 1 W. R. 195. S. P., Sparrow v. Reed, 5 D. & L. 633 ; 2 L. C. Rep. 240 ; 17 L. J., Q. B. 183.

3. Trial and Judgment.

County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 88—93.

Appearing or Defending by Solicitor.]—It is a question of fact for a county court judge alone to determine whether an attorney, appearing for a party to a suit in the county court, is "an attorney acting generally in the action for such party," as required by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 10. Bookham v. Potter ; Rogers, Ex parte, 37 L. J., C. P. 276 ; L. R. 3 C. P. 490 ; 18 L. T. 479 ; 16 W. R. 806.

Semble, per Bovill, C. J., an attorney who acts generally in the action for the party is not deprived of his right to appear for such party in the county court merely by his being a clerk to another attorney. Ib.

It is for the county court judge to decide upon the facts whether or not any attorney appearing at the trial comes within 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 10, and if there is any evidence upon which he can form an opinion, the court will not interfere with his judgment. Reg. v. Spooner ; Shreeve, In re, 18 L. T. 325.

A solicitor, whose position is merely that of clerk to another solicitor, although he is in the latter's permanent and exclusive employment, and, in the course of his duty, has had the management of the business of a client of his employer who is a party to an action or matter, and has advised him thereon, is not "a solicitor acting generally in the action or matter," so as to be entitled as of right to audience in a county court on behalf of such party. Reg. v. Oxfordshire County Court Judge, 63 L. J., Q. B. 689 ; [1894] 2 Q. B. 440 ; 10 R. 381 ; 70 L. T. 874 ; 42 W. R. 603 ; 58 J. P. 752.

—— Bankruptcy—Examination of Debtor—Authority in writing necessary.]—The Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 17, sub-s. 4, enacts with reference to the public examination of the debtor under that act, "that any creditor who has tendered a proof, or his representative authorised in writing, may question the debtor concerning his affairs, and the causes of his failure":—Held, that a solicitor who appears at a bankruptcy court for a creditor who has tendered a proof, is the creditor's representative within the meaning of that sub-section and is therefore not entitled so to question the debtor without being authorised in writing, and producing his authority if required by the court to do so. Reg. v. Greenwich County Court Registrar, 54 L. J., Q. B. 392 ; 15 Q. B. D. 54 ; 53 L. T. 902 ; 33 W. R. 671 ; 2 Morrell, 175—C. A.

Adjournment of Trial—Consent of Judge.]—Rule 26 of Ord. XXXVII. of the County Court Rules, 1875, which enables parties to a county court action, "at any time before the action is called on, by consent and without payment of any trial fee, to postpone the trial to such subsequent court as the judge shall direct," does not enable such parties to adjourn the trial without the consent of the judge ; and therefore where, after a cause has been adjourned by the judge, the parties by agreement amongst themselves further adjourn the trial without the sanction of the judge, he has jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the cause as if there had been no such further adjournment. Morgan v. Rees, 50 L. J., Q. B. 491 ; 6 Q. B. D. 508 ; 44 L. T. 133 ; 29 W. R. 345—C. A.

Striking out Cause.]—The effect of striking out a cause is not the same in the county court as in the superior court; in the former it is equivalent to a disposal of the cause. A cause having been struck out, on the plaintiff's non-appearance, a rule requiring the judge to re-enter it was refused. Jennings v. London General Omnibus Co., 30 L. T. 640; 22 W. R. 757.

Power to determine Case in Absence of Plaintiff after Adjournment.]—Upon the hearing of a plaint in the county court the case was adjourned by the judge for the attendance of a witness whom the parties had not intended to call. Upon the adjournment the defendants appeared, but neither the plaintiff nor the witness appeared, and the judge directed judgment to be entered for the defendants with costs:—Held, that the county court judge had no jurisdiction to hear and determine the case in the absence of the plaintiff, but should have ordered it to be struck out under s. 79 of the County Courts Act, 1846. Jordan v. Jones, 44 J. P. 800.

Non-appearance of Defendant — Default Summons and Notice to Defend.]—The jurisdiction of a registrar of a county court under s. 90 of the County Courts Act, 1888, to enter up judgment in actions on contract where the defendant does not appear at the hearing, applies to default summonses and to cases in which notice of intention to defend has been given. Hooper v. Hill, 63 L. J., Q. B. 598; [1894] 1 Q. B. 659; 9 R. 332; 70 L. T. 224; 42 W. R. 394—C. A.

Nonsuit.]—The judge of a county court may nonsuit a plaintiff in all cases in which a judge of a superior court may do so. Robinson v. Lawrence, 7 Ex. 128; 2 L. M. & P. 673; 15 Jur. 1087.

A plaintiff has a right to be nonsuited at any time before the jury has delivered their verdict: or, if the cause is tried by a judge alone, at any time before the judge has delivered his judgment. Stancliffe v. Clark, 7 Ex. 439; 21 L. J., Ex. 129; 16 Jur. 430. S. P., Outhwaite v. Hudson, 7 Ex. 380; 21 L. J., Ex. 151; 16 Jur. 430.

Upon the trial of a plaint before a county court judge and a jury, after the completion of the plaintiff's case and during the hearing of the defendant's witnesses, the judge discharged the jury, and, notwithstanding the repeated protests of the plaintiff and his attorney, the judge, without the plaintiff's consent, directed a nonsuit to be entered:—Held, upon a rule, obtained under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, calling upon the judge to proceed with the trial of the cause, that the judge ought not to have nonsuited the plaintiff without his consent, but that, as the judge had acted judicially, the court had no power to afford the plaintiff any remedy upon this rule. Kershaw v. Chantler, 26 L. T. 474.

An action was brought in a county court in the names of two executors in respect of a claim accruing to their testatrix. One of the executors executed a release the day before the trial. Counsel for the plaintiffs proposed to call the executor who had executed the release for the purpose of eliciting from him whether or not it had been fraudulently obtained, but without alleging the existence of fraud in fact. The judge refused to permit the executor to be examined for that purpose, and the plaintiffs were non-suited. On appeal the court set aside the non-suit. Robinson v. Vernon, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 231.

Pendency of another Action for same Cause no Answer.]—A plaint was levied in a county court. On the hearing the defendant objected to the judge entertaining the matter, on the ground of a suit pending for the same cause of action in a superior court. The judge, however, refused to dismiss the plaint, but made an order for payment within one week after the cause in the superior court should be decided. The plaintiff discontinued the action in the superior court, which being afterwards proved to the satisfaction of the judge, a judgment summons was taken out, and served upon the defendant. Upon the face of this summons it appeared the amount claimed was 22*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.*; and an order was made rescinding the previous order, and directing payment of that sum, with 1*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* costs:—Held, first, that it not appearing that the plaint was, in substance, for the same cause of action as in the superior court, the jurisdiction of the judge was not ousted. Byrne v. Knipe, 5 D. & L. 659; 9 B. C. Rep. 329; 18 L. J., Q. B. 33; 12 Jur. 1075.

Held, secondly, that the judge had power in the exercise of his discretion, to postpone the payment until after the decision in the superior court, and rescind the previous order. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that it sufficiently appeared that the amount claimed by the judgment summons did not exceed the sum of 20*l.*, exclusive of costs, and was therefore within the jurisdiction of the county court; and that a writ of prohibition would not lie. Ib.

A plaint in a county court for 20*l.* for rent: the defendant appeared, and pleaded the pendency of another action in the exchequer upon a promissory note, the consideration for giving which was the rent:—Held, that as they were not for the same cause of action eo nomine, the jurisdiction of the county court was not ousted. Ib.

A. proceeded by plaint in a county court, to recover 20*l.* for damage done to his fields by some lime-kilns of the defendant, from the 10th November, 1843, to the 30th October, 1849. That cause having been removed by certiorari into a superior court, on the ground that the lime-kilns were of greater value than 20*l.*, and that the defendant's property in them would be destroyed if the plaintiff was to succeed, he commenced a second plaint in the county court for 5*l.* for the same cause of action, laying the period of the injury to be from the 10th of November, 1843, to the 30th November, 1849:—Held, that no prohibition lay, and concessum that no certiorari lay. Edwards v. Rogers, 1 L. M. & P. 197; 19 L. J., Ex. 149; 14 Jur. 91.

The jurisdiction of a county court is not ousted by the pendency of an action for the same cause in a superior court. M'Murray v. Wright, 11 W. R. 34.

It is no answer to an ejectment in a county court that another ejectment for the same cause is pending in a superior court. Williamson v. Bissill, 7 H. & N. 391; 31 L. J., Ex. 131; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 42; 5 L. T. 321; 10 W. R. 109.

Proof of Particulars—Action for Dilapidations.]—In an action for dilapidations the plaintiff must prove his particulars of demand in the same manner as in an action for goods sold and delivered. Smith v. Douglas, 16 C. B. 31; 3 C. L. R. 752.

Committal of Witness.]—A county court judge sitting in bankruptcy summoned a person to attend and give evidence under s. 96 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869; this summons was disobeyed, and the judge thereupon made an order for the committal of the person so summoned:—Held, that the remedy for disobedience to the summons was not confined to that prescribed by s. 96, but that the judge had power, under s. 66 (which gives judges of county courts, for the purposes of the act, all the powers and jurisdiction of judges of the high court of chancery), to make the order for committal. Reg. v. Croydon County Court Judge, 53 L. J., Q. B. 545; 13 Q. B. D. 963; 51 L. T. 102; 33 W. R. 68—C. A.

See also ante, col. 913.

Right of Defendant to sum up Evidence.]—An action remitted from the queen's bench division to a county court was tried before the county court judge with a jury. After the defendant's evidence had closed, his counsel claimed to address the jury, but the judge refused to allow it. The jury having given a verdict for the plaintiff the defendant applied for a rule nisi for a new trial on the ground that his counsel ought to have been allowed to sum up the evidence:—Held, that as the right claimed did not exist at common law, and s. 18 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, which gave such a right in the superior courts, did not apply to county courts, there was no ground for interfering with the practice of any county court in which the defendant was not allowed to sum up the evidence. Dymock v. Watkins, 10 Q. B. D. 451; 48 L. T. 393; 31 W. R. 331—C. A.

Withdrawal of a Juror upon Terms—Terms not complied with.]—An action of trespass to land was sent for trial to a county court under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10. The cause came on for trial before a jury, but before the trial was completed the parties agreed that a juror should be withdrawn, and that the judge should say what should be done between them. At the next meeting of the court, the judge was ready to pronounce his opinion, but the defendant, without assigning any reason, withdrew his consent, and the judge consequently did not give any decision:—Held, that the withdrawal of a juror had not, under the circumstances, put an end to the action, because the defendant had not performed his part of the arrangement under which the plaintiff consented to such withdrawal: and the court made absolute a rule calling upon the judge of the county court to appoint a day for a rehearing. Norburn v. Hilliam, 39 L. J., C. P. 183; L. R. 5 C. P. 129; 22 L. T. 67; 18 W. R. 602.

Proof of Proceedings in.]—The modern county courts are courts of record without records, and the mode of proving what occurred on a trial in one of those courts is, to call a person who was present who can speak as to the particular matter or fact. Harmer v. Bean, 3 Car. & K. 307.

A minute of the proceedings of a county court, made by the clerk, pursuant to this provision, is conclusive evidence of them, even though the judge gives evidence to the contrary. Dews v. Ryley, 2 L. M. & P. 544; 11 C. B. 434; 20 L. J., C. P. 264; 15 Jur. 1159.

The clerk's book, or a certified copy of entries from such book, is the best, and therefore the only evidence of proceedings in a county court. Reg. v. Rowland, 1 F. & F. 72.

In a declaration on a replevin bond it was alleged that A. (the plaintiff in replevin) levied his plaint in a county court against the present plaintiff, and that it was adjudged that A. should take nothing by his plaint. The defendant pleaded nul tiel record. Issue was joined on this plea, and the plaintiff produced an entry from the county court book, in which the entry was as to the plaint "struck out for want of jurisdiction, on the ground of a disputed title having been sworn to":—Held, that this entry did not support the averment. Tubby v. Stanhope, 5 D. & L. 781; 5 C. B. 790; 17 L. J., C. P. 190; 12 Jur. 357.

And see EVIDENCE.

Entering Judgment—Refusal of Judge to receive Verdict.]—A plaintiff brought an action in a county court to recover 6*l.* 10*s.* for wine supplied. At the trial he was nonsuited, but at the next court, having brought a fresh action, he obtained a verdict. A new trial was granted, and the jury was discharged without being able to agree upon a verdict. The action was tried a fourth time, when the jury returned a verdict as follows:—"In the absence of any order in writing for the wine, we find a verdict for the plaintiff." The judge refused to receive the verdict, and ordered the jury to retire and reconsider it. They said they had considered all the evidence, that their unanimous opinion was that there should be a verdict for the plaintiff, and that it was of no use their retiring. The judge refused to receive the verdict, and discharged the jury:—Held, that a rule nisi might be granted, calling upon the judge, the registrar and the defendant to shew cause why the verdict should not be received and entered upon the minutes, why judgment should not be given for the plaintiff, and why execution should not issue thereupon. Jardine v. Smith, 8 W. R. 464.

—— Action of Tort—Refusal to enter after Death of Plaintiff.]—An action for an assault was heard in the county court, and the judge took time to consider his judgment; before he delivered it the plaintiff died, and upon an application to the judge to deliver judgment nunc pro tunc, he declined to do so, holding that the action had abated. Upon an application for a rule to direct the judge to enter judgment, or to allow the administrator to enter a suggestion of the death, and go on with the action:—Held, that the court could not interfere, the judge having decided a question before him within his jurisdiction. Henry v. Mason, 1 L. T. 295.

Altering Judgment]—A county court judge cannot, except by consent or after a new trial, alter a judgment which he has formally given. Irving v. Askew, 39 L. J., Q. B. 118; L. R. 5 Q. B. 208; 18 W. R. 467.

Amending Judgment.] — Where a judgment correctly sets forth the meaning of the county court judge, he has no jurisdiction to alter it. The Recepta, Gordon v. Francis, 62 L. J., P. 118; [1893] P. 255; 1 R. 614; 69 L. T. 252; 41 W. R. 561; 42 W. R. 73; 7 Asp. M. C. 359.

Rescinding Judgment.]—In a plaint the defendants pleaded the Statute of Limitations, but without giving the notice required by the rule of the county courts. The plaintiff required an adjournment in order to answer the plea, which was granted, and the case adjourned to a subsequent day. On that day the case came on for hearing, and the defendants obtained a judgment in their favour, which was entered by the clerk in the book kept for that purpose. The defendants then left the court. Some days afterwards they received notice that the judge had rescinded his judgment, and that the case was adjourned for further hearing. They attended on the day named, and protested against any further hearing. The judge, however, overruled their objection, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, on the ground that the Statute of Limitations on the former occasion had been improperly pleaded :—Held, that the judge had no power to rescind his former decision in the absence of the defendants, and that he had therefore acted without jurisdiction. Jones v. Jones, 5 D. & L. 628.

Detinue — Order for delivery of Specific Chattel.]—In an action of detinue brought in the county court, the county court judge has jurisdiction to make an order for the delivery by the defendant of the specific chattel wrongfully detained, without giving him the option of paying its assessed value as an alternative. Winfield v. Boothroyd, 54 L. T. 574 ; 34 W. R. 501.

Order that Debt be Paid by Instalments—Notice to Defendant.]—Where a defendant is adjudged to be indebted to the plaintiff in a certain sum, and the judge at the same time goes on to order that the debt be paid by instalments, such order is part of the judgment, of which the defendant is bound to take notice, without service. Robinson v. Gell, 12 C. B. 191 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 155 ; 16 Jur. 615. S. P., Ely v. Moule, 2 L. M. & P. 799 ; 5 Ex. 918 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 29 ; 14 Jur. 1070.

Effect of Judgment — Interest]—A county court judgment debt does not carry interest under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 17. Reg. v. Essex County Court Judge, 56 L. J., Q. B. 315 ; 18 Q. B. D. 704 ; 57 L. T. 643 ; 35 W. R. 511 ; 51 J. P. 549—C. A.

—— As Barring subsequent Action.]—By Ord. XVI. r. 17, of County Court Orders, 1875, "any judgment of nonsuit, unless the judge otherwise directs, shall have the same effect as a judgment upon the merits for the defendant." Such rule is a copy of Ord. XLI. r. 6, of the Judicature Orders, and was made by a committee of county court judges, with the approval of the lord chancellor, under the authority of s. 32 of the County Courts Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 108), which authorises such county court judges with such approval to frame rules and orders "for regulating the practice of the courts and forms of proceedings therein :"—Held, that unless r. 17 of the County Court Orders was ultra vires, a judgment of nonsuit in a county court, not appealed against nor set aside, was a bar to an action by the plaintiff for the same debt in the superior court. Poyser v. Minors, 50 L. J., Q. B. 555 ; 7 Q. B. D. 329 ; 45 L. T. 33 ; 29 W. R. 773—C. A.

Held, also (Bramwell, L.J., dissenting), that r. 17 was not ultra vires, but was covered by the authority given to the committee of county court judges by the County Courts Act, 1856, s. 32. Ib.

On the 2nd of July, 1877, the plaintiff suffered judgment of nonsuit in an action, brought by him in the City of London Court, to recover damages from the defendants for non-delivery of goods by them as carriers, and subsequently, on the 1st of October, 1877, brought another action against the defendants for the same cause in the mayor's court, to the declaration in which latter action the defendants pleaded (inter alia) as follows :—"That after the passing of the Judicature Act, 1873, and the subsequent act amending the same, and further enacting in the like behalf, to wit, on the 2nd of July, 1877, the plaintiff sued the defendants, in respect of the same cause of action as that in respect of which he now sues in the City of London Court, and judgment of nonsuit was given against him in the said court in that suit ; and the defendants submit that the plaintiff ought not to bring his present suit, or to be heard in his present suit after the determination by judgment of nonsuit, as aforesaid" :—Held, that by Ord. XVI. r. 17, of the County Court Rules, 1875, the judgment of nonsuit in the city of London court, in the absence of any direction by the judge of that court to the contrary, had the effect of a verdict for the defendants, and was a bar and an answer to the subsequent action for the same cause in the mayor's court. Davis v. G. E. Ry., 39 L. T. 635.

—— Estoppel by.]—A county court judgment precludes a party from raising in another court a material question determined against him by such judgment. Flitters v. Allfrey, 44 L. J., C. P. 73 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 29 ; 31 L. T. 878 ; 23 W. R. 442.

The plaintiff was tenant to the defendant and sued his landlord for trespass to the demised premises. The landlord pleaded that he entered the premises by virtue of a magistrate's warrant under the Small Tenements Act (1 & 2 Vict. c. 74), for rent due as for a weekly tenancy. The tenant replied that the landlord had sued him for rent in respect of the same tenancy in the county court, where it was decided that the tenancy was yearly and not weekly, and judgment was entered for the tenant. The landlord having rejoined nul tiel record, upon production of the record it appeared that the claim was for 1*l.* 9*s.* for rent of a cottage, and that judgment was for the tenant :—Held, that the landlord was concluded by the county court judgment. Ib.

A., hired by B. as servant in husbandry from the 1st August, 1858, sued B. in a county court for discharging her from his service on the 7th September without reasonable cause, and the judge gave a decision for B. In May, 1859, A. took out a summons before justices against B. to recover a quarter's wages :—Held, that the matter for the consideration of the justices was the same identical matter which had been decided by the judge of the county court, viz., whether the discharge was wrongful and without just cause ; and therefore the decision of the county court was conclusive between the parties. Routledge v. Hislop, 5 El. & El. 549 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 90 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 398 ; 2 L. T. 53 ; 8 W. R. 363.

To a declaration the defendant pleaded, by way of estoppel, that he sued the plaintiff in a county court for a debt, and the plaintiff then attempted to establish as a set-off the claim for which he now sued; and that judgment was given against him as to that set-off. The plaintiff replied that he had not given any notice of his intention to rely on the set-off, in accordance with 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 76, and r. 17; and that the defendant did not consent to his setting off the debt:—Held, that the replication was a good answer to the plea of estoppel, since it showed that there had been no decision in the county court by which the plaintiff was concluded. Stanton v. Styles, 1 L. M. & P. 575; 5 Ex. 578; 19 L. J., Ex. 336.

—— Judgment by Consent—Mistake as to Facts — Subsequent Proceedings to Enforce Order.]—Where an order of a county court, good upon the face of it, declaring that a defendant has committed an offence under ss. 3 and 10 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, by permitting sewage matter to flow into a river, and requiring him to construct such sewage works as may be necessary, is drawn up by consent, the defendant is estopped in a subsequent action brought to recover penalties for breach of the order from showing that the part of the river comprised in the order was in fact tidal water, and that therefore the order with respect to such part was beyond the jurisdiction of the court, even though at the time of consenting to the order the defendant was unaware that such part of the river was in fact tidal water. Ribble Joint Committee v. Croston Urban Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 384; [1897] 1 Q. B. 251; 45 W. R. 348.

4. Arbitrations.

An allegation in a plea that the plaintiff and defendant mutually referred the action in the county court and all matters in difference is supported by proof of an order of reference made by the judge of the county court under the powers given him by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 77, by consent of the plaintiff and defendant. Roper v. Levy, 7 Ex. 55; 2 L. M. & P. 621; 21 L. J., Ex. 28.

Appeal from Refusal to Set Aside Award.]—An action in a county court having been referred by the judge to an arbitrator, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 77, and the arbitrator's award having been entered up as the judgment, an application was made to the judge to set aside the award, on the ground that the arbitrator had exceeded his jurisdiction by taking into consideration matters not referred to him. The judge having refused this application:—Held, that the court of appeal had no jurisdiction, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, to entertain an application on appeal from the judge to set aside the award. Mayer v. Farmer, 47 L. J., Ex. 760; 3 Ex. D. 235; 26 W. R. 760.

An order, referring a cause to a judge of a county court, was obligatory on the judge, and he had no option of declining the reference. Cummins v. Birkett, 3 H. & N. 156; 27 L. J., Ex. 216; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 6 W. R. 366. See 21 & 22 Vict. c. 74, s. 5.

5. Enforcing Judgment.

Suing on in Superior Courts.]—An action is not maintainable in a superior court on a judgment of a county court, but such judgment is final and complete, and a bar to an action for the original consideration in any other court. Austin v. Mills, 2 C. L. R. 411; 9 Ex. 288; 23 L. J., Ex. 40; 18 Jur. 16; 2 W. R. 107. S. P., Berkeley v. Elderkin, 1 El. & Bl. 805; 22 L. J., Q. B. 281; 17 Jur. 1153; 1 W. R. 305.

An action lay upon a judgment of the ancient common law county court. Williams v. Jones, 13 M. & W. 628; 2 D. & L. 680; 14 L. J., Ex. 145.

Before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 27, the county courts might try actions on judgments of the superior courts. Winsor v. Dunford, 12 Q. B. 603; 18 L. J., Q. B. 14; 12 Jur. 629.

And where a plaintiff sued in a county court on a judgment of a superior court, and obtained an order for payment by instalments, some of which had been paid, he could not resort to the process of the superior court to enforce the judgment of the county court. Jones v. Jenner, 25 L. J., Ex. 319; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 574; 4 W. R. 651.

Removal into Superior Courts.]—A judgment of a county court is not removable into a superior court for the purpose of issuing execution thereon. Moreton v. Holt, 10 Ex. 707; 3 C. L. R. 348; 24 L. J., Ex. 169; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 215; 3 W. R. 207.

But by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 49, it may be removed under certain circumstances and conditions.

Aided in Equity.]—A judgment of a county court will be aided against the equitable estate of the debtor. Execution having been issued on a judgment in the county court, and nothing recovered, the debtor's only property being an equitable interest in leaseholds in the hands of trustees in trust to pay him an annuity thereout, the creditor filed a bill for payment of the debt out of the leaseholds in aid of the judgment of the county court:—Held, that he was entitled to such relief. Semble, the aid of a court of equity to enforce the judgment of a county court is different from an action on such judgment in a superior court of law. Bennett v. Powell, 3 Drew. 326; 3 Eq. Rep. 1023; 24 L. J., Ch. 736; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 719; 3 W. R. 618, 640.

If a plaintiff in a county court, having obtained a judgment for debt and costs, receives payment of the debt only, he may, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 94, require the clerk of the county court to issue execution against the debtor's goods for the costs only, and a mandamus to issue execution in such case is properly directed to the clerk, not to the judge. Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 El. & Bl. 279; 21 L. J., Q. B. 310; 17 Jur. 179.

But before applying to the court for a mandamus, application should be made to the judge of the county court to order the clerk to issue such execution. Christchurch Overseers, Ex parte, 2 L. M. & P. 660.

A plaintiff in a county court suit obtaining judgment by default of appearance, and execution thereon, is within the protection of the County Court Acts. Gayton v. Bayman, 1 F. & F. 675.

Where a writ of fi. fa. has issued irregularly on the goods of a defendant under an order of a county court, the remedy is to apply to the county court to stay proceedings. Herman v. Sheldry, 2 W. R. 455.

Landlord's Claim for Rent under Executions.]—Under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 75, a landlord cannot claim his rent, where a bailiff takes in execution, upon the demised premises, the goods of a stranger; for that enactment only applies where the levy is made on the goods of the tenant. Foulger v. Taylor, 5 H. & N. 202; 29 L. J., Ex. 154; 1 L. T. 481; 8 W. R. 279. S. P., Beard v. Knight, 8 El. & Bl. 865; 27 L. J., Q. B. 359; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 782; 6 W. R. 226.

Stay of Execution—Judgment over £20—"Sickness or other Sufficient Cause."]—The discretionary power conferred by s. 153 of the County Courts Act, 1888, on the judge to stay execution if the defendant is unable "from sickness or other sufficient cause" to pay a debt recovered against him, applies only to causes ejusdem generis which would prevent him exercising his industry, and so acquiring means to pay. Mere proof of inability to pay is not sufficient to enable the judge to exercise his discretion. Attenborough v. Henschell, 64 L. J., Q. B. 255; [1895] 1 Q. B. 833; 15 R. 294; 72 L. T. 192; 43 W. R. 283; 59 J. P. 150.

Ejectment—Warrant of Possession—Land outside District.]—Although the plaintiff and defendant in an action of ejectment both reside within the jurisdiction of the county court, if property sought to be recovered is situate without the jurisdiction, a warrant of possession cannot be executed. Ellis v. Peachey, 5 D. & L. 673; 18 L. J., Q. B. 137; 13 Jur. 564.

Warrant of Execution—Goods in Foreign District—Negligence of High Bailiff.]—The jurisdiction given by s. 115 of the County Courts Act, 1846, to a county court judge, enabling him to order a bailiff to compensate a plaintiff who has suffered damage by his neglect, connivance, or omission in levying an execution can only be exercised by him against the bailiffs of his own court. Execution was issued in a county court, and the warrant was sent for execution to a foreign county court, and the high bailiff of such court was guilty of negligence in levying under it:—Held, that the judge of the home court had no power under s. 115 to order the high bailiff of the foreign court to pay damages to the plaintiff, who had been injured by his negligence, and that the high bailiff of the foreign court was entitled to a prohibition. Reg. v. Shropshire County Court Judge, or Rogers, 57 L. J., Q. B. 143; 20 Q. B. D. 242; 58 L. T. 86; 36 W. R. 476.

Enforcement of Order by Attachment.]—Under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 89, a county court has, in actions within its jurisdiction, power to grant an injunction against a nuisance, and to commit to prison for disobedience thereto. Martin v Bannister, 48 L. J., Q. B. 676; 4 Q. B. D. 491; 28 W. R. 143—C. A.

Interlocutory Order.]—The power of a county court under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 89, in actions within its jurisdiction to enforce obedience to its orders by committal, extends to interlocutory as well as final orders. Richards v. Cullerne, 7 Q. B. D. 623—C. A.

Attachment of Debts.]—Salary, payable quarterly, and not due until a future date, is not a debt "due, owing, or accruing," and cannot be attached under Ord. XXIV. r. 4, of the County Court Rules, 1875. Hall v. Pritchett, 47 L. J., Q. B. 15; 3 Q. B. D. 215; 37 L. T. 671; 26 W. R. 95.

A defendant having recovered judgment in the high court against B., the plaintiff, who had previously obtained judgment against the defendant in the county court, issued and served upon B. a summons in the county court calling upon him to shew cause why the judgment obtained against him by the defendant should not be attached, and giving notice that he was not to pay the amount of the judgment to the defendant, or otherwise. Before the summons came on for hearing the sheriff, under a fi. fa., seized the goods of B. under the defendant's judgment, and B. paid the amount of the judgment to the sheriff under protest. The county court judge refused to make any order upon the summons:—Held, that the judge was right, for B. had not done wrong in paying the amount of the judgment to an officer of the court, and was not bound to apply at chambers for his protection either before or after the execution. Turnbull v. Robertson, 47 L. J., C. P. 294; 38 L. T. 389; 26 W. R. 557.

Discovery in Aid of Execution.]—See EXECUTION.

Committal Order under Debtors Act, 1869—Nature of.]—A commitment by a judge of a county court on a judgment summons is in the nature of a qualified execution, and not of a punishment for contempt. Dakins, Ex parte, 16 C. B. 77; 3 C. L. R. 602; 24 L. J., C. P. 131; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 378.

—— Open Court.]—By s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), orders for committal of defaulting debtors must be made by a county court judge in open court. Kenyon v. Eastwood, 57 L. J., Q. B. 455.

A county court judge sat, for the purpose of hearing summonses for committal under the provisions of s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), and for all business except jury cases, in a small room which he also used at other times as his private room; it communicated with a larger room, where was the usual raised bench and jury-box, by a door which was kept open during the hearing of these summonses, and the names of the parties were, if necessary, called in the larger room. The public had access to the smaller room as well as the larger:—Held, that orders for committal made under these circumstances were not made in open court, and that they could not be enforced. Ib.

—— Non-appearance of Debtor.]—A county court judge has jurisdiction to make a committal order under the Debtors Act, 1869, notwithstanding the non-appearance of the debtor; and a prohibition will not be granted to restrain the proceedings thereunder upon the ground that the debtor had not an opportunity of being heard as to his ability to pay. Pitcher v. Bourn (10 Times L. R. 245) doubted and disapproved. Johnstone v. Kiernan, 10 R. 313.

—— Fresh Summons on Adjournment.]—A defendant was summoned, and appeared at a county court on the 11th January, and, judgment having been given against him, he was ordered to pay the debt forthwith: this he refused to do, and he was then examined by the judge as to the disposal of his property, when it appeared to the judge that he had made a gift, delivery or transfer of his property, with intent to defraud his creditors. The matter was adjourned, at the defendant's request, till the 18th of January, to enable him to produce evidence; but he did not appear on the 18th, nor produce evidence, nor give any excuse for not doing so; whereupon the judge ordered him to be committed for forty days:—Held, that a fresh summons, requiring him to appear on the 18th, was not necessary, and that the proceedings were regular. Purdy, Ex parte, 1 L. M. & P. 118; 9 C. B. 201; 19 L. J., C. P. 222; 14 Jur. 332. S. P. and S. C., 1 L. M. & P. 16; 19 L. J., M. C. 95.

—— Judgment over £20.]—Upon an application under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, the county court had jurisdiction, though the judgment exceeded 20*l*. Byrne v. Knipe, 2 B. C. Rep. 321; 5 D & L. 659; 18 L. J., Q. B. 33; 12 Jur. 1075.

—— Enforcing Judgment of High Court.]—A county court judge has power to enforce the order or judgment of the high court, where the high court has made no order for payment by instalments, by directing payment by instalments of the amount due under such order or judgment, and to commit the debtor in default. But where the high court has made an order for payment by instalments the county court has no power to vary that order. Addington, Ex parte, Ires, In re, 55 L. J., Q. B. 246; 16 Q. B. D. 665; 54 L. T. 877; 34 W. R. 593; 3 Morrell, 83.

—— Form of Order—Minute in Registrar's Book.]—On the hearing of a judgment summons in a county court the judge committed the defendant but suspended the order. The only written document which had been drawn up was in the books of the county court, in the form given in the schedule to the County Court Rules, 1886, among the forms of books which, by Ord. II. r. 2, the registrar is directed to keep, headed "Book H.—Summonses for Commitment, Interpleader, and Minutes of Orders thereon." The defendant applied for a prohibition on the ground that the order did not show on its face the ground on which it was issued, as required by s. 5, sub-s. 1 (a), of the Debtors Act, 1869:—Held, that the minute of the order in Book H. (which did not show on its face the ground on which the order was issued) was not the order within the meaning of the Debtors Act, but that, as the order, if it were afterwards drawn up as directed by Ord. XXV. r. 33, of the County Court Rules, 1886, would sufficiently comply with the act, the application for a prohibition must be refused. Harris v. Slater, 57 L. J., Q. B. 539; 21 Q. B. D. 359; 37 W. R. 56.

—— Order in Default of Payment on Future Day.]—A party ordered to pay a sum recovered against him in a county court, who has made default, and upon being examined upon a judgment summons shews no sufficient excuse for such default, may be committed to prison forthwith; but if the judge orders him to pay the money at a future day, or in default to be committed, and the party again makes default, he cannot be committed without being examined as to the cause of such second default. Abley v. Dale, 10 C. B. 62; 1 L. M. & P. 626; 20 L. J., C. P. 33; 14 Jur. 1069.

An order by a judge on a judgment summons on a defendant to pay a sum on a future day, or to be imprisoned for thirty days, is bad. Dews v. Ryley, 11 C. B. 434; 20 L. J., C. P. 264; 15 Jur. 1159.

—— Order on Debt Scheduled on Discharge under Insolvent Debtors Act.]—A defendant against whom a judgment was given in the county court, having been arrested at the suit of a creditor other than the plaintiff obtained his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act, 1 & 2 Vict c. 110, s. 75, the judgment of the plaintiff being inserted in his schedule. Having been afterwards committed by the county court judge, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 99, for non-payment of the plaintiff's debt:—Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged. Somers, Ex parte, 16 C. B. 539; 24 L. J., C. P. 185; George v. Somers, 11 Ex. 202; 24 L. J., Ex. 247. S. P., Christie, Ex parte, 4 E. & B. 714; 24 L. J., Q. B. 144.

—— Local Situation of Gaol—Time calculated from Taking into Custody.]—A party was committed under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127, by an order under the hand of a judge of an inferior court for the term of forty days to the common gaol for the confinement of debtors under judgment and in execution of the superior courts of justice within the county of Middlesex, in which he was then residing:—Held, that it was not necessary that the gaol in which he was imprisoned should be locally situate within the county of Middlesex; that the forty days were to be calculated from the time the party was taken into custody and not from the order; that the warrant need not be under seal; and that the committal being in the absence of the party did not vitiate it. Bowdler, In re, 12 Q. B. 612; 17 L. J., Q. B. 243.

—— Form of Warrant.]—A warrant of commitment stating that "it appeared to the satisfaction of the judge, that the defendant had obtained credit from the plaintiff under false pretences, and had made a gift, delivery or transfer of his property, with intent to defraud his creditors; and thereupon the judge, by a certain order, did adjudge," &c., not being in the nature of a conviction, is not bad for stating in the alternative the mode by which the offence was committed. Purdy, Ex parte, 1 L. M. & P. 118; 9 C. B. 201; 19 L. J., C. P. 222; 14 Jur. 332. S. P. and S. C., 1 L. M. & P. 16; 19 L. J., M. C. 95.

—— Issue of Warrant—Lapse of Time.]—A warrant of commitment for contempt for non-appearance on a judgment summons was regular, though issued more than six months after the date of the judge's order, notwithstanding that, by a rule of practice, a warrant was to be current only for two months after its date. O'Neil, Ex parte, 10 C. B. 57; 1 L. M. & P. 737; 20 L. J., C. P. 69.

A defendant arrested under a warrant of commitment of a county court, within three months from the day of its date, might lawfully be detained under such arrest after the expiration of the three months, notwithstanding a former rule of court provided that "warrants of commitment, whenever issued, shall bear date on the day on which the order for commitment is made, and shall continue in force for three calendar months from such date, and no longer." Hayes v. Keene, 12 C. B. 233; 21 L. J., C. P. 204; 16 Jur. 976.

—— Second Order for Same Default.] -A defendant in a county court having made default in payment of 20*l.* due under a judgment, an order was made to commit him to prison. He was, however, never arrested or imprisoned under the order, which according to Ord. XXV. r. 33, of the County Court Rules, 1886, expired when a year had elapsed from its date:—Held, upon motion for prohibition, that as no arrest nor imprisonment had ever taken place upon this order before its expiration, and as the defendant was still in default, the county court judge had power to make a second order of commitment. Reg. v. Stonor, or Brompton County Court Judge, 57 L J., Q. B. 510; 59 L. T. 669.

A judgment debtor having made default in payment of the judgment debt which had been recovered against him in the county court, and which he had been ordered to pay forthwith, the county court judge made an order for his commitment to prison for forty days. The debtor was arrested thereon, but was subsequently discharged on the ground of his being privileged at the time of such arrest, as a witness returning from the sessions. The debtor was again, and whilst the order for committal was still in force, summoned upon a judgment summons, and a second order for his committal for the same default in not paying the judgment debt was made by the county court judge:—Held, that the judge had no power to make such second order, as the first had not been executed. Horsnail v. Bruce, 42 L. J., C. P. 140; L R. 8 C. P. 378; 28 L. T. 705; 21 W. R. 597.

Held, also, by Bovill, C.J., and Brett, J., that where a judgment debt is not payable by instalments there is no power under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 5, to commit the debtor more than once for default in not paying such debt. Ib.

When a judgment debtor refuses or neglects to pay the judgment debt which he has been ordered to pay in one sum, and not by instalments, there is no power under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 5, to commit him to prison more than once, although after a first committal it is proved he has the means of paying the sum in respect of which he still makes default. Evans v. Wills, 45 L. J., C. P. 420; 1 C. P. D. 229; 34 L. T. 679; 24 W. R. 883

Judgment for a debt and costs was given to B., and an order made to pay by instalments. B. having failed to pay the instalments, a judgment summons issued, upon which he was examined, and committed for seven days, upon the ground that he had the means of satisfying the judgment, and refused to do so. He was subsequently summoned, and committed two several times for forty days each, upon the same ground:—Held, that the judge of a county court has power to commit for a default of the same kind toties quoties a default is committed. Boyce, In re, 2 El. & Bl. 521; 22 L. J., Q. B. 393; 17 Jur. 715; 1 W. R. 409.

—— Execution of Warrant after Payment of Debt.]—S. obtained judgment against the plaintiff for a debt, which was ordered to be paid to the clerk of the court; and the amount not being paid, a summons was issued to the plaintiff to show cause why he had not paid. Upon default of appearance, the judge ordered the plaintiff to be committed seven days, or until he should be discharged by due course of law. In pursuance of that order, the clerk made out a warrant, upon which was indorsed the amount of the debt. The plaintiff was arrested under the warrant after he had paid the amount of the debt to S., who communicated that fact by letter to the clerk:—Held, that the order and warrant were in force at the time of the arrest, notwithstanding the payment of the debt and the letter to the clerk, and therefore the arrest was legal. Davis v. Fletcher, 2 El. & Bl. 271; 22 L J., Q. B. 429; 17 Jur. 894; 1 W. R. 367.

—— Remedy for Wrongful Commitment.]—Where a prisoner was wrongly committed under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127, s 1, for making default in the payment of an instalment of a debt, a habeas corpus was obtained in the court of common pleas, and upon the return to it the court ordered the discharge of the prisoner. Kinning, Ex parte, 10 Q. B. 730; 16 L J., Q. B. 257.

In an action for false imprisonment, the defendant pleaded that he issued a summons against the plaintiff in a county court for debt; that the summons was personally served upon him; that he did not appear, and that it was adjudged that he should pay the debt by instalments; that a minute of the judgment was served upon him, and that the instalments were not paid; that a judgment summons was then obtained, and served upon him; that he did not appear, and was committed by the judge to prison. The evidence was, that the defendant having a debt due from J., entered a plaint against him in a county court by his right name, which was an entirely different name from the plaintiff's, and that he served the plaintiff with the several proceedings which were all directed against J. by name, under the belief that the plaintiff was J.; that J. never appeared in court; that the plaintiff uniformly stated that he was not J., and on the service of each proceeding gave notice of the mistake; but that the defendant directed the officer to take the plaintiff:—Held, that as the proceedings were against J. by name, and were intended to be against him, and were served upon the plaintiff only by reason of a mistaken supposition that he was J., the plea was not proved. Wulley v. M'Connell, 13 Q. B. 903; 19 L. J., Q. B. 162; 14 Jur. 193.

6. Interpleader.

County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 156, 157.

Claim to Goods seized—Neglect of Claimant to comply with Conditions—Sale by Bailiff—Validity of Purchaser's Title.]—Where a claim is made to goods taken in execution under the process of the county court, but the claimant fails to comply with any of the conditions laid down in s. 156 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the bailiff is bound under that section to sell the goods, and the purchaser of such goods acquires a valid title to them, notwithstanding that the claimant, subsequent to such sale, proves that he was entitled to the goods. Goodlock v. Cousins, 66 L. J., Q. B. 360; [1897] 1 Q. B. 558; 76 L. T. 313; 45 W. R. 369—C. A.

—— Bailiff need not ask Claimant to Comply with Conditions.]—Under Ord. XXI. r. 1, of the County Court Orders and Rules, 1875, it is not necessary for the high bailiff, before selling goods seized in execution and claimed, to request the claimant to deposit the amount of the value of the goods or possession money, and, if no such deposit be made, the high bailiff is entitled under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108 (the County Courts Act, 1856), s. 72, to sell the goods without first applying for an interpleader summons under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142 (the County Courts Act, 1867), s. 31. Cramer v. Matthews, or Davies v. Wise, 50 L. J., Q. B. 651; 7 Q. B. D. 425; 45 L. T. 26; 29 W. R. 804.

Interpleader Summons—Effect of Issue.]—The officer of a county court who has seized goods in execution is not required to retire from possession because an interpleader summons has been issued. Summers, Ex parte, 2 C. L. R. 1284; 18 Jur. 522; 2 W. R. 477.

Particulars of Claim—Sufficiency.] — By a rule of practice of the county courts the claimant in an interpleader is required, five clear days before the day appointed for hearing the summons, to deliver to the bailiff, or leave at the office of the registrar, a particular of the goods alleged to be his property, and also the grounds of his claim. Goods and money which had been seized under an execution upon a county court judgment were claimed by W., who delivered to the registrar a particular describing them as "the goods and money seized by virtue of the warrant." In the grounds of claim it was stated that the goods were the property of the claimant, and were at the time of the seizure in his possession. This particular was held insufficient by the judge, who refused to go further into the case, and made an order in favour of the execution creditors with costs:—Held, by Kelly, C.B., and Amphlett, B., that the particular was sufficient; by Bramwell and Cleasby, BB., that it was insufficient. Richardson v. Wright, 44 L. J., Ex. 230; L. R. 10 Ex. 367; 23 W. R. 678.

A notice by a claimant that the goods "are and were my own property, and not the property of R.," was held not to comply with a rule of practice requiring the delivery of particulars of goods alleged to be the property of a person claiming under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 118, and of the grounds of his claim. Tanner, Ex parte; Cullum v. Ross, In re, 19 L. J., Q. B. 318; 14 Jur. 696. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Chilton, 15 Q. B. 220.

The grounds of the claim need not appear on the face of them to be valid; and therefore a claim to certain goods, stating that they had been assigned to the claimant by deed, is sufficient, although it does not appear that the deed was good as against creditors. Reg. v. Richards, 2 L. M. & P. 263; 20 L. J., Q. B. 351; 15 Jur. 358.

Goods having been seized under an execution issued out of a county court, were claimed by a third party, who delivered particulars of his claim. The judge of the county court having refused to adjudicate upon the claim, on the ground that the particulars did not distinguish that portion of the goods seized to which the claimant was entitled:—Held, that he should have determined what part the claimant was entitled to, and given judgment accordingly. Reg. v. Stapylton, 21 L. J., Q. B. 8; 15 Jur. 1177.

—— Claimant's Address.]—The decision of a judge with respect to the sufficiency of the statement of the claimant's address is not conclusive, but subject to review. Hardy v. Walker; M'Fee, Ex parte, 9 Ex. 261; 2 C. L. R. 278; 23 L. J., Ex. 57.

A particular, in which a claimant's address was stated as Elizabeth-street, Islington, whereas in fact it was Elizabeth-terrace, Islington, though erroneous, is not calculated to mislead, and is therefore sufficient within the meaning of the rule of the county court. Ib.

—— Amendment—Judge bound to Adjudicate on Merits.]—Where a summons has issued on an interpleader claim, the judge is bound to adjudicate upon it; and if the claimant has not delivered a sufficient particular, or not delivered it in the time required by the rule of court, the judge should either amend the particular, or order a new summons to issue, so that he may determine the case on the merits. Beswick v. Boffey, 9 Ex. 315; 2 C. L. R. 558; 23 L. J., Ex. 89; 2 W. R. 156.

Power of Judge to Adjudicate on Damages—Subsequent Actions for Damages.]—When an interpleader summons has been issued under the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), s. 31, the county court judge has power to adjudicate upon any special damages to which the claimant of the goods seized may be entitled, arising out of the execution; and, whether such damages are claimed before him or not, no action in respect of them can be maintained by the claimant. Death v. Harrison, 40 L. J., Ex. 26; L. R. 6 Ex. 15; 23 L. T. 495.

Where goods are seized under an execution issued on a judgment in a county court and sold, and an interpleader summons is taken out at the instance of the high bailiff, under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 31, the county court judge has power to adjudicate upon the damages, to which the claimant of the goods may be entitled, arising out of the execution, although the goods have been sold, and therefore are no longer in the control of the county court; and any action against the officers of the court for wrongfully depriving the plaintiff of his goods will be stayed; but an action against the purchasers of the goods from the officers of the county court will not be stayed. Hills v. Renny, 49 L. J., Ex. 710; 5 Ex. D. 313; 42 L. T. 610; 29 W. R. 328—C. A.

—— Trespass.] — Quære, whether a county court judge has jurisdiction on an interpleader summons, besides adjudging in favour of the claimant as to the right to the goods, to give damages for breaking and entering his house or premises, or for special damage arising from the taking of the goods. Mercer v. Stanbury, 25 L. J., Ex. 316; 4 W. R. 649.

But the superior court will not, on motion in an action for such trespass, where it does not appear that the judge has exercised such jurisdiction, stay the action or even strike out of the declaration such part as relates to the taking of the goods, and the special damage laid as resulting therefrom. Ib.

Since 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 31, a plaintiff who makes his claim in a county court to goods, without, at the same time, making a claim to damages, cannot afterwards, and subsequently to the adjudication and order of the judge, take proceedings against either the party at whose instance the warrant of execution was issued, or the bailiff who executed it, to recover damages for the trespass to his premises, or for any other injury arising out of the execution of the county court process. Death v. Harrison, 40 L. J., Ex. 26; L. R. 6 Ex. 15; 23 L. T. 495.

Upon an interpleader summons, the judge decided that the goods seized were the goods of the claimant, but no complaint had been made before him as to the breaking and entering the house of the claimant. The claimant afterwards brought an action against the bailiff of the court for breaking and entering his house and taking his goods, under colour of a warrant of execution, and recovered damages, whereupon the bailiff applied for a rule to stay proceedings, upon the ground that a claim had already been made and adjudicated upon in respect of the same cause of action. The court refused to interfere. Foster v. Pritchard, 2 H. & N. 151; 26 L. J., Ex. 215; 5 W. R. 610.

Brewing utensils, hops, &c., having been seized under a warrant of execution against the goods of A., were claimed by B. On the 5th of October the bailiff caused an interpleader summons to be issued, calling on the parties to appear on the 18th, when the claim would be adjudicated upon. The judge decided that the goods were the property of B. The goods having been given up, B. commenced an action against the execution creditor for damages, for wrongfully depriving him of the possession of the goods, by means whereof he was prevented from carrying on his trade as brewer, alleging special damage. The court refused to interfere to stay the proceedings at the instance of the defendant. Jones v. Williams, 4 H. & N. 706; 28 L. J., Ex. 324.

Goods were seized in the house of J., under a warrant of execution from a county court. In an action against M., J. claimed the goods. The judge of the county court, on an interpleader summons, adjudicated that they belonged to M. J. then sued the officer who had seized in the Queen's Bench, for entering his premises and seizing the goods:—Held, that a judge might stay the action in the Queen's Bench, it not being shown that there was any cause of complaint besides that of entering the premises to seize the goods. Jessop v. Crawley, 15 Q. B. 212; 19 L. J., Q. B. 319; 14 Jur. 697.

Where an interpleader summons, in respect of goods taken in execution, has been decided in favour of the claimant, an action may afterwards be brought for breaking and entering the premises in which the goods were seized. Cater or Chater v. Chignell, 15 Q. B. 217; 19 L. J., Q. B. 520; 14 Jur. 697.

The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 118, applies to claims made in respect of trespasses committed upon the claimant's house in the course of seizing the goods, as well as in respect of the goods seized. Tinkler v. Hilder, 7 D. & L. 61; 4 Ex. 187; 18 L. J., Ex. 429; 13 Jur. 684.

Finality of Decision as to Costs.]—A judge, having refused to hear an interpleader summons, and ordered money to be paid out of court, with costs, to be paid by the claimant, on the ground of the insufficiency of the particulars, a rule was obtained calling on the county court judge to hear the summons. No cause being shown, the court made the rule absolute, ordering the costs of the rule to abide the event of the interpleader issue, and discharging the claimant from the costs of the county court. Whitehead v. Proctor, 3 H. & N. 532. See next case.

The authority given by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 74, s. 4, to the superior courts to grant a rule calling upon the judge of a county court, or an officer of such court, to show cause why they should not do an act relating to their respective offices, does not confer any jurisdiction to interfere with an order of the judge of the county court as to costs. Churchward v. Coleman, 35 L. J., Q. B. 57; L. R. 2 Q. B. 18.

A county court judge gave judgment on an interpleader issue for the execution creditor, with costs. The court, upon appeal, reversed the judgment, and ordered a new trial; holding that the whole judgment, including that part of it which related to the costs, was thereby reversed. Gage v. Collins, 36 L. J., C. P. 144; L. R. 2 C. P. 381; 15 W. R. 568.

Action by Bailiff for Costs.]—Proceedings were taken by way of interpleader, respecting a claim to goods taken in execution by the high bailiff of the court, and the judge dismissed the claim, and ordered the costs of the interpleader proceedings to be paid by the claimant. The bailiff afterwards sold the goods, and paid the amount of the levy into court, and the same was subsequently received by the execution creditor:—Held, that the bailiff had no right of action for his costs of interpleader against the execution creditor. Bloor v. Huston, 15 C. B. 266; 3 C. L. R. 222; 24 L. J., C. P. 26; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 256; 3 W. R. 113.

Appeal.]—Where a landlord appears upon the hearing of an interpleader summons, he, as well as the execution creditor and the claimant, has a right of appeal. Wilcoxon v. Searby, 5 H. & N. 202; 29 L. J., Ex. 154; 1 L. T. 481; 8 W. R. 279.

An appeal lies where the value of the goods claimed against the execution creditor exceeds 20*l.*, though the execution is for a sum less than 20*l.*, and the claimant, to prevent the goods from being sold, has paid such sum. Vallance v. Nash, 2 H. & N. 712; 27 L. J., Ex. 142; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 431; 6 W. R. 227.

Certiorari.]—A certiorari does not lie to remove interpleader proceedings in a county court. Summers, Ex parte, 18 Jur. 522.

7. New Trial.

Power of Judge to Grant.]—The power to grant new trials conferred upon the judges of county courts by s. 93 of the County Courts Act, 1888, is not an absolute power to be exercised upon any grounds which the judge may think fit, but subject to the same limitations as to the grounds on which a new trial may be granted as are imposed upon judges of the Supreme Court. Murtagh v. Barry, 59 L. J., Q. B. 388; 24 Q. B. D. 632; 38 W. R. 526.

—— When Notice Insufficient.] — Ord. XXVIII., r. 1, of the County Court Rules, 1875, provides that a person applying for a new trial in a county court shall give the opposite party seven clear days' notice in writing of his intention so to apply. A notice was given by the defendant to the plaintiffs by letter on the 8th November, stating that he would apply on the 12th November for a new trial. The plaintiffs refused to accept this notice as being too short, and did not attend at the hearing on the 12th. The fact that the plaintiffs objected to the notice was brought before the judge, who, however, made an order for a new trial. The plaintiffs applied for a prohibition to restrain the judge from hearing the case on the new trial:—Held, that a prohibition ought not to be granted, as the proper proceeding to have been adopted would have been to have made an application to the judge to set aside the order for a new trial as irregular. Jones (Trustees) v. Gittins, 51 L. T. 599.

The discretionary power to grant a new trial by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. s. 9, is not interfered with by the county court rule. which is merely a directory rule of practice. Carter v. Smith, 4 El. & Bl. 696; 3 C. L. R. 848; 24 L. J., Q. B. 141; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 279; 3 W. R. 235.

Therefore, notwithstanding the omission to give the seven days' notice required by such rule, the judge has jurisdiction to entertain an application for a new trial. Ib.

—— Action struck out for want of Jurisdiction.]—A county court judge struck a case out under s. 14 of the County Courts Act, 1867, for want of jurisdiction, but subsequently, being of opinion that his decision as to jurisdiction was erroneous, ordered a new trial:—Held, that he had power to order a new trial in such a case. Lister v. Wood, 23 Q. B. D. 229; 37 W. R. 738; 53 J. P. 773—C. A.

Agreement to accept Verdict of Majority of Jury.]—On the trial of an action in a county court the parties agreed to accept the verdict of the majority of the jury, but afterwards the unsuccessful party applied for and obtained a new trial on the ground that the finding of the jury was against the weight of evidence:—Held, that the county court judge had power to entertain the application, and was within his jurisdiction in holding that the consent of the parties meant no more than that they agreed to treat the verdict of the majority as equivalent to an unanimous verdict. Groom v. Shuker, 69 L. T. 293.

Second Application.]—After a judge of a county court has heard and refused an application for a new trial, the judgment of the court is final, and the judge has no power upon a subsequent application on another court day to grant a new trial. G. N. Ry. v. Mossop, 17 C. B. 130; 25 L. J., C. P. 22; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 21; 4 W. R. 116.

A county court judge who, on the verdict of a jury being given at the trial of an action, hears an application for a new trial and refuses to grant it on the grounds then assigned, but gives leave to the applicant to make another application at a later date on fresh materials, is not functus officio with respect to the action so as to have no jurisdiction to entertain the second application and grant a new trial if he thinks fit. G. N. Ry. v. Mossop (17 C. B. 130), distinguished. Moxon v. London Tramways Co., or Reg. v. Greenwich County Court Judge, 60 L. T. 248; 37 W. R. 132—C. A.

Objection to Second Hearing in County Court.]—The provisions in 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 39, and Ord. IX. r. 5, County Court Rules, 1875, enabling a defendant in the county court to a claim exceeding 20*l.* in contract or 5*l.* in tort, to object to the trial taking place in the county court, on giving notice five clear days before the "return day," do not apply to the case of a second trial. Where, therefore, a new trial of an action had been, on the application of a defendant, granted by the county court judge:—Held, that the defendant could not, under the above statute, take objection to the new trial being had in the county court. Campbell v. Fairlie, 49 L. J., Q. B. 445.

And see PRACTICE (NEW TRIAL).

8. COSTS.

County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 113—119.

Where Action struck out for want of Jurisdiction.]—Before 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 14, where a judge of a county court had no jurisdiction, he had no right to award costs. Consequently a judge had formerly no jurisdiction to award costs to a defendant when it appeared that title to land came in question. Lawford v. Partridge, 1 H. & N. 621; 26 L. J., Ex. 147; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 271; 5 W. R. 295.

The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 79, giving power to the judge to award costs in cases of failure of proof on the part of the plaintiff, did not apply where the case was out of the jurisdiction of the court, but only where there was a failure of proof in cases within the jurisdiction. Ib.

And s. 88, in like manner, only applied to cases within the jurisdiction of the county court. Ib.

Plaint entered by Solicitor—Signature of Particulars.]—In order to entitle the plaintiff in an action in a county court to the costs of entering a plaint by a solicitor, the solicitor must sign the particulars, and a lithographed statement of the solicitor's name on the particulars is not sufficient. Reg. v. Cowper, or Croydon Deputy County Court Judge, 59 L. J., Q. B. 265; 24 Q. B. D. 533; 62 L. T. 583; 38 W. R. 408—C. A.

—— —— Clerk authorised to sign Solicitor's Name.]—A claimant's particulars in an interpleader issue in a county court were signed by his solicitor's clerk with the name of his solicitor:—Held, that they were properly signed by the solicitor within the provisions of the County Court Rules, 1889, and that the claimant was entitled to the costs of the particulars. Reg. v. Cowper (24 Q. B. D. 60, 533) distinguished. France v. Dutton, 60 L. J., Q. B. 488; [1891] 2 Q. B. 208; 64 L. T. 793; 39 W. R. 716.

Semble, that where a plaintiff in a county court claims an amount exceeding 20*l.*, but recovers a sum under 5*l.*, he is only entitled to costs upon the lower scale. But where a plaintiff claims more than 20*l.*, and the defendant succeeds, he is entitled to costs upon the higher scale. Clifton v. Furley, 7 H. & N. 783; 31 L. J., Ex. 170; 10 W. R. 358.

Admission of Truth of Plaintiff's Particulars—C. C. R. 1889, Ord. IX. rr. 4 & 5.]—In order that a defendant may rely on Ord. IX. rr. 4 and 5, to deprive a successful plaintiff of the costs of the hearing at the trial, the admission made by him must be clean and clear, and such a one that it dispenses with any proof on behalf of the plaintiff. Pincott v. Letts, 77 L. T. 160.

Certificate on Higher Scale—Grounds for Giving.]—In awarding costs on the higher scale to a successful party under s. 5 of the County Courts Salaries Act, 1882, it is not sufficient for the judge to certify that the action involved a question of character:—Quære, whether the court will inquire into the sufficiency of the grounds of a certificate so framed. Reg. v. City of London Court Judge, 56 L. J., Q. B. 79; 18 Q. B. D. 105; 55 L. T. 736; 35 W. R. 123.

A certificate under s. 5 should follow the language of the section—Per Stephen, J. Ib.

A county court judge has no power to order costs to be taxed on the 100*l.* scale when there is a less amount claimed in the action, unless he certify that the action involved some novel or difficult point of law, or that the question litigated was of importance to some class or body of persons or of general or public interest. The reservation of the powers, rights, and privileges of the judge of the City of London Court in s. 35 of the County Court Act, 1867, does not confer upon him any greater power over costs than that given to judges of county courts. Howard v. Graves, 52 L. T. 858.

—— Less than £20 recovered — Discretion.]—Ord. L. r. 20, of the County Court Rules, 1889, by which a county court judge is empowered to give costs on the higher scale in actions where the claim exceeds 20*l.* and the plaintiff recovers a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, is not rendered ultra vires by, nor is it inconsistent with the s. 119 of the County Courts Act, 1888, which allows a county court judge to award costs on the higher scale in the three classes of actions there specified. King v. Charing Cross Bank, 59 L. J., Q. B. 24; 62 L. T. 42; 38 W. R. 287.

—— Certificate signed on day subsequent to Order.]—Ord. L. r. 8, of the County Court Rules, 1889, provides that "where a judge certifies under s. 119 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the certificate shall be entered at the end of the minutes of the court of the day on which it is given, and shall be signed by the judge." The judge made an order for costs on the higher scale, but omitted to give the certificate required by s. 119 of the County Courts Act, 1888, on the same day. On a subsequent day he signed a certificate, which was entered at the end of the minutes of the court of the day on which he made the order:—Held, that he was not prevented from adopting this course by the provisions of Ord. L. r. 8. Badcock v. Hunt, 38 W. R. 255.

Witnesses not called—General Rule.]—A county court judge cannot lay down a general practice that only the costs of such witnesses who have been called at the trial shall be allowed, and that if it be desired to have witnesses allowed who have not been called application is to be made to him; such practice being contrary to the provisions of Ord. L. r. 16, of the County Court Rules. The Cashmere, 59 L. J., P. 57; 15 P. D. 121; 62 L. T. 814; 38 W. R. 623; 6 Asp. M. C. 515.

Counsel — Refresher — Adjournment for want of Time.]—Where a county court is held from day to day, it rests with the judge to say whether the sittings shall be one continuous sitting or a succession of several sittings, so that when a case which appears in the list is not reached on one day, but is heard in its turn on another day, a refresher may be allowed by order of the judge as upon an adjournment for want of time under item 78 in the scale of costs of the County Court Rules, 1889. Heap v. Peart, [1891] 1 Q. B. 110; 39 W. R. 95.

—— Fee for Travelling Expenses—No Local Bar—Case lasting more than one Day.]—In a taxation of costs in a county court the item No. 86 of the higher scale of costs which is allowable to counsel where there is no local bar in or within twenty miles of the court town, can only be allowed once in the same case, although counsel engaged may have been present on more than one occasion. Atkinson v. Carlisle Corporation, 65 L. J., Q. B. 331; [1896] 1 Q. B. 393.

Taxation—Scale of Costs in Actions under £10.]—The Appendix to the County Court Rules, 1886, contains a scale of costs as between solicitor and client where the amount recovered exceeds 2*l.* and does not exceed 10*l.*, and provides that no other costs are to be allowed where the amount claimed does not exceed 10*l.*, unless the judge certifies under s. 5 of the County Courts (Costs and Salaries) Act, 1882. The plaintiff having commenced an action in a county court for 10*l.*, consulted solicitors with reference to it, who after taking various steps to investigate the claim recommended a settlement, which the plaintiff refused to accept. The solicitors then returned the papers to the plaintiff, who proceeded with the action in person:—Held, that upon the taxation of the solicitors' bill for the services rendered by them, it was a question for the master whether the solicitors had, in fact, acted in the conduct of the action, and that if they appeared to have so acted, they could recover no other costs than those specified in the appendix. Emanuel and Co., In re (9 Q. B. D. 408) considered. Dod. Longstaffe and Co., In re; Lamond, Ex parte, 57 L. J., Q. B. 503; 21 Q. B. D. 242; 59 L. T. 467.

—— Taxation between Solicitor and Client—Less than £10 Recovered.]—See Langlois and Biden, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 123; [1891] 1 Q. B. 349; 63 L. T. 816; 39 W. R. 181—C. A.

—— Action by Solicitor against Client—Action remitted.]—See Boydell v. Millar, 60 L. J., Q. B. 251; 64 L. T. 299; 39 W. R. 335.

Right of Unqualified Practitioner to Recover.]—A person not duly qualified as a solicitor, who nevertheless acts for parties in an action in the county court and does solicitor's work for them, is not entitled to recover his expenses and fees from those for whom he acts, the Solicitors Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 68), s. 12, having enacted that none but duly qualified solicitors shall be entitled to do so. Verlander v. Eddolls, 51 L. J., Q. B. 55; 45 L. T. 543; 30 W. R. 104. And see SOLICITOR.

Equitable Jurisdiction — Administration Action.]—A county court judge is not bound by the rule in equity which prevailed before the Judicature Acts,—that the plaintiff in an administration suit, properly brought, was entitled to his costs out of the estate. The judge has, by virtue of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 88, and 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, s. 21, an absolute discretion over such costs, and may therefore order the plaintiff to pay the costs of the action, and no appeal will lie against his order. Cooper v. Busbridge (16 L. T. 5) discussed. Plumb v. Craker, 55 L. J., Q. B. 116; 16 Q. B. D. 40; 55 L. T. 404.

In estimating the value of an estate of a testator for the purpose of ascertaining whether costs are to be paid on the higher or lower scale, the value of the estate at the death of the testator is to be looked at, although the costs of a suit to get in part of the assets may reduce that amount. Steward v. Nurse, 43 L. J., Ch. 384.

—— Taxation in Chancery Division.]—By the combined operation of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 73), s. 37, and the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 16, as modified by the County Courts Act, 1856, s. 36, the costs as between solicitor and client in a county court action in which the claim exceeds 20*l.* may be taxed in the High Court of Justice: consequently, the costs as between solicitor and client in a county court administration action may be taxed in the Chancery Division. Worth, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 262; 18 Ch. D. 521; 44 L. T. 462; 29 W. R. 371.

See also Pain v. Bowden, 65 L. J., Q. B. 530; [1896] 2 Q. B. 301; 75 L. T. 102; 45 W. R. 48.

—— Action for Specific Performance.]—A suit for specific performance of sale of leasehold property for 150*l.*, subject to rent of 92*l.* 10*s.* and covenant to keep insured, is a proper case to allow full costs notwithstanding 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142. Carpmael v. Carvell, 18 W. R. 513.

—— Foreclosure.]—The statutes conferring equitable jurisdiction on the county courts do not in any way prohibit or restrict a plaintiff from instituting proceedings in the Court of Chancery; and a plaintiff who institutes such proceedings is entitled to his usual costs. Brown v. Rye, 43 L. J., Ch. 228; L. R. 7 Eq. 343; 29 L. T. 872.

Where, therefore, a suit was instituted in the Court of Chancery for foreclosure of a mortgage for 50*l.*:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the usual costs of a mortgagee who sues in that court. Ib.

A mortgagor received an advance of 900*l.* from a building society, and conveyed to the society property to secure the payment by him of 900*l.* and interest in 120 instalments (amounting together to 1,275*l.*), and also of certain fines and charges in the event of his failing to pay the instalments. A decree for redemption was made, the costs of the suit to be added to the security:—Held, that as the sum originally advanced was less than 1,000*l.*, the costs must be taxed on the lower scale, and that the fines and charges which might be incurred could not for this purpose be considered as added to the sum advanced. Cotterell v. Stratton, 43 L. J., Ch. 573; L. R. 9 Ch. 514; 30 L. T. 589; 22 W. R. 607.

Held, also, that the scale of taxation was not dependent on the amount due when the bill was filed. Ib.

In a suit to enforce a charge or a lien for an amount under 1,000*l.* against the purchasers of real estate for an account of the amount due, and for a receiver and sale, the costs ought to be taxed upon the lower scale. Paddon v. Winch, 44 L. J., Ch. 568; L. R. 20 Eq. 449; 32 L. T. 794; 23 W. R. 787.

In a suit instituted on behalf of infants by their next friend in a county court, the judge, in the absence of the necessary undertaking by the plaintiff to be answerable for costs, dismissed the plaint:—Held, that the plaint ought to have been allowed to stand over until the requisite undertaking had been duly signed and annexed to it. Williams v. Williams, 16 L. T. 581.

When a plaintiff commences a suit in the county court, which at the hearing is transferred to the High Court of Justice because the subject-matter exceeds in amount 500*l.*, the plaintiff, though he succeeds and obtains the general costs of the suit, must pay the costs of the hearing before the county court. Ward v. Wyld, 5 Ch. D. 779; 37 L. T. 68; 25 W. R. 866.

Reviewing.]—A superior court has no power to direct a county court judge to order a review of taxation of costs. Clifton v. Furley, 7 H. & N. 783; 31 L. J., Ex. 170; 10 W. R. 358.

Execution for.]—A plaintiff who has recovered a judgment for debt and costs in a county court, and has received the debt out of court, is entitled to have a writ of execution issued for the costs; and the court will grant a mandamus to the clerk of the county court, commanding him to issue such writ of execution. Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 El. & Bl. 279; 21 L. J., Q. B. 310; 17 Jur. 179.

F. APPEAL.

County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 120—125.

1. IN WHAT CASES.

The County Courts Act, 1875, s. 6, which gives an appeal from county courts by way of motion instead of special case, is limited in its application to those matters in which appeals previously existed. Cousins v. Lombard Deposit Bank, 45 L. J., Ex. 573; 1 Ex. D. 404; 35 L. T. 484; 25 W. R. 116.

"Determination of the Court"—Judgment pro formâ.]—A divisional court has no jurisdiction to hear a motion to set aside a judgment entered by a county court judge pro formâ in order to expedite an appeal, such entry of judgment not being a determination or direction of a county court within the meaning of the 14th section of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61. Chapman v. Withers, 58 L. T. 24.

Application to County Court under s. 22 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875.]—By s. 22 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, disputes between members of a friendly society and the society or its officers are to be decided in manner directed by the rules of the society, and by sub-s. (d), "where the rules contain no direction as to disputes, or where no decision is made on a dispute within forty days after application to the society for a reference under its rules, the member or person aggrieved may apply either to the county court, or to a court of summary jurisdiction, which may hear and determine the matter in dispute":—Held, that the application to the county court contemplated by sub-s. (d) must be taken to be an application in the form of an action commenced in the county court, and not a reference to the county court judge sitting as an arbitrator, and that there was an appeal from the decision upon such application to the high court. Wilkinson v. Jagger, 57 L. J., Q. B. 254; 20 Q. B. D. 423; 58 L. T. 487; 36 W. R. 169; 52 J. P. 533.

Under Companies Act, 1867.]—An appeal on a matter of discretion, and not on a point of law only, lies to the divisional court, because the appeal to a vice-chancellor under the Companies Act, 1867, is by the Judicature Act transferred to the high court. Andrew or Jones v Swansea Cambrian Benefit Building Society 50 L. J., Q. B. 428; 44 L. T. 106; 29 W. R. 382; 45 J. P. 507.

Decision under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883.]—An appeal lies from a decision of a county court judge in the matter of a dispute heard and determined by him under s. 46 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, under the general powers of appeal contained in s. 13 of the County Courts Act, 1867. Hamm v. King. 57 L. T. 367; 51 J. P. 804.

Garnishee Order.]—Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, there was no appeal from a garnishee order under the County Court Rules, 1875, as it was not a decision in an "action" or "cause" within the meaning of the County Courts Acts. Mason v. Wirral Highway Board, 48 L. J., Q. B. 679; 4 Q. B. D. 459; 27 W. R. 676.

Committal Order.]—The appeal given by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, applies only to judgments of county courts, and not to orders of committal under s. 99 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. Blowers v. Rackham, 20 L. J., Q. B. 397; 15 Jur. 758.

Assault on Bailiff in Execution of his Duty—Fine Imposed by Judge.]—There is no right of appeal from an order of a county court judge, made under s. 48 of the County Courts Act, 1888, imposing a fine for an assault upon a bailiff of the court while engaged in the execution of his duty. Lewis v. Owen, 63 L. J., Q. B. 233; [1894] 1 Q. B. 102; 10 R. 59; 69 L. T. 861; 42 W. R. 254; 58 J. P. 263.

Committal for Contempt.]—The superior court will decline to exercise any appellate jurisdiction over the county court in matters of fine or committal for contempt, except where there is no reasonable evidence of any contempt having been committed, and the liberty of the subject requires protection. Reg. v. Jordan. 36 W. R. 589.

30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 13—Pending Proceedings.]—This enactment affects only the mode of procedure, and therefore applies to actions pending at the time when the act came into operation. Ruthbone v. Munn, 9 B. & S. 708; 18 L. T. 856.

A case was heard in the sheriff's court of the city of London on the 26th of July, 1867, before a deputy sitting for the judge, and judgment was reserved. The judge, on the 30th August, 1867, read the judgment of his deputy, but in order to give the defendant an opportunity of appealing under the above provision, which was to come into operation on 1st January, 1868, postponed the formal delivery of the judgment until that day. The judgment was delivered on the 1st January, 1868, and leave to appeal given by the judge:—Held, that the judgment of the deputy was the judgment of the court: that the judge had power to postpone the formal delivery of it; and that the judgment in the case was not actually delivered until the 1st of January, 1868. Ib.

Before 30 & 31 Vict. c. 42, s. 35, the Sheriff's Court in the City of London was not a county court within the 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, s. 18, and consequently there was no appeal under the act from the judge of the Sheriff's Court to the Vice-Chancellor. Harper v. Pole, 36 L. J., Ch. 375; L. R. 3 Eq. 752; 16 L. T. 50; 15 W. R. 502. S. P. Gardner v. Cachar Co., 36 L. J., Ch. 432

Interlocutory Order — Point of Law.] — There is a right of appeal under s. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, from the determination of a county court judge in point of law or equity, although the decision or order appealed from was not given or made at the trial of the action. How v. L. & N. W. Ry., 61 L. J., Q. B. 358; [1891] 2 Q. B. 496; 66 L. T. 398; 40 W. R. 44; 56 J. P. 56.

—— —— Order of County Court Judge for New Trial.]—Although an appeal to the high court lies, under s. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, against an order of the county court judge granting a new trial, on the ground that his decision is wrong in point of law, no such appeal lies where the order is made solely on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence. Ib.

—— Refusal to Grant New Trial.]—An appeal lies to the High Court from the refusal of a county court judge to grant a new trial. Dictum in How v. L. & N. W. Ry. ([1891] 2 Q. B. 497), disapproved. Pole v. Bright, 61 L. J., Q. B. 139; [1892] 1 Q. B. 603; 65 L. T. 748; 40 W. R. 95.

No appeal lies from the decision of a county court judge refusing to grant a new trial when applied for on the ground solely of the verdict being against the weight of evidence. Wilton v. Leeds Forge Valley Co., 32 W. R. 461.

—— Equitable Jurisdiction.]—An appeal lies from an order made in an interlocutory proceeding, by a judge of a county court, by virtue of the equitable jurisdiction conferred by the County Courts Act, 1865. Jones v Long, 57 L. J., Q. B. 298; 20 Q. B. D. 564; 58 L. T. 787; 36 W. R. 315; 52 J. P. 468—C. A.

—— Taxation.]—The County Courts Act, 1888, gives a right of appeal to the high court in all interlocutory matters, and the principle of the cases which have decided that an appeal lies from the order of a county court judge granting or refusing to grant a new trial is equally applicable to the case of an appeal on a question of taxation. Gilson v. Kilner, 69 L. T. 310.

Amount of Claim.]—No appeal will lie where the amount sought by the plaint to be recovered is under 20*l*. Blowers v. Rackham, 20 L. J., Q. B. 397; 15 Jur. 758.

It lies from a county court if the claim is for a sum above 20*l* and not exceeding 50*l*, though the verdict is for an amount under 20*l* Harris v Dreesman, 9 Ex 485, 2 C L R 498, 23 L J Ex 210

In order to determine whether the amount of the damages recoverable in an action brought in a county court is below or above 20*l* so as to determine the right to appeal against the decision it is not the sum mentioned in the plaint to which the court of appeal will look but the sum which might have been lawfully recovered under the plaint Mayer v Burgess 4 El & Bl 655 24 L J, Q B 67 1 Jur (N S) 473

When the claim as shown by the particulars exceeds 20*l*, the plaintiff cannot, by abandonment of the excess at the trial deprive the defendant of his right of appeal North v Holroyd, 37 L J, Ex 42, L R 3 Ex 69, 17 L T 57

Before the 17 & 18 Vict c 16 no appeal lay under the 13 & 14 Vict c 61 s 17 from the decision of the judge in an action where the amount of the claim exceeded 50*l* but where jurisdiction was given by agreement of the parties Groves v Janssens 9 Ex 481 2 C L R 505, 23 L J Ex 91, 2 W R 192

—— Counterclaim exceeding £20]—An appeal will lie from the decision of a county court judge on a counterclaim for an amount exceeding 20*l*, even although the claim does not exceed that amount Smith v Gill, 65 L J Q B 556, [1896] 2 Q B 166

—— Ejectment—Annual Value under £20—Appeal without Leave]—No appeal lies to the high court, without leave from the decision of a judge of a county court in actions for the recovery of tenements, whether the parties be landlord and tenant or otherwise, or whether the title to such premises be in question or not, where the yearly rent or value thereof does not exceed 20*l* Shrewsbury (Earl) v Garfield 60 L J, Q B 765

—— Replevin — Proof of Value of Goods Seized]—In an action of replevin, where the right of appeal from the county court is disputed on the ground that the value of the goods seized does exceed 20*l* (Semble per Wright, J), there should be an appraisement with an affidavit of value Smith v Enright, 63 L J, Q B 220, 69 L T. 724

Interpleader—Amount not exceeding £20]—An appeal does not lie even by leave of the judge from the decision of the county court in proceedings in interpleader, where neither the money claimed nor the value of the goods or chattels claimed or of the proceeds thereof, exceeds 20*l* Collis v Lewis, 57 L J, Q B 167, 20 Q B D 202, 57 L T 716, 36 W R 472

—— Less Amount than £20 deposited]—Where in an interpleader proceeding in a county court the claimant deposits the amount of the value of the goods claimed as fixed by appraisement under s 72 of the County Courts Act, 1856, he cannot, if the amount so deposited be less than 20*l*, claim to appeal under s 68 of the act on the ground that the value of the goods was over 20*l*, and that a less amount was deposited because it was sufficient to satisfy the execution creditor's judgment White v Milne, 58 L T 225

Right of Appeal where Damages claimed]—In an interpleader proceeding under s 157 of the County Courts Act 1888 the value of the goods claimed was less than 20*l*, and the claimant claimed damages exceeding 20*l*, against the high bailiff and the execution creditor At the hearing the judge gave judgment for 15*l* for the claimant against the execution creditor, and did not grant leave to appeal — Held, that the execution creditor had no right of appeal under s 120, which provides that there shall be no right to appeal in proceedings in interpleader where the money claimed, or the value of the goods and chattels claimed, or of the proceeds thereof does not exceed 20*l*, unless the judge shall grant leave to appeal Lumb v Teal, 58 L J, Q B 298, 22 Q B D 675, 60 L T 451

—— Before 17 & 18 Vict c 16]—Before the 17 & 18 Vict c 16 no appeal lay upon an interpleader summons Fraser v Fothergill, 14 C B 295, 23 L J, C P 53 5 P, Besant v Boffey 9 Ex 315, 2 C L R 503, 23 L J, Ex 89, 2 W R 156

—— Under 19 & 20 Vict c 108, s 68]—An appeal on proceedings in interpleader under the 19 & 20 Vict c 108 s 68 lay when goods seized under a plaint exceeded 20*l*, although the claim was for a sum less than 20*l* Vallance v Nash, 2 H & N 712 27 L J, Ex 142, 4 Jur (N S) 31, 6 W R 227

Question of Law raised at the Trial]—It is a condition precedent to the right to appeal under s 6 of the County Courts Act, 1875 that the question of law upon which it is desired to appeal should have been raised before the county court judge at the trial Clarkson v Musgrave, 51 L J, Q B 525, 9 Q B D 386, 31 W R. 47

Under the provisions of s 120 and the following clauses of the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 43), there is no right of appeal from a county court except upon a question of law raised and submitted to the county court judge at the trial Clarkson v Musgrave (9 Q B D 386) approved Smith v Baker 60 L J, Q B 683, [1891] A C 325 65 L T 467, 40 W R 392, 55 J P 660—H L (E)

Where a county court judge decides a case without a jury an appeal lies, if it appears that he decided according to an erroneous view of the law, notwithstanding that there is evidence which would support his finding. Robins v. Todd, 6 W R 466

A judge having stated a case in so confused a manner that the court could not discover whether or not he meant to present a question of law for their decision the case was remitted to him for amendment in this respect L & N. W Ry v Grace, 2 C B (N S) 555

Upon the case coming back, it clearly appeared to involve no question of law The court dismissed the appeal, without costs Ib

—— Judge's Notes.]—In an action brought in the Huntingdon county court to recover the value of a horse killed upon the appellant company's railway, the question of law was raised as to whether there was evidence of negligence to go before the judge, no note of the question of law being raised was made by the judge — Held that the court could not entertain the question, it not appearing upon the notes that such question was raised before the county court judge G E Ry v Giddens 44 J P 284

Semble per Hawkins, J, that the notes should have been referred back to the judge for the question to be noted, and if he had refused a rule should have been obtained to compel him to amend his notes Ib

An appeal lies by motion under 38 & 39 Vict c 50 s 6 from the decision of a county court judge on a point of law if it appears from the judge's note that such point was one which was decided by him in deciding the case whether such point was taken in argument before him or not Seymour v Coulson 49 L J Q B 604, 5 Q B D 358, 28 W R 664—C A

It is not a condition precedent to the right of appeal that the judge should have been requested at the trial to take a note Seymour v Coulson 49 L J Q B 604, 5 Q B D 358, 28 W R 664—C A

See post, col 981

—— Decision that Evidence to go to Jury—Witnesses for Defence]—The plaintiff having closed his case it was submitted by the advocate on the part of the defendant, that there was no evidence to go to the jury The judge deciding that there was evidence was offered on the part of the defendant and a verdict was ultimately found for the plaintiff The defendant did not by calling witnesses preclude himself from appealing, on the ground that the judge had ruled erroneously G N Ry v Rimell 18 C B 575

—— Improper Rejection of Evidence—Substantial Wrong]—The provisions of Ord XXXIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court 1883 r 6 apply to motions for new trials in county court cases made on appeal under the provisions of the County Court Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 50) s 6 A new trial will not be granted in such a case, on the ground of the improper rejection of evidence unless some substantial wrong or miscarriage has been occasioned Shapcott v Chappell, 53 L J, Q B 77, 12 Q B D 58, 32 W R 183

—— Law mixed with Fact]—Where an appeal is made against the determination of a county court on a point of law, the case should separate the facts and law Cauley v Parnell, 12 C B 291, 20 L J, C P 197, 15 Jur 908

Though questions as to fact, as well as of law, are in contest before the judge without a jury, an appeal will lie if the court can see from the facts of the case as stated that the judge in order to arrive at his judgment must have decided a question of law in a particular way Ib

—— From Refusal to enter Verdict or Grant New Trial]—On the trial of a cause before the judge of a county court and a jury, the jury found a special verdict, on which the judge entered the verdict for the defendant, giving leave to the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict or for a new trial The application was subsequently made and refused The plaintiff has a right of appeal from the decision of the judge in refusing to enter a verdict or grant a new trial Foster v Green, 6 H & N 793, 30 L J, Ex. 253

—— In equity cases]—To give ground for an appeal from a county court in equity cases there must be a misapplication by the judge of the principles of equity to the facts which he finds Hill v Peirse 25 W R 275

The question whether certain conversations amount in equity to a contract between the parties to them is not a mere question of fact, but is one the decision of which by a county court judge may be made the subject of an appeal In such a case the judge should with the case on the appeal send up all the evidence adduced at the hearing before him Williams v Williams, 37 L J Ch 834

On an appeal from a county court no question will be entertained which is not submitted by the case as signed by the judge Wallis v Evans, 44 L J Ch 319 L R 19 Eq 547 32 L T. 360, 23 W R 466

No Appeal on Question of Fact]—There is no appeal upon a question of fact East Anglian Ry v Lythgoe 2 L M & P 221 10 C B 726, 20 L J C P 84 15 Jur 400

Where a defendant who had been articled clerk to a railway company under an agreement determinable by three months notice or payment of three months salary, was dismissed without such notice or salary on the ground of misconduct, and claimed to set off the amount of such quarter's salary in an action brought against him in the county court by the company for money received to their use —Held that the decision as to whether the company was justified or not in so dismissing the defendant, could not be reviewed, and that the judge did right in law in allowing such set off to be made as under the agreement, the amount became a debt upon the defendant's dismissal Ib

—— Grant of New Trial on Ground of Excessive Damages]—Where a county court judge applies the right rule of law to the consideration of the question whether the verdict of a jury is against the evidence and grants a new trial on the ground that the damages are excessive no appeal lies to the high court under s 120 of the County Courts Act 1888 against his decision, as such decision whether right or wrong is upon a question of fact and not of law Howe v L & N W Ry 61 L J, Q B 365 [1892] 1 Q B 391, 66 L T 398, 40 W R 292—C A —— Decision against Weight of Evidence]—A party aggrieved cannot move against a decision of a judge on the ground of its being against the weight of evidence Cousins v. Lombard Banl, 1 Ex D 404

Observations of Judge]—The observations made by the judge in delivering judgment do not legitimately form part of the case upon appeal, and cannot be referred to either as finding a fact, or as giving a reason for the judgment East Anglian Ry v Lythgoe, 2 L M & P 221, 10 C B 726, 20 L J, C P 84 15 Jur. 400. S P, Ward v Riddifer, 6 W. R 326.

Leave of Judge—Discretion as to Terms.]—A county court judge having given a defendant leave to appeal, but subject to a condition that he should pay the plaintiff's costs of the appeal in any event, and should also, in case the appeal was unsuccessful, pay the costs of the trial upon the higher scale,—the divisional court held that it had no power to interfere with the discretion vested in him by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 13. Goodes v. Clut, 13 Q. B. D. 694.

Mistake of Registrar.]—Assuming that the registrar, acting under s. 90 of the County Courts Act, 1890, which gives him power in actions of contract to enter up judgment for the plaintiff on the non-appearance of the defendant, makes a mistake in not requiring proof of the debt being due, or in striking out a set-off and counter-claim, this is a matter for appeal, and is no ground for prohibition. Hooper v. Hill, 63 L. J., Q. B. 598; [1894] 1 Q. B. 659; 9 R. 332; 70 L. T. 224; 42 W. R. 394.

In Remitted Actions.]—See cases, ante, cols. 927, 932.

2. Practice on Appeal.

a. Parties.

Death of Respondent.]—If, on an appeal from a county court the respondent dies before the appeal is heard, the appellant will be allowed to proceed with his appeal on giving notice to the representatives of the deceased respondent, or if no such notice can be given, upon giving notice to the parties interested. Hemming v. Williams, 40 L. J., C. P. 270; L. R. 6 C. P. 480; 24 L. T. 755.

Death of Parties pending Appeal—Jurisdiction of High Court to add Legal Representatives.]—Where, on an appeal being brought from a county court, one of the parties dies after the entry of the appeal, the High Court has jurisdiction to give leave to add the personal representative of the party so dying, and the application need not be made to the county court. Blakeway v. Patteshall, [1894] 1 Q. B. 247.

b. Mode of and Time for.

In formâ pauperis—Proceedings on Crown side of the Queen's Bench Division.]—Appeals from inferior courts, although under Ord. LIX. r. 4, they are to be entered in the crown paper, are not proceedings on the crown side of the Queen's Bench Division within Ord. LXIII. r. 1; and therefore the court has jurisdiction to allow appellants from such courts to appeal in formâ pauperis. Mulleneisen v. Coulson (21 Q. B. D. 3), distinguished. Clements v. L. & N. W. Ry., [1894] 2 Q. B. 482; 9 R. 223; 42 W. R. 338; 58 J. P. 816—C. A.

Appeal by Motion—Appeal by Special Case abolished.]—All appeals from county courts to the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court must, since the Crown Office Rules, 1886 (Ord LIX. rr. 10 et seq.), be by notice of motion, notwithstanding the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, ss. 14, 15, which gave an appeal by special case Reg. v. Kettle, 55 L. J., Q. B. 470; 17 Q. B. D. 761; 54 L. T. 875; 34 W. R. 776.

The effect of Ord. LII. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is to repeal so much of s. 6 of the County Courts Act, 1875, as requires appeals from county courts to be made ex parte, in the first instance. And it is now necessary to give notice of motion under that order before moving the Queen's Bench Division on appeal from a decision of a county court judge. Harris v. Galpin, 47 J. P. 727.

Under the County Courts Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 50), s. 6, the power of appealing by motion applies to all actions where leave to appeal may be given, as well as to actions where such leave is unnecessary. Turner v. G. W. Ry., 46 L. J., Q. B. 226; 2 Q. B. D. 125; 35 L. T. 809.

Rivers Pollution.]—An appeal from a county court on the merits under s. 11 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act is by s. 124 of the County Courts Act, 1888, brought within the operation of s. 120 of the latter Act. Kirkheaton Local Board v. Ainley, 61 L. J., Q. B. 812; [1892] 2 Q. B. 274; 67 L. T. 200; 41 W. R. 99; 57 J. P. 36—C. A.

Notice of Appeal—Time of.]—The ten days allowed for notice of appeal from a county court must run from the time of the judge's decision, and are not prolonged by any subsequent application to him. Hemming v. Blanton, 42 L. J., C. P. 158; 21 W. R. 636.

When upon the trial of an action in a county court, with a jury, the judge, upon a special finding of the jury, directed the verdict to be entered for the defendant; but upon application of the plaintiff's attorney, reserved leave for the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict for the plaintiff, or for a new trial, and notice of the application was afterwards given; the plaintiff's right of appeal is to be reckoned from the day the motion was refused, and not from the day of trial. Foster v. Green 7 H. & N. 793; 30 L. J., Ex. 263.

Extension of Time—Discretion.]—The court has a discretion under Ord. LIX. r. 16, to extend the time for appealing from a county court, and such discretion is not to be exercised loosely, but according to the circumstances of each particular case. Reg. v. Kettle (17 Q. B. D. 761) and Collins v. Paddington Vestry (5 Q. B. D. 368) explained. Cusack v. L. & N. W. Ry., 60 L. J., Q. B. 208; [1891] 1 Q. B. 347; 64 L. T. 45; 39 W. R. 244; 55 J. P. 341—C. A.

Post-dating Judgment.]—A county court judge cannot, by allowing his judgment to be post-dated, extend the time prescribed by s. 6 of the County Courts Act, 1875, for appeal by motion, beyond the eight days after the ruling, order, direction, or decision complained of shall have been actually made or given. Wilberforce v. Sowton, 48 L. J., C. P. 28; 39 L. T. 474.

A written judgment having been delivered by the county court judge on the 18th of April in favour of the defendant, the plaintiff's counsel applied to the judge to adjourn the case further, in order to enable him to move by way of appeal, under s. 6 of the County Courts Act, 1875, after the Easter vacation. The judge accordingly added to his judgment, "If I have the power to do so, I will allow the judgment to be treated as delivered on this day fortnight," and the judgment was entered as dated on the 2nd May. Within eight days from that day the plaintiff moved under s. 6, and obtained a rule nisi:—Held, that the motion was too late. Ib.

Time for—From Judgment, not from Refusal of New Trial.]—In an action tried in the county court an appeal will not lie against the decision of the county court judge on an application for a new trial; so that the time within which the unsuccessful party in the county court may appeal to the Queen's Bench Division begins to run from the date of the judgment at the trial, and not from the date of the judge's decision on the application for a new trial. McHardy v. Liptrott, 56 L. J., Q. B. 459; 19 Q. B. D. 151.

Where an application for a new trial was made to a county court judge within two days of the original trial, and he took a fortnight to consider and then refused to grant a new trial, and a rule nisi for a new trial was obtained from the high court within two days of such refusal:—He'd, that such rule was obtained out of time, as the eight days for appealing began to run from the day of the original trial, and not from the refusal of the county court judge. Morris v. Lowe, 34 W. R. 45.

—— From Verdict, not from Judgment.]—When the finding of a jury in a county court is complained of, the twenty-one days within which an appeal may be entered is to be calculated from the time when the verdict was given, although the judgment upon it was not given until a subsequent day. Rawnsley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 35 W. R. 771.

Waiver.]—The provision in the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, as to notice of appeal and security for costs by a party appealing from a county court, is not a condition precedent to the superior court having jurisdiction to hear the appeal, but is a matter of procedure entirely for the benefit of the respondent and which may be waived by him. Parkgate Iron Co. v. Coates, 39 L. J., C. P. 317; L. R. 5 C. P. 634; 22 L. T. 658; 18 W. R. 928.

Parties to an appeal from a county court may waive the limit of thirty days from the determination or direction intended to be appealed from, and their consent to the signature of the case for appeal by the county court judge is sufficient evidence of such waiver. Ward v. Raw, L. R. 15 Eq. 83; 27 L. T. 601; 21 W. R. 116.

A judge is bound, on the application of an appellant who has complied with the requirements of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, to settle and sign a case for appeal, though presented to him for that purpose at a court subsequently to that holden next after twelve clear days from the day on which judgment was pronounced; the effect of the county court rule being not to take away the right of appeal on a failure to comply with the rule, but merely to subject a non-complying appellant to execution, notwithstanding the appeal. Hacking v. Lee, 2 El. & El. 906; 29 L. J., Q. B. 204; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 952; 8 W. R. 495.

In Equity Matters.]—The general orders of the Court of Chancery do not apply to county court appeals. Cheesewright v. Thorn, 38 L. J., Ch. 615; 20 L. T. 152.

Under the Rules, Orders, and Forms for Regulating the Practice of the County Courts, 1867, an order to stay proceedings in a county court pending an appeal from a decree on a plaint in equity will be made by the Court of Chancery without any previous application having been made to the judge who pronounced the decree. Ib.

Service of Notice — On London Agent or Country Solicitor.]—In an action commenced in the high court the address for service mentioned on the writ was the address of certain London solicitors, agents for the plaintiff's solicitor. The action was remitted to a county court, and on the particulars which were duly lodged with the registrar and a copy of which was served upon the defendant's solicitors, the address for service was stated to be that of the plaintiff's country solicitor. After the action had been heard and judgment had been delivered in the plaintiff's favour, a notice of appeal on the part of the defendant was, on the last day for service of appeal, served upon the London agents, whose names appeared upon the writ:—Held, that the service was bad, on the ground that the address for service indorsed on the particulars was substituted for the address for service indorsed upon the writ. Malley v. Shepley, 62 L. J., Q. B. 31; 5 R. 73; 68 L. T. 294; 41 W. R. 63, 302.

Semble, that in the case of an appeal from a county court where the solicitor to the respondent carries on business in the country, service of the notice of motion upon the London agent of the solicitor is not sufficient service to satisfy Ord. LIX. r. 12. Powell v. Thomas [1891], 1 Q. B. 97; 63 L. T. 812; 39 W. R. 224.

In appeals from county courts where the solicitor for the respondent carries on business in the country, the notice of appeal should be served within the proper time upon the respondent's solicitor, and not on the solicitor's London agent. Powell v. Thomas ([1891] 1 Q. B. 97) followed. Jackson v. Margrett, 5 R. 181; 68 L. T. 91; 41 W. R. 267.

c. Security for Costs.

Rules of Supreme Court, 1883—Order LIX., Rule 14.

If it appears to the court that there is reasonable ground for the appeal, the court will not order the appellant to give security for the costs of the appeal merely on the ground that he has no visible means of paying the respondent's costs should the appeal fail. Pritchett v. Poole, 76 L. T. 472.

The court will not as a rule require security for the costs of an appeal from the county court where leave to appeal has been unconditionally given by the judge of the county court. Society of Apothecaries, Ex parte, 38 W. R. 478.

Appeal in formâ pauperis.] — Security for costs will not be ordered to be given by a party who, having appeared in formâ pauperis in the county court, is appealing therefrom to the high court. Biggs v. Dugnall, 64 L. J., Q. B. 221; [1895] 1 Q. B. 207; 15 R. 252.

Infant's Next Friend.] — The plaintiff, an infant, brought an action in the county court, and sued by his next friend. Judgment was given for the defendants with costs, but they were unable to obtain payment owing to the next friend's insolvency. The plaintiff appealed from the judgment. On an application by the defendants for an order that the next friend should give security for the costs of the appeal:—Held, that by rules of supreme court, 1883, Ord. LIX., r. 17, which applies the provisions of Ord. LVIII., r. 15, to appeals from county courts, there was power to make an order, and as the next friend was insolvent, and was prosecuting the appeal for the benefit of another person, she must give security. Swain v. Follows, 56 L. J., Q. B. 310; 18 Q. B. D. 585; 56 L. T. 335; 35 W. R. 408.

Practising Attorney Surety.]—It is no ground for striking out a case, that in giving security for the costs of the appeal, a practising attorney was one of the sureties, contrary to the rule of practice of the county courts. Carr v. Stringer, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 439, n.

Non-compliance with Order—Effect.]—Notice of appeal from the decision of a county court was duly given, and the registrar fixed a day for the execution of the bond by the appellants and the sureties. Upon the appointed day two of the three appellants attended before the registrar, but the sureties were not present, nor had the bond been prepared. The bond was subsequently prepared, and was executed by all the necessary parties but one, six days after the day originally fixed, and by that one seven days after that day. The respondent never waived the delay in the execution of the bond:—Held, that the requisite security had not been given by the appellants in due time, and that the appeal could not be heard. Dowdeswell v. Francis or Francis v. Dowdeswell, 43 L. J., C. P. 248; L. R. 9 C. P. 423; 30 L. T. 607; 22 W. R. 755.

The court cannot entertain an appeal where the condition of giving security for the costs of appeal (or for the amount of the judgment in the case of the defendant) has not been strictly complied with. Norris v. Carrington, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 10.

The power of appeal against a judgment of a county court is subject to security as well as notice of appeal being given within ten days; and if such condition is not complied with, the court will not hear the appeal. Stone v. Dean, El. Bl. & El. 504; 27 L. J., Q. B. 319; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 534; 6 W. R. 602.

A strict compliance with 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, which requires that an appellant shall within ten days after the determination of the case give security for the costs of the appeal, will be enforced, unless it has been waived by the conduct of the respondent, or the default has been occasioned by no act of the appellant. Blenkairne v. Statter, 31 L. T. 413.

Sufficiency.]—The court will not refuse to hear an appeal against the determination of a county court, although the security for costs, required under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, has not been completed within ten days after the determination, if the appellant has done all that he could be reasonably expected to do, by giving, within the ten days, notice of his appeal and of the names of the sureties whom he proposes, such sureties being ultimately found sufficient, and the bond being executed, although not within the ten days. Waterton v. Baker, 9 B. & S. 23; 37 L. J., Q. B. 65; L. R. 3 Q. B. 173; 17 L. T. 468; 16 W. R. 358.

An interpleader summons having been determined against the claimant on the 16th of November, he, on the same day, gave notice of appeal, and tendered a bond with sureties to the registrar; on the 19th of November he gave notice of the proposed sureties to the plaintiff. The plaintiff requiring further information as to the sufficiency of the sureties, and the claimant having been unable to obtain a definite answer from the plaintiff as to whether or not he objected to the sureties, the registrar, on the 17th of January, fixed the 21st of January for the execution of the bond, and gave notice to the plaintiff to make his objection, if any, on that day. The plaintiff did not appear, and the bond was then executed with the original sureties:—Held, that although the security had not been completed until after the ten days, yet, as the appellant had done all he could to perfect it within that time, and the delay was caused by the plaintiff, the appellant had complied with the requirements of s. 14 and the county court rule 134 of 1867, and was entitled to have his appeal heard. Ib.

A defendant against whom judgment had been recovered on the 17th January, on the 22nd gave a notice of appeal, in which were set forth the grounds of appeal; and on the 23rd entered into a bond with a surety for the costs of the appeal, and for the amount of the judgment; on the 24th he withdrew the notice of appeal, and gave another, stating new grounds of appeal:—Held, that the bond given on the 23rd was sufficient, and that it was competent to the court to entertain the appeal. Daniels v. Charsley, 11 C. B. 739; 21 L. J., C. P. 37; 15 Jur. 1161. S. P. Robinson v. Lawrence, 7 Ex. 128; 2 L. M. & P. 573; 21 L. J., Ex. 36; 15 Jur. 1087.

Memorandum of Deposit.]—At the hearing of a plaint before a county court judge he nonsuited the plaintiff, who gave due notice of appeal, and deposited the amount fixed by the registrar, who gave a receipt for it to the plaintiff, stating it to be received to abide the event of the appeal. The parties could not agree on a statement of facts, and the plaintiff applied to the judge to settle and sign the case, but the judge refused on the ground that no memorandum of the deposit, with the conditions on which it was deposited, was approved by the registrar, left with him and signed by the party or his attorney in accordance with 19 & 20 Vict. c. 208, s. 71:—Held, that the statute had been substantially complied with, and that the giving of such memorandum was not a condition precedent to the right to appeal. Walters v. Coghlan, 42 L. J., Q. B. 20; L. R. 8 Q. B. 61; 27 L. T. 712; 21 W. R. 444.

A party desirous of appealing having given notice of appeal, within ten days deposited with the registrar a sum equal to the amount for which he was required to give security, for which the registrar gave an acknowledgment, but did not deposit a written memorandum setting forth the conditions on which the money was deposited:—Held, that the want of such memorandum was no objection to the hearing of the appeal. Griffin v. Colman, 4 H. & N. 265.

On Appeal to Court of Appeal — Staying Appeal on Non-payment of Deposit.]—A county court judge refused an application by the defendants to sign a case on appeal from his decision. The defendants, on application to a divisional court, obtained a rule nisi calling upon the county court judge to show cause why he should not sign a case. Cause having been shown, the rule was discharged with costs. The defendants gave notice of appeal, whereupon the respondents, including the county court judge, moved that the defendants might be ordered to give security for costs:—Held, that, the taxed costs already occasioned not having been paid, and the statement that the appellants were not capable of making such payment not having been contradicted, the appeal must be stayed until the payment into court of a deposit of 20*l.* as security for costs. Clarke v. Roche, 46 L. J., Ch. 372 ; 36 L. T. 78 ; 25 W. R. 309—C. A.

d. Hearing.

Judge's note—Application for at Trial Condition Precedent to hearing of Appeal.]—An application to the judge of a county court at the trial of any action for a note on any point of law, and of the facts in evidence relating thereto, and of his decision thereon, is, under the terms of s. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the condition precedent for any appeal from such decision being heard. The power of the high court, under Ord. LIX. r. 8 of the rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, to admit any evidence or statement of what occurred other than such notes of the judge, only comes into operation when such an application has been made at the trial but no notes of the judge are forthcoming. Cook v. Gordon, 61 L. J., Q. B. 445.

—— When Judge is Bound to take Note.]—A county court judge is only bound to take a note when a question of law is raised and he is asked to take a note of that question of law ; then it is his duty to take a note of the question of law raised, and of the evidence in relation thereto, and of his decision thereon, and of his decision of the action or matter. If there be more questions of law than one, the request to take a note must be made in respect of each. Reg. v. City of London Court Judge, 70 L. T. 595.

—— Request for "at the Trial."]—38 & 39 Vict. c. 50, prescribing a mode of appeal by motion from the county court, by s. 6 enacts that "at the trial or hearing" of the cause "the judge, at the request of either party, shall make a note of any question of law raised at such trial or hearing, and of the facts in evidence in relation thereto, and of his decision thereon, and of his decision of the cause :"—Held, that the request for a note must be made during or immediately at the end of the trial or hearing of the cause ; and, therefore, that a request not made until an hour and a half after judgment given was too late. Pierpoint v. Cartwright, 5 C. P. D. 139 ; 42 L. T. 259 ; 28 W. R. 583.

"At the trial" does not mean before the last word of the judgment has been actually delivered (as an opportunity must be afforded to the parties of taking exception to the judge's ruling), but before the trial has substantially come to an end. Ib.

Taken without Request.]—Where, at the trial of a cause in the county court without a jury, the judge in fact took a note of the evidence, but was not required to make a note of any question of law raised at the trial, or of the evidence in relation to it :—Held, that the unsuccessful party could not appeal by motion, under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 50, s. 6, though he applied for a copy of the judge's notes immediately after the judgment, and his ground of appeal was that there was no evidence to warrant the decision of the judge. Rhodes v. Liverpool Commercial Investment Co., 4 C. P. D. 425.

—— Dispensing with.]—At the hearing of a motion on appeal from a county court, the court may, if it thinks fit, dispense with a copy of the judge's notes. Morgan v. Davies, 3 C. P. D. 260 ; 39 L. T. 60 ; 26 W. R. 816.

—— Compiled after Trial.]—Notes compiled by the judge of a county court after the trial from evidence wholly on affidavits were, being in court, received in the Court of Appeal, although request to take notes had been made to the judge during the trial. Hill v. Perssé, 25 W. R. 275.

—— Duty of Appellant to supply Copies.]—Ord. LIX. r. 13, which makes it the duty of the Master of the crown office, upon the entry of an appeal from an inferior court, to apply to the judge of the inferior court for a copy of his notes, is repealed by s. 121 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and it is now the duty of the appellant, as a condition precedent to the appeal being heard, to furnish the court with a copy of the notes. McGrah v. Cartwright, 58 L. J., Q. B. 331 ; 23 Q. B. D. 3 ; 60 L. T. 537 ; 37 W. R. 619—D.

—— Appeal Confined to Points taken at Trial.]—On an appeal from a county court, no question will be entertained which is not submitted by the case as signed by the judge. Williams v. Evans, 44 L. J., Ch. 319 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 547 ; 32 L. T. 359 ; 23 W. R. 466.

The parties are bound by the case as it is stated for the opinion of the court, and cannot travel out of it. Watson v. Ambergate Ry., 15 Jur. 448.

Only such objections can be raised as were taken at the trial. Ib.

No Note of Evidence taken—Order for Examination of Witnesses before Divisional Court.]—When no note of what occurred in the county court has been taken, a divisional court has, upon appeal, jurisdiction under Ord. LIX. r. 8 to order that the witnesses examined in the court below should be examined on the hearing of the appeal ; but care ought to be taken to prevent fresh evidence being given, so that such appeal should not become practically a new trial. The Crescent ; Great Northern Steamship Fishing Co. v. The Crescent (Owners), 62 L. J., P. 63 ; 1 R. 613 ; 68 L. T. 556 ; 41 W. R. 533 ; 7 Asp. M. C. 297—C. A.

In an admiralty appeal from a county court, where there are no shorthand writer's notes of the evidence, and no notes taken by the judge of the county court available for the purpose of appeal, the high court (admiralty division) will order the appeal to be heard on viva voce evidence. The Confidence ; The Susan Elizabeth, 40 L. T. 201.

Fresh Evidence—Application for.]—An application to allow fresh evidence to be adduced at the hearing of an admiralty appeal from an inferior court may be made to a single judge of the admiralty division. The Eclipse, 14 P. D. 71 ; 6 Asp. M. C. 409 ; 60 L. T. 899.

e. Order on Appeal.

Nonsuit.]—Where judgment has been given for the plaintiff, the court has power to order a nonsuit to be entered. Fuller v. Clevereley, 17 Jur. 736.

Power of High Court to enter Judgment.]—In an appeal from a county court in an action for damages, the court has power to give judgment for the plaintiff for the sum claimed, if satisfied upon the whole of the evidence before the county court judge, that judgment ought to be so entered, although judgment had been given by the county court judge for the defendant. King v. Oxford Co-operative Society, 51 L. T 94.

The plaintiff, who held a mortgage for 4,600*l.* upon lands belonging to one F., agreed to make him a further advance of 400*l.* upon having an additional piece of land, which F. had subsequently acquired, added to the former security. The defendant, who acted as the plaintiff's solicitor in the transaction, omitted to ascertain (as the fact was) that a third person had an equitable charge to the extent of 46*l.* upon this additional piece of land; in consequence of which the plaintiff, upon the sale of the property, was unable to convey without paying the 46*l.*:—Held, that this was negligence for which the defendant was liable: and that, in the absence of evidence to reduce the amount, the 46*l.* so paid was the proper measure of damages.—Upon appeal by motion under the County Courts Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 50), s. 6, the court has power to order judgment to be entered—the former provision in that respect (13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14) not being repealed or varied by s. 6 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 50, which only gives an additional mode of procedure. Whiteman v. Hawkins, 4 C. P. D. 13; 39 L. T. 629; 27 W. R. 262.

In a case of an appeal from a county court, when the county court judge refused to go into the evidence and dismissed the plaint on other grounds, the court of chancery, after hearing the appeal, decided that the county court judge was wrong in dismissing the plaint on the grounds on which he did so, went into the evidence and decided the case, reversing the decision of the county court judge without referring the case back to him on the evidence, and made the defendant pay the costs on both occasions. Booth v. Turle, L. R. 16 Eq. 182; 21 W. R. 721.

Power of High Court to assess Damages.]—Where a county court judge has nonsuited a plaintiff and the high court holds that such nonsuit was wrong, the high court has power to fix a nominal sum for damages which the county court judge should have fixed. Churchward v. Johnson, 54 J. P. 326.

Decision may be upheld on different Grounds.]—A judgment of the county court may on appeal be upheld on other grounds than those on which the county court judge proceeded, if they appear and are admitted on his notes. Chapman v. Knight, 49 L. J., C. P. 425; 5 C. P. D. 308; 42 L. T. 538; 28 W. R. 919.

Whole Case to be Decided.]—The court of appeal is to pronounce judgment on the whole case, and is not confined to answering the questions formally submitted for its decision. Stancliffe v. Clarke, 21 L. J., Ex. 129; 16 Jur. 430.

f. Costs.

Time for Application.]—An application for costs of an appeal from a county court will not be entertained unless made at the time the appeal is disposed of. G. N. Ry. v. Taylor, 35 L. J., C. P. 210; L. R. 1 C. P. 430; 12 Jur (N.S.) 600.

General Rule.]—On appeal from a county court the court has jurisdiction to allow a successful appellant the costs of the appeal as well as those of the suit in the county court, and as a general rule, will do so. Ashby v. Sedgwick, 42 L. J., Ch. 355; L R. 15 Eq. 245; 28 L. T. 185; 21 W. R. 455.

Where an appeal is brought from a county court, the court will exercise its discretion as to awarding costs to the successful party. Mountney v. Collier, 2 El. & Bl. 100; 22 L. J., Q. B. 126, n; 17 Jur. 503; 1 W. R. 179.

It is a universal and an inflexible rule of practice to give the successful party on an appeal from a county court the costs of the appeal. Liedeman v. Schultz, 14 C. B. 38; 2 C. L. R. 87; 18 Jur. 44 n. S. P., Gibbon v. Gibbon, 13 C. B. 205; 22 L J., C. P. 135 n; 17 Jur. 416.

The rule laid down that the successful party ought to have his costs of appeal, is not inflexible, and may be relaxed in cases of vexation. Outhwaite v. Hudson, 7 Ex. 380; 21 L. J., Ex. 151; 16 Jur. 430.

Where an appeal is brought from a county court, the court of Common Pleas, on reversing the judgment and granting a new trial, holds that it has power to reverse the judgment as to the costs of the first trial below. Gage v. Collins, 36 L. J., C. P. 144; L. R. 2 C. P. 381; 15 W. R. 568.

Upon an appeal from a decision of the sheriffs' court, London, or from a county court, on the ground of misdirection. the successful party, whether appellant or respondent, is entitled to his costs, unless there are some special or exceptional circumstances which take the case out of this general rule. Schroder v. Ward, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 410; 32 L. J., C. P. 150; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1056; 7 L. T 825; 11 W. R. 427. S. P., Foster v. Smith, 18 C. B. 161; 4 W. R. 495.

Where a new trial is ordered on the ground of misdirection, the court will not give costs to the appellant. Gee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 6 H. & N. 211; 30 L. J., Ex. 11; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1118; 3 L. T. 328; 9 W. R. 103.

—— Interpleader.]—In an interpleader proceeding on the application of the sheriff, the claimant, if successful. is entitled to recover as costs from the execution creditor the sheriff's charges subsequent to the interpleader order. The incidence of such charges is a matter of law and a proper subject of appeal from a county court to the High Court under the County Courts Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict c. 61), s. 14. Goodman v. Blake, 19 Q. B. D. 77; 57 L. T. 494.

No Costs where Leave Granted without Jurisdiction.]—When an appeal from a county court is struck out on the ground that the order giving leave to appeal has been granted by a judge at chambers without jurisdiction, the court of appeal has no power to grant costs to the party who appears to show cause against it. Brown v. Shaw, 1 Ex. D. 425.

Quære, as to the jurisdiction of the court as to costs where an appeal is struck out without argument for want of jurisdiction. Fraser v. Fothergill, 14 C. B. 295; 23 L. J., C. P. 53.

No Note by Judge—Cost of Shorthand Notes.]—On an appeal from a county court when the judge has taken no note the court will allow as costs of the appeal the costs of a transcript of the material parts of shorthand writer's notes of the evidence and of the summing-up of the county court judge. Barber v. Burt, 63 L. J., Q. B. 700; [1894] 2 Q. B. 437; 10 R. 397; 71 L. T. 295; 42 W. R. 572.

The charge for a copy of a shorthand writer's notes of the proceedings in a county court may be allowed as part of the costs of an appeal. Sawyer, Ex parte; Bowden, In re, 45 L. J., Bk. 56; 1 Ch. D. 698; 33 L. T. 759; 24 W. R. 375.

County Court Scale, except as to Proceedings in High Court.]—On an appeal to a superior court from the decision of a county court, the master is bound by the scale of costs issued by the county court judges, except as to proceedings in the superior court; e. g., the master is bound by such scale as to the costs of preparing the case on appeal and delivering copies thereof. Horsfall v. Swan Bank and Brickworks Co., 17 W. R. 119.

Paying out Security.]—Where the appellant has paid money into the court as security for the costs of the appeal, and the court of appeal decides in favour of the appellant, the court, in addition to allowing the costs of appeal, will order the money to be paid out to him. Kelly v. Webster, 16 Jur. 838.

Imposing Condition as to payment of Costs by Appellant.]—The court, in giving a railway company leave to appeal, declined to impose on them the condition of paying the costs in any event, a practice of which the court expressed their disapproval. Ashenden v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 42 L. T. 586.

g. Appeal to Court of Appeal.

An appeal will lie, under s. 19 of the Judicature Act, 1873, from a judgment of a divisional court refusing to order a county court judge to settle and sign a case on appeal under the county courts acts and rules. Clarke v. Roche, 36 L. T. 727—C. A. S P., Crush v. Turner, 47 L. J., Ex. 639; 3 Ex. D. 303; 38 L. T. 595; 26 W. R. 673—C. A.

The Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, s. 20, does not take away the power of appeal to the court of appeal if leave be given as required by s. 45 of Judicature Act, 1873. Crush v. Turner, 47 L. J., Ex. 639; 3 Ex. D. 303; 38 L. T. 595; 26 W. R. 673—C. A.

From Refusal of Divisional Court to grant leave.]—The court of appeal has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal under s. 19 of the Judicature Act, 1873, against the refusal of a divisional court, under s. 45, to grant leave to appeal from their decision on a judgment of a county court. Kay v. Briggs, 58 L. J., Q. B. 182; 22 Q. B. D. 343; 60 L. T. 775; 37 W. R. 291—C. A.

The Judicature Act, 1894, by s. 1, sub-s. 5, gives a right of appeal from a refusal of a divisional court to give leave to appeal from the decision of that court on an appeal from a county court, the decision in Kay v. Briggs (22 Q. B. D. 343) not being applicable to the terms of that sub-s.; but such leave will only be given by the court of appeal in cases where it seems to be clear that injustice will otherwise be done. Hawkins v. G. W. Ry., 14 R. 360—C. A.

Action remitted for Trial to County Court under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10.]—Where a cause has been remitted for trial before a county court under s. 10 of the County Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), it becomes a county court cause, and the determination of a divisional court, on appeal from the decision of the county court judge, is within s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore final, unless special leave to appeal be given. Bowles v. Drake, 51 L. J., Q. B. 66; 8 Q. B. D. 325; 45 L. T. 576; 30 W. R. 333—C. A.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26.]—Where an action brought in the superior court was, after issue joined, remitted for trial to a county court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, the action still remained in the superior court, and an appeal to the court of appeal lay without special leave from the refusal of a divisional court to grant a new trial. Babbage v. Coulburn, 52 L. J., Q. B. 50; 16 L. T. 515—C. A.

To Court of Appeal in Admiralty Matter.]—See SHIPPING.

G. ORDER TO JUDGE OR OFFICER TO DO HIS DUTY.

1. In what Cases.

Qualified Refusal.]—The court will not grant an order, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, to compel a county court judge to do his duty, unless it appears that he has absolutely refused to act in some matter wherein he ought to have acted. Irving v. Askew, 20 L. T. 584.

A mere qualified or temporary refusal, as by suggesting an adjournment, with a view to an arrangement, is no ground for issuing such an order, which, being of the same nature as a mandamus, is to be governed by similar rules. Ib.

Finding of no Jurisdiction on Facts.]—A writ of mandamus will not issue to the judge of an inferior court unless he has refused to exercise the duty which the writ seeks to compel him to perform. Where, therefore, on the hearing of a plaint in a county court, the judge, having heard the evidence as to the jurisdiction, decided that the cause of action did not arise within his jurisdiction, and non-suited the plaintiff:—Held, that he had heard the cause, and that a writ of mandamus would not issue to compel him to hear it, his decision being final. Kernot v. Bailey, 4 W. R. 608.

Where a judge has entered upon the hearing of a plaint, and, from the evidence adduced before him, has decided that he has no jurisdiction to adjudicate between the parties, a mandamus would not lie commanding him to hear and determine it, even although he might be wrong in point of law. Milner, In re, 15 Jur. 1037.

Holding of no Jurisdiction in Law.]—Contra, if, in a case in which he has jurisdiction he refuses to hear it, upon the mistaken notion that he has no jurisdiction to do so in respect of some preliminary matter. Ib.

Indirect Appeal.]—The court will not grant a rule to compel a judge to do his duty when he has acted under a particular impression as to a point of law in a case involving a small amount, and the effect of granting a rule would be to give the party moving an indirect appeal when the statute has forbidden a direct one. Brown v. Taylor, 18 L. T. 657.

Where a judge in fact took a note of the evidence, but was not required to make a note of any question of law, or of the evidence in relation to it, after an appeal by motion had been rejected upon that ground, a rule calling on the county court judge to state and sign a special case, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 15, was refused. Rhodes v. Liverpool Commercial Investment Co, 4 C.P.D. 425.

To Hear Witnesses.]—To enable the court to interfere under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, the county court judge must have refused to exercise the jurisdiction vested in him; but where upon his refusal to hear certain witnesses tendered by the plaintiff, the plaintiff elected to be nonsuited:—Held, that the court had no power to command him to hear them, as the nonsuit, whilst it stood, left the judge no case upon which he could act. Fortescue v. Paton, 3 L. T. 268; see also Kershaw v. Chantler, 26 L. T. 474, ante, col. 945.

To Review Taxation.]—A superior court has no power under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, to direct a county court judge to order a review of taxation of costs. Clifton v. Furley, 7 H. & N. 783; 31 L. J., Ex. 170; 10 W. R. 358.

To Remove Petition from File.]—An insolvent filed his petition in a county court, and obtained an order for protection from process until the day appointed for his first examination. On that day his attorney applied to the county court judge for leave to withdraw the petition, on the ground that the date on which it was presented did not appear upon it. The application was opposed by several creditors, and the county court judge refused it, and adjourned the examination of the insolvent sine die:—Held, that as the judge had adjudicated upon the matter, the court had no power, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, to order him to remove the petition from the file, or dismiss it, or name a day for the hearing. Corbett, In re, 4 H. & N. 452; 28 L. J., Ex. 254.

To Sign Note or to Hear Case.]—A request to a county court judge, at the commencement of the trial, and before any specific question of law has been raised, that he should take a note of the evidence, as it was an important case and might go to the superior court, is not a sufficient request within the meaning of s. 6 of the County Courts Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 50); and therefore a note which the judge afterwards took, and which he stated was an incomplete one, and not such as he would have taken if he had been requested to take a note of any specific question of law and of the evidence in relation thereto, is not a note taken under that section which the court will order him to sign. Morgan v. Rees or Reiss, 50 L. J., Q. B. 491; 6 Q. B. D. 508; 44 L. T. 133; 29 W. R. 345—C. A.

In an action for negligence, the judge of a county court found for the plaintiff, but in giving judgment stated that he could readily imagine that the evidence given as to the negligence of a third person was true, and that, except for the conduct of the third person, the accident would not have occurred. In these circumstances a rule nisi, obtained by the defendant, calling on the judge to state the fact in the case for appeal, or to set out the evidence of such other negligence, was made absolute. Harrison v. Williams, 6 W. R. 655.

In an administration suit in a county court, the judge decreed a sale, to be carried out by the plaintiff, of a deceased testator's property, and declared that one of the defendants was not a trustee under the will. The defendants wished to appeal, and a case was duly settled under the county courts Acts and orders. After some months' delay the judge fixed a day for the case to be presented to him for signature, but the defendants did not receive notice of this until too late to present the case on that day. On the case being presented for signature a short time afterwards, the judge declined to sign it:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to an order directing the judge to sign the case. Clark v. Roche, 36 L. T. 727.

To order Cause to be re-entered.]—The High Court of Justice has no power to order a county court judge to re-enter a cause in his list. Morgan v. Rees, 50 L. J., M. C. 27; 29 W. R. 213.

To vary Order as to Costs.]—The authority given by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 74, s. 4, to the superior courts to grant a rule calling upon the judges and officers of county courts to show cause why they should not do acts relating to their respective offices, does not confer any jurisdiction to interfere with an order of the judge of a county court as to costs. Churchward v. Coleman, 36 L. J., Q. B. 57; L. R. 2 Q. B. 18.

To Registrar to issue Summons under Bills of Exchange Act, 1855.]—The Registrar of a county court declined to issue a summons under the Bills of Exchange Act, 1855, and the plaintiff applied to the High Court, under s. 131 of the County Courts Act, 1888, for an order calling upon him to show cause why such act should not be done:—Held, that this was the proper course to adopt, and that an application to the county court judge would have been futile, since, having no cause before him, he had no jurisdiction over the registrar. Reg. v. Southampton County Court Registrar, 61 L. J., Q. B. 706.

2. PRACTICE.

Party—Solicitor denied right of audience.]—Query, whether a solicitor, when his right of audience has been denied to him, is "a party" within the meaning of s. 43 of the County Courts Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 108), and is therefore entitled to apply to the superior court for a rule to compel the county court judge to give him audience. Reg. v. Greenwich County Court Registrar, ante, col. 944.

—— Judge of City of London Court.]—By the operation of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, ss. 34, 35, the city of London court is made a county court for all purposes, and all the county court acts apply to it; and consequently, the proper mode of proceeding against the judge of the London court is by rule under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43; and the proviso in s. 35, reserving all rights and privileges of the judge, has no application to the case. Blades v. Lawrence, 43 L. J., Q. B. 133; L. R. 9 Q. B. 374; 30 L. T. 378; 22 W. R. 643.

To whom Application should be made.]—An application, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 74, s. 4, for an order directing a county court judge to sign a case on appeal, should be made to the superior court, and not to a single judge thereof. Clarke v. Roche, 35 L. T. 705; 25 W. R. 309.

Irregularity in Application.]—Judgment having been given in a county court, the plaintiff proposed to appeal. In consequence of delays in settling it, the case agreed to by both parties was not presented to the judge for his signature till nearly six months after the day when judgment was given. No security for costs of the appeal had been given. The judge refused to sign the case. Thereupon a summons was issued by a judge at chambers in pursuance of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, to compel him to do so; but no affidavit of the facts was sworn till two days after the summons issued. On the hearing of the summons the county court judge did not attend, and an order was made that he should sign the case. The order having been served upon him and disobeyed:—Held, first, that assuming that the summons ought not to have issued, except on an affidavit, the want of such affidavit was an irregularity only. Furber v. Sturmy, 3 H. & N. 521; 27 L. J., Ex. 453; 4 Jur., (N.S.) 956; 6 W. R. 625.

Held, secondly, that after the order had been served and disobeyed, and the rule for an attachment obtained, it was too late for the county court judge to object that the case was incorrectly stated, or that the summons had issued improperly. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the order that the county court judge should sign the case was rightly made. Ib.

Delay in Application.]—A judge of a county court directed a jury that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict, but only for nominal damages; they, however, returned a verdict for 10*l.*; the judge then directed it to be entered for 1*s.* More than a year afterwards the court was moved for a rule calling upon the judge to enter a verdict pursuant to the finding of the jury:—Held, that the application was too late. Coke v. Jones, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 545; 4 L. T. 306; 9 W. R. 618.

Appeal to Court of Appeal.]—An appeal will lie, under s. 19 of the Judicature Act 1873, from a judgment of a divisional court refusing to order a county court judge to settle and sign a case on appeal under the county courts acts and rules. Clarke v. Roche, 36 L. T. 727.

The right to appeal from an order of a divisional court, discharging a rule for an order on a county court judge to hear an action, is not taken away because s. 44 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, which substitutes such rule for a mandamus to the county court judge, enacts that, where any superior court shall have refused such rule, no other superior court shall grant it. Morgan v. Rees, 6 Q. B. D. 508—C. A.

H. PROHIBITION.

1. In what Cases.

Improper Reception of Evidence.]—The court will not issue a prohibition to a county court, on the ground that the judge has received improper evidence in a cause before him. Dunford, In re, 12 Jur. 361. S. P., Winsor v. Dunford, 12 Q. B. 603; 18 L. J., Q. B. 14; 12 Jur. 629.

Mistake in Law or Fact in Matter within Jurisdiction]—The court will not issue a prohibition to a county court where, having jurisdiction, the judge has wrongly decided a point of law. Rayner, Ex parte, 5 C. B. 162; 5 D. & L. 342; 17 L. J., C. P. 16; 11 Jur. 1018.

Prohibition will not lie to a county court, however erroneous its decision, where there is jurisdiction. Norris v. Carrington, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 396.

The court will not grant a writ of prohibition to restrain a judge from proceeding in a plaint where evidence respecting title to land is given, unless such question of title is material to the decision of the case. Morton v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 6 W. R. 543.

The court refused a prohibition to restrain the judge from proceeding in a plaint before him, where the plaint on the face of it stated a matter within his jurisdiction, and the facts were contested on which the question of jurisdiction arose, which the judge was at liberty to inquire into, and his decision on the merits being founded on the very point on which the question of jurisdiction arose. Joseph v. Henry, 1 L., M. & P. 388; 19 L. J., Q. B. 369; 15 Jur. 104.

A defendant was sued in a county court in the double capacity of executor of A. and administrator of B. On the trial he objected that the plaintiffs ought to elect in which capacity they proceeded against him, and further, that there was no evidence that the attorney who appeared in support of the claim had been duly authorised by the plaintiffs, who were the guardians of the poor of a parish, to bring the action, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57, s. 17. The judge overruled both objections, and gave judgment against the defendant generally:—Held, assuming the decision to be correct, that, as the judge acted within his jurisdiction, such objections afforded no ground for a prohibition. Lirden and Munster Union v. Southgate, 10 Ex. 201; 23 L. J., Ex. 316.

A judge of a county court, notwithstanding an admission by the plaintiff that a plea of judgment recovered in another court for the same debt was true, gave judgment for the plaintiff. The court refused to grant a rule nisi for a prohibition, the question decided being within the jurisdiction of the judge. Rayner, Ex parte, 5 C. B. 162; 5 D. & L. 342; 17 L. J., C. P. 16; 11 Jur. 1018.

—— New Trial for alleged Misconduct of Jury.]—Prohibition will not lie where a county court judge has granted a new trial on the ground of the misconduct of the jury, although there was no evidence to warrant him in so doing, if the subject of the action and the application for a new trial were within his competence and jurisdiction. Moxon v. London Tramways Co. or Reg. v. Green ech County Court Judge, 60 L. T. 248; 37 W. R. 132—C. A. Affirming 57 L. J., Q. B. 446.

—— Erroneous Construction of Statute.]—In 1843, B., being a trader owing debts amounting in the whole to less than 300*l.*, obtained an order for protection under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116. The debts specified in the schedule to his petition exceeded 200*l.*, and remained unpaid in 1851, when, having incurred fresh debts, exceeding 200*l.*, he petitioned the county court for protection. The judge decided that the debts incurred at the time of the order for protection in 1843 were not to be taken into account, and therefore B. was entitled to protection as a trader owing debts amounting in the whole to less than 300*l.*, within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, s. 1 :—Held, that the construction of the statute in this respect was a matter within the jurisdiction of the county court judge, and therefore, if erroneous, a prohibition could not issue. Bowen, In re, 15 Jur. 1196.

Matter Outside Jurisdiction.]—Where the parties to a plaint appeared before the judge, and consented to a reference, without objecting to the want of jurisdiction, but one of them, during the progress of the reference, objected to the jurisdiction of the arbitrators, on the ground that title to land came in question, and the arbitrators proceeded with the reference :—Held, that he was nevertheless entitled to a prohibition. Knowles v. Holden, 24 L. J., Ex. 223.

A party who objects that the county court has no jurisdiction to determine a plaint, does not acquiesce in the jurisdiction of that court, or waive his right to a writ of prohibition by obtaining from the judge the statement of a case for the opinion of a superior court. Jackson v. Beaumont, 11 Ex. 300 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 301 ; 3 W. R. 521.

A total want of jurisdiction cannot be cured by the assent of the parties. Jones v. Owen, 5 D. & L. 669 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 8 ; 13 Jur. 261.

—— Effect of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61.]—The 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, giving a right of appeal, or s. 16, disallowing a writ of certiorari to remove judgments or orders, does not take away the writ of prohibition in cases where the county court is acting without jurisdiction. Pears v. Wilson, 2 L. M. & P. 515 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 381 ; 15 Jur. 932.

Where an objection is taken to the jurisdiction of the judge of a county court he ought to enter it on the proceedings, in order that a superior court may see if there is ground for a prohibition. Ib.

Since 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 42.]—Under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 42, the doctrine that prohibition as to cases in county courts is taken away from the superior courts, must depend upon the question whether the prohibition should go or not. Lawford v. Partridge, 1 H. & N. 621 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 147 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 271 ; 5 W. R. 295.

Before that Statute.]—A writ of prohibition to restrain a judge of a county court from further proceeding, in a matter over which he had no jurisdiction, was a writ as of right. Jackson v. Beaumont, 11 Ex. 300 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 301 ; 5 W. R. 521.

Where a writ of prohibition was issued out of the Petty Bag Office of the Court of Chancery, in vacation, upon an ex parte affidavit, without leave of the court or judge, and disclosed no sufficient ground of prohibition on the face of it, the court set it aside on motion under the 12 & 13 Vict. 109, s. 39. Still v. Booth, 1 L. M. & P. 440.

A writ of prohibition issued out of the Court of Chancery is a proceeding within the meaning of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 39, and a motion to set such writ aside may be made in either of the superior courts at Westminster. Baddeley, In re, 4 Ex. 504 ; 7 D. & L. 210 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 44.

It is no answer to such motion that the attorney of the applicant has not entered his name and address in a book at the Petty Bag Office, pursuant to 12 & 23 Vict. c. 109, s. 44. Ib.

Ejectment—Value of Premises.]—At the trial of an ejectment, the judge, after hearing contradictory evidence as to the annual value of the premises, decided that it did not exceed 20*l.*, and gave judgment for the defendant :—Held, that the court would not grant a prohibition to restrain the county court from proceeding with the cause upon affidavits, suggesting that the decision of the judge was against the weight of evidence. Milner, In re, 15 Jur. 1037.

False Imprisonment—Damages for Malicious Prosecution.]—On a plaint in a county court for false imprisoment, the evidence was that the defendant directed the police to arrest the plaintiff on a charge of felony, which the police accordingly did. The charge was unfounded in fact : the judge of the county court, in his judgment, used expressions indicating that he gave damages in respect of the unfounded charge of felony :—Held, that the cause of action alleged in the plaint being one over which the judge had jurisdiction, and the evidence having proved it, prohibition would not lie, even on the assumption that the judge, in estimating the damages, erroneously took into consideration matters, the subject of an action for malicious prosecution, and therefore not within his jurisdiction. Chivers v. Savage, 5 El. & Bl. 697 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 85 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 137 ; 4 W. R. 117.

Loss of Time—Malicious Prosecution.]—A plaintiff sought to recover "17*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, being for moneys paid for loss of time and attendance before magistrates upon a complaint and information of W. on behalf of the defendants." The plaintiff having been summoned before the magistrates for riding in a railway carriage without having paid his fare, the summons was dismissed with costs, and the action was brought to recover the expenses occasioned by such summons :—Held, that the plaint was in substance a plaint for a malicious prosecution, and that an order for a prohibition was properly made. Hunt v. North Staffordshire Ry., 2 H. & N. 451 ; 5 W. R. 731.

Excessive Execution.]—It is no ground for a prohibition to a county court, that under process from that court to levy a sum within its jurisdiction, the officer has seized property to a greater amount. Summers, Ex parte, 2 C. L. R. 1284 ; 18 Jur. 522 ; 2 W. R. 477.

Committing Discharged Debtor.]—After recovery of a judgment for a debt against a defendant in a county court, he petitioned for and obtained his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act, and inserted the debt in the schedule. On a judgment summons he pleaded his discharge ; but the judge, notwithstanding, made an order for payment of the debt by instalments, and afterwards, on default, for his committal to prison :—Held, that although the defendant, who had been imprisoned, might be entitled to his discharge, it was at most an error in the exercise of his powers on the part of the judge, and not an excess of jurisdiction, and that therefore prohibition would not lie. Still v. Booth, 1 L. M. & P. 440; 19 L. J., Q. B. 521; 15 Jur. 577.

Irregular Service of Summons.]—In an action of ejectment properly brought in the county court, the summons must be delivered to the bailiff forty clear days at least before the return day under Ord. VIII. r. 7 of the County Court Rules, 1875, and the judge of the county court has no power to waive this condition even where, though the bailiff has not received the summons forty days, he has yet served it on the defendant thirty-five days before the return day as required by the latter part of the same rule. If under such circumstances the judge proceeds to hear the case, the defendant not consenting, the high court, on appeal by the defendant, will set aside the judgment. Semble, such a case is not matter of prohibition. Barker v. Palmer, 51 L. J., Q. B. 110; 8 Q. B. D. 9; 45 L. T. 480; 30 W. R. 59.

Issuing Fresh Summons.]—An application for a plaint was correctly made, and the plaint itself was correctly entered against the defendant, as executor of F. W. Taylor, but the summons described him as executor of W. Thompson. At the hearing, the judge, upon it being represented to him that the statute of limitations would intervene to bar the claim, directed a fresh summons to issue, bearing the same date and number as the first:—Held, that the court would not interfere with the course taken by the judge. Foster v. Temple, 5 D. & L. 655; 17 L. J., Q. B. 230; 12 Jur. 654.

Amending Particulars.]—A prohibition issued to a county court judge, where he, of his own authority, and without the consent of the plaintiff, amended the particulars, with a view, by reducing the plaintiff's demand below 50*l.*, to give the county court jurisdiction. Hill v. Swift, 10 Ex. 726; 3 C. L. R. 724; 24 L. J., Ex. 137; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 167; 3 W. R. 171.

Irregular Execution.]—The Court of Queen's Bench will not grant a writ of prohibition to the judge of a county court to restrain him from executing a fi. fa. which has issued irregularly on the goods of a defendant under an order of the county court. The remedy is to apply to the court itself out of which the execution issued to stay proceedings. Herman v. Sheldrey, 2 W. R. 455.

2. PRACTICE.

By whom issued—Judge of Admiralty Division.]—A judge of the Admiralty Division being a judge of the High Court has jurisdiction to grant a writ of prohibition. The Receptu, Gordon v. Francis, 62 L. J., P. 118; [1893] P. 235; 1 R. 644; 69 L. T. 252; 41 W. R. 561; 7 Asp. M. C. 359.

—— Judge in Chambers.]—An application for a writ of prohibition to a county court may be made to a judge sitting at chambers, notwithstanding Ord. LIX. r. 8*a*, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, December, 1888, which provides that "every application for a prohibition to a county county . . . . shall be brought by notice of motion." King v. Charing Cross Bank, 59 L. J., Q. B. 24; 24 Q. B. D. 27; 62 L. T. 42; 38 W. R. 287.

Time of Issue—After Judgment.]—A prohibition may issue after judgment in a county court for an excess of jurisdiction not appearing on the face of the proceedings there. Marsden v. Wardle, 3 El. & Bl. 695; 2 C. L. R. 1707; 23 L. J., Q. B. 263; 18 Jur. 578; 2 W. R. 455.

If the question of title to an office is not raised on the hearing of a plaint, but the party is taken to be duly appointed, the court will not afterwards grant a writ of prohibition. Stevenson v. Stickle, 13 Jur. 1103.

—— After Execution.]—After execution has been awarded in a county court, and the defendant's goods have been taken, but not sold, a prohibition will go to restrain that court from proceeding further, if it appears upon affidavit, though not on the face of the proceedings, that title to corporeal hereditaments came in question in the cause, so that the judge had no jurisdiction. Marsden v. Wardle, 3 El. & Bl. 695; 2 C. L. R. 1707; 23 L. J., Q. B. 263; 18 Jur. 578; 2 W. R. 455.

Where a warrant of possession was executed on the 6th June, and a rule nisi was obtained for a writ of prohibition on the 5th, which was served on the judge of the county court, upwards of 200 miles from London, on the 7th:—Held, that the applicant was not too late. The court made the rule absolute for a writ of prohibition, inserting a clause for restitution. Jones v. Owen, 5 D. & L. 669; 18 L. J., Q. B. 8; 13 Jur. 261.

A plaint having been brought in a county court, at the hearing, on the 11th of September, 1862, the defendants excepted to the jurisdiction, on the ground that the matter was a dispute between members of a friendly society, which, by the rules of the society, was to be settled by a committee of the society, and that the county court had therefore no jurisdiction by reason of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 40. The judge overruled the objection, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff. Between the 20th and 24th of September notices were served on the plaintiff and his attorney, and on the judge and registrar of the court, of the defendant's intention to apply for a prohibition. On the 8th of October the defendants were served with an order from the court to pay debt and costs; and on the 10th of October one of them paid the amount to the registrar, to avoid an execution. On the same day a summons was taken out on behalf of the defendants, calling on the plaintiff and the judge to show cause why a prohibition should not issue. This summons was served on the 13th of October, being returnable on the 14th, when it was adjourned to the 24th; on the 16th of October the money was paid out of court by the registrar to the plaintiff's attorney. The matter having been referred to the court on the 24th of October:—Held, that the application had been delayed too long, and that on that ground a prohibition ought not to issue. Denton v. Marshall, 1 H. & C. 654; 32 L. J., Ex. 89; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 337; 7 L. T. 689; 11 W. R. 268.

Judgment having been given in a county court for the plaintiff, execution issued, and a levy was made on the defendant's goods; but, before the sale a writ of prohibition was moved for:—Held, that the defendant was not too late. Kimpton v. Willey, 1 L. M. & P. 280; 19 L. J., C. P. 269; 14 Jur. 762.

—— Interpleader]—Where a county court judge decides that the particulars of a claim in an interpleader are not sufficient under the county court rules, and refuses on that ground to hear the claimant, a prohibition lies to stay the further proceedings under the execution if the particulars ought to have been held sufficient Hardy v Walker, McFee Ex parte, 9 Ex 261, 2 C L R 278 23 L J Ex 57

After Nonsuit with Costs to Defendant]—Where a county court judge has taken time to consider as to nonsuiting a plaintiff, on the ground of want of jurisdiction by reason of the title to land coming in question, and a prohibition issued before he had decided and he then nonsuited the plaintiff, and awarded costs of nonsuit to the defendant the rule for a writ of prohibition was made absolute Lawford v Partridge, 1 H & N 621 26 L J, Ex 147 3 Jur (N S) 271, 5 W R 295

Form of Rule—Statement of Grounds]—It is not necessary that the grounds for issuing a prohibition should appear in the rule or order for a prohibition Ebersfield v Yeaman 4 C B (N S) 418 6 W R 445

Service of Rule]—Where a rule for a prohibition to a county court was directed to be served on the plaintiff and on the judge service on the judge and the attorney of the plaintiff in the county court is insufficient Massey v Burton, 3 Jur (N S) 1108

Appeal to Court of Appeal]—An appeal lies from the decision of the divisional court on an application for a prohibition to a county court, for s 42 of 19 & 20 Vict c 108 relates to procedure only and does not enact that the judgment of the divisional court shall be final Burton v Titchmarsh 49 L J Ex 573, 49 L T 610 28 W R 821—C A

An appeal lies without leave from the decision of a Divisional Court upon an application for a prohibition to a county court Lister v Wood, 23 Q B D 229 37 W R 738, 53 J P 773—C A

An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the refusal of the High Court to grant a writ of prohibition to a county court Sect 132 of the County Courts Act, 1888, only applies to proceedings in the high court, and prevents repeated applications for writs of prohibition being made to more than one divisional court or one judge The Recepta, Gordon v Frances, 62 L J, P 118, [1893] P 253, 1 R 644, 69 L T 252, 41 W R 561, 42 W R 73, 7 Asp M C 359—C A

A GENERAL PRINCIPLES AS TO

Power of Crown to Establish]—Though the crown by its prerogative may establish courts to proceed according to common law yet the crown cannot create any new court to administer any other law Natal (Bishop), In re, 3 Moore, P C (N S) 115 12 Jur (N S) 353, 12 L T 188, 13 W R 549

Act committed in Foreign Country]—In order that an action may lie between parties in this country in respect of an act committed in a foreign country, the act must be one which if committed in this country would be actionable, and one which is not innocent according to the law of the country where it was committed, but it is not necessary that it should be the subject of civil proceedings in that country The rule laid down in Phillips v Eyre (40 L J, Q B 28, L R 6 Q B 1) and The M Moxham (46 L J P 17 1 P D 107) applied Machado v Fontes, 66 L J, Q B 542, [1897] 2 Q B 231, 76 L T 588, 45 W R 565—C A

Foreign Land—Action for Trespass to]—An action for damages for trespass to land situated in a foreign country, founded on a disputed claim of title to such land, cannot be tried in the courts of this country British South Africa Co v. Companhia de Moçambique, 63 L J, Q B 70, [1893] A C 602, 6 R 1, 69 L T 604—H L. Jurisdiction—Acquiescence or Consent does not give]—A total want of jurisdiction cannot be cured by the assent of the parties Jones v. Owen, 5 D & L 669, 18 L J, Q B 8, 13 Jur. 261 S P, Foster v Usherwood, 47 L J, Ex. 30, 3 Ex D 3, 37 L T 389, 26 W R 94, Buse v Roper, 41 L T 457, Wellesley v. Withers, 4 El & Bl 759, 3 C L R 1187, 24 L J, Q B 134, 1 Jur (N S) 706

The court has no power to allow service of a writ of summons out of the jurisdiction upon a person domiciled in Scotland or Ireland, even though the parties have agreed that the court shall have jurisdiction to do so British Wagon Co v Gray, 65 L J, Q B 75, [1896] 1 Q. —— Waiver by taking Step]—When plaintiff and defendant both resided out of the county palatine of Lancaster and the cause of action arose also wholly outside the county, and a writ of summons issued out of the court of common pleas at Lancaster was sent to the defendant's attorney in Staffordshire who gave an undertaking to appear and afterwards did appear —Held that the service could not be set aside as any irregularity had been waived by the appearance Oulton v Radcliffe 43 L J C P 87 L R 9 C P 189 30 L T 22 22 W R 372

Filing a cross bill prevents any objection to the jurisdiction Burgess v Wheate 1 Eden 190 1 W Bl 121

If, in an ecclesiastical court a party is cited as resident within the jurisdiction and appears and pleads without objection he cannot afterwards put that fact in issue and in such case an intervener is not at liberty to raise an objection to the jurisdiction on that ground Chichester v Donegal, 6 Madd 375

No appearance or answer will give a jurisdiction to a limited court Green v Rutherforth 1 Ves sen 471 Penn v Baltimore, 1 Ves sen 446

Inherent Jurisdiction as to Costs]—Where an Act of Parliament gives jurisdiction to a court to determine questions but the act is silent as to costs, the court has inherent jurisdiction to order a person who wrongly puts it in motion to pay the costs of his application Pringle v Secretary of State for India 58 L J., Ch 815, 40 Ch D 288, 60 L T 796—C A.

B ASSIZES

Circuit]—A circuit is continuous from its commencement to its termination Oxfordshire (Sheriff), In re, 2 Car & K 200 S P Anon, Salk 8

Time during which Assizes Continue]—Although, by contemplation of law, the whole time during which assizes continue at one place is considered for some purposes as one legal day, yet the particular day on which a conviction actually took place may be proved when necessary Whitaker v Wisbey, 12 C B 44 21 L J., C P 116 16 Jur 411

Therefore, where a convicted felon made a bonâ fide assignment of goods after the commission day of the assizes, but before the day on which he was actually convicted —Held, that the assignee could prove the actual day of the conviction although the record mentioned only the commission day and that the assignment was valid Ib

Commissions of Oyer and Terminer]—In commissions of oyer and terminer while the whole body of the justices named in the commission constitutes the court of oyer and terminer, each judge sitting under it represents the court, so that whatever takes place before a single judge is considered as done constructively before the whole court Leeson v Reg 10 B & S 404, 38 L J M C 97 I R 4 Q P 394 20 L T 485 18 W R 251

Jurisdiction of Judges]—A judge of assize has authority to order the court room or any part of it to be cleared if quiet is not preserved in it and the sheriff is bound to execute his orders and to preserve quiet and if instead of that he incites his friends to disturb such orders he is guilty of the contempt but a rule issued by him and posted up in the court at the wall of the court while the judge was sitting —Held such a contempt Surrey (Sheriff) In re 2 F & F 230

Quarter Sessions—How they are affected by]—The authority of courts of quarter sessions, whether for a county or a borough is not in law either determined or suspended by the coming of the judges into the county and their commission of assize oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery although generally speaking, it would be inconvenient and improper that courts of quarter sessions for counties should be held concurrently with the assizes for the same counties Smith v Reg 13 Q B 738 18 L J M C 207

Warrant of Commitment for Contempt by]—A court of assize being a superior court a warrant of commitment for contempt need not set out the particulars of the contempt Fernandez, Ex parte 6 H & N 717, 7 Jur (N S) 529, 4 L T 296 9 W R 539 S P 10 C B (N S) 3, 30 L J C P 321 7 Jur (N S) 571 4 L T 324 9 W R 832

Clerk of]—Though the clerk of assize and clerk of arraigns act as officers of, and are subject to the control of the court, and their names are inserted in the commissions of oyer and terminer the court stated that there never was an instance of their acting under the commission, and that they had no authority to decide on any question Milward v Thatcher, 2 Term Rep 83

—— Fees of]—By 19 Geo 3, c 74, s 30, the clerk of assize on each circuit was entitled to receive a certain fee for every person convicted of a transportable offence (except petty larceny), and sentenced to transportation, hard labour or confinement in the house of correction, and for persons capitally convicted, who afterwards received the king's pardon on condition of being transported or imprisoned Fleetwood v Finch, 2 H. Bl 220.

—— Liability of.]—If a clerk of assize draws an indictment with unnecessary prolixity, he may be ordered to pay the extra expense. Rex v. Bury, 1 Leach, C. C. 201. S. P., Rex v. May, 1 Doug. 193.

C. CHANCERY JURISDICTION.

Principles Governing.]—The jurisdiction of the court of chancery cannot be taken away unless by express words. Byrne v. Byrne, Fl. & K. 435. Affirmed 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 621.

The jurisdiction of the court of chancery can only be taken away by express words or words creating a necessary implication to that effect. Att.-Gen. v. Dublin Corporation, 1 Bli. (N.S.) 312.

The jurisdiction of the court of chancery is not ousted by a limited statutory jurisdiction conferred upon another court, and is properly invoked where the purposes for which the limited jurisdiction is conferred are at an end, or where the limited jurisdiction is not equal to the comprehension of the matter in dispute or can only be exercised on terms destructive of the right claimed. Troup v. Ricardo, 4 De G. J. & S. 489; 34 L. J., Ch. 91; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1161; 11 L. T. 399; 13 W. R. 147.

The Court of session has no power to alter, vary, or discharge any order of the court of chancery made under the jurisdiction of the great seal, which is as much the great seal of Scotland as of England. Bute (Marquis) v. Stuart, 2 Giff. 582. Affirmed on appeal, 4 Macq. H. L. 19; 9 H. L. Cas. 440; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1129; 4 L. T. 182; 9 W. R. 722.

Bill may be brought to foreclose lands in mortgage out of jurisdiction of court, if persons be in the jurisdiction. Anon., 1 Salk. 404.

The court has no jurisdiction to restrain a trespass which does not amount to waste. Turner v. Ringwood Highway Board, 18 W. R. 424.

The court of chancery has no jurisdiction to direct the restoration of the interior of a church to its former condition, from which it has been altered. Cardinall v. Molyneux, 4 De G. F. & J. 117; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 854; 4 L. T. 605.

No equity can be founded on an allegation that a court, legally constituted, is not properly competent to decide questions within its jurisdiction, and where the legislature have given jurisdiction to a court provided by the act, and has made its decision final; if any inconvenience arises from the legal exercise of the jurisdiction, the legislature alone can supply a remedy. Barnsley Canal Co. v. Twibell, 7 Beav. 19; 13 L. J., Ch. 434.

The object of the control which this court has over the ecclesiastical courts, by means of the writ of habeas corpus, is to keep those courts within the jurisdiction which the law has assigned to them, and not to correct any error into which they may fall in the exercise of it; and, therefore, objections taken to a significavit, upon the ground that it did not sufficiently show that the defendant had been regularly cited, and upon the further ground that the Ecclesiastical Court was not, according to its own practice, authorised to proceed to judgment upon the merits against a party who had never appeared, were overruled. Baines, In re, Cr. & Ph. 31; 10 L. J., Ch. 108; 4 Jur. 1194. And see S. C. at law, 5 Jur. 337.

Before the court of chancery will interfere to correct a judgment in a customary court, it must be shown, first, that there is no remedy elsewhere; and, secondly, that an error has been committed against conscience. Semble, that the jurisdiction is to direct the court below to review its decision. Plunkett v. Burlington (Lord), 1 Jur. 375.

The stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 115, gives to persons dissatisfied with anything that has been done under its provisions an appeal to the quarter sessions. This would not deprive a party aggrieved of his right to apply for the interference of a court of equity, if he was in other respects entitled to that interference. Beaufort (Duke) v. Neeld, 12 Cl. & F. 248; 9 Jur. 813.

The court of chancery will not entertain a suit to enforce the making or repairing railway accommodation works, unless recourse has been had in the first instance to justices, where by act of parliament they have jurisdiction in the matter. Hood v. North-Eastern Ry., 40 L. J., Ch. 17; L. R. 11 Eq. 116; 23 L. T. 433; 19 W. R. 266.

A court of equity will not interfere in every breach of contract, nor although a party may be entitled to large damages. Exceptions in cases of specific performance, or irreparable damage. Weale v. West Middlesex Waterworks, 1 Jac. & Walk. 370; 21 R. R. 183.

Equity will not, under pretence of a trust, or any of its own notions, suffer a party to evade a beneficial law. Att.-Gen. v. Hindley, 1 Eq. Abr. 131.

The court will not interfere on behalf of a plaintiff, who claims relief, not through direct equities of his own, but indirectly through the equities of other parties, on which equities those parties themselves do not insist. Roberts v. Bozon, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 113.

This court, when it can consistently with the instrument executed by the parties, will do that which is the highest equity, make an equality between parties who stand in the same relation, but it cannot do that contrary to the plain meaning of a deed. Hulme v. Chitty, 9 Beav. 437; 10 Jur. 323.

The absence of a remedy for a supposed wrong, in another place, is not of itself any reason for this court assuming a jurisdiction on the subject. The case must be such as to bring it properly within the jurisdiction of this court, on other grounds. Ryves v. Wellington (Duke), 9 Beav. 579; 15 L. J., Ch. 461; 10 Jur. 697.

A court of equity will not interfere on points of morals, except when they are mixed up with the administration of civil rights in property. Gartside v. Outram, 26 L. J., Ch. 113; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 39; 5 W. R. 35.

A court of equity will not declare future rights which may never arise, but leaves them to be determined when they come into possession. Murray v. Moyers, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 520.

An existing interest, whether present, vested, or contingent, however future and remote it may be, if it be a present interest, the party representing it has a right to file a bill to have the share secured; but the mere expectation of a future event happening, which may give an interest, confers no such right. Davis v. Angell, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 10 W. R. 722. See Ord. XXV. r. 5.

When there is a remedy at law, and a correspondent remedy in equity, supplementing that of the common law, and the legal remedy is subject by statute to a limit in point of time, a court of equity in affording the correspondent remedy will act by analogy to the statute, and impose on the remedy it affords the same limit as to time. Knox v. Gye, 42 L. J., Ch. 234; L. R. 5 H. L. 656.

A bill to enforce a right springing from a statutory engagement is analogous to a bill for specific performance, and the plaintiff must come into court with clean hands. Fisher v. Tully, 47 L. J., P. C. 59; 3 App. Cas. 627; 38 L. T. 236.

The law moulds itself to the wants and varying exigencies of mankind: but the principles of the law do not vary, though they may be modified in their application to new cases as they arise. Ejerton v. Brownlow (Earl), 4 H. L. Cas. 1; 23 L. J., Ch. 348; 18 Jur. 71.

—— Mistake.]—Where money is paid out of court through the erroneous order of the court, the party who receives it, and is called upon to refund, is not liable to pay interest upon it. Small v. Attwood, 3 Y. & Coll. 105.

A. borrowed from B. 1,000*l*., to secure which A., and W., as his surety, in 1841 mortgaged to B. their reversionary third shares of a fund in court. B. obtained a stop order. In February, 1846, B., on his marriage, assigned the debt to trustees, who did not obtain a new stop order, nor was notice of the assignment given to W. In December, 1846, C., who was the general solicitor of B., presented a petition on A.'s behalf, setting out the mortgage in such a way as not to show that W. was merely a surety, and containing a statement that 500*l*. had been paid to B. by A. in part discharge of the debt, and praying for payment out of court of A.'s share. C. instructed counsel to appear and consent for W. and B., and the order was made without the knowledge of either W. or B., or B.'s trustees:—Held, that the share of the surety was liable for any deficiency of the primary security not attributable to the default of the creditor, and that the fact of the deficiency being occasioned by the act of the Court of Chancery made no difference. Wheatley v. Bastow, 7 De G. M. & G. 261; 24 L. J., Ch. 727; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1124; 3 W. R. 540.

—— Abuse of Process.]—The court has sufficient authority, when the occasion requires its exercise, to prevent parties converting its own rules, and the sanctions employed to enforce them, into the means of injustice. Sutfield (Lord) v. Bond, 10 Beav. 146.

Proceedings by a creditor under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, with a view to making the alleged debtor a bankrupt in default of his satisfying the demand, will not be interfered with in a court of equity on the ground merely of an allegation that such proceeding is dictated purely by fraud and malice, and that no debt is in fact due. Pim v. Wilson, 2 Ph. 653; 17 L. J., Ch. 428; 12 Jur. 781.

The court will not refuse to entertain a suit for the execution of the trusts of a settlement, where the settled fund actually exists, merely on the ground that the settled fund is so small as to be of no importance to the cestui que trust, and that the settlement was really made to raise a different question (which the court would not have directly determined) by a side wind. Nor will the court allow such a question to be evaded by a counter settlement. Gurney v. Gurney. 1 Hem. & M. 413; 32 L. J., Ch. 456; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 514; 8 L. T. 380; 11 W. R. 659.

But, semble, the court would not entertain such a suit at the instance of a stranger, nor if it appeared to have been instituted with a malicious motive. Ib.

Matters infra dignitatem.] — Defendant having, in two numbers of a periodical work of theatrical criticism, inserted detached extracts to extent of six or seven pages of a farce, the property of plaintiff, containing forty pages interspersed with criticisms, a bill for perpetual injunction and account of profits of the numbers, which amounted not to 3*l*., was dismissed with costs. Whittington v. Woodler, 2 Swan. 428. See also Bailey v. Taylor, 1 Russ. & M. 73; Taml. 295; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 49.

A bill of interpleader, by tenant against landlord and others, if the whole rent actually due is less than 10*l*. will be dismissed. Smith v. Target, 2 Anstr. 530. But see Crawford v. Fisher, 1 Hare, 136; 11 L. J., Ch. 273; 6 Jur. 576.

Court will not entertain suit for value under 10*s*. per annum. Townly v. Osney, Cary, 74; Almy v. Pyecraft, Cary, 103.

Suit for rent of 10*s*. per annum dismissed. Knighton v. Allen, Cary, 80.

Suit for 6*l*. dismissed. Harbar v. Kempester, Cary, 83.

Suit dismissed, on oath that lands under 10*s*. per annum. Morgan v. Richards, Cary, 85, 112.

Suit for poor of parish, though under 40*s*., entertained. Parrot v. Purlet, Cary, 103.

Bill in equity lies for recovering ancient quit rents, though very small, as 2*s*. or 3*s*. per annum; and if proved to be constantly paid, the court will decree payment, or will direct an issue to try whether any and what rent is issuing out of all or any of the lands in the bill. Cocks v. Foley, 1 Vern. 359.

A bill to restrain waste, the damage proved being 7*l*. 16*s*., is beneath the dignity of the court, and will be dismissed with costs at the hearing. Lambert v. Lambert, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 210.

By a canal act, the owners of steam-engines on the banks were empowered to lay pipes and take water from the canal for the purpose of condensing steam. In 1830 K. built a steam-engine, and laid pipes to the canal, with the cognisance of the canal company, and used the water for the purpose of raising as well as condensing steam, till the year 1847, when disputes arose, and an action was brought by the company, who recovered 1*s*. damages. K. continued to take the water, and the company filed their bill, praying that he might be restrained. K., by his answer, alleged and produced evidence that the company were aware, when the mill was built, that the water would be used for raising steam:—Held, that the smallness of the damage would not prevent the court from interfering, and that the court would not compel the company to bring other actions, but that there was so much evidence of acquiescence that the court would not interfere on motion. Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 78; 20 L. J., Ch. 675; 15 Jur. 962.

A. sold a piece of land to B., and covenanted for quiet enjoyment. Afterwards, A. raised the level, by three inches, of a brook running past B.'s grounds, through his, A.'s, property:—Held, that this was not a proper subject of complaint for the interference of a court of equity. Ingram v. Morecraft, 33 Beav. 49.

The court cannot speculate on the damages which a jury might have given for the breach of

—— Liability of.]—If a clerk of assize draws an indictment with unnecessary prolixity, he may be ordered to pay the extra expense. Rex v. Bury, 1 Leach, C. C. 201. S. P., Rex v. May, 1 Doug. 193.

C. CHANCERY JURISDICTION.

Principles Governing.]—The jurisdiction of the court of chancery cannot be taken away unless by express words. Byrne v. Byrne, Fl. & K. 435. Affirmed 2 Dr. & War. 71 : 1 Con. & L. 189 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 621.

The jurisdiction of the court of chancery can only be taken away by express words or words creating a necessary implication to that effect. Att.-Gen. v. Dublin Corporation, 1 Bli. (N.S.) 312.

The jurisdiction of the court of chancery is not ousted by a limited statutory jurisdiction conferred upon another court, and is properly invoked where the purposes for which the limited jurisdiction is conferred are at an end, or where the limited jurisdiction is not equal to the comprehension of the matter in dispute or can only be exercised on terms destructive of the right claimed. Troup v. Ricardo, 4 De G. J. & S. 489; 34 L. J., Ch. 91 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1161 ; 11 L. T. 399 ; 13 W. R. 147.

The Court of session has no power to alter, vary, or discharge any order of the court of chancery made under the jurisdiction of the great seal, which is as much the great seal of Scotland as of England. Bute (Marquis) v. Stuart, 2 Giff. 582. Affirmed on appeal, 4 Macq. H. L. 49 ; 9 H. L. Cas. 440 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1129 ; 4 L. T. 182 ; 9 W. R. 722.

Bill may be brought to foreclose lands in mortgage out of jurisdiction of court, if persons be in the jurisdiction. Anon., 1 Salk. 404.

The court has no jurisdiction to restrain a trespass which does not amount to waste. Turner v. Ringwood Highway Board, 18 W. R. 424.

The court of chancery has no jurisdiction to direct the restoration of the interior of a church to its former condition, from which it has been altered. Cardinall v. Molyneux, 4 De G. F. & J. 117; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 854; 4 L. T. 605.

No equity can be founded on an allegation that a court, legally constituted, is not properly competent to decide questions within its jurisdiction, and where the legislature have given jurisdiction to a court provided by the act, and has made its decision final: if any inconvenience arises from the legal exercise of the jurisdiction, the legislature alone can supply a remedy. Barnsley Canal Co. v. Twibell, 7 Beav. 19 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 434.

The object of the control which this court has over the ecclesiastical courts, by means of the writ of habeas corpus, is to keep those courts within the jurisdiction which the law has assigned to them, and not to correct any error into which they may fall in the exercise of it ; and, therefore, objections taken to a significavit, upon the ground that it did not sufficiently show that the defendant had been regularly cited, and upon the further ground that the Ecclesiastical Court was not, according to its own practice, authorised to proceed to judgment upon the merits against a party who had never appeared, were overruled. Baines, In re, Cr. & Ph. 31 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 108 ; 4 Jur. 1194. And see S. C. at law, 5 Jur. 337.

Before the court of chancery will interfere to correct a judgment in a customary court, it must be shown, first, that there is no remedy elsewhere ; and, secondly, that an error has been committed against conscience. Semble, that the jurisdiction is to direct the court below to review its decision. Plunkett v. Burlington (Lord), 1 Jur. 375.

The stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 115, gives to persons dissatisfied with anything that has been done under its provisions an appeal to the quarter sessions. This would not deprive a party aggrieved of his right to apply for the interference of a court of equity, if he was in other respects entitled to that interference. Beaufort (Duke) v. Neeld, 12 Cl. & F. 248 ; 9 Jur. 813.

The court of chancery will not entertain a suit to enforce the making or repairing railway accommodation works, unless recourse has been had in the first instance to justices, where by act of parliament they have jurisdiction in the matter. Hood v. North-Eastern Ry., 40 L. J., Ch. 17 : L. R. 11 Eq. 116 : 23 L. T. 433 ; 19 W. R. 266.

A court of equity will not interfere in every breach of contract, nor although a party may be entitled to large damages. Exceptions in cases of specific performance, or irreparable damage. Weale v. West Middlesex Waterworks, 1 Jac. & Walk. 370 ; 21 R. R. 183.

Equity will not, under pretence of a trust, or any of its own notions, suffer a party to evade a beneficial law. Att.-Gen. v. Hindley, 1 Eq. Abr. 131.

The court will not interfere on behalf of a plaintiff, who claims relief, not through direct equities of his own, but indirectly through the equities of other parties, on which equities those parties themselves do not insist. Roberts v. Bozon, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 113.

This court, when it can consistently with the instrument executed by the parties, will do that which is the highest equity, make an equality between parties who stand in the same relation, but it cannot do that contrary to the plain meaning of a deed. Hulme v. Chitty, 9 Beav. 437 ; 10 Jur. 323.

The absence of a remedy for a supposed wrong, in another place, is not of itself any reason for this court assuming a jurisdiction on the subject. The case must be such as to bring it properly within the jurisdiction of this court, on other grounds. Ryves v. Wellington (Duke), 9 Beav. 579 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 461 ; 10 Jur. 697.

A court of equity will not interfere on points of morals, except when they are mixed up with the administration of civil rights in property. Gartside v. Outram, 26 L. J., Ch. 113 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 39 ; 5 W. R. 35.

A court of equity will not declare future rights which may never arise, but leaves them to be determined when they come into possession. Murray v. Moyers, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 520.

An existing interest, whether present, vested, or contingent, however future and remote it may be, if it be a present interest, the party representing it has a right to file a bill to have the share secured ; but the mere expectation of a future event happening, which may give an interest, confers no such right. Davis v. Angell, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1024 ; 10 W. R. 722. See Ord. XXV. r. 5.

When there is a remedy at law, and a correspondent remedy in equity, supplementing that of the common law, and the legal remedy is subject by statute to a limit in point of time, a court of equity in affording the correspondent remedy will act by analogy to the statute, and impose on the remedy it affords the same limit as to time. Knox v. Gye, 42 L. J., Ch. 234; L. R. 5 H. L. 656.

A bill to enforce a right springing from a statutory engagement is analogous to a bill for specific performance, and the plaintiff must come into court with clean hands. Fisher v. Tully, 47 L. J., P. C. 59; 3 App. Cas. 627; 38 L. T. 236.

The law moulds itself to the wants and varying exigencies of mankind: but the principles of the law do not vary, though they may be modified in their application to new cases as they arise. Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl), 4 H. L. Cas. 1: 23 L. J., Ch. 348; 18 Jur. 71.

—— Mistake.]—Where money is paid out of court through the erroneous order of the court, the party who receives it, and is called upon to refund, is not liable to pay interest upon it. Small v. Attwood, 3 Y. & Coll. 105.

A. borrowed from B. 1,000*l.*, to secure which A., and W., as his surety, in 1841 mortgaged to B. their reversionary third shares of a fund in court. B. obtained a stop order. In February, 1846, B., on his marriage, assigned the debt to trustees, who did not obtain a new stop order, nor was notice of the assignment given to W. In December, 1846, C., who was the general solicitor of B., presented a petition on A.'s behalf, setting out the mortgage in such a way as not to show that W. was merely a surety, and containing a statement that 500*l.* had been paid to B. by A. in part discharge of the debt, and praying for payment out of court of A.'s share. C. instructed counsel to appear and consent for W. and B., and the order was made without the knowledge of either W. or B., or B.'s trustees:—Held, that the share of the surety was liable for any deficiency of the primary security not attributable to the default of the creditor, and that the fact of the deficiency being occasioned by the act of the Court of Chancery made no difference. Wheatley v. Bastow, 7 De G. M. & G. 261; 24 L. J., Ch. 727; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1124; 3 W. R. 540.

—— Abuse of Process.]—The court has sufficient authority, when the occasion requires its exercise, to prevent parties converting its own rules, and the sanctions employed to enforce them, into the means of injustice. Suffield (Lord) v. Bond, 10 Beav. 146.

Proceedings by a creditor under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8, with a view to making the alleged debtor a bankrupt in default of his satisfying the demand, will not be interfered with in a court of equity on the ground merely of an allegation that such proceeding is dictated purely by fraud and malice, and that no debt is in fact due. Pim v. Wilson, 2 Ph. 653; 17 L. J., Ch. 428; 12 Jur. 781.

The court will not refuse to entertain a suit for the execution of the trusts of a settlement, where the settled fund actually exists, merely on the ground that the settled fund is so small as to be of no importance to the cestui que trust, and that the settlement was really made to raise a different question (which the court would not have directly determined) by a side wind. Nor will the court allow such a question to be evaded by a counter settlement. Gurney v. Gurney. 1 Hem. & M. 413; 32 L. J., Ch. 456; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 514; 8 L. T. 380; 11 W. R. 659.

But, semble, the court would not entertain such a suit at the instance of a stranger, nor if it appeared to have been instituted with a malicious motive. Ib.

Matters infra dignitatem.] — Defendant having, in two numbers of a periodical work of theatrical criticism, inserted detached extracts to extent of six or seven pages of a farce, the property of plaintiff, containing forty pages interspersed with criticisms, a bill for perpetual injunction and account of profits of the numbers, which amounted not to 3*l.*, was dismissed with costs. Whittington v. Wooller, 2 Swan. 428. See also Bailey v. Taylor, 1 Russ. & M. 73; Taml. 295; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 49.

A bill of interpleader, by tenant against landlord and others, if the whole rent actually due is less than 10*l.* will be dismissed. Smith v. Target, 2 Anstr. 530. But see Crawford v. Fisher, 1 Hare, 436; 11 L. J., Ch. 273; 6 Jur. 576.

Court will not entertain suit for value under 40*s.* per annum. Townly v. Osney, Cary, 74; Almy v. Pycroft, Cary, 103.

Suit for rent of 10*s.* per annum dismissed. Knighton v. Allen, Cary, 80.

Suit for 6*l.* dismissed. Marbar v. Kempester, Cary, 83.

Suit dismissed, on oath that lands under 40*s.* per annum. Morgan v. Richards, Cary, 85, 112.

Suit for poor of parish, though under 40*s.*, entertained. Parrot v. Pawlet, Cary, 103.

Bill in equity lies for recovering ancient quit rents, though very small, as 2*s.* or 3*s.* per annum; and if proved to be constantly paid, the court will decree payment, or will direct an issue to try whether any and what rent is issuing out of all or any of the lands in the bill. Cocks v. Foley, 1 Vern. 359.

A bill to restrain waste, the damage proved being 7*l.* 16*s.*, is beneath the dignity of the court, and will be dismissed with costs at the hearing. Lambert v. Lambert, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 210.

By a canal act, the owners of steam-engines on the banks were empowered to lay pipes and take water from the canal for the purpose of condensing steam. In 1830 K. built a steam-engine, and laid pipes to the canal, with the cognisance of the canal company, and used the water for the purpose of raising as well as condensing steam, till the year 1847, when disputes arose, and an action was brought by the company, who recovered 1*s.* damages. K. continued to take the water, and the company filed their bill, praying that he might be restrained. K., by his answer, alleged and produced evidence that the company were aware, when the mill was built, that the water would be used for raising steam:—Held, that the smallness of the damage would not prevent the court from interfering, and that the court would not compel the company to bring other actions, but that there was so much evidence of acquiescence that the court would not interfere on motion. Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 78; 20 L. J., Ch. 675; 15 Jur. 962.

A. sold a piece of land to B., and covenanted for quiet enjoyment. Afterwards, A. raised the level, by three inches, of a brook running past B.'s grounds, through his, A.'s, property:—Held, that this was not a proper subject of complaint for the interference of a court of equity. Ingram v. Morecraft, 33 Beav. 49.

The court cannot speculate on the damages which a jury might have given for the breach of an agreement, nor on the damage caused to property by failure of a sale: therefore the specific performance of an agreement of hereditaments, where the consideration money is 50*l.*, is not too small a matter for the jurisdiction of the court. The exercise of the jurisdiction is discretionary in the court; but the discretion is not arbitrary, but must be exercised according to the circumstances of the case. Bennett v. Smith, 16 Jur. 421.

The court will not refuse to entertain a suit for the execution of the trusts of a settlement, where the settled fund actually exists, merely on the ground that the settled fund is so small as to be of no importance to the cestui que trust, and that the settlement was really made to raise a different question (which the court would not have directly determined) by a side wind. Nor will the court allow such a question to be evaded by a counter settlement. Gurney v. Gurney, 1 Hem. & M. 413; 32 L. J., Ch. 456; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 514; 8 L. T. 380: 11 W. R. 659.

Although the sum recovered in a suit was only 9*l.*, yet it was held that the suit was sustainable, inasmuch as the plaintiff, when he filed his bill, might have been justified in supposing that a larger sum would be recovered, and the defendant, who knew the amount, had not given any information respecting it. Beckitt v. Bilbrough, 8 Hare, 188; 19 L. J., Ch. 522; 14 Jur. 238.

The assignee of a policy of marine insuance for 5,400*l.*, to which no interest attached, filed his bill against one of the underwriters to recover the premium of 3*l.*:—Held, that the suit was not a suit to establish a general right within the exception of Gen. Ord. IX. r. 1. as to the subject-matter of suits under the value of 10*l.* Hoskins v. Holland, 44 L. J., Ch. 273; 23 W. R. 477.

A suit against a company and one its directors, impeaching dealings with them by its funds, was commenced by the plaintiff on behalf of himself and all other shareholders. The plaintiff was a holder of shares to a very small value, which he admitted that he had purchased with the sole view of qualifying himself to institute the proceedings. Shortly after the commencement of the suit resolutions were passed at a meeting of the company for its voluntary winding-up, and its assets were sold to a new company. Answers being put in and excepted to, and the exceptions ripe for hearing, a motion, by the defendants, to stay proceedings or take the bill off the file, on the ground of the plaintiff's admitted object in becoming a shareholder of the insignificant value of his interest, and of the winding-up of the company, was refused. Seaton v. Grant, 36 L. J., Ch. 638; L. R. 2 Ch. 459; 16 L. T. 758; 15 W. R. 602.

An action in the high court claiming relief which, before the Judicature Act, could have been given only in the court of chancery, cannot now be maintained if the subject-matter is below 10*l.* in value. The old rule of the court of chancery in this respect still remains in force. Westbury-on-Severn Rural Sanitary Authority v. Meredith, 55 L. J., Ch. 744; 30 Ch. D. 387; 52 L. T. 839; 34 W. R. 217—C. A. [By Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, the Chancery Consolidated General Orders of 1860 are repealed.]

See also PRACTICE (STAYING PROCEEDINGS).

—— Practice.]—On motion to set aside proceedings, as infra dignitatem, on affidavit that demand does not exceed 40*s.*, court will not inquire into amount, if affidavit be put in, on showing cause that the demand exceeds that sum, but will at once discharge rule with costs. Branker v. Massey, 2 Price, 8.

Where suit is below dignity of court, it will be dismissed without going into merits. Owens v. Smith, 2 Comb. 715.

Though defendant has not demurred to a bill as being too trifling for the court to entertain, yet he may take advantage of the objection at the hearing, for a bill may have been so drawn as to have prevented a demurrer. Brace v. Taylor, 2 Atk. 253.

In a suit in Ireland for 6*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* for tithes:—Held, that the bill might have been demurred to, or would have been dismissed at the hearing, on account of the smallness of the demand. Disney v. Taaffe, 1 Dr. & Wal. 94; Sau. & Sc. 105.

D. INFERIOR COURTS.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Limits of Jurisdiction.]—Where an act establishes a court for a particular part of the United Kingdom, the true construction of it is, that everything which is to be done under the authority of the court is to be done within the jurisdiction of the court, unless the act either in express terms or by necessary implication enacts that it may be done out of the jurisdiction. O'Loghlen, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Bk. 28; L. R. 6 Ch. 406; 23 L. T. 878; 19 W. R. 459.

A court of limited jurisdiction cannot give itself jurisdiction by finding any facts; it has no jurisdiction beyond what the legislature has given it. Rorke v. Errington, 7 H. L. Cas. 617, 632; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1227.

By an act of parliament, jurisdiction was given to a local court of record to try actions of debt where "the sum or damages sought to be recovered shall not exceed 50*l.*":—Held, that the court, in addition to the sum of 50*l.* claimed as a debt, had the power to award a further sum for the purpose only of giving costs. Joule v. Taylor, 2 L. M. & P. 615; 7 Ex. 58; 21 L. J., Ex. 31.

An act of parliament, after giving jurisdiction in trespass, to the amount of 50*l.*, to a court previously having jurisdiction in actions on the case to the amount of 40*s.* only, proceeded to except slander from the actions cognizable by the court, in which jurisdiction beyond 50*l.* might be conferred by consent:—Held, that jurisdiction in slander to the amount of 50*l.* was given by the act. Furrow v. Hague, 3 H. & C. 101; 33 L. J., Ex. 258; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 638; 10 L. T. 534; 12 W. R. 868.

Effect of Non-User.]—Where a court lawfully possesses a jurisdiction for the benefit of the subject, in the administration of justice, mere non-user does not take it away. Att.-Gen. (Isle of Man) v. Cowley, 12 Moore, P. C. 27; 7 W. R. 713.

A grant by royal charter empowered the steward and suitors of a manor to hold a court for the determination of civil suits, and there had been a non-user of the court for fifty years (except for the purpose of levying fines and suffering recoveries):—Held, that the court being established for the public benefit, the words of permission in the charter were obligatory; and that the right of determining suits was not lost by the non-user. Rex v. Havering- atte-Bower, 5 B. & Ald. 691 ; 2 D. & R. 176, n. ; 24 R. R. 532.

When a charter was granted to a corporation to hold a court for the trial of causes, the disuse of that court for 200 years, and the want of funds to hold it, are no answer to a rule for a mandamus commanding the corporation to hold it. Rex v. Wells Corporation, 4 D. P. C. 562.

Statement of Cause of Action.]—A declaration in an inferior court must allege every fact to have taken place within the jurisdiction of the court. Waddock v. Cooper, 2 Wils. 16.

In an action on a judgment of an inferior court, the declaration is bad if it does not contain an averment that the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court below ; it is not enough to allege that the plaintiff recovered his damages within that jurisdiction. Read v. Pope, 1 C. M. & R. 302 ; 4 Tyr. 403 ; 3 L. J., Ex. 342.

A declaration stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff within the jurisdiction of the county court for the wages of and due and owing to the plaintiff within the jurisdiction, as the servant of the defendant. Admitted, that this was a sufficient allegation of the cause of action having accrued within the jurisdiction. Chitty v. Dendy, 3 A. & E. 319 ; 4 N. & M. 842 ; 1 H. & W. 169 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 195.

A declaration in an inferior borough court stated, that the defendant, within the jurisdiction of the court, was indebted to the plaintiff for goods bargained and sold, and for goods sold and delivered, and for money lent, and for money paid, and for money found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff on an account then stated between them, which several moneys were to be then and there paid on request :—Held, that it did not sufficiently appear that the cause of action accrued within the jurisdiction. Cook v. M'Pherson, 8 Q. B. 1030 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 283 ; 10 Jur. 1052.

In an action brought in the court of Kingston-upon-Hull, the declaration stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, within the jurisdiction of the court, for freight due and payable from the defendant to the plaintiff for the carriage of goods from Marseilles to Kingston-upon-Hull, and there delivered to the defendant, within the jurisdiction aforesaid, at the defendant's request :—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the delivery only was the consideration for the promise, and that the cause of action and the consideration were within the jurisdiction of the court. Kemp v. Clark, 12 Q. B. 647 ; 17 L. J., Q. B. 305 ; 12 Jur. 676.

A plaintiff declared on a judgment obtained in the ancient common law county court against the defendant :—Held, that it was not necessary to state in the declaration that the defendant resided within the jurisdiction of the county court, or that he was duly summoned. Williams v. Jones, 2 D. & L. 680; 13 M. & W. 628; 14 L. J., Ex. 145.

A declaration in an inferior court cannot be amended by showing that the cause of action accrued within the jurisdiction. Spencer v. Hagiadur, 5 D. & L. 66; 2 B. C. Rep. 125; 11 Jur. 948.

Removal to Superior Court.]—On the removal of a cause by habeas corpus, from an inferior to a superior court, if the plaintiff declares de novo, he is not bound to declare in the same form of action as that in the inferior court. Bowerbank v. Walker, 2 Chit. 517.

Section 222 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852 (as to amending pleadings), applies to all pleadings pleaded in the superior courts, whether the action was originally commenced there or not. Messiter v. Rose, 13 C. B. 162 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 78.

Pleas to the Jurisdiction.]—A plea in abatement to the jurisdiction of the court must point out another court before which the matter is cognisable. Spooner v. Juddow, 4 Moore, Ind. App. 353 ; 6 Moore, P. C. 257. S. P., Rex v. Johnson, 6 East, 583 ; 2 Smith, 591 ; 8 R. R. 550 ; Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 172.

Plea to jurisdiction must show what court has jurisdiction. Derby (Earl) v. Athol (Duke), Dick. 129 ; 1 Ves. 202.

Plea by a Hindoo of Arcot, to the jurisdiction of the recorder's court at Bombay, defective, in not pointing out another court of competent jurisdiction. Moodeliar v. Rex, 3 Knapp, 348.

A plea against the jurisdiction of the court must show what court has the proper jurisdiction. Arcot (Nabob) v. East India Co., 3 Bro. C. C. 292. And see S. C., 1 Ves. J. 371. See Bean v. Teed, 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 34.

Plea to jurisdiction of a general court must show where it is : not so of inferior court. Sodor and Man (Bishop) v. Derby (Earl), 2 Ves. 337.

A plea in bar, if well founded, is sufficient without pointing out the court in which the suit ought to have been brought. Spooner v. Juddow, 4 Moo. Ind. App. 353 : 6 Moo. P. C. 257.

—— Whether Essential.]—An objection to the jurisdiction, although not raised in the pleadings, was allowed to be taken at the hearing, the state of the law on the question of jurisdiction having been unsettled at the time of filing the bill. Stone v. Thomas, 39 L. J., Ch. 168 ; L. R. 5 Ch. 219 ; 22 L. T. 359 ; 18 W. R. 385.

If the cause of action does not arise within the jurisdiction, the defendant must avail himself of it by plea in the court below ; or if not alleged in the plaint to be within the jurisdiction, it will be bad on writ of error or false judgment. Rowland v. Veale, Cowp. 20.

Where an act, establishing a court of requests, provided that "no action or suit for any debt not amounting to 40*s*., and recoverable by virtue of this act, shall be recovered against any person in any other court," but contained no express enactment that a defendant sued elsewhere for such a debt might avail himself of the objection by plea, the proper mode of doing so is, nevertheless, by plea ; and if the defendant omits to plead the statute in an action for a larger sum, and judgment passes against him for a sum under 40*s*., the court will not enter a suggestion on the record. Reynolds v. Talmon, 2 Q. B. 644 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 94.

A statute, regulating the proceedings of a court baron, enacted that if it shall appear to the judge before whom any action may be tried, that the cause of action is one over which the court baron has jurisdiction, then, unless the judge shall certify there was a probable cause of action for a sum beyond that amount, the plaintiff shall not recover, but be nonsuited :—Held, that such statute need not be specially pleaded ; and therefore, that an under-sheriff, upon its being proved at the trial of a cause that it was one over which the court baron had jurisdiction, was right in nonsuiting the plaintiff. Hilliard

v. Webster, 6 Man. & G. 983; 7 Scott (N.R.) 903; 8 Jur. 425.

Where a court of requests had jurisdiction over the cause of action, and the statute by which it was constituted gave the defendant leave to plead the matter specially, then upon such plea being pleaded, and the jury finding a verdict for the defendant upon it, the entry of a suggestion upon the roll was unnecessary. Kennedy or King v. Walford, 7 Scott (N.R.) 433; 1 D. & L. 796; 6 Man. & G. 690; 13 L. J., C. P. 38; 7 Jur. 994.

If the court has not a general jurisdiction, it must be pleaded in abatement, and cannot be taken advantage of under the general issue. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 172; Rex v. Johnson, 6 East, 583; 3 Smith. 591; 8 R. R. 550.

A local act, for making and maintaining a railway in Ireland, enabled the directors to make calls from the proprietors, and, in case of neglect or refusal to pay the same, enacted, that it should be lawful for the company, or for the directors, to sue for and recover the same in any of her Majesty's courts of record in Dublin by an action of debt. In an action for calls against a proprietor, he pleaded to the jurisdiction of the court, that, by virtue of the act, he was liable to be sued in her Majesty's courts of record in Dublin, and not elsewhere:—Held, that the plea, though in form a plea of abatement, disclosed matter in bar to the action, which, upon demurrer to the plea, might be taken advantage of by the defendant. Dundalk Western Ry. v. Tapster, 1 G. & D. 657; 1 Q. B. 697; 10 L. J., Q. B. 186; 5 Jur. 699.

Pending Proceeding.]—If another suit is pending in an inferior court it cannot be pleaded, as if it is a replevin suit depending in the county court. White v. Wilks, 2 Wils. 87.

The court of the mayor of the borough of Liverpool is an inferior and not a superior court; and, therefore, a plea, that there is another action depending for the same cause in that court, is no answer to an action in a superior court. Laughton v. Taylor, 6 M. & W. 695; 8 D. P. C. 776.

Estoppel by Judgment.]—Where a plaintiff sued his steward in an inferior court for 4,000*l*., which was a less sum than he knew to be due to him, upon the final investigation of the defendant's accounts, and upon judgment by default verified for 3,400*l*. only:—Held, upon a plea of judgment recovered in answer to a second action for the balance due, that the plaintiff was concluded by the action brought in the inferior court. Williams v. Bagot (Lord), 5 D. & R. 719; 3 B. & C. 772; 27 R. R. 482.

No Jurisdiction—Validity of Proceedings.]—Where a limited tribunal takes upon itself to exercise a jurisdiction which does not belong to it, its decision amounts to nothing, and does not create any necessity for an appeal. Att.-Gen. v. Hotham (Lord), Turn. & R. 219; 3 Russ. 415.

The superior court will not give effect to the judgment of an inferior court if it appears, under the proceedings, that a jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the subject was not acquired when the judgment was given. Thompson v. Sheil, Fl. & K. 53; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 135.

Summons—Custom.]—A custom in an inferior court for a plaintiff, in an action of debt, to issue a summons and attachment on the same day, returnable on the same day, and at the return of those writs without either of them having been personally served on the defendant, and without the defendant having appeared, to declare and afterwards to sign judgment by default, is bad in law. Williams v. Bagot (Lord), 5 D. & R. 719; 3 B. & C. 772; 27 R. R. 482.

Plaint before Cause of Action.]—It is no ground of objection, after verdict on a judgment of an inferior court, that the plaint was levied before the cause of action accrued. Bishop v. Kaye, 3 B. & Ald. 605.

Jurisdiction as to Amount of Counter-claim.]—When an action has been brought in an inferior court and a counter-claim is set up which is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, the court has power to deal with such counter-claim to the extent of the amount of the plaintiff's claim, and no further. Davis v. Flagstaff Silver Mining Co., 47 L. J., C. P. 503; 3 C. P. D. 228; 38 L. T. 769; 26 W. R. 431—C. A.

Application of Rules of Supreme Court to.]—The provisions of s. 89 of the Judicature Act, 1873, which enable inferior courts to grant in all causes of action within their jurisdiction such relief, redress, or remedy, or combination of remedies, in any proceeding as the high court could grant, do not enable an inferior court to apply the provisions of the Rules of the Supreme Court to proceedings in the inferior court. Pryor v. City Offices Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 362; 10 Q. B. D. 504; 48 L. T. 698; 31 W. R. 777—C. A.

New Trial.]—Inferior courts have, generally speaking, no right to grant new trials without the aid of a statutory power to do so. G. N. Ry. v. Mossop, 17 C. B. 130; 25 L. J., C. P. 22; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 21; 4 W. R. 116.

An inferior court cannot grant a new trial, except on the ground of fraud or irregularity in obtaining the verdict. Rex v. Oxford Corporation, 3 N. & M. 877.

2. Particular Cases.

a. Liverpool Court of Passage.

Power to make Rules—Security for Costs.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 135, s. 4, the assessor of the Liverpool Court of Passage may make rules and regulations concerning the practice and costs of the court. The assessor made a rule that in frivolous and vexatious actions the registrar should have power to order the plaintiff to give security for the defendant's costs:—Held, that the statute did not give power to make such a rule, and the rule was invalid. Reg. v. Liverpool Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 413; 18 Q. B. D. 510; 56 L. T. 314; 35 W. R. 475.

—— Summary Judgment.]—Under s. 6 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869, the assessor of the Court of Passage, Liverpool, has power to make general rules and orders for regulating the practice and procedure of the Admiralty jurisdiction of that court:—Held, that a rule conferring on the registrar of the court a power of summary judgment similar to that exercised under Ord. XIV. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, was invalid. Fellows v. "Lord Stanley" (Owners), [1893] 1 Q. B. 98; 5 R. 115; 67 L. T. 857; 41 W. R. 253; 7 Asp. M. C. 298. But see 56 & 57 Vict. c. 37.

Adoption of Rules of Supreme Court.]—The provisions of Ord. XIV. of the Rules of the Supreme Court are not applicable to the Liverpool Court of Passage. Spelman v. The Empire, Liverpool, or Spelman, Ex parte, 64 L. J., Q. B. 640; [1895] 2 Q. B. 174; 14 R. 499; 73 L. T. 165; 43 W. R. 609—C. A.

The rules of the Court of Passage do not give that court the jurisdiction in interpleader contained in Ord. LVII. r. 8, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, and even if rules had been framed to that effect they could not give such a jurisdiction, and they would be in that respect ultra vires. The power to decide summarily without consent questions in interpleader is not a "rule of law" within the meaning of s. 91 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Speers v. Daggers. 1 Cab. & E. 503.

Distribution of Salvage Awarded by High Court—Injunction.]—Injunction issued by the Admiralty Division to restrain one of the officers of a tug, to which an award of 3,500*l.* had been made in a salvage action in the high court, from proceeding with an action for distribution of salvage instituted by him in the Liverpool Court of Passage against the owners of the tug. The Theresa, 11 R. 681; 71 L. T. 342; 7 Asp. M. C. 505.

Interpleader—Protection of Officers.]—Officers of the court are not protected in the case of process executed under an interpleader order made without jurisdiction, though good on the face of it, if such order was obtained on their own application. The relief or remedy, the power to grant which is conferred on superior courts by s. 89 of the Judicature Act, 1873, only refers to the relief and remedies to be administered in the action, and as the result of the action, and not to an incidental and extraneous proceeding arising out of the levy of execution, such as interpleader. Speers v. Daggers, supra.

New Trial—Appeal from.]—An appeal on an application for a new trial from the Liverpool Court of Passage is to the Court of Appeal, and not to the Divisional Court. Anderson v. Dean, 63 L. J., Q. B. 668; [1894] 2 Q. B. 222; 9 R. 418; 70 L. T. 830; 42 W. R. 472—C. A.

—— Practice.]—In moving in the Court of Exchequer for rules for a new trial or to enter a nonsuit in cases tried in the Liverpool Court of Passage, a rule to show cause was not granted unless either the counsel moving was present at the trial, or the assessor's notes were produced with an affidavit verifying the assessor's signature. When cause is shown, the assessor's notes must be produced with a similar affidavit. Welsh v. Mercer, 42 L. J., Ex. 52; L. R. 8 Ex. 71; 28 L. T. 358.

A copy of the notes taken by the judge at the trial of a cause in the Passage Court of Liverpool is not needed in order to support a motion in a superior court for a new trial; and such motion may, according to the established practice, be made by counsel who did not appear in the court below. Bridge v. Daine, 29 L. T. 477.

b. Palatine Court of Lancaster.

Administration—Intestacy—Grant de bonis non to Nominee of Duchy.]—Where an intestate had died leaving no known relatives, and his estate had been partly administered by his widow, who died leaving a will, the court made a grant de bonis non to the nominee of the Duchy of Lancaster, who was the residuary legatee of the widow. Award, In goods of, 11 P. D. 75; 56 L. T. 673.

Service of Writ out of Jurisdiction—Leave to Issue.]—Ord. II. r. 4. of the Chancery of Lancaster Rules, which provides that "no writ of summons for service out of the jurisdiction . . . . . shall be issued without the leave of the court or Vice-Chancellor," applies to all writs for service out of the jurisdiction of the Palatine Court, whether the person to be served is or is not within the jurisdiction of the high court. Accordingly, leave of the Vice-Chancellor, or court, of the county palatine for issue of the writ out of the jurisdiction must be obtained before making application to the court of appeal under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 82, s. 8. for leave to serve the writ upon a person out of the jurisdiction of the Palatine Court, but within the jurisdiction of the high court. Walker v. Dodds, 57 L. J., Ch. 206; 37 Ch. D. 188; 58 L. T. 291; 36 W. R. 133—C. A.

Upon application ex parte by the plaintiff in a suit in the court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster, the lords justices of the High Court of Chancery, under the powers given to them by the Court of Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1854, ordered that service of the claim in the suit should be effected upon one of the defendants out of the jurisdiction of the said county palatine; and directed such order to be drawn up by one of the registrars of the High Court of Chancery. Waltham v. Goodyear, 7 De G. M. & G. 76; 24 L. J., Ch. 587; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 197.

Transfer to High Court.]—The fact of questions of legal difficulty arising in a suit instituted in the court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster is not sufficient reason for transferring it to the High Court of Chancery. Waltham v. Goodier, 3 W. R. 352.

Persons who had assigned property in trust for their creditors brought an action in the court of the county palatine against the trustees and a purchaser from them, for accounts, and to impeach the sale, alleging fraudulent dealings by the trustees and a collusive sale at an undervalue. The property was within the jurisdiction of the palatine court, and all the parties resided within it at the time of the sale; but one of the trustees, whose conduct was especially impeached, had since gone to reside out of the jurisdiction of that court. By leave of the court of appeal, service on him out of the jurisdiction of the palatine court was effected. He then applied to transfer the action to the high court. The other defendants, except a defendant having a very small interest concurrent with that of the plaintiffs, supported the application:—Held, without laying down any general rule, that the applicant being the principal defendant, no sufficient reason was shown in this case for obliging him to defend the action in the county palatine, and that it ought to be transferred to the high court.

Cooke v. Smith, 44 Ch. D. 72; 62 L. T. 712—C. A.

The sole defendant in an action commenced in the court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster resided out of the jurisdiction. On the 15th June the court of appeal, on the ex parte application of the plaintiff, gave the plaintiff leave to serve the writ out of the jurisdiction of the palatine court, on the plaintiff undertaking to consent to a transfer of the action to the high court of justice in case an application for such transfer should be made by the defendant. On the defendant subsequently applying for a transfer, the court of appeal made the order, and ordered the plaintiff to pay (in any event) the costs incurred in obtaining the order. Watmough, In re, Serjeeson v. Belve, 24 Ch. D. 280; 49 L. T. 220; 32 W. R. 101—C. A.

—— Fund Paid in under Trustee Relief Act.]—A fund had been paid by trustees into the court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster under the Trustee Relief Act. A person claiming to be entitled to the fund, and to whom notice of the payment in had been given, resided out of the jurisdiction of that court, and applied to the court of appeal under s. 8 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 82, for a transfer of the matter to the chancery division of the high court, and a transfer of the fund to the Paymaster-General. No step had been taken by the applicant in the palatine court:—Held, that the applicant was not a "party proceeding" in the matter within the meaning of the section, and that the court had no jurisdiction to order the fund to be transferred. Heywood, In re, 38 L. T. 292—C. A.

Jurisdiction.]—The court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster has not, as to land and personal estate within its jurisdiction, power to appoint a new trustee in the place of a trustee who is of unsound mind, but who has not been so found by inquisition. Ormerod, In re, 28 L. J., Ch. 55: 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1289; 7 W. R. 71.

The power to appoint new trustees in the place of trustees of unsound mind, but not so found by inquisition, is by the Trustee Acts given, not to the court of chancery, but to the Lord Chancellor, or other the persons intrusted with the care of lunatics. Ib.

The principle under which the jurisdiction in personam of the old court of chancery extends, in effect, to property wherever situate, applies to the chancery court of the county palatine of Lancaster. Longdendale Cotton Spinning Co., In re, 8 Ch. D. 150; 38 L. T. 776; 26 W. R. 491.

Therefore, where the defendants in an action in the chancery court of the county palatine of Lancaster were within, but their property was beyond, the boundary of the local jurisdiction:—Held, that the jurisdiction of that court was the jurisdiction in personam of the old court of chancery within the boundary, and therefore that the palatine court could exercise jurisdiction over the property, and could enforce any order in the action by applying to the supreme court under the Court of Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1854, s. 7, and Judicature Act, 1873, s. 18, sub-s. 2, and motion by the defendants to stay the action for want of jurisdiction refused with costs. Ib.

The Vice-Chancellor of the county palatine has no jurisdiction to grant an injunction restraining proceedings in the high court. Alison, In re, Johnson, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 755; 8 Ch. D. 1; 38 L. T. 304; 26 W. R. 450—C. A.

The jurisdiction of the palatine court is co-ordinate with that of high court. Ib.

In 1874, a petition was presented in the court of the county palatine of Lancaster, for a guardian and maintenance of two infants, who were entitled for life to a very large property under their great-grandfather's will. Their mother and another were appointed guardians, and an allowance for maintenance was fixed, and was afterwards varied from time to time by the court. In 1877, the mother, as next friend of the infants, obtained in the high court a judgment for administration of the testator's estate, and then took out a summons in the action for the appointment of guardians and an allowance for maintenance. The summons was not served on the other guardian, but he heard of it, and by the direction of the Vice-Chancellor of the county palatine took out a summons for direction in the palatine court. On the summons being attended the Vice-Chancellor expressed strong disapprobation of the conduct of the mother in taking out the summons in the high court, took an undertaking, which she voluntarily offered, not to proceed further with the summons in the high court, and made a reference to the registrar as to revising the allowances for maintenance. Soon afterwards, the mother, as next friend of the infants, applied to the Vice-Chancellor of the county palatine to discharge the undertaking and to stay proceedings in the palatine court. This application having been refused, the mother, as next friend of the infants, appealed:—Held, that, although the high court had full jurisdiction to appoint guardians and order maintenance, notwithstanding the previous orders made by the palatine court, such jurisdiction ought not to be exercised unless some special ground was shown, inasmuch as it was better for the infants that their maintenance and education should remain under the direction of the judge who had directed them for three years, and was fully acquainted with the case; and that the proceedings in the palatine court ought not to be stayed. Ib.

Held, also, that as the Vice-Chancellor of the county palatine had no jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain proceedings in the high court, he ought not to have taken an undertaking to discontinue them, and the undertaking was accordingly discharged. Ib.

Staying Proceedings.]—A person who has obtained a creditor's order for administration of a testatrix's estate in the palatine court of the Duchy of Lancaster, and who is neither a party to a suit in the high court for the same purpose, nor has proved his debt under an administration order therein made subsequently to the order in the palatine court suit, is a mere stranger to the high court suit, and a motion made by a person so circumstanced in the high court suit to stay proceedings therein, on the ground of the order made in the palatine court suit, was refused, with costs, upon the ground of his being such stranger. Yates, In re, Bradley v. Stelfox, 3 De G. J. & S. 402.

The fact of an administration decree having been obtained in the court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster is not a ground for staying proceedings for the administration of the same estate, where a portion of the estate is situate beyond the jurisdiction of the Lancaster court. Wynne v. Hughes, 28 L. J., Ch. 283 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 165 ; 7 W. R. 197.

On appeal, the court ordered all the proceedings in the suit to be stayed, the plaintiff to have the conduct of the suit in the court of limited jurisdiction, the plaintiff appearing in that court for that purpose. S. C., 28 L. J., Ch. 485.

Injunction — Appeal.] — An injunction was granted by the lords justices, as the court of appeal from the chancery court of Lancaster, against a person out of the jurisdiction of that chancery court. Downes v. Jackson, 14 W. R. 907.

Rules as to Costs.]—Under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 91, which enacts that the several rules of law enacted and declared in this act shall be in force and receive effect in all courts whatsoever in England so far as the matters to which such rules relate shall be respectively cognisable by such courts : Ord. LV. (under the Judicature Act, 1875) is applied to proceedings in the court of passage of the borough of Liverpool ; and a plaintiff who recovers a shilling damages in an action for slander tried by a jury in that court is entitled to his costs unless the judge before whom the action was tried has ordered otherwise. King v. Hawkesworth, 48 L. J., Q. B. 484 ; 4 Q. B. D. 371 ; 41 L. T. 411 ; 27 W. R. 660.

Costs—Patent Action—Power over.]—At the trial of an action in the palatine court to restrain the infringement of a patent, the Vice-Chancellor held that the patent was invalid in consequence of a claim being made which was bad, and dismissed the action with costs. The defendant had delivered particulars of objections, and the Vice-Chancellor stated that he was of opinion that the defendants should have the costs of their witnesses who attended to support the particulars of objections, though they had not been called. On taxation, the registrar disallowed these costs, but the Vice-Chancellor overruled his objection :—Held, that the discretion of the court of chancery and the palatine court with reference to costs was not taken away by Lord Cairns' Act and Sir John Rolt's Act in the cases which those acts enabled those courts to try, and that these courts ought not to follow by analogy a rule which applied to courts having no discretion as to costs, and therefore the Vice-Chancellor had power to give these costs of the particulars of objections to the defendant without a certificate under s. 43 of the Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852. Parnell v. Mort. 29 Ch. D. 325 ; 53 L. T. 186 ; 33 W. R. 481—C. A.

—— Refreshers—Copies of Correspondence.]—The amount of the refreshers allowed to counsel in cases in the palatine court is in the discretion of the taxing-master, and he is not bound by Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-s. 48, of the Rules of the Supreme Court. Where a case depended very much on the terms used in correspondence conducted in French between the plaintiffs inter se and the defendants inter se, the court refused to overrule the decision of the judge who heard the case, affirming the decision of the taxing-master, allowing the costs of copies of the correspondence in French as well as of the English translation for the use of counsel. Ebrard v. Gassier, 55 L. T. 741—C. A.

Judgment by Default—Setting Aside.]—According to the true construction of Ord. XXXIII. r. 21, of the Rules of the Palatine Court of Lancaster, a party against whom judgment has been given by default must make application to set it aside within six days if the court be then sitting, and, if it be not then sitting, on the next day on which the court shall be sitting to hear such motions. An application for extension of time by a party who desires to apply to set aside a judgment made against him by default, may be made at the time when he makes the application to set aside the judgment, if the action is still pending. Bradshaw v. Warlow, 55 L. J., Ch. 852 ; 32 Ch. D. 403 ; 54 L. T. 438 ; 34 W. R. 557 —C. A.

Appeal from.]—Ord. LVIII. of the Rules of Court, 1875, applies to appeals from the court of the county palatine of Lancaster as well as to appeals from the high court of justice, and the time for appealing is now regulated by r. 15 of that order, and is no longer governed by the General Orders of 1855 regulating appeals from the court of the county palatine. Lee v. Nuttall, 48 L. J., Ch. 616 ; 12 Ch. D. 61 ; 41 L. T. 4 ; 27 W. R. 805—C. A.

Section 1 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Procedure) Act, 1894, which enacts that no appeal shall lie, without the leave of the judge appealed from or of the court of appeal, from any interlocutory order, applies to appeals from the palatine court. The court of appeal will not generally give leave to appeal from an interlocutory order, unless it sees that if it does not interfere some injustice will be done. Dowson v. Drosophore Co., 12 R. 138—C. A.

The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 64. for the dispatch of business in the court of appeal in chancery, does not enable one of the lords justices sitting alone to act as a court of appeal from the court of chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster. Kershaw v. Vickers, 37 L. J., Ch. 488 ; L. R. 3 Ch. 513 ; 16 W. R. 772. S. P. Jones v. Kilshaw, 37 L. J., Ch. 277 ; 17 L. T., 485 ; 16 W. R. 295.

c. Stannaries Court.

See also MINES AND MINERALS.

The stannary court is a court of law, but not of equity. Trelawny v. Williams, 2 Vern. 483.

The equitable jurisdiction of the vice-warden of the Stannaries of Cornwall depends upon the principles of equity as administered in the court of chancery. Vice v. Thomas, 4 Y. & Coll. 538.

Lands in Cornwall.]—Prince of Wales may file an English information of intrusion by his attorney-general, for land parcel of Duchy of Cornwall. Att.-Gen. v. St. Aubyn, Wightw. 169.

A surrender to the use of the will is not necessary to support a devise of lands, parcel of the ancient Duchy of Cornwall, the tenure wherof was originally a holding from seven years to seven years, but which has in time become a holding to the tenant, his heirs, and assigns, subject to a fine at the end of every seven years, and to forfeiture on non-payment. Usticke v. Peters, 4 Kay & J. 437 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1271.

Under a devise of all the testator's lands to A. in fee, followed by a devise of his duchy lands to B. for life, the reversion expectant upon B.'s life estate in the duchy lands passes to A. Ib.

Appeal from Order of Vice-Warden—Deposit by Appellant as Security.]—Notwithstanding that the appellate jurisdiction of the Lord Warden of the Stannaries has, by the Judicature Act, 1873, been transferred to the court of appeal, the requirements of the Stannaries Act, 1869, s. 32, as to the deposit by the appellant of 20*l.* in the hands of the registrar of the stannaries court prior to appealing, are still in force. West Devon Great Consols Mine, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 850; 38 Ch. D. 51; 58 L. T. 61; 36 W. R. 342—C. A.

Winding-up—Order for Inspection of Documents.]—The practice of the stannaries court is the same as that of the high court of justice, that the mere fact of a petition is not enough to justify an order for inspection of books. But if grounds are shown, the petition may properly be ordered to stand over to allow the petitioner to enforce his right as a shareholder to inspection. The right of inspection under the 22nd section of the Stannaries Act, 1855, is personal to the shareholder, and does not extend to his solicitors or agents. West Devon Great Consols Mine, In re, 27 Ch. D. 106; 51 L. T. 841; 32 W. R. 890—C. A.

d. Other Courts.

Salford Hundred Court.]—Section 7 of the Salford Hundred Court of Record Act, 1868, enacts that "no defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the court otherwise than by special plea, and, if the want of jurisdiction be not so pleaded, the court shall have jurisdiction for all purposes":—Held, that the defendant against whom judgment had been recovered in the Salford Hundred court, he not having pleaded to the jurisdiction, could not have a writ of prohibition on the ground of want of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the above-mentioned section, under the circumstances, conferred jurisdiction on the Salford Hundred court. Oram v. Brearey (2 Ex. D. 346), overruled. Chadwick v. Ball, 54 L. J., Q. B. 396; 14 Q. B. D. 855; 52 L. T. 949—C. A.

A defendant in an action in the Salford Hundred court may obtain a writ of prohibition notwithstanding that he has not pleaded to the jurisdiction, although the act regulating the procedure in that court enacts that "no defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the court otherwise than by special plea, and if the want of jurisdiction be not so pleaded, the court shall have jurisdiction for all purposes." Oram v. Brearey, 46 L. J., Ex. 481; 2 Ex. D. 346; 36 L. T. 475; 25 W. R. 695.

Hundred Court.]—The hundred court was derived out of the ancient common law county court. Hallet v. Byrt, 5 Mod. 254.

Upon a nonsuit in the hundred court before appearance there were no costs allowed, and, if given, a writ of false judgment lay. Simpson v. Merville, 1 Shower, 47.

A hundred court at common law could not have a levari facias, but by custom it might. Ib.

Tolzey Court—Bristol—Foreign Attachment.]—An attachment of the goods of the defendant in an action of debt in the Tolzey court of Bristol is only a process to compel the appearance of the defendant, and does not make the plaintiff a secured creditor within the meaning of s. 16, sub-s. 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. The effect of an attachment of the goods of the defendant in an action of debt in the Tolzey court is the same as that of a foreign attachment in the Mayor's court. Sear, Ex parte, Price, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 448; 17 Ch. D. 74; 44 L. T. 887.

City of London Court—Jurisdiction—Employment within the City.]—The plaintiff, a resident of Manchester, issued a default summons in the City of London Court against the defendant, who was employed as a merchant's clerk within the City of London, but who resided elsewhere:—Held, that the Judge of the City of London court had, under the London (City) Small Debts Extension Act, 1852, s. 39, jurisdiction to deal with the summons, and that that act, with the exceptions of five sections relating to procedure and to costs in actions for small sums, was still in force, and, although modified as to the position of the judge, and assimilated in its procedure in many ways to the county court, was neither in fact nor by implication repealed by the County Courts Acts of 1867 and 1888. Kutner v. Phillips, 60 L. J., Q. B. 505; [1891] 2 Q. B. 267; 64 L. T. 628; 39 W. R. 526; 56 J. P. 54.

Manorial Courts.]—The bailiff and burgesses of an ancient borough had from time immemorial been lords of the manor and owners of the guildhall within the borough, and by a charter of Philip and Mary, power was granted to them to hold manor courts in the guildhall twice in every year, "as of ancient time had been used": and until 1810 such courts had been immemorially held: in that year, commissioners under an inclosure act awarded to H. all the manor, with the rights, members, courts, view of frankpledge, excepting to the bailiffs and burgesses the guildhall:—Held, that this exception did not exclude the new lord's right to hold his manor courts in the guildhall. Rex v. Ilchester Corporation, 4 D. & R. 324; 2 B. & C. 764; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 147.

The Court of Queen's Bench is not a court of error or appeal from a manorial court. Reg. v. Old Hall (Manor), 10 A. & E. 248; 2 P. & D. 515; 8 L. J., Q. B. 243; 3 Jur. 168.

Court of Hustings.]—The lord mayor of London is not the sole judge of the court of hustings, for by the constitution of that court it may be held by six aldermen in his absence. Markwick v. London, 2 Bro. P. C. 409.

A writ of error upon a judgment given in the sheriff's court only lies to the court of hustings in London. Markwick v. London, 2 Bro. P. C. 409.

Ely—Palatine Court.]—The bishop of Ely has not a palatinate jurisdiction within the isle, though exercising jura regalia there. Grant v. Bagge, 3 East. 128; 6 R. R. 569.

Borough Court.]—A court had, from time immemorial, been holden before the steward and portreeve of a borough, or their sufficient deputy or deputies, and a court was holden before the deputy of the steward and portreeve:—Held, that both these offices might be held by the same person, and that the appointment of the deputy by the person so holding them was sufficient. Green v. Davies, 3 B. & Ald. 60.

Court Leet—Jurisdiction.]—The offence of selling a loaf of bread short of weight is not within the jurisdiction of a court leet. Colebrooke v. Elliott, 3 Burr. 1859.

An amercement at a court leet for a private injury to the lord is illegal, though there be a custom to warrant it. Wood v. Lovatt, 6 Term Rep. 511.

A custom to swear the jurors at one court leet to inquire and return their presentments at the next court is bad in law. Davidson v. Moscrop, 2 East. 36; 6 R. R. 373.

Court Baron—Jurisdiction.]—A court baron cannot be legally held without two free suitors. Rumsey v. Walton, 4 Term. Rep. 446, n. And see Holroyd v. Breare, 2 B. & Ald. 473; 21 R. R. 361.

In the record of a judgment of a court baron, it was stated that the court was held "before W. K., steward of the court, and W. U. and G. M., and others, free suitors of the court": —Held, first, that it was not necessary to state that W. K. was steward of the manor. Brown v. Gell, 2 C. B. 861; 3 D. & L. 823; 15 L. J., C. P. 187; 10 Jur. 666.

Held, secondly, that the style of the court thus stated was correct. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that it was sufficient to state the names of two of the suitors only. Ib.

—— Abolition and Revival.]—By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, the old court baron of the honour of Pontefract, in the county of York, was abolished, and a new court was substituted in its place. By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and an order in council made in pursuance of that act, the new court was abolished:—Held, that according to the true construction of the several acts the old court was not revived, and consequently that a replevin obtained out of that court was void. Hellawell v. Eastwood, 6 Ex. 295; 20 L. J., Ex. 154.

Ancient County Courts.]—An action could not be brought in a county court unless both the defendant resided and the cause of action arose within the county, i.e., within the jurisdiction of the court. Welsh v. Troyte, 2 H. Bl. 29.

The plaintiff might sue in a superior court for a debt under 40*s.* if he could not sue in any inferior court. Busby v. Evaron, 8 Term Rep. 235.

A. became indebted to B. in a sum not exceeding 40*s.* for the carriage of a parcel of goods: and in a month afterwards incurred another debt to B. not exceeding 40*s.* for the carriage of a second parcel. A. brought two actions in the county court for the respective debts:—Held, that the causes of action were distinct, and that A. was entitled to sue separately on each demand, and the court refused a prohibition. Rex v. Herefordshire (Sheriff) 1 B. & Ad. 672.

When a demand exceeding 40*s.* appeared on the face of the declaration, the county court had no jurisdiction; and the particulars (which were returned as part of the proceedings) could not be resorted to in order to shew that, in reality, the demand was below 40*s.* Dempster v. Purnell, 3 Man. & G. 375; 4 Scott (N.R.) 30; 1 D. (N.S.) 168; 11 L. J., C. P. 33.

Court of Requests—Jurisdiction.]—A party who merely originated a suit by stating his case to a court of requests, and proceeded to execution of the judgment of the court, was not guilty of trespass, though the proceedings were erroneous, or without jurisdiction. Carratt v. Morley, 1 Q. B. 18; 1 G. & D. 275; 10 L. J., Q. B. 259; 6 Jur. 259.

But such of the commissioners of the court as were parties to the adjudication were liable in trespass, if the court had not jurisdiction; and jurisdiction could not be inferred from the mere fact that they acted in a manner which required it to justify their proceedings. Ib.

If the warrant of the court was correct, or even substantially good, the officer who executed it was not guilty of trespass; but if it was defective in describing the court by the proper name and style, it did not protect the officer. Ib.

In an action against commissioners of a court of requests and their officer for taking goods, they justified, alleging, that, at a court holden by them pursuant to statute, the plaintiff committed a contempt, and thereupon the commissioners imposed a fine upon him, and issued their warrant to the officer to levy it, by virtue of which he seized the goods. It was proved that the commissioners were acting in their jurisdiction, and that a conviction and warrant produced were signed by them; and in proof of the contempt and the proceedings thereupon, the conviction of the plaintiff and the warrant to levy the fine were put in:—Held, that although the plea stated as a substantive fact that the plaintiff had been guilty of a contempt, and not merely that he had been convicted, the fact of contempt could not be inquired into; for the allegation of it might be rejected as unnecessary, as the conviction and warrant were pleaded, and these appearing to have issued from a competent jurisdiction, were conclusive of the facts stated in them. Aldridge v. Haines, 2 B. & Ad. 395.

The judge of the Belper court of requests, erected by an act of parliament, had no power to alter at one court, without consent, a judgment in favour of the defendant into a judgment of nonsuit, pronounced by mistake at another; and if he did, and the plaintiff proceeded in a second plaint for the same cause of action, the latter proceedings were a nullity. Webster v. Mason, 8 D. P. C. 705; 4 Jur. 720.

The Bath court of requests had no jurisdiction over a claim for loss of time in attending the revising barrister's court made by a voter against an objector. Roberts v. Hunby, 3 M. & W. 120; 6 D. P. C. 82. S. C., sub. nom. Reg. v. Bath Court of Requests, 7 L. J., Ex. 45.

Nor had the Westminster court of requests in similar proceedings. Soames v. Rawlings, 2 C. M. & R. 744; 4 D. P. C. 501; 1 Tyr. & G. 46; 1 Gale, 299; 5 L. J., Ex. 55.

—— Service of Process.]—An act establishing a court of requests, enacted that the mesne process might be served on the debtor, either personally, or by leaving the same at his dwelling-house, lodging, shop, place of abode, or other place of dealing or trading:—Held, that it was sufficient to leave the process at a lodging where the wife of the debtor was living, though the debtor himself, a seafaring man, was absent on a voyage, and had been so absent for six months and that such service of process was not so contrary to natural justice as to render the judgment and execution obtained thereupon void. Culverson v. Melton, 2 M. & Rob. 200; 4 P. & D. 445; 12 A. & E. 753; 10 L. J., Q. B. 31; 4 Jur. 1130. J. M.

I. FORM OF.

Definition of.]—An agreement under hand and seal is a covenant. Holles v. Carr, 3 Swan. 647.

But the word "covenant" in an agreement may be construed to mean a contract not under seal in order to effectuate the intention of the parties. Hayne v. Cummings, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 421; 10 L. T. 341; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 773. Brookes v. Drysdale, infra.

Signature not necessary.]—Signature is not necessary to deeds; and the Statute of Frauds has no operation as to them. Areline v. Whisson, 4 Man. & G. 801; 12 L. J., C. P. 58.

To a declaration upon an indenture of lease, by the lessor against an assignee of the lessee, a plea, that the indenture was not signed by the lessor, or by any agent authorised in writing, is, therefore, bad. Ib. S. P., Cherry v. Heming, 4 Ex. 631. See Cooch v. Goodman, 2 G. & D. 159; 2 Q. B. 580; 11 L. J., Q. B. 225.

What amounts to.]—By a marriage settlement P. gave, granted, and confirmed to S. and her assigns during her life, in an event, which happened, a yearly rent charge, charged and chargeable upon certain manors of which he, P., or any person in trust for him, was seised or entitled for an estate of inheritance, at law or in equity, subject to certain charges thereon. P. also "covenanted, granted, and agreed" with S. that she might distrain and enter in the usual way for arrears. He also "granted, bargained, sold, and demised" the property to trustees for a term of years to secure the rent charge. By a decree in another cause the interest of P. in the property was held to amount only to a life estate. In a suit to administer P.'s estate, S. put in a claim as a creditor against P.'s estate for the amount of the arrears of the annuity:—Held, that upon the terms of the settlement there was a covenant which S. could enforce against the personal estate of P. Monypenny v. Monypenny, 3 De G. & J. 572; 28 L. J., Ch., 303; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 253; 7 W. R. 276. Affirmed, 9 H. L. Cas. 114; 31 L. J., Ch. 269.

Every obligation which on a fair construction of the language of a deed is imposed on one of the parties thereto amounts to an express covenant by him to perform that obligation. But the language must clearly show an intention that there should be an agreement between the covenantor and the covenantee to do or not to do the particular thing referred to. Cadogan and Hans Place Estate, In re, Willis, Ex parte, 73 L. T. 387.

An agreement for the sale, by the defendant to the plaintiff, of a public-house contained a clause by which the plaintiff was to take the lease held by the defendant, "subject to the performance of the covenants thereby reserved and contained, such covenants being common and usual in public-houses." It subsequently appeared that the defendant's lease contained a proviso or condition in these words, "Provided always, that these presents are upon this express condition, and all and every underlease, deed of assignment, &c., which shall be made and executed during the term, shall be left with the solicitor of the ground landlord within two months of its date for the purpose of registration, and a fee of one guinea paid for such registration," and the plaintiff refused to complete the purchase and sought to recover back his deposit:—Held, that whether the clause in question amounted strictly to a covenant or not, it was included under that term in the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, the word being used generally.

Brookes v. Drysdale, 3 C. P. D. 52; 37 L. T. 467; 26 W. R. 331.

Held, also, that the clause amounted to a covenant in the strict sense of the word. Ib.

The recital, in a deed, of an agreement between the parties to the deed, amounts to a covenant, if there is nothing in the rest of the deed to show an intention in the parties not to be bound by the terms of such agreement. Farrall v. Hilditch, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 840; 28 L. J., C. P. 221; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 962; 7 W. R. 409. S. P., Lay v. Mottram, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 479.

A deed between the plaintiffs and a railway company, after reciting that the company was desirous of being supplied with 350,000 railway sleepers, and that the plaintiffs were willing to supply them according to the terms of a specification and tender, contained a covenant by the plaintiffs that they would supply the sleepers within the time specified, as and when, and in such quantities, and in such manner, as the engineer of the company, by order in writing, from time to time, or at any time within the period limited by the specification, should require. The specification stated that the number of sleepers required was 350,000; that one-half would have to be delivered in 1847, and the remainder by Midsummer, 1848. The deed also contained provisoes that the engineer might vary the times of delivery; that the company should retain 2,000*l.* in their hands as security for the performance of the contract, and should pay it over within two months after all the sleepers had been delivered; and that the contract might be put an end to upon default made by the plaintiffs, or upon their bankruptcy or insolvency:—Held, that there was a covenant on the part of the company to take the whole number of 350,000 sleepers. G. N. Ry. v. Harrison, 12 C. B. 576; 22 L. J., C. P. 49; 16 Jur. 565—Ex. Ch.

To create a covenant in a deed, the word "covenant" need not be specifically introduced. Where it was agreed that A. should transfer his business to B. and C., and the deed between the parties contained a recital that it had been agreed between A., B., and C., that the whole of the debts of A. should be paid by B. & C.:—Held, that an action of covenant was maintainable against B. and C. for non-payment of the debts due from A. Saltoun v. Houstoun, 1 Bing. 433; 2 L. J., C. P. (O.S.) 93; 25 R. R. 665.

Where a lease of mines contained a recital of an agreement by the lessee to pull down an old mill and build another, and also a covenant to keep such new mill in repair and to so leave it at the end of the term:—Held, that this amounted to a covenant to build the mill. Sampson v. Easterby, 9 B. & C. 505; 4 M. & Ry. 422. Affirming 6 Bing. 644; 4 M. & P. 601; 1 C. & J. 105. See also Knight v. Gravesend Waterworks Co., col. 1054; and cf. Sharp v. Waterhouse, col. 1056; James v. Cochrane, and Rashleigh v. S. E. Ry., col. 1053.

If, looking at the whole deed, it contains, whether in the way of covenant, provision, or exception, a clear agreement to do any act, an action of covenant may be maintained in respect of such agreement. Saltoun v. Houstoun, 1 Bing. 433; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 93; 25 R. R. 665.

No precise form of words is necessary to constitute a covenant; it is enough, if the intention of the parties mutually to contract is apparent from the general scope of an instrument under seal, more especially where it commences with the words "it is hereby agreed by and between the said parties in manner following." Wood v. Copper Miners Co., 7 C. B. 906; 18 L. J., C. P. 293.

A declaration stated, that a railway company demised to the plaintiff refreshment-rooms at Swindon, for ninety-nine years, at the annual rent of a penny; and that the plaintiff covenanted to complete, to keep in repair, and to insure the same; and the company covenanted that, in case the refreshment-rooms should be disused as the regular and general place of stoppage for refreshment of passengers, they would purchase the buildings of the plaintiff on certain terms. That it was declared to be the intention of the company, and the understanding of the plaintiff, that all trains carrying passengers, not being goods, express or special trains, should stop at Swindon for refreshment of passengers, for about ten minutes; and that the company engaged not to do any act which should have an effect contrary to that intention. The breach assigned was that, whilst the Swindon station was used as the regular and general place of stoppage for refreshment for passengers, the company caused trains containing passengers to pass Swindon without stopping for the refreshment of passengers for about ten minutes, and caused several trains to stop for a short and an unreasonable time; that is to say for a minute, the time not being sufficient to enable the passengers to obtain any refreshment:—Held, that the declaration of the intention of the company, coupled with the rest of the deed, amounted to a covenant by them, that, so long as they made Swindon the general place of stoppage for refreshment they would cause the trains to stop there for ten minutes; and that the breach was well assigned, although it was not stated that any passengers wanted refreshment, or had given notice thereof. Rigby v. G. W. Ry., 14 M. & W. 811; 15 L. J., Ex. 60; S. C. (in equity), 10 Jur. 488.

Where, in a deed between A. and B., B. acknowledges that he owes so much money to A., such acknowledgment may be declared upon as a covenant to pay that sum, if an intention to enter into an engagement to pay appears upon the face of the deed. Courtney v. Taylor, 6 Man. & G. 851; 7 Scott (N.R.) 749; 12 L. J., C. P. 330.

Secus, where the acknowledgment appears to have been made solely for a collateral purpose. Ib. Jackson v. L. & North-Western Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 303; 7 Ch. D. 573; 37 L. T. 664; 26 W. R. 513. Marryat v. Marryat, 28 Beav. 224; 29 L. J. Ch. 665; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 572; 2 L. T. 531; post, col. 1050.

A. being indebted to B. on simple contract, gave a promissory note for the amount, and executed a deed, by which, after reciting the debt and the note, he, as further security, charged certain property with the payment of it, and agreed to execute such a mortgage of the property, with all powers, covenants and clauses incidental thereto, as B. should require:—Held, that the deed converted the debt into a specialty debt. Saunders v. Milsome, L. R. 2 Eq. 573; 15 W. R. 2; 14 L. T. 788.

On an assignment by way of settlement of a reversionary interest in trust funds, the settlor covenanted that he and all persons claiming through him would, upon the request of the trustees of the settlement, do all acts necessary for further assuring the premises to the trustees. The settlor afterwards obtained possession of the premises, and died, after applying the same for his own use :—Held, that the trustees were entitled to prove for the amount of the settled funds, as for a specialty debt. Dickson, In re, Blackburn v. Dickson, 40 L. J., Ch. 707 ; 12 L. R. Eq. 154 ; 25 L. T. 118.

II. CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS.

1. GENERALLY.

A covenant is to be construed most strongly against the covenantor. Warde v. Warde, 16 Beav. 103.

Covenant against acts of particular persons extends to illegal as well as to legal acts. Fowle v. Welsh, 1 B. & C. 29 ; 2 D. & R. 133 ; 1 L. J., (O.S.) K. B. 17 ; 25 R. R. 291.

Not to Sue.]—A covenant not to sue, arrest, implead or prosecute a debtor, his goods, chattels, lands or tenements, on account of a debt, extends to the issuing of a commission, which is a species of suit and proceeding against the goods of the bankrupt. Small v. Marwood, 9 B. & C. 300 ; 4 M. & Ry. 181 ; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 197.

See also DEED (RELEASE).

To Devise.]—A., being seised of real estates, limited part of them to the uses of his marriage settlement, and covenanted with the trustees, that in case of there being issue of such marriage, he would, by will or otherwise, devise all his real estates, and also all his personal estate and effects whatsoever, amongst the children of that and a former marriage, share and share alike :—Held, that this covenant applied only to such real and personal estate of which A. might die seised or possessed, and that it did not prevent him from disposing, during his life, of such part of his real estate as was not settled, or which he might acquire subsequently to the date of the settlement. Needham v. Kirkman, 3 B. & Ald. 531.

A., upon the marriage of B., his daughter, covenanted with her husband C., by deed or will to give and bequeath unto B. one full equal eighth part or share (that being an equal share with his other children) of all the real and personal estate of which he should die seised or possessed. B. died in the lifetime of A. A. having in his lifetime made some disposition of property in favour of a son, by will devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate for the benefit of his widow and some of his surviving daughters :—Held, that C. had not any cause of action against the executors of A. Jones v. How, 9 C. B. 1 ; S. C. (in equity), 19 L. J., Ch. 324.

A covenant to bequeath a sum of money, constitutes a specialty debt against the covenantor's estate, and is not satisfied by the mere insertion of such a bequest in his will. Graham v. Wickham, 1 De G., J. & S. 474 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 702 ; 8 L. T. 679 ; 11 W. R. 1009.

A. covenanted that his executors should invest a certain sum in the three per cents., in the corporate name of the vicar of W., in the corporate names of the churchwardens of W., and in the corporate name of the archdeacon of C., in trust to pay 10*l.* per annum to the parish school, and the remainder in charities. In an action on the covenant against the executors, held, that there was nothing contrary to law in the covenant ; nor did it appear to be impossible to be performed, although it may be questionable whether churchwardens are corporations, except for particular parochial purposes. Tuffnell v. Constable, 3 N. & P. 47 ; 7 A. & E. 798 ; 1 W. W. & H. 113 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 106 ; 2 Jur. 79.

To Pay.]—A covenant by a party, that, so long as he should continue and be in the actual receipt of the profits of a rectory, he would pay a yearly sum during the life of the rector, by two half-yearly payments, must be construed as a covenant for the payment of such yearly sum whilst the covenantor is in receipt of the profits during the life of the rector, and not whilst he is merely in receipt of the profits. Come v. Jones, 2 Chit. 700.

A. having covenanted, on purchasing an estate, to discharge a legacy mistakenly supposed to be a charge on the estate, is liable in an action on his covenant to the purchaser for not paying the amount covenanted to the representatives of the supposed legatee, whose interest had never been vested, although the purchaser could not become liable in respect of the legacy. Hodgson v. Wood, 2 H. & C. 649 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 76 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 591.

A declaration stated, that the plaintiff sold certain letters-patent to the defendants, who covenanted to pay 840*l.* by instalments : provided, that if within twelve months they should disapprove of the patent, and of their disapprobation and intention to sell it, they should give notice to the plaintiff, the payment of the instalments should be suspended ; and if the defendants should within six months after notice sell the patent, and retaining to themselves 240*l.*, pay over the surplus to the plaintiff, the covenant for payment of the entire sum should cease. But if the defendants, having given such notice, should neglect or refuse to observe all the other matters or things in the proviso, the covenant for payment of 840*l.* should stand. Averment, that the defendants gave due notice of their disapprobation, and of their intention to sell, and that the defendants had not sold the letters-patent. Breach, non-payment of the instalments. Plea, that the defendants were ready and willing and endeavoured to sell the letters-patent, but that no bonâ fide sale could be effected :—Held, that the defendants, not having sold the letters-patent, were liable to pay the instalments. Cherry v. Heming, 2 Ex. 557 ; 17 L. J., Ex. 305.

By an agreement between A. B. and C. D. and E. F. (two of the provisional directors of a company and promoters of a bill in parliament for making a railway), after reciting that it was proposed to carry the line close to A. B.'s park, and through his land, from which bill A. B. had dissented, A. B. covenanted that he would accede to the bill ; and in consideration of the assent given by A. B. to the bill, C. D. and E. F. covenanted with him that in the event of the bill being passed, the company should pay him for so much of the land as should be intersected by the railway at the rate of 120*l.* per acre ; and secondly, that they should pay him 3,000*l.* in compensation for the general damage which the line of railway should or might do to the mansion, park, and estate, including therein the crossing of the road near the entrance of the park, the lowering of the road, the obstruction of views, the expense of temporary residence during the progress of the works, the depreciation in value as a residence, the additional expense in the cultivation of the farms by the alteration of the roads, and all other damage to be done to the mansion and park. Then followed a covenant by A. B. for conveyance of the land on tender to him of 120*l.* per acre, and 3,000*l.*:—Held, per Parke, B., and Platt, B., that upon the passing of the act, C. D. and E. F. were bound by their covenant to pay A. B. 3,000*l.*, although the railway had not been constructed, nor had any actual damage been done to the land; per Pollock, C.B., contra, that the taking of the land or damage done thereto, was a condition precedent to such payment. Bland v. Crowley, 6 Ex. 522; 6 Railw. Cas. 756; 20 L. J., Ex. 218.

Where a party covenants to pay money "immediately upon demand," the word "immediately" must receive a reasonable construction, so as to allow the debtor time to procure the money; and if the demand is not made by the creditor himself, to inquire into the authority of the person making it to receive the money. Toms v. Wilson, 4 B. & S. 442; 32 L. J., Q. B. 382; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 201; 8 L. T. 799; 11 W. R. 952—Ex. Ch. Moore v. Shelley, 52 L. J., P. C. 35; 8 App. Cas. 285; 48 L. T. 918—P. C.

And see BILLS OF SALE (PUTTING IN FORCE).

A declaration stated that A., patentee of machinery for making pipes, granted to B. and his assigns, the exclusive licence to manufacture iron pipes, yielding a royalty of so much for every ton of iron pipes made or sold by B. or his assigns, to be paid within twenty-one days of the end of each quarter, B. covenanting for himself and assigns to render an account in writing, within seven days of the end of each quarter, of the amount manufactured, and to pay, within twenty-one days, the sum which should appear due on the face of the account; that B. transferred his interest in the licence to the plaintiff, who transferred it to M. and R. in trust for the defendants, who were to carry on business as the Welded Iron Tube Company; that the defendants covenanted with the plaintiff to perform the covenants made from B. to A. in the first deed; that the Patent Welded Iron Tube Company made iron tubes, in pursuance of the licence, whereby royalties became due to the plaintiff:—Held, that the declaration was good, although it did not directly aver that any iron pipes were made by B. or his assigns, and that the covenant to render an account was only availing to and did not control the preceding covenant to be implied from the words "to be paid." Bower v. Hodges, 13 C. B. 765; 1 C. L. R. 807; 22 L. J., C. P. 194; 17 Jur. 1057.

—— Discretion of Trustees.]—A deed, after reciting that A. was desirous of securing the payment after his death of the several annuities and the gross sum thereinafter specified, to the several persons thereinafter named, contained a covenant by A. with trustees that if B. should attain the age of twenty-one, either in the lifetime or after the death of A., then the heirs, executors, or administrators of A. should at such time after his death, or after the day on which B. should attain the age of twenty-one, whichever should last happen, as the trustees or the survivors or survivor of them should in their or his uncontrolled discretion think fit, and either in one sum or from time to time in various sums pay to B., or for his use or benefit, any sum not exceeding 300*l.*, without any deduction or abatement whatever. The covenant, as originally drawn, was an absolute covenant for the payment of 300*l.*, but was altered by the direction of the covenantor at the time when he executed the deed. The sum of 300*l.* was the only gross sum mentioned. The trustees proposed to exercise their discretion by paying B. 5*l.*, and expressed their intention of not exercising it further for his benefit:—Held, that the discretion of the trustees was confined to the time at which the sum or sums was or were to be paid to B., and that he was entitled to the full sum of 300*l.* Palmer v. Newell, 25 L. T. 892.

—— "Or" in its Disjunctive Sense.]—The sureties for a railway company covenanted to pay to the trustees for the clearing committee, under the Railway Clearing Act, 1850, such balances and sums as, from time to time, should be settled and adjusted by the secretary of such committee as due from the company, or should be settled or determined by such secretary as the amount to be from time to time contributed to the funds of the clearing system by the company: or should, in case of difference respecting the accounts of the clearing system, be declared by such committee to be the balance or sum payable by the company to the committee; or should in any way become a debt due by the company to the committee pursuant to the act; or should by such secretary be demanded of the company by a written demand in the form given in the schedule to the act; and reciting that it was of paramount importance that the adjustment of such accounts by the clearing system should not be disputed, and should be indisputable, it was, by the deed, declared and agreed that the sureties were not to be at liberty to dispute the amount which should be so settled and adjusted by such secretary, as due from the company to such committee, or which should be settled and determined by such secretary, as the amount to be contributed to the funds of the clearing system by the company; and which should be decided by the clearing committee to be the balance or sum payable by the company; or the amount which should, as aforesaid, be demanded by the secretary; and every such amount should be payable and forthwith paid by the sureties, notwithstanding any error or alleged error in law, in principle, or in fact, and no plea or defence should be admissible, or evidence be necessary or required, in any action or proceedings under the deed which should be admissible or required against the company under the act:—Held, that, construing the words of the covenant according to their obvious and ordinarily reasonable meaning, the demand of the secretary, made in accordance with the terms of the covenant, was alone sufficient to entitle the trustees to sue the sureties for the amount so demanded, it being the manifest intention of the parties that such demand should be conclusive in the matter; and also that the word "or," prefixed to the several alternative clauses in the deed of covenant was meant to have its usual meaning as a disjunctive conjunction, and could not therefore be read in a conjunctive sense as "and." Benson v. Dunn, 23 L. T. 848.

—— Covenant by Two—Notice to One.]—The defendant and M. covenanted with the plaintiff that they would, upon receiving six months' notice in writing, pay to the plaintiffs two several sums of money. Notice to pay one of the sums was given to the defendant only:—Held, that the notice ought to have been given to both the covenanting parties, and that a notice to the defendant only was insufficient. Moul v. Moul, 29 L. T. 844.

To Permit.]—Covenant to permit passenger by ship to stow baggage in a particular part of the hold:—Held, that this imported a prior request by the passenger. Corbyn v. Lesler, 6 Car. & P. 32; 10 Bing. 275; 3 M. & Scott, 751.

That Executors should Assign Residue of Lease.]—A., being possessed of a lease for years, covenanted in a deed for making a family provision, that, if he should die during the continuance of the term of the lease, his executors or administrators should assign the residue to B.; A. afterwards purchased the reversion in fee, and died:—Held, that A. did not, by the terms of the covenant, intend to preclude himself from purchasing the fee, and therefore his executors were not liable upon that covenant. Williamson v. Butterfield, 2 Bos. & P. 63.

As to Notice from Engineer—Sufficiency of.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff agreed to construct sewers, lay pipes, build engine-houses, &c.; but the defendant would not suffer him to complete them. Plea, that it was covenanted that the defendant's engineer should have power to direct the way in which various portions of the work should be done, and if it should appear to him that they were not properly executed, and with due expedition, it should be lawful for him to give notice to the plaintiff to alter any improper, or to supply proper materials and labour, and with due expedition to proceed therewith; and if the plaintiff should, within seven days, fail to comply, the engineer might take the work out of his hands; that the engineer gave notice to the plaintiff to supply proper and sufficient materials and labour for the due prosecution of the works, and with due expedition to proceed therewith; and that the plaintiff for seven days refused to comply, whereupon the engineer took the work out of the plaintiff's hands. Replication, that the notice to the plaintiff was to supply all proper and sufficient materials and labour for the due prosecution of the work, and with due expedition to proceed therewith:—Held, that the notice was sufficiently specific. Pauling v. Dover Corporation, 10 Ex. 753; 24 L. J., Ex. 128.

To Build New House.]—A lease contained a covenant on the part of the lessees to build a new house and premises on the site of the demised messuage, which they covenanted to pull down:—Held, first, that the covenant did not involve any obligation to erect the new house in the same manner and in the same style and shape, and with the same elevation as the old building. Low v. Innes, 4 De G. J. & S. 286.

Held, secondly, that even if it did, the implication would have been rebutted in the case before the court, inasmuch as the covenant stipulated that the new house and premises should be suitable for a purpose to which the old building was not applied. Ib.

The lease contained an agreement that such of the windows and lights in the new house and premises as occupied the site of ancient lights were to be considered as and should have all the rights of ancient lights:—Held, that this was merely an agreement between the parties, amounting to an engagement by the lessees that, so far as they were concerned, and so far as they were owners of the adjoining property, the lights of the windows of the new house which should occupy the site of ancient lights should have the character of ancient lights; and that the extent of the covenant must be limited to such rights and such estate and interest as the landlords themselves might possess in the adjoining land. Ib.

The lease also contained a provision that certain entrances from the demised messuage and the yard in its rear into an adjoining court and gateway, and the right of carriage way in respect of the messuage through such court, should be preserved:—Held, that the covenant must be construed with reference to the right of way, and the user of the right of way, which had existed as far back as could be traced by evidence in respect of the demised premises. Ib.

2. Joint and Several.

What is Joint.]—A covenant with two and every of them is joint, though the two are several parties to the deed. Southcote v. Hoare, 3 Taunt. 87; 12 R. R. 600.

Where the words of a covenant are expressly joint, it will be so construed, although the interest may be several, and vice versâ; but where the words are ambiguous in this respect, they may be construed to be joint or several according to the interest. Sorsbie v. Park, 12 M. & W. 146; 13 L. J., Ex. 9.

Where a demise is joint, and the covenants upon which an action is brought are made jointly with both lessors, the cause of action is joint, and both covenantees must sue, although as between themselves their interest may be separate. Foley v. Addenbrooke, 3 G. & D. 64; 4 Q. B. 197; 12 L. J., Q. B. 163; 7 Jur. 234.

The benefit of a covenant to repair in a joint demise by tenants in common runs with the entire reversion only, and therefore the representatives of all the tenants in common must join in suing for a breach. Thompson v. Hakewell, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 713; 35 L. J., C. P. 18; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 732; 13 L. T. 989; 14 W. R. 11.

But where, subsequently to a demise by one only, the reversion has passed to several as tenants in common, each can sue separately for breach of a covenant running with the land. Roberts v. Holland, 62 L. J., Q. B. 621; [1893] 1 Q. B. 665; 5 R. 370; 41 W. R. 494.

A covenant with tenants in common, and each and every of them, their and each and every of their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, to repair, is a joint and not a several covenant; so that an action on it must be brought by all the tenants in common, or the survivors or survivor of them. Bradburne v. Botfield, 14 M. & W. 559; 14 L. J., Ex. 330.

In consideration of 300*l.*, T. D. and R. D. severally and respectively, and for their several and respective heirs, executors, and administrators, granted, covenanted, and agreed, to and with L. and B., their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, to pay to L. and B., their executors, &c., one annuity or clear yearly sum of 30*l.* in the shares and proportions following, viz. of 15*l.*, being one moiety of the annuity, unto L., his executors, &c., and 15*l.*, the remaining moiety, unto B., his executors, &c., to be respectively paid quarterly. The powers, for better securing the payment of the annuity contained in the deed, were all given to L. and B. jointly, and the deed also contained a joint power of attorney to them to enter up joint judgment; and a joint power was granted to them to dispose of the reversion of a close of land, with a joint power of attorney to sell certain stock; and the annuity was redeemable, on seven days' notice in writing being given, by the payment to L. and B. of 307*l.* 10*s.* and all arrears of the annuity. In an action by L. against T. D. to recover arrears of the annuity:—Held, that the covenant was a joint covenant, and that the interest in the annuity was joint, and that L. could not sue alone. Lane v. Drinkwater, 1 C. M. & R. 599; 5 Tyr. 40; 3 D. P. C. 223; 4 L. J., Ex. 32.

By an indenture of lease, reciting that L. had agreed to take premises of C., and that R. should enter into the covenant after-mentioned for securing payment of the rent, it was witnessed, that in consideration of the covenants after-mentioned on the part of L. to be performed, and particularly of the covenant thereinafter entered into by R., C., at the request of R., demised to L., &c. And L. and R. covenanted to C. that they would pay him the rent on the appointed days; and that L., his executors, &c., should and would keep the premises in repair. There were other covenants similarly framed to this last for matters to be performed by L., and a proviso for re-entry if the rent should be in arrear, or if L., his executors, &c., should not perform the covenant in the indenture contained, on his and their part to be performed; and there was a covenant by C. to L. for quiet enjoyment, L., his executors, &c., paying the rent and performing the covenants in the indenture before contained:—Held, that R. was jointly bound with L. by the covenant to repair, as well as the covenant to pay rent. Copland v. Laporte, 3 A. & E. 517.

In a lease to two joint tenants, the tenants covenanted for themselves, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, that they, or some or one of them, would pay rent and also would repair at his and their own expense:—Held, a joint covenant. Levy v. Sale, 37 L. T. 709.

A covenant to and with A., his executors, administrators, and assigns, and to and with B., and her assigns, to pay an annuity to A., his executors, &c., during B.'s life, is a joint covenant to A. and B., in which they have a joint legal interest, although the benefit is for A. only; and therefore, on the death of A., the right of action survives to B., and A.'s administrator cannot sue on the covenant. Anderson v. Martindale, 1 East, 497; 6 R. R. 334.

Not a principle of equity, that every joint covenant shall be considered as if it were joint and several. Sumner v. Powell, 2 Mer. 30; Turn. & R. 423; 16 R. R. 136.

Joint covenant of indemnity not extended in equity beyond its legal operation, there being no ground on which to infer mistake in the nature of the instrument. and no previous equity entitling the covenantee to a several indemnity from each of the covenantors. Ib.

When the obligation exists only by virtue of the covenant, its extent is to be measured only by the words of the covenant; different, where the obligation is independent of the particular contract, as in the cases of partnership debts, bonds, &c. Ib.

By Partners.]—The representative of a deceased partner, the account between him and the partnership being at the time unsettled, agrees with the surviving partners to assign to them all his interest in the concern, upon being paid a certain sum of money, and having an indemnity against all claims upon the partnership; the assignment is executed, the money paid, and a joint covenant of indemnity given by the surviving partners:—Held, that the covenant is not to be considered in equity as a joint and several covenant. Ib.

A firm of three dissolved partnership, one of them retiring. By the deed of dissolution the two continuing partners covenanted for themselves, their heirs, &c., that they or one of them should pay the outgoing partner certain specified sums:—Held, that this only constituted a joint liability at law, and could not be otherwise construed in equity; and a demurrer to a creditor's bill, filed by the outgoing partner against the executrix of one of the covenantors. who died before the other, was allowed. Wilmer v. Currey. 2 De G. & Sm. 347; 12 Jur. 847.

Where premises were leased to A. and B., in co-partnership, and upon the death of one, his executors continued to carry on the business on the premises:—Held, that the covenants in terms joint were not to be considered several as well as joint, so as to render the deceased's estate liable for breaches of covenant after his death. Clarke v. Bickers, 14 Sim. 639; 9 Jur. 678.

What is Several.]—A covenant with the part-owners of a ship, and their several and respective executors, to pay money, to accrue for the hire of the ship, for freight of goods, and for compensation for the use of the ship's tackle, to the covenantees, their and every of their several and respective executors, at a certain banking-house, in such parts and proportions as were set against their several and respective names, is a several covenant, and cannot be sued upon by the covenantees jointly. Servante v. James, 5 M. & Ry. 299; 10 B. & C. 410; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 64.

What is Joint and Several.]—In a lease of a colliery, the two lessees covenanted jointly and severally, with the lessor, in manner following, viz. &c.; then followed several other covenants, after which was a covenant that moneys due should be accounted for and paid by the lessees, their executors, &c., not saying, "and each of them":—Held, that this and the former covenants were several as well as joint. Northumberland (Duke) v. Errington, 5 Term Rep. 522; 2 R. R. 666.

The rule as to joint and several covenants is one merely of construction; and parties may, by apt words, convenant severally, although there is a joint interest. If the words are capable of two constructions, then the legal construction will depend upon the nature of the interest. Keightley v. Watson, 3 Ex. 716; 18 L. J., Ex. 339.

And see post—VII. Action on.—2. b. Joint and Several (col. 1071).

3. ABSOLUTE, OR SUBJECT TO QUALIFICATION, CONDITION, OR ALTERNATIVE.

Qualified—Right to Assign.]—A covenant by the assignor of certain shares in a patent right, that he had good right, full power and lawful authority, to assign and convey the shares, and that he had not by any means, directly or indirectly, forfeited any right or authority he ever had or might have over the same:—Held, that the generality of the former words of the covenant was not restrained by the latter. Hesse v. Stevenson, 3 Bos. & P. 565.

An assignor of a lease covenanted that he had not at any time done or suffered any act or thing whereby the premises intended to be assigned could be impeached or affected in title or estate; and that for and notwithstanding any such act or thing the lease was a good, valid and subsisting lease, and not forfeited, surrendered, or become void; and that he had in himself good right, full power and authority, to grant, assign, transfer and set over the same to the assignee in manner aforesaid; then followed a covenant for further assurance by the assignor, and all persons claiming under him:—Held, that the general words, that the assignor had full power to grant, assign, and set over, were restrained by the preceding part of the covenant, and therefore that such covenant was confined to the act of the assignor alone. Foord v. Wilson, 2 Moore, 592; 20 R. R. 554.

—— Right to Convey.]—Covenants in an indenture of sale, that the covenantors are seised of a good estate in fee-simple, and have good right to convey, are qualified and restricted by a subsequent covenant for quiet enjoyment by them, their heirs, or other persons claiming under them. Milner v. Horton, M'Clel. 647.

A., after granting premises in fee to B., and after warranting the same against himself and his heirs, covenanted that notwithstanding any act by him done to the contrary, he was seised of the premises in fee, and that he had full power to convey the same; he then covenanted for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, to make a cartway, and that B. should quietly enjoy without interruption from himself or any person claiming under him; and lastly, that he, his heirs, and assigns, and all persons claiming under him, should make further assurance:—Held, that the intervening general words "full power to convey," were either part of the preceding special covenant or, if not, that they were qualified by all the other special covenants against the acts of himself and his heirs. Browning v. Wright, 2 Bos. & P. 13; 5 R. R. 521.

Where a settlor, in the settlement executed on the marriage of his son, enters into absolute covenants for title with the father of the lady, and lower down in the same deed enters into qualified covenants for title to the same lands with the trustees of the settlement. Semble, that the latter covenants restrain the generality of the former, although entered into with different persons. Martyn v. Macnamara, 2 Con. & L. 541; 4 Dr. & War. 111.

A father, seised of lands under a lease for three lives, by a deed reciting that he was seised in fee, or of some other sufficient estate of inheritance, conveyed them, upon the marriage of his son, in strict settlement, by words applicable to lands held in fee simple; and the father and son covenanted that the lands should continue, remain, and be for ever thereafter to the uses of the settlement, and that free from all former gifts, grants, titles, and incumbrances made or suffered by the father and son, or either of them:—Held, first, that these two covenants, for quiet enjoyment and freedom from incumbrances, were so connected, grammatically, that the general words of the former were limited and contracted by the restrictive expressions in the latter. Thompson v. Thompson, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 113. And see Robinson v. Ommanney, 52 L. J., Ch. 440; 23 Ch. D. 285; 49 L. T. 19; 31 W. R. 525.

Held, secondly, that, in the absence of evidence of fraudulent intention on the part of the settlor, the error in the recital did not amount to such misrepresentation as would entitle the eldest son of the marriage to compensation out of his grandfather's assets. Ib.

By an indenture reciting a power vested in A. B. to dispose of premises, and that C. D. had contracted to purchase them, A. B. appointed and conveyed them to the use of C. D., and his heirs and assigns, and covenanted that the power in A. B. was then in force and not executed: and also that he, A. B., then had in himself good right, title, power, and authority to limit and appoint, and to grant, bargain, sell, &c., the premises to the said uses; and also that the premises should be held and enjoyed to the said uses, without the let or interruption of A. B., or any claiming under or in trust for him; and also for further assurance by A. B. and all so claiming:—Held, that the second covenant was absolute, for good title against all persons, and not to be qualified by reference to the other covenants, inasmuch as there were no words, either in the second covenant itself, or in preceding or subsequent ones, to connect it with them. Smith v. Compton, 3 B. & Ad. 189; 1 L. J., K. B. 43.

—— To Pay—Not to Sue.]—A. agreed to purchase an estate from B. for 46,000*l.*, and covenanted to pay the purchase-money by instalments at the times and subject to the provisoes, and in the manner thereinafter expressed, that is to say, 168*l.* on every 24th of June and the 24th of December until 1884, the first instalment to be paid on the 24th of June, 1855, and that in case either of the instalments should not be paid upon the day appointed, or within one month after, A. would pay B. interest to be computed from the 24th June or the 24th December, as the case might be, upon which the instalment should have become payable; provided that no instalment payable pursuant to the covenant should be recoverable or capable of being enforced, nor should any proceedings for that purpose be commenced until after the expiration of one month from the day upon which the same should have become payable:—Held, that the proviso that no action should be brought for a month did not operate merely as a covenant not to sue, but that the effect was to extend the period for payment for one month, and therefore that no action was maintainable until the month had expired. Foley v. Fletcher, 3 H. & N. 769; 28 L. J., Ex. 100; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 342; 7 W. R. 141.

—— Effect of word "Whilst."]—A lessor, after a demise of premises, with a portion of an adjoining yard, covenanted that the lessee should have "the use of the pump in the yard jointly with himself whilst the same should remain there, paying half the expenses of the repairs." The words "whilst," &c., reserve to the lessor a power of removing the pump at his pleasure; and it is no breach of the covenant, though he removes it without reasonable cause, and in order to injure the lessee. But without those words it would have been a breach of covenant to have removed the pump. Rhodes v. Bullard, 7 East, 116; 3 Smith, 173.

—— Extent of Covenant to pay Royalties on Coal.]—A lessee of a coal mine, who covenants to pay a certain share of all such sums of money as the coal should sell for at the pit's mouth, is not liable under that covenant to pay to the lessor any part of the money produced by sale of the coals elsewhere than at the pit's mouth. Clifton v. Walmesley, 5 Term Rep. 564. S. P., Gerrard v. Clifton, 1 Bos. & P. 524; 7 Term Rep. 676.

—— Reservation of Right to Work for Coal.]—A. conveyed to B. in fee a messuage, buildings, yards, gardens, and homestead, with the appurtenances, and certain closes of land, excepting all mines of coal under the lands and hereditaments, with liberty to enter and sink pits for getting all such coal, and to erect engines and make drains necessary for working the coal; except as to such lands as lie within 150 yards of the messuage and buildings, and except any homestead:—Held, that the seller thereby reserved to himself the right to dig coals under the messuage, buildings, and homestead, and within 150 yards of the same respectively; but was not entitled to sink pits, erect engines, or make drains, within 150 yards of the messuage or buildings, or within the homestead. Bowler v. Walley, 15 East, 444.

—— By Lessee Under-letting, to Enforce Covenants by his Lessor.]—A railway company leased to R. refreshment-rooms, with a covenant, that certain trains should stop there: R. demised the premises to G. That lease, after reciting the deed by which the premises were demised to R., contained a covenant that R. would, during the continuance of the term, do all such acts and things as should be necessary and proper for enforcing the fulfilment and performance of the covenants for giving G. the full benefit and advantage of the refreshment-rooms, as fully as if G. was the assignee of the covenants, and that it should be lawful for G., in the name of R., to bring, commence or prosecute any action, suit or other proceeding whatsoever, for enforcing the fulfilment and performance of the covenants on the part of the company, or for recovering damages and compensation for the non-performance or non-fulfilment of the covenants, or any of them, G. indemnifying R. from and against all costs, charges and expenses to be incurred or defrayed in or about any such action, suit or other proceeding. G. entered upon the premises, but by order of the company express trains passed the station where the premises were without stopping, in consequence of which G. sustained a loss. Of this breach of covenant R. had due notice, and was thereupon requested by G. to file in his own name, and at his own risk and costs, a bill in chancery, to restrain the company from directing or permitting, except in particular cases, express trains from passing the refreshment-rooms without stopping for the prescribed time:—Held, that, assuming filing such bill to be a necessary and proper act, R. was bound to file such bill, and that the latter stipulation, empowering G. to sue in the name of R., did not limit or qualify the general covenant, and, therefore, he was liable for not filing such bill. Rigby v. G. W. Ry., 4 Ex. 220; 18 L. J., Ex. 404.

—— By Lessee to Repair.]—A general covenant to repair and a covenant to repair within three months after notice from the lessor are separate and independent covenants, and a right of re-entry attaches for a breach of the former, though no notice is given under the latter. Baylis v. Le Gros, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 537; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 513. S. P., Roe d. Goatly v. Paine, 2 Camp. 520; Wood v. Day, 7 Taunt. 646; 1 Moore, 389.

And the giving of a notice "to repair in accordance with the covenants," or "forthwith," is no waiver of a breach of the general covenant, so that ejectment can be brought before the expiration of three months, though the notice has been given. Few v. Perkins, 36 L. J., Ex. 54; L. R. 2 Ex 92; 16 L. T. 62; 15 W. R. 713. Roe d. Goatly v. Paine, supra.

But the giving of a notice to repair in three months is a waiver of a breach of the general covenant. Doe d. Morecroft v. Meux, 4 B. & C. 606; 1 Car. & P. 346; 7 D. & R. 98; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 4. S. P., Doe d. De Rutzen v. Lewis, 5 Ad. & E. 277; 6 N. & M. 764; 5 L. J., K. B. 217.

A covenant by a lessee to repair at all times (as often as need or occasion should require), "and at farthest within three months after notice," is one entire covenant, the former part of which is qualified by the latter. Horsfall v. Testar, 1 Moore, 89; 7 Taunt. 385.

Conditional—To Pay.]—By a deed, which recited that the defendant was executor of the will of B., and that the plaintiff and his brothers were entitled each to a legacy of 3,000*l.*; and that the assets were insufficient to satisfy the legacies; and that the plaintiff had lately entered into a partnership, and had thereupon undertaken to pay two sums of money, on the 15th March and on the 15th December; and that the plaintiff and his mother had requested the defendant to advance the plaintiff those sums out of the estate before those days; the defendant covenanted that he would, on on before those days, pay to the plaintiff, "by and out of the assets of B. deceased," the sums required; and the plaintiff, in consideration thereof, agreed that he would, on the 1st November, execute a release and indemnity to the defendant, in respect of all matters connected with the will; and that in case the plaintiff's share of and in the assets of B., should not amount to the sum to be advanced, the plaintiff would pay the defendant the difference, and indemnify him against all loss, and against all actions by other legatees, by reason of the payment to him; and the plaintiff's mother, upon the same consideration, agreed to release to the defendant the payment of part of an annuity due to her under the will:—Held, that notwithstanding the words "by and out of the assets," the covenant of the defendant was absolute, and not contingent or conditional upon the existence of assets at the days appointed for the payment of the money. Bain v. Kirk, 18 L. J., Q. B. 83; 13 Jur. 559.

The directors of a mining company agreed by deed to purchase a mine, the purchase-money to be paid within twelve months by instalments "out of the moneys to be raised by the company," with a proviso, that, in case they should not have received the deposits from the shareholders, so as to enable them to pay the money by the time stipulated for, the directors should be allowed a further time of six months; and they covenanted that they would, out of the payments so to be made by the subscribers or shareholders in the company, pay the purchase-money, according to the terms and at the times before specified, subject to the proviso:—Held, that this was a personal undertaking on the part of the directors to pay at the expiration of the additional six months. Hancock v. Hodgson, 4 Bing. 269; 12 Moore, 504; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 170.

By a deed of separation, after reciting an agreement by the husband to allow the wife 250*l.* out of his salary as a searcher of his Majesty's customs, the husband covenanted generally to pay her 250*l.* per annum during her life; the covenant is controlled by the recital, and dismissal from the office of searcher justifies non-payment of the annuity. Hesse v. Albert, 3 M. & Ry. 406.

Where a party covenanted that so long as he should continue and be in actual receipt of the profits of a rectory, he would pay a yearly sum during the life of the rector, by two half-yearly payments:—Held, a covenant for the payment of such yearly sum, whilst he is in receipt of the profits during the life of the rector, and not whilst he is merely in receipt of the profits Combe v. James, 2 Chit. 700.

A railway company promoting in parliament a bill for the extension of their line, which, if made, would go through the lands of the plaintiff, covenanted with him, "that, in the event of the proposed bill passing in the then session of parliament, the company should, before entering upon any part of the plaintiff's lands, pay to him 4,900*l.* purchase-money for any portion not exceeding 43 acres, which the company might, under the powers of their act, require and take for the purpose of their undertaking; and that, in addition to the purchase-money, the company should pay to the plaintiff, before they should enter upon any part of the land, 7,100*l.* as landlord's compensation for the damage arising to his estate by severance in respect of the lands, not exceeding 43 acres, to be taken by them":—Held, that the company was not liable to pay either of these sums, unless they entered upon some part of the lands. Gage v. Newmarket Ry., 21 L. J., Q. B. 398; 16 Jur. 1136; 18 Q. B. 457.

In a deed by which A. assigned to B., for a term of years, an exclusive licence to use a patent, after covenants for payment of sums in the nature of royalties, there was the following clause: "that if it shall happen in any year during the term that the royalties or sums of money covenanted to be paid shall not amount to 2,000*l.*, then B. shall within fourteen days after the expiration of any year in which it shall so happen, pay to A. such a sum of money as with the royalties will amount to 2,000*l.* for that year; or if B. shall at any time make default in payment of such sum within the time appointed for payment, then it shall be lawful to and for A., by writing signed by him, and indorsed on the deed or a duplicate thereof, to declare that the deed, and the licence and power thereby granted, shall cease and determine":—Held, that this was not an absolute covenant by B. to pay 2,000*l.* a year during the term, but only empowered A. to put an end to the grant upon non-payment of that sum. Tielens v. Hooper, 5 Ex. 830; 20 L. J., Ex. 78.

Alternative.]—A covenant by a lessee of a farm that he would consume on the premises the crops grown thereon; but that in case he should sell any of the crops, which he should be at liberty to do, he would bring to the premises an equivalent amount of manure, is an alternative covenant, and not an absolute covenant followed by a proviso. Richard v. Bluck, 6 D. & L. 325; 6 C. B. 437.

4. Dependent or Independent.

Generally.]—Where a covenant is part only of the consideration on one side, it is an independent covenant and not a condition precedent. Carpenter v. Cresswell, 4 Bing. 409; 1 M. & P. 66; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 27; 29 R. R. 587.

Where, in articles of agreement under a penalty, there are mutual covenants between A. and B. to do certain acts, and also a covenant which goes to the whole consideration on each side; to an action for the penalty by A. against B., on account of the non-performance of his part, B. may plead in bar a breach by A. of the covenant, which goes to the whole consideration. St. Albans (Duke) v. Shore, 1 H. Bl. 270.

Where anything is to be done by a plaintiff before his right of action accrues on the defendant's covenant, it should be averred in the declaration that that thing was done. Campbell v. Jones, 6 Term Rep. 571; 3 R. R. 263.

But it is otherwise where the covenants are independent of each other. Ib.

If one party covenants to do one thing, the other party doing another, it is not a condition precedent, but a mutual covenant. Bone v. Eyre, 2 W. Bl. 1312. S. C. nom. Boone v. Eyre, 1 H. Bl. 273, n.; 2 R. R. 768.

But where there are mutual covenants which do not go to the whole consideration, the breach of one cannot be pleaded in bar to an action for the breach of the other. Ib.

If one covenants with another to do a certain act in consideration of a reward, and the other prevents the stipulated thing from being literally performed, and accepts of an equivalent, he may be sued for the reward, and the reason of the non-compliance with the literal terms may be averred. Hotham v. East India Co., 1 Dougl. 272.

Where a deed contains two covenants which cannot both be performed, they are dependent covenants. Hemans v. Picciotto, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 646; 26 L. J., C. P. 163; 5 W. R. 322.

To Pay Captain of Whaler a Percentage.]—The captain of a South Sea whaler covenanted with the defendant that he would proceed to the fishery and procure a cargo of sperm oil, or as great a proportion as might be, under all circumstances, within his power to obtain; would return to London, and at his own cost deliver the cargo; would obey instructions, be frugal of provisions, and not dispose of any of them without accounting for the same; and would not smuggle or trade, or permit anyone on board to do so. The defendant covenanted, on performance of the before-mentioned terms and conditions on the part of the plaintiff, to pay him a certain proportion of the net proceeds of the cargo:—Held, that the captain's covenants were independent, and that the performance of them was not a condition precedent to an action on the defendant's covenant. Stavers v.

Curling, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 355 : 3 Scott, 740 : 2 Hodges, 237 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 41.

Covenant to erect Buildings within certain Time.]—A. covenanted to build a house for B., and finish it on or before a certain day, in consideration of a sum of money, which B covenanted to pay A. by instalments, as the building should proceed. The finishing the house is not a condition precedent to the payment of the money, but the covenants are independent : A. therefore may maintain an action against B. for the whole sum, though the building was not finished at the time appointed. Terry v. Duntze, 2 H. Bl. 389 ; 3 R. R. 423.

In an action against sureties on an indenture, in which the principal covenanted that for a certain sum he would, "on the execution of these presents," commence and forthwith erect, and in three months complete, certain works to the satisfaction of the engineer of the plaintiff, and complete it by a certain day, or pay so much a day as liquidated damage for delay beyond that time, and the sureties covenanted that he should perform his covenants, and that on his default they would pay the plaintiff such sum of money (as liquidated damages) as the engineer should adjudicate to be reasonable :—Held, that the principal was bound to commence so soon as he had executed the deed, although the plaintiff had not executed it. Northampton Gas Light Co. v. Parnell, 15 C. B. 630 ; 3 C. L. R. 409 ; 24 L. J., C. P. 60 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 211 ; 3 W. R. 179.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff demised a dwelling-house and premises to the defendant, and the defendant covenanted that he would expend 100*l.* in substantial improvements of, and additions to, the dwelling-house under the direction and with the approbation of a competent surveyor, to be named by and on the part of the plaintiff. Breach, that the defendant did not expend the money on substantial improvements of and additions to the dwelling-house, under the direction or with the approbation of a competent surveyor, to be named by and on the part of the plaintiff, but neglected and refused so to do, although the plaintiff was always ready and willing to appoint a competent surveyor to approve of such substantial improvements and additions :—Held, that the breach was bad, for that the appointment of a surveyor was a condition precedent to the defendant's liability to expend the 100*l.* Coombe v. Green, 11 M. & W. 480 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 1023 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 291. S. P., Lawton v. Sutton, 9 M. & W. 795 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 314 ; Hunt v. Bishop, 8 Ex. 675 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 337.

A declaration stated that the defendant covenanted that she would, within eighteen months from the date of the deed, erect certain buildings, "the whole of which were to be left to the superintendence of the plaintiff and the defendant's son." The breach was, that though the eighteen months had expired, the defendant had not erected the buildings :—Held, that the declaration was good, although it contained no averment that the plaintiff was ready and willing to superintend the erection of the buildings, for that the covenant to erect the buildings was an absolute covenant ; and the clause respecting the superintendence merely granted the liberty for the parties to superintend, but did not impose any duty, so as to make the superintendence a condition precedent or concurrent. Jones v. Cannock, 3 H. L. Cas. 700 ; 5 Ex. 713 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 371—Ex. Ch.

Covenant to supply Goods.]—By an agreement under seal, after reciting that the plaintiff had erected a factory and works on land belonging to the defendants, for the purpose of carrying on the manufacture of patent fuel, and that the defendants had made advances to the plaintiff, towards their erection, and had agreed to grant a lease of the land and buildings to the plaintiff, "and to enter into certain other arrangements for the supply of coal for the manufactory and otherwise, on the terms and conditions thereinafter mentioned," it was agreed that the defendants should grant a lease of the land and buildings to the plaintiff for the term of twelve years from the 25th March last, at a peppercorn rent, and that immediately on such lease being granted, the plaintiff should mortgage the same to the defendants as a security for their advances ; that all the coal consumed and used by the plaintiff for the purpose of his manufacture during the term should be bought of the defendants, provided that they could and should supply him with the quantity that should from time to time be required by him, or to such extent as they could supply, and that they should charge for the same a certain price, and no more ; and that the plaintiff should use and consume no other coal at the factory during the term than that which was bought and purchased of the defendants, except in the event of the plaintiff requiring more coal than they could and should supply him with ; that they should not be compelled to supply more than 500 tons per week ; and that in case they should, from some substantial cause, be unable to supply small coal to the extent agreed upon, the defendants should give to the plaintiff six months' notice of the same, and the plaintiff should then be at liberty to obtain his supply from any other source ; that in the lease to be granted there should be covenants by the plaintiff not to use the premises for any other purpose than for the manufacture of patent fuel ; and that the agreement, to be determinable as aforesaid, should continue for the term of twelve years. In an action for breach of the implied covenant by the defendants in the agreement to supply 500 tons of coal to the plaintiff weekly :—Held, first, that the granting of the lease by the defendants was not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to the coal. Wood v. Copper Miners Co., 14 C. B. 428 ; 2 C. L. R. 1735 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 209 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 65.

Held, secondly, that the inability of the defendants to supply the coal did not exonerate them from liability on the covenant, unless the six months' notice had been given according to the agreement. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the covenant of the defendants was limited to the supply of coal for the purpose of the patent fuel manufacture. Ib.

A railway company covenanted with the defendant to purchase, and the defendant covenanted to supply, all the coke required by the company for working their lines, the company to take and the defendant to supply, for seventeen years, 550 tons of coke per week at B. and 100 tons per week at C., at least. If the company should require more coke, it engaged to take the same from the defendant, and if the consumption should be materially diminished, the company was to give three months' notice to the defendant :—Held, that the covenant by the company to take all it required was not a condition precedent to the defendant's liability to supply, but that the covenants were independent. Eastern Counties Ry. v. Philipson, 16 C. B. 2 ; 24 L. J., C. P. 140.

A gas company covenanted with a vestry to supply the parish with gas, and to light the lamps in the public streets and places every night at sunset, and keep them alight till sunrise, and to pay a penalty of 2*s.* 6*d.* upon each lamp for every day upon which they were neglected to be lighted, the vestry covenanting, on the performance of the before-mentioned terms and conditions on the part of the company, to pay them 4*l.* 10*s.* per annum for each lamp :—Held, that the covenants of the company were independent, and that the performance of them was not a condition precedent to an action on the covenants of the vestry. London Gas Light Co. v. Chelsea Vestry, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 215 ; 2 L. T. 217 ; 8 W. R. 416.

By a deed of the 19th of December, 1837, in consideration of 258.629*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*, the plaintiff covenanted to make and complete a portion of a railway, and to provide bars or rails and chairs, on or before the 1st of May, 1840 : and by another deed of the 23rd of March, 1839, in consideration of 15,000*l.*, the plaintiff covenanted that he, being provided by the defendants with railway bars or rails and chairs for temporary and permanent use, would complete the portion of the railway, and the line of the permanent railway, on or before the 1st of June, 1840, provided, that, if plaintiff should not complete the railway by the 1st of June, 1840, he should pay to the defendants 3,000*l.* for the 1st of June, and the like sum for every succeeding day, until the whole should have been completed, but so that the total amount to become forfeitable should not exceed 15,000*l.* Breach, that the defendants detained from and did not pay plaintiff 20,000*l.*, parcel of the sum due to the plaintiff. Plea, that 7,500*l.* is parcel of the 15,000*l.* agreed to be retained by defendants ; that plaintiff did not complete the railway on or before the 1st of June, 1840, nor until twenty-four days after, whereby plaintiff became liable to pay to defendants 3,000*l.* for the 1st day of June, and the like sum for every such succeeding twenty-four days during which the railway remained incomplete, by reason of which defendants deducted and retained 7,500*l.* out of the moneys payable by them to plaintiff. At the trial it was proved that plaintiff did not finish the railway until twenty-four days after the 1st of June, but that defendants had not provided plaintiff with the bars, rails and chairs in sufficient quantity to enable him to complete it by that day. The judge told the jury that defendants were bound, as a condition precedent to their right to deduct the 7,500*l.*, to furnish plaintiff with such bars, rails and chairs :—Held, that that was a misdirection ; that the covenants were independent ; and that the furnishing of the bars, rails and chairs was not a condition precedent to the right of defendants to make the deduction ; and that the only question being, whether the railway was completed on the 1st of June, the plea was established. Macintosh v. Midland Counties Ry., 14 M. & W. 548 ; 3 Railw. Cas. 780 : 14 L. J., Ex. 338.

Covenant for Sale of Land.]—A. agreed to sell B. his estate for a certain sum before a particular day, in consideration whereof B. agreed to pay that sum on the day, and on failure to pay 21*l.* :—Held, that they were dependent covenants, and that A. could not recover the 21*l.* without showing a conveyance on his part, or a tender of one. Goodison v. Nunn, 4 Term Rep. 761.

On an agreement for the sale of lands, the vendee covenanted to pay the purchase-money on a day certain, for and as the consideration of such sale and purchase, with interest from a day certain to the time of the completion of the purchase :—Held, that the covenant by the vendee was an independent covenant, and that the vendor might recover the purchase money without tendering a conveyance. Mattock v. Kinglake, 2 P. & D. 343 ; 10 A. & E. 50 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 215 ; 3 Jur. 699.

A. covenanted to sell to B. a schoolhouse, and to convey the same to him on or before the 1st of August, 1797, and to deliver up the possession to him on the 24th of June, 1796 ; and in consideration thereof, B. covenanted to pay A. 120*l.* on or before the said 1st of August, 1797 :—Held, that the covenant to convey, and that for the payment of the money, were dependent covenants ; and that A. could not maintain an action for the 120*l.*, without averring that he had conveyed, or tendered a conveyance, to B. Glazebrook v. Woodrow, 8 Term Rep. 366 ; 4 R. R. 700.

A deed executed by the plaintiff and defendant, after reciting that a company had been formed for constructing a railway which would pass through the plaintiff's estate, and that an application to parliament for an act of incorporation was pending, contained a covenant by the defendant, that within six months from the time of the passing of the proposed bill, and before the company should enter upon, take or use the estate, except for setting out and ascertaining the land required, the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 4,000*l.* for the purchase of the estate. There was also a covenant, that, on payment by the defendant of the 4,000*l.*, and interest from the expiration of six months after the passing of the bill to the day of payment of that sum, the plaintiff should convey to the defendant so much of the estate as should be required for the construction of the railway :—Held, that the covenant to pay the purchase-money and that to convey the property were independent covenants. Sobthorp v. Brunel, 3 Ex. 826.

By an indenture between A. and B. and his wife, of one part, and D. and E. of another part, it was recited that F., also party to the deed, had requested to have a certain farm given up to him, in which B.'s wife was interested, he, F., giving sureties, namely the said D. and E., for payment of an annuity to B.'s wife ; and it was witnessed that in consideration of the covenants thereinafter entered into by A. and B. and his wife, and of 10*s.*, the said D. and E., and each of them, covenanted with A. and B. to pay the annuity. There followed covenants by A. and B. severally for quiet enjoyment, and for executing an assignment to F. when required. In an action brought by A. and B. for breach of the covenant to pay the annuity :—Held, that the covenant to pay the annuity and those for quiet enjoyment and for assigning were not mutual and dependent. Rose v. Poulton, 2 B. & Ad. 822 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 5.

Covenants in Deed of Apprenticeship.]—To an action on an indenture of apprenticeship for a breach of covenant by the master in not instructing the apprentice and providing him with food and lodging, he pleaded that the apprentice conducted himself in so dishonest a manner in the defendant's business, and defrauded and robbed the defendant, so that it became unsafe for the defendant to continue him in his service, whereupon he dismissed him.—Held, that the covenants in the indenture were independent covenants, and consequently the plea was bad. Phillips or Philps v. Clift, 4 H. & N. 168; 28 L. J., Ex. 153; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 74; 7 W. R. 295.

Covenant as to Cultivation of Farm.]—By an indenture a plaintiff covenanted with the defendant to deliver up a farm on a certain day, and in the meantime to cultivate it on the four-course system, and that on the surrender he would deliver up an agreement to be cancelled, and would surrender all his unexpired term and interest in the farm: and if the defendant required, he would at any time afterwards execute any deed for further assurance; and the defendant covenanted that if the plaintiff did deliver up the farm, and in the meantime cultivate the farm on the four-course system, and perform and keep all and singular other covenants, the defendant would upon the delivering up of the farm, pay for the manure:—Held, that the delivering up of the agreement was not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue on the covenant to pay for the manure. Newson v. Smythies, 3 H. & N. 840; 28 L. J., Ex. 97.

To give Bond.]—A. entered into a contract with B., by which A. was forthwith to bring a vessel alongside a particular wharf, and within seven days of his doing so, B. was to pay 1,000*l*., a further sum of 2,000*l*. in twenty-one days afterwards, and 2,000*l*. on the ship arriving at the Nore. Certain penalties were to be payable by A. for non-performance of the specified acts. There were several other stipulations, and after all came a covenant by which "for the true performance of the covenants by A. hereinbefore contained, and for securing any penalties which he might incur under these presents, A. and two responsible sureties were, within ten days from the execution of these presents, to execute a bond to B. in the penal sum of 5,000*l*." There was a covenant in exactly similar terms on the part of B. The giving of the bond was not to prejudice their mutual rights and liabilities under the agreement:—Held, that the covenant to give the bonds was a condition precedent, so that, on B.'s refusal to allow A. to ship the cable, A., who had not given his bond, could not maintain an action for damages in respect of such refusal. Roberts v. Brett, 11 H. L. Cas. 337; 34 L. J., C. P. 241; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 377; 12 L. T. 286; 13 W. R. 587.

The covenants to give the bonds were not mutual and dependent. The fulfilment of his own engagement by each was a necessary preliminary to his right to recover on the contract. Ib.

Sale of Surgical Practice—Covenant to Introduce Patients.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff and the defendant agreed to enter into partnership as surgeons, until the 1st of January, 1846, for certain considerations therein mentioned; and that it was agreed that the plaintiff should, after the 1st of January, 1846, introduce the defendant to the patients as his successor in business, and use his best endeavours to establish him in it, in consideration whereof the defendant covenanted to pay a further sum of 50*l*., on the 25th of March, 1846, in addition to another sum covenanted to be paid. Breach, non-payment of the 50*l*. A plea, that, after the 1st of January, 1846, and before the 25th of March, 1846, the plaintiff refused to introduce the defendant as the plaintiff's successor, wherefore the defendant refused to pay the 50*l*., is bad, as the introduction to the patients was an independent covenant, and not a condition precedent to the payment of the 50*l*. Judson v. Bowden, 1 Ex. 162; 17 L. J., Ex. 172. S. P., Cutler v. Bower, 11 Q. B. 973; 17 L. J., Q. B. 217; 12 Jur. 721.

Sale of Coal Mine—Pro Rata Payment.]—A declaration stating that the plaintiff conveyed all the coals and mines of coal within and under certain premises to the defendant; that the defendant covenanted to pay 40*l*. for every statute acre of coal which should be found, and that he would, till the consideration-money should be paid, pay 40*l*. annually by half-yearly instalments commencing from the date of the deed, whether a whole acre should have been gotten in any such year or not, and that, at the time of making the deed, there had been, and still was, coal within and under the premises, and that two half-yearly instalments were in arrear, is good, and the finding of coal is not a condition precedent to the payment. Jowett v. Spencer, 1 Ex. 647; 17 L. J., Ex. 367—Ex. Ch.

In Partnership Dissolution Deed.]—By indenture of dissolution of a partnership, the defendant, in consideration of the covenant therein contained on the part of the plaintiff, assigned to the plaintiff certain shares in a foreign gas company, which by the deed were recited to pass by the delivery of the certificates, and covenanted with him for further assurance; and by the same indenture the plaintiff, in consideration of such assignment, covenanted to indemnify the defendant against certain partnership debts. Upon the execution of the deed the certificates of the shares were handed over to the plaintiff, but certain formal acts required to be done by the law by which the company was regulated, before the property in the shares could be effectually vested in the plaintiff, were not performed:—Held, that inasmuch as, upon the construction of the whole deed, the plaintiff's covenant of indemnity and the defendant's covenant as to the shares were legally independent of each other, a breach of the covenant of indemnity by the plaintiff, subsequent to the execution of the deed, did not constitute a ground of defence to a bill by the plaintiff for the specific performance by the defendant of the covenant for further assurance, by performing the formal acts necessary to be done in order effectually to vest the property of the shares in the plaintiff. Gibson v. Goldsmid, 3 Eq. R. 106: 24 L. J., Ch. 279; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1; 3 W. R. 79.

In Marriage Settlement.]—When the fathers of intended husband and wife mutually covenanted to settle certain property in consideration of intended marriage, and of performance of covenant of the other party, but in the recitals the intended covenants were each of them spoken of without reference to the other, and the covenants for the title were also in form independent:—Held, on a suit by one of the children of the marriage, that the covenants were not dependent on each other; but it was said by the court, that covenants in marriage articles might be made dependent on each other, if the intention were clearly expressed. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 8 Sim. 7; 5 L. J., Ch. 191.

In Separation Deed.]—Covenants in a separation deed, by which respectively the husband has covenanted to pay an annuity to a trustee for the wife, and the trustee has covenanted that the wife shall not molest the husband, must be construed as independent covenants in the absence of any express terms making them dependent, and therefore a breach of the covenant that a wife shall not molest the husband, is not an answer to an action for the annuity. Fearon v. Aylesford (Earl), 54 L. J., Q. B. 33; 14 Q. B. D. 792; 52 L. T. 954; 33 W. R. 331; 49 J. P. 596—C. A.

5. Repugnant.

Proviso as to Personal Liability.]—A plaintiff covenanted with A., B., C., D., churchwardens and overseers of a parish, to do work and repairs; and A., B., C., D., in consideration thereof, for themselves and their successors, covenanted with the plaintiff, that they, the churchwardens and overseers, their successors and assigns, should and would pay the plaintiff 1,169*l.*, at certain times specified. The deed contained a proviso, that nothing therein contained should extend, or be construed to extend, to any personal covenant, or affect A., B., C., D., or any of them, in their private capacity:—Held, that the proviso was void, as repugnant to the covenant, and that the churchwardens and overseers were personally liable on it. Furnivall v. Coombes, 6 Scott (N.R.) 522; 5 Man. & G. 736; 12 L. J., C. P. 265; 7 Jur. 399. S. P., Uthwatt v. Elkins, 13 M. & W. 772; 14 L. J., Ex. 131.

A proviso which is in terms wholly repugnant to a covenant creating a personal liability is void; but a proviso only limiting the personal liability without destroying it is valid. Williams v. Hathaway, 6 Ch. D. 544.

By two contemporaneous building contracts made in 1868 between a builder of the one part, and C., vicar of the parish of St. Pancras, and A., incumbent of an ecclesiastical district within the parish, of the other part; after reciting that, under an act creating the district, C., or the vicar for the time being of St. Pancras, in conjunction with A., or the incumbent for the time being of the district, were to apply a fund, payable to them by a railway company, in building a church and parsonage for the district: it was witnessed that in consideration of sums amounting together to the whole of the available building fund, to be paid to the builder by C. and A., "their executors or administrators, or the person or persons for the time being entitled to apply the fund under the act," the builder agreed with C. and A. "and with such person or persons as aforesaid," and C. and A., "to the intent (so far as they lawfully could or might) to bind such person or persons as aforesaid, but not so as to bind either of themselves or his heirs, executors, or administrators, after he or they should have ceased to be entitled to apply the same fund, did and each of them did agree with the builder": then followed provisions under which he was to build the church and parsonage in accordance with plans and specifications; and a clause stipulating that the consideration moneys should be paid in manner provided by the specifications. The specifications provided for monthly payments on account of the contracts: also, that the architect might order additional works: and that payments for additional works were to be made on the completion of the entire works. In June, 1869, C., having obtained preferment, ceased to be vicar of St. Pancras, by which time the whole of the building fund had been exhausted. The buildings were completed in June, 1870. In February, 1875, C. died, whereupon the builder brought an action against the executors to recover a sum alleged to be due for extras under the contracts:—Held, first, that the liability of C. and A. respectively under the contracts was restricted to the period during which they were respectively vicar and incumbent, and therefore that C.'s liability terminated on his ceasing to be vicar. Ib.

Held, secondly, that in any case the liability of C. and A. extended only to the amount of the building fund, and no further. Ib.

One who covenants for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, and under his own hand and seal, for the act of another, will be personally bound by his covenant, though he describes himself in the deed as covenanting for and on the part and behalf of such other person. Appleton v. Binks, 5 East, 148; 1 Smith, 361; 7 R. R. 672.

Obnoxious to the Rule against Perpetuities.]—A. conveyed land to B., reserving the minerals, and covenanted that in case he, his heirs, or assigns, should at any time sell the minerals under the adjoining land, he, his heirs or assigns, would offer to B. his heirs or assigns, the reserved minerals at the same price per acre:—Held, that the covenant was not obnoxious to the rules against perpetuities, and the offer must be made in writing. Birmingham Canal Co. v. Cartwright, 48 L. J., Ch. 552; 11 Ch. D. 421; 40 L. T. 784; 27 W. R. 597. See McLean v. McKay, L. R. 5 P. C. 327; post, col. 1049. But see L. & S. W. Ry. v. Gomm, 51 L. J., Ch. 530; 20 Ch. D. 562; 46 L. T. 449; 30 W. R. 620.

Limiting Power of Alienation.]—A covenant prohibiting alienation, except to a certain specified and limited class, and reserving a penal rent for the breach of the covenant, is repugnant to the nature of an estate in fee simple. Morris v. Morris, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 73.

A covenant in a fee farm grant of 1858, that the grantee, his heirs and assigns, might assign, sublet, or otherwise part with the possession of the demised premises, provided he did not divide them into more than four divisions or lots, unless with the consent in writing of the grantor, his heirs and assigns, is absolutely void and inoperative, as being repugnant to the free power of alienation necessarily implied by the fee farm grant. Lunham, In re, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 170.

6. Uncertain.

To accept a Reasonable Composition.]—Lessee of tithes agreed with the owner of lands, for certain collateral considerations, not to take tithes in kind from the tenants of the lands for 12 years, but to accept a reasonable composition, not exceeding 3*s.* 6*d.* per acre, and thereto bound himself and his assigns; his under-lessee sued (in the name of a trustee, to whom he had nominally, again under-leased) for tithes in kind against the tenant of the land, and had a decree; such an agreement is void, for the uncertainty of the sum to be paid. Brewer v. Hill, 2 Anstr. 413; 3 R. R. 596.

To Settle after-acquired Property—Value in Blank.]—A party to a deed of family arrangement thereby covenanted, that if he should at any time become entitled to property exceeding the value of —— (which was left in blank), he would settle it upon certain specified trusts. Before any such property accrued, or the persons entitled under the trusts were ascertained, he filed a bill to have it declared that the covenant was void for uncertainty. Semble, that there was no such uncertainty as to render the covenant void. Fyfe v. Arbuthnot, 1 De G. & J. 406: 26 L. J., Ch. 646; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 5 W. R. 793.

To Plant and Preserve Trees.]—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee to plant with proper forest trees a portion of the premises, and to replant such parts thereof whereon trees then stood, or were planted, and which trees had been injured or destroyed; and to repair and keep in repair the fence or fences whereby the planted portion of the lands was then, or might thereafter be, inclosed, so as, at all times during the term, to preserve and keep the trees which then were, or should thereafter be, growing or planted as aforesaid, from all waste, spoil, damage or destruction whatsoever:—Held, that the covenant was too uncertain and indefinite to be carried into specific execution by the court. Bernard v. Mestra, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 389.

Injunction.]—Where a covenant is indefinite or uncertain in its terms, the court will not interfere by way of injunction. Low v. Innes, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1037.

7. VOLUNTARY.

A voluntary covenant by a party to pay a sum of money to persons therein mentioned, either in his lifetime or in a certain time after his death, is a valid covenant, and creates a valid debt, though the deed was kept in the covenantor's possession till his death, and its execution was unknown to the covenantees or cestuis que trustent. Alexander v. Brame, 19 Beav. 436. Affirmed on appeal, 7 De G. M. & G. 525; 3 W. R. 642.

III. RUNNING WITH THE LAND.

See also VENDOR AND PURCHASER; and VII. 2, e, post.

To cleanse Watercourse.]—Baron and feme grant a watercourse through the feme's lands, with covenants for them, their heirs and assigns, to cleanse and keep it in repair, and suffer a common recovery to establish a grant; this is not a personal covenant as to the baron and feme, but a covenant which runs with the lands, and shall bind the assignees, being made good by the recovery. Holmes v. Buckley, Pre. Ch. 39. See Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation, infra.

To Indemnify against Rent-charge.]—If A. has lands subject to a rent-charge, and grants part of the lands to B., with a covenant that such part shall be free, this is not a real covenant to run with the land, but personal only, and binding on the heir in respect of assets. Cook v. Arundel, Hardr. 87. But see Cornbury v. Middleton, 1 Ch. Ca. 212.

Not to sell Water from a Well.]—Covenant upon a conveyance in fee, with the grantors, lessees of the waterworks, not to sell or dispose of of water from a well to the injury of the proprietors of the said waterworks, their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns. Quære, whether the covenant runs with the land so as to bind and be enforced by assignees, whether it is contrary to the policy of the law, and as to the effect of a renewal of the lease. The parties left to law, and a demurrer allowed, for the inconvenience of enforcing such a covenant by injunction. Collins v. Plumb, 16 Ves. 454; 10 R. R. 214.

To surrender Copyhold.]—Covenant for one's self and heirs, to surrender copyhold: heir decreed to surrender it. Neeve v. Keck, 9 Mod. 106.

To convey by Rail, and pay Toll for, all Stone used in Covenantor's Works.]—The Monmouthshire Canal Act provided that, upon auxiliary railroads made by private individuals, under the authority of the act, the tolls should not exceed the rate of 2½*d.* a ton per mile; and it also empowered the canal company by agreement with the landowners itself to construct auxiliary railroads, on which tolls not exceeding 5*d.* a ton per mile might be charged. Certain landowners and owners of iron works, and among others the lessees of the Beaufort works, formed a joint company, and under the powers given by the act constructed a railroad connecting a lime quarry, called the Trevil quarry, with the several iron works, and with the railroads of the canal company. In the partnership deed of the railroad company, the lessees of the Beaufort works covenanted for themselves, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, so long as the covenantors, their executors, administrators, or assigns should occupy the Beaufort works, to procure all the limestone used in the said works from the Trevil quarry, and to convey all such limestone, and also all the iron stone from the mines to the said works, along the Trevil railroad, and to pay a toll of 5*d.* a ton per mile for the same:—Held, that the covenant did not run with the land so as to bind assignees at law, and that a court of equity would not, by holding the conscience of the purchaser to be affected by the notice, give the covenant a more extensive operation than the law allowed to it. Keppell v. Bailey, 2 Myl. & K. 517; Coop. t. Brougham, 298.

To produce Title-deeds.]—Covenant to produce title-deeds runs with the land, and for benefit of purchasers, and not for benefit of vendors. Barclay v. Raine, 1 Sim. & S. 449; 24 R. R. 206.

For Title.]—A. sold and covenanted to surrender copyholds to B., and covenanted for the title in the usual manner, and next day surrendered. Afterwards B. sold to C., and covenanted to surrender, and for title as against his own acts only, and afterwards surrendered to C.:—Held, that the original covenants were capable of being enforced against A., for either they ran with the land, or C. was entitled to sue on them in B.'s name. Riddell v. Riddell, 7 Sim. 529; 5 L. J., Ch. 102.

Against carrying on Certain Trades.]—A conveyance of an estate to a purchaser and his heirs to the use that certain trades should not be carried on upon the premises is a stipulation in the nature of a covenant running with the land. Hodgson v. Coppard, 29 Beav. 4; 30 L. J., Ch. 20; 9 W. R. 9.

For First Refusal of Land.]—A lease for 500 years, dated in 1669, contained a covenant by the lessee, his executors, administrators and assigns, with the landlord, his executors, administrators and assigns, not to sell before the first proffer be made to the landlord, his executors, administrators, and assigns, to the end that they might have the first refusal thereof, and pay as much as any other person should bonâ fide offer:—Held, a covenant that runs with the land, but that it is not a perpetual one, and therefore an assignment of the tenant's interest having been made 140 years ago, it must be presumed that the landlord declined the offer, or waived his right, and the tenant must hold the land discharged from the covenant. Houghton, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 136.

To pay for Injury to Surface.]—Three licencees of a right to dig minerals, jointly and severally covenanted with the grantor of the licence to pay him compensation for injury to surface. Two of them assigned their right under the licence:—Held, that the covenant ran with the land, so as to bind the assignee, and that the covenant of the three licencees being joint and several, the grantor was entitled to recover the whole compensation from the assignee of two of them. Norral v. Pascoe, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 792; 10 L. T. 809; 12 W. R. 973.

To use as Dwelling-house only.]—A covenant in a lease to use a house as a private dwelling-house only runs with the land, though the word assigns be not used. Wilkinson v. Rogers, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 5; 9 L. T. 434; 12 W. R. 119.

To allow Lessee to use Conduit and Waste Water in Conduit.]—A covenant by a lessor with lessee, his heirs and assigns, that it should be lawful for lessee, his heirs and assigns, during the continuance of the demise, to make use of a conduit made for carrying off certain waste and superfluous water, and to take, use, and enjoy such waste and superfluous water, if any there should be, for their own use:—Held, a covenant running with the land. Athol v. Midland G. W. of Ireland Ry., Ir. R. 3 C. L. 333.

To keep open as a Garden the Enclosure in the Centre of a London Square.]—A covenant between vendor and purchaser, on the sale of land, that the purchaser and his assigns shall abstain from using the land in a particular way will be enforced in equity against all subsequent purchasers with notice, independently of the question whether it be one which runs with the land, so as to be binding on subsequent purchasers at law. Tulk v. Moxhay, 2 Ph. 774.

Not to use as Beer-shop.]—The owner of a freehold house had entered into a covenant with the plaintiff, who was a previous owner, that the building should not be used as a beer-shop. The house was afterwards let to the defendant as tenant from year to year, without express notice of the covenant:—Held, that although the covenant might not at law run with the land, the defendant was bound by it in equity. Wilson v. Hart, 35 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 1 Ch. 463; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 460; 14 L. T. 499; 14 W. R. 748.

The rule that a purchaser who does not inquire into his vendor's title is affected with notice of what appears upon it applies equally to a yearly tenant as to the purchaser of a greater interest. Ib.

Semble, a covenant by a purchaser of land, not naming his assigns, that no building erected on the land shall be used as a beer-shop does not run with the land. Ib.

In Partition Deed, for Maintenance of Sea-wall.]—Lands situated below the level of the sea in Broomhill Level, Guildford Level, and Walland Marsh, were, previously to 1794, held in undivided shares. In that year these lands were partitioned by a deed containing a covenant that the expense of keeping and maintaining the wall and gutts of and belonging to the lands thereby divided, should be borne by the owners, and should be payable out of the lands by an acre-scot. Morland v. Cook, 37 L. J., Ch. 825: L. R. 6 Eq. 252; 18 L. T. 496; 16 W. R. 777.

Semble, that the covenant was one which would run with the land although the assigns of the covenantors were not named. Ib.

To supply Water from Well.]—A purchaser of a piece of land with a well or spring upon it covenanted with the vendor, who retained land adjoining intended to be disposed of for building sites, to erect a pump and reservoir, and to supply water from the well to all houses built on the vendor's land:—Held, first, that both the benefit and the burden of the covenant ran with the land, and that the case was not within the second resolution in Spencer's Case (5 Coke Rep. 16; 1 Sm. L. C. 52), but if not, a sub-purchaser with notice of the covenant was bound by it. Cooke v. Chilcott, 3 Ch. D. 694; 34 L. T. 207. See next case.

Held, secondly, that, though the covenant was not one of which the court would decree specific performance directly, as being for the construction of works which the court could not superintend, it could be enforced indirectly by an injunction restraining the defendant from allowing the work to remain unperformed. Ib.

To repair and maintain Road.]—The doctrine in Tulk v. Moxhay (2 Ph. 774) is limited to restrictive stipulations, and will not be extended so as to bind in equity a purchaser taking with notice of a covenant to expend money on repairs or otherwise which does not run with the land at law. Semble, that the burden of a covenant (not involving a grant) never runs with the land at law, except as between landlord and tenant. Cooke v. Chilcott (3 Ch. D. 694) overruled on this point. Morland v. Cook (L. R. 6 Eq. 252) explained. Holmes v. Buckley (1 Eq. C. Abr. 27) discussed. Consideration of the circumstances under which a covenant will be held to touch or concern the land of the covenantee so that the benefit may run with the land. Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation, 55 L. J., Ch. 633; 29 Ch. D. 750; 53 L. T. 543; 33 W. R. 807; 49 J. P. 532—C. A.

A. by deed conveyed for value to trustees in fee a piece of land as part of the site of a road intended to be made and maintained by the trustees under the provisions of a contemporaneous trust deed (being a deed of settlement for the benefit of a joint stock company established to raise the necessary capital for making the road); and in the conveyance the trustees covenanted with A., his heirs and assigns, that they, the trustees, their heirs and assigns, would make the road and at all times keep it in repair, and allow the use of it by the public subject to tolls. The piece of land so conveyed was bounded on both sides by other lands belonging to A. The trustees duly made the road, which afforded the necessary access to A.'s adjoining lands. A. afterwards sold his adjoining lands to the plaintiff, and the trustees sold the road to the defendants, both parties taking with notice of the covenant to repair:—Held, that the plaintiff could not enforce the covenant against the defendants. Ib.

On Sale of Land, that adjoining Plot should never be Sold.]—The owner of land sold a part of it and entered into an agreement with the purchaser that an adjoining plot of land "should never be hereafter sold, but left for the common benefit of both parties and their successors":—Held, that this was merely an agreement that the plot of land should be left open, in the state in which it then was, for the common advantage of both parties, and that such an agreement did not contravene any rule of law, but gave the person who might hold the vendee's land the right to enforce the obligation against the person who might hold the vendor's land. Thus, the former might apply to a court of equity to order the removal of a structure that had been placed on the plot in violation of the agreement. McLean v. McKay, L. R. 5 P. C. 327.

Relating to Land.]—A covenant relating to but not running with land is binding on an assign with notice. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174; 7 Ch. D. 227; 37 L. T. 827; 26 W. R. 167.

As to what Covenants run with the Land.]—See also Spencer's Case, 5 Coke, 16; 1 Sm. L. C., 10th ed., 52.

IV. IMPLIED COVENANTS.

On Assignment of Debts.]—When a debt is assigned with the usual power of attorney to sue in the assignor's name, there is an implied covenant by the assignor not to thwart the remedy of the assignee against the debtor, and it is a breach of such covenant for the assignor to release the debtor from an arrest under bailable process at the suit of the assignee, though such arrest has been made for a larger sum than actually due. Gerard v. Lewis, 36 L. J., C. P. 173; L. R. 2 C. P. 305; 15 L. T. 663; 15 W. R. 581.

To pay.]—A defaulting trustee executed a deed, whereby, after reciting that he held in his hands trust moneys to a certain amount, which he proposed to secure by a mortgage on his own estate, he conveyed certain property to the cestuis que trustent by way of mortgage. The deed contained a proviso for redemption and a power of sale, but no covenant to pay the mortgage debt or interest. The mortgaged estate was insufficient to cover the debt:—Held, that the deed did not convert the debt into a specialty debt. Isaacson v. Harwood, 37 L. J., Ch. 209; L. R. 3 Ch. 225; 18 L. T. 622; 16 W. R. 410.

Where a trustee executed a deed containing merely an appointment of him as trustee, and a declaration by him that he accepted the office:—Held, that no covenant by him could be implied, and that a claim for trust money received and misapplied by him did not constitute a specialty debt against his estate. Holland v. Holland, 38 L. J., Ch. 398; L. R. 4 Ch. 449; 21 L. T. 129; 17 W. R. 657.

See Saunders v. Milsome, L. R. 2 Eq. 573; and Dickson, In re, L. R. 12 Eq 154; ante, I.

A covenant to pay will not be implied where there is merely an acknowledgment by deed of a simple contract debt, if it appears that the acknowledgment is only a collateral object of the deed, and that the main object is to give security for the debt. Marryat v. Marryat, 28 Beav. 224; 29 L. J., Ch. 665; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 572; 2 L. T. 531.

A count alleged that the defendant and L. carried on business in co-partnership, and that, by deed between the defendant and L. of the first part, and the plaintiff of the second part, it was witnessed that the defendant and L. and each of them granted, assigned and transferred to the plaintiff all the co-partnership stock, debts, sums of money, and all other the personal estate and effects and property of them the defendant and L., as such co-partners. It then averred, that, at the time of the making of the deed, the defendant was indebted to the co-partnership in 240*l.*, being part of the debts, sums of money, and personal estate and effects and property of the co-partners; and it assigned, for a first breach, non-payment of the 240*l.* There was a second breach, alleging that, at the time of making the deed, a bill of exchange for 120*l.*, payable to the order of the defendant, and then being in the possession of the defendant, was part of the personal estate and effects and property of the co-partners, and that the defendant made default in transferring the bill of exchange to the plaintiff, and, after the making of the deed, incapacitated himself from so doing, and from conferring on the plaintiff any right or title to receive the money specified in the bill, by parting with the possession of the bill in such manner and on such terms as so to incapacitate himself; and thereby the defendant prevented the plaintiff from acquiring or having any right or title to the money, contrary to the deed:—Held, that there was no implied covenant on the part of the defendant to pay to the plaintiff the sum due from him to the co-partnership, but that there was an implied covenant on his part not to do anything in derogation of his deed. Aulton v. Atkins, 18 C. B. 249; 25 L. J., C. P. 229; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 812; 4 W. R. 592. S. P., Parnell v. Hingston, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 854; 4 W. R. 794.

By the acknowledgment of a debt in a deed under seal, a covenant to pay will not be implied where the acknowledgment is merely collateral to the purpose for which the deed was executed. Jackson v. North-Eastern Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 303; 7 Ch. D. 573; 37 L. T. 664; 26 W. R. 513.

The managing director of an incorporated company advanced large sums of money to the company, which was expended ultra vires the company's powers in the purchase and working of collieries. Large sums of money were also advanced by the directors out of the company's funds for the same purpose. By a deed, under the seal of the company, which recited and acknowledged the advances made by him, out of his own money, with the concurrence of the directors, and that the same were for the benefit of the company, and that he had not received any private advantage thereby, the collieries were vested in trustees upon trust to pay out of the rents and profits the interest on the advances made by the directors, then the interest of his advances, and, in the next place, to invest the surplus rents, if any, to constitute a fund to pay off the capital in the priority in which the interest thereon was payable. The deed contained a proviso that if any interest of the manager's advances should be in arrear by reason of insufficient rents and profits, such interest should be a debt (not carrying interest), to be paid after the payment of capital advanced by the directors The collieries were sold and realised only sufficient to pay about one-half the advances by the directors:—Held, that the manager was not a specialty creditor of the company under the deed, which was only for the purpose of giving him collateral security. Ib.

See Courtney v. Taylor, 6 Man. & G. 851; 7 Sc. (N.R.) 749; 12 L. J., C. P. 330, ante, col. 1022.

By a deed under seal between the plaintiffs and the defendant, after reciting an agreement by the plaintiffs to transfer to the defendant their interest in certain inventions and letters patent for 1,000*l.*, it was witnessed that in pursuance of such agreement, and in consideration of 1,000*l.* upon the execution, &c., paid by the defendant to the plaintiffs (the receipt of which the plaintiffs thereby acknowledged and therefrom discharged the defendant), the plaintiffs granted and assigned the inventions and letters patent to the defendant. In an action on the deed by the plaintiffs, subsequently to recover the 1,000*l.* from the defendant, the first count of the declaration alleged that in consideration of the plaintiffs executing a deed of assignment to the defendant of certain inventions and letters patent, the defendant promised that, upon the plaintiffs being ready and willing to deliver the deed to the defendant, he would accept the same and pay the agreed consideration of 1,000*l.*; that the plaintiffs were ready and willing, but the defendant would not accept delivery of the deed, and had not paid the 1,000*l.* The second count alleged that, by an indenture between the plaintiffs and the defendant it was agreed that the plaintiffs should transfer to the defendant their interest in certain inventions and letters patent for 1,000*l.*; that the plaintiffs thereupon assigned the inventions to the defendant, but the defendant had not paid the 1,000*l.* By his pleas to the first count the defendant denied the promise and breaches, and the readiness and willingness of the plaintiffs as alleged; and to the second count he pleaded that the indenture was not his deed, and that the plaintiffs did not assign the inventions. At the trial it was proved that no consideration money was in fact paid or passed. The defendant contended that the deed contained no covenant or agreement to pay the 1,000*l.*; and, secondly, that, by the recital of payment and receipt of the money, the plaintiffs were estopped from denying its payment:—Held, that the deed contained no covenant to pay the 1,000*l.*, and that, in the face of the acknowledgment therein contained that the defendant had paid the money, it was impossible to imply such a covenant on his part, and that, too, on partial evidence. Morgan's Patent Anchor Co. v. Morgan, 35 L. T. 811.

A settlement to which A., B., and T. were parties, executed previously to the marriage of A. (B.'s daughter) with T., recited T.'s title to certain estates, and that B. agreed to give and appoint to A. a portion of 3,000*l.*, of which the sum of 1,000*l.* was to be paid in cash, and the remainder to be charged on the estates of B., and that T. had agreed to secure a jointure of 400*l.* a year for A., and to charge his estates with 3,000*l.* for the younger children of the intended marriage; and that, subject to such jointure and charge, T.'s estate should be settled on the first and other sons of the marriage, in tail; further, that B. had under a power charged his estates with 3,000*l.*, portions for his younger children (of whom A. was one), and that it had been agreed that B. should pay 1,000*l.*, part of the marriage portion of A., immediately to T., and that B. should appoint 2,000*l.*, the residue of the 3,000*l.*, a charge on his estates, the two sums to be in full for the marriage portion of A. B. appointed 2,000*l.* out of the 3,000*l.*, and directed it to be raised and paid to A. at his death, and T. charged his estates with a jointure of 400*l.* a year, and 3,000*l.* for younger children. By another deed reciting the appointment of the 2,000*l.* by B., which with the 1,000*l.* was to be in full for the portion of A., A. and T. released B. and his heirs, and his property real and personal, from all claims in respect of certain provisions out of other funds provided for his younger children:—Held, that the deeds contained no personal covenant by B. to pay the 2,000*l.*, even though it should turn out that the amount was not well charged on the estates by reason of a bad execution of the power by B. Borrowes v. Borrowes, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 368.

On Assignment of all Rights in a Medicine.]—The plaintiff declared on a deed, whereby the defendant, the original proprietor of a medicine, assigned all his interest in it to a third person, subject to a covenant by the assignee to pay him one-third of the profits during his and his wife's lives; and also covenanted with the assignee, that he would not thereafter, by himself or jointly with any other, prepare or sell, or engage with any other person in preparing or selling the medicine; and then a second deed, whereby the first assignee assigned all his interest in the medicine to the plaintiff, subject to the covenant of reservation: and then a third deed between him and the defendant (reciting the two former), and that he had agreed with the defendant for the absolute purchase of all his interest, as well in the medicine as in the one-third share so reserved to the defendant: by which deed the defendant assigned to the plaintiff all that third share, and all other shares or proportions, right, title, interest, claim, or demand, whatsoever of the defendant to the medicine or to the profits, with a covenant that the plaintiff might at all times thereafter prepare and sell the medicine in the name of the defendant, and receive the profits to his own use: and another covenant for further assurance:—Held, that the last deed alone (without the confirmation, which, however, the construction of it received from the two former recited therein) showed an intention in the defendant, and the words of it were large enough to assign to the plaintiff, not only the one-third share of the profits reserved by the first indenture, but all the defendant's right, title and interest in the medicine, and all the future profits arising from the sale, and that such assignment of all his interest and property in the medicine raised an implied covenant that he would not prepare or sell the medicine, or engage with others in so doing for his own profit; such preparation and sale being a retention and exercise of the right of preparing and vending the medicine of which he was once a proprietor, in derogation of his deed, whereby he had conveyed such right to the plaintiff. Sedd'm v. Senate, 13 East, 63 ; 12 R. R. 299.

To Divert Stream.]—A declaration recited a deed, whereby two pieces of land were conveyed to the defendants, subject to the performance by them of certain agreements. In this deed the piece of land in question was described as a slip of land then being intended to be formed into a new course for the river Benet. The declaration stated that the defendants covenanted with the plaintiffs that they should and would within a reasonable time, at their own cost and expense, make and cut the intended new course for the same. It then went on to state a covenant to make a bridge over the intended new cut, for the plaintiffs' use, within a given time, and a covenant to make good the banks of the new cut, and after the same should have been made good and the railway completed, to reconvey to A., one of the plaintiffs, the slip of land which should form the new course of the river, and also to fill up and level the then existing course, so far as the same should have been diverted. The declaration charged breaches in not making a new cut, in not diverting the stream of the Benet, in not constructing a bridge over the new cut, in not perfecting its banks, in not conveying to A. the slip of land, with the water of the river duly diverted in the new course, and in not filling up the existing course of the Benet, so far as the stream thereof should and ought to have been diverted. The deed, as set out, did not in express terms contain any covenant to make and cut the new course, or to divert the stream of the river ; but it did contain express covenants to the effect of all the other covenants stated in the declaration :—Held, that there was no implied covenant on the part of the defendants to make the cut, and divert the stream of the Benet, and consequently there could be no breach of the express covenants to build the bridge, unless the cut was made and the stream diverted. Rashleigh v. S.-E. Ry., 10 C. B. 612. Doubted in Ex. Ch. on appeal, and compromised. See Knight v. Gravesend Waterworks Co., infra.

To Sink Shaft.]—A lease, by which coal mines in the north of England were demised, contained a covenant by the lessees that they would, once in every month, at their own expense, draw to bank at some of the pits or shafts of the collieries or coal mines demised, and lay in some convenient place upon the lands and premises of the lessors, for the lessors, all the manure, compost and dung to be made and bred by the horses employed underground in working the collieries. The lease contained various clauses, which spoke of the pits or shafts to be sunk on the premises, but did not contain any express covenant by which the lessees were either bound to sink a pit or to work the mines, and it was also doubtful whether the lessees were empowered to work the mines by "outstroke" :—Held, that no covenant could be implied imposing upon the lessees, upon the mines being worked and manure being made within them, the obligation of sinking a pit or shaft upon the demised lands, although they might be liable for a breach of covenant in working the mines by outstroke. James v. Cochrane, 7 Ex. 170 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 229. Affirmed, 8 Ex. 556 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 201 ; 1 W. R. 232.

To Erect Steam Engine.]—By a deed reciting that a waterworks company had determined to construct a well, and that the engineers of the company had prepared the necessary drawings for the same, and made a general specification referring to the drawings of all the works to be done, and of the materials to be found and provided for that purpose ; that the plaintiff had agreed to make the well, and to execute all the works particularised in the specification, and which might be implied therefrom or incidental thereto, for a certain sum ; and that to the drawings and specification the corporate seal of the company had been affixed, and that the plaintiff had signed the same ; the plaintiff covenanted to complete the well and works mentioned in the specification or shewn in the drawings, or which might be reasonably implied therefrom or be considered incidental thereto, of the materials and in manner and in all respects therein mentioned ; and that the plaintiff would find all materials required in the making and completing the works of such sort as in the specification described ; and of scaffolding, engines, pumps, &c., mentioned in the specification as required to be provided by the person contracting to perform the work as might be found necessary to complete the works ; and fully to complete the works in a workmanlike manner. The company covenanted to pay the money, and such further sums as should be payable in respect of deviations from the works. The specification contained the following passage—"The contractor will be required to sink the well to the depth of 120 ft., after which the company will undertake the erection of the permanent steam-engine, and permit the pumping to be performed by it, a sufficient interval of time being allowed for the erection of the steam engine, and such time added to the period assigned to the contractor for the performance of the works" :—Held, that there was an implied covenant on the part of the company to erect the permanent steam engine, as provided in the specification. Knight v. Gravesend Waterworks Co., 2 H. & N. 6 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 73.

To Retain Son in Service.]—A declaration stated, that, by deed between the defendant and the son of the plaintiff and the plaintiff, the plaintiff covenanted that his son should be assistant to the defendant, a dentist, for five years, and do all such services as he should order to be performed in the way of his art. The defendant, for the services to be done by the son covenanted during the term, and in case the son should perform his part of the agreement, that the defendant would pay the son a certain sum weekly during the term, as compensation for his services. That the son entered upon the service, and that he and the plaintiff performed their part of the agreement, and were ready and willing to continue such performance during the term. Breach, that the defendant refused to permit the son to continue in the service, and dismissed him. Judgment was arrested on the ground that the breach was ill-assigned, as the declaration contained no implied covenant by the defendant to retain the son in the service during the five years. Dunn v. Sayles, D. & M. 579 ; 5 Q. B. 685 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 159 ; 8 Jur. 358. S. P., Aspdin v. Austin, 5 Q. B. 671 ; D. & M. 515 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 155.

To exclusively Employ.]—Plaintiffs covenanted with defendants to supply, when required so to do by defendants' surveyor, horses carts, and men, at certain rates, from March 1858, to March, 1859, for watering the streets Defendants covenanted with plaintiffs that they, the plaintiffs, observing their covenant, defendants would pay monthly to plaintiffs the sum due in accordance with the said rates for the works so ordered and done The defendants were to be at liberty to hire other men horses &c at plaintiffs' expense if plaintiffs made default in the supply of men horses, &c, approved by the surveyor, or in sufficiently watering The plaintiffs agreed not to assign the contract and if they made any default, or became insolvent, the defendants might at any time, on giving three days notice declare the agreement void —Held that there was an implied covenant on the part of the defendants to employ the plaintiffs, and no others to do the work during the specified time Hornsby v St Luke's Chelsea, Vestry, 2 L T. 176

To procure Assent of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests]—An agreement was entered into between a corporation and S, a contractor for works whereby the corporation agreed to let to him the construction and completing of works which they were empowered by act of parliament to make, according to a specification and plans annexed, at or for 12 307*l* and 'on the conditions and in manner hereinafter mentioned' and S agreed to take the works and complete the same in manner set forth in the specification, and for the sums and subject to the provisions hereinafter mentioned The agreement went on to provide that S should construct certain of the works described in the specification as the first portion thereof, for 7,318*l*, to be paid as in the specification mentioned, and that he should also construct the second portion, so described, for 4,987*l*, subject to the following provisions that is to say, "that the assent of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests shall be given to the corporation to carry out the said last mentioned works, so far as the same affect the land or soil of the crown, and that the corporation is not prevented from carrying out the last mentioned works by the Eastern Union Railway Company and, further, that the approbation of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury is given to the corporation to borrow on bond or on mortgage of the rates and property of the borough such sum or sums of money as may enable the corporation to pay for the same In an action by S against the corporation upon this agreement, the declaration assigned for breach that the corporation had omitted within a reasonable time to procure the assent of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, and the approbation of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, or to permit S to commence the second portion of the works —Held, that there was nothing in the language of the agreement to warrant the court in implying a covenant on the part of the corporation to obtain the assent and approbation therein mentioned Smith v Harwich Corporation, 2 C B (N S) 651, 26 L J, C. P 257

To send Mill Refuse into Reservoir.] — By deed between S and W, it was recited that W had, by S's licence, made a reservoir on S's close for the reception of the refuse from W's mill; and, in consideration of such licence, W agreed to give to S the liberties and privileges after mentioned, and to supply him with pure water. And it was witnessed that S., in consideration of being supplied with pure water, and of receiving for his own use the refuse which might from time to time be found in the reservoir, and of the privilege of using it for manuring his land covenanted for himself his heirs executors, and administrators, to license W to use the reservoir for the purposes aforesaid and that S, his heirs &c, would scour and cleanse the reservoir when necessary And W, for himself, his heirs executors, and administrators covenanted to supply S with pure water, sufficient to supply his cattle on certain closes and that it should be lawful for S, his heirs and assigns, to cleanse and scour the reservoir, and to take the refuse away therefrom to and for his and their own use and benefit Admitted that the covenant to supply S with pure water ran with the closes, the cattle on which were to be supplied with water But held by Lord Campbell C J, Erle and Crompton, JJ, dissentiente Coleridge, J, that there was no covenant express or implied, compelling W to send the refuse from his mill to the reservoir Sharp v Waterhouse, 7 Ll & Bl 816, 27 L J, Q B 70, 3 Jur (N S) 1022

To continue Business]— A effected a life policy with an insurance company by which the funds of the company were according to the deed of settlement to be alone liable for the amount insured, and no shareholder was to be individually liable to any claim on the policy beyond the unpaid amount of his shares, and by which A was to be entitled to bonuses payable out of the profits when ascertained and divided among the policy holders at the discretion of the directors of the company By the deed of settlement provision was made for the dissolution of the company, and upon such dissolution for the transfer of the company's funds The company having afterwards united with another insurance company, to whom the funds, policies, and liabilities of the former were assigned, and having ceased to exist as a separate company, A sued the company for such transfer as being a wrongful alienation of their funds, and also for ceasing to carry on business, and to accumulate profits —Held, that the action could not be maintained, as there was no implied covenant by the company to continue the business of an insurance company, and to keep the funds to answer the claims upon policies effected with it King v Accumulative Life Fund Insurance Co, 3 C B (N S) 155, 27 L J, C P 57, 3 Jur (N S) 1264

The defendant sold to the plaintiffs his news agency business for 2,500*l*, payable by instalments The first two instalments of 500*l* each were payable at all events, but the payment of the other two of 750*l* each was contingent on the profits of the business, and in the event of the profits of the business exceeding a certain amount the defendant was to receive further benefits The plaintiffs at the same time engaged the defendant to superintend their business, including, along with the business sold, certain other branches, for five years at a salary, he undertaking to obey their directions Within the first year the plaintiffs agreed with a company to discontinue the news agency business, giving the company the option of continuing such parts of it as the company might elect to continue The plaintiffs then directed the defendant to discontinue the transmission of news, and the defendant refusing to obey, they filed their bill for an injunction to restrain him from transmitting news, which injunction was granted —Held, that, as the purchase money was to be ascertained by reference to the profits, there was an implied covenant by the plaintiffs that the business should be carried on, and that, as the plaintiffs had broken this implied covenant, they were not entitled to restrain the defendant from breaking any other part of the agreement Telegraph Despatch Co v McLean, L R 8 Ch 658

—— On Sale of Patent, to keep it on foot]—On the sale of a patent by the patentees to a limited company a deed of assignment was executed by the parties, by which after a recital that the patentees had agreed to sell the patent to the company for 250*l*, "and for the other considerations therein appearing,' the patentees assigned the patent to the company absolutely and after covenants for title by the patentees including a covenant for quiet enjoyment of the patent "during the term subsisting therein, the company covenanted to pay to the patentees a royalty for every article 'which should be manufactured or sold by the company" under the patent "while subsisting,' and also a proportion of the profits arising from the manufacture or sale and from licences granted for the manufacture or sale of articles to be manufactured under the patent 'while subsisting The deed contained no express covenant by the company to keep the patent on foot, or to manufacture or sell articles under the patent On the expiration of the first four years of the patent the company duly paid the first renewal fee under the Patents, Designs and Trade-marks Act, 1883, but on the expiration of the fifth year they, through inadvertence, omitted to pay the second renewal fee within the time required by the act and the rules there under, and consequently the patent lapsed After an ineffectual attempt to obtain a private act of parliament to revive the patent the company passed resolutions for a voluntary winding-up, and the patentees thereupon sent in a claim for damages for the loss, through the lapse of the patent, of the royalties reserved by the assignment, contending that a covenant to keep the patent on foot should be implied in the assignment —Held, that no such covenant could be implied, and that, even if it could, the patentees could not obtain more than nominal damages, the company being under no obligation, either express or implied, to manufacture the patented articles, and being no longer able to carry on business The doctrine of implying covenants in deeds discussed Railway and Electric Appliances Co, In re, 57 L J, Ch 1027, 38 Ch D 597, 59 L T 22, 36 W R 730

As to Cultivation]—Special covenants as to cultivation not implied from the mere act of holding over, as they may be from payment of rent at the same period, as evidence of agreement to hold, not only on the same terms, but subject to the same covenants Kimpton v. Eve, 2 Ves & B 349, 13 R R 116

For Title]—Implied covenant by vendor of a freehold estate for the title, though an assignee in bankruptcy, selling by a general description, not restrained to his actual interest. Deverell v Bolton (Lord), 18 Ves. 512

On Agreement for Lease with Usual Covenants]—Whether an agreement for a lease with usual covenants includes a covenant against assigning or underletting without licence quære In this instance, upon the particular construction of the agreement for the lease of a farm, the words 'such other clauses as are usual in such cases" has not that effect Vere v Lovedon, 12 Ves. 179 S P, Jones v Jones ib, 186, 10 R R. 77, n

On an agreement for a lease "with all usual and reasonable covenants,' a covenant not to underlease or assign is implied where the custom of the place is not generally against it Folkingham v Croft, 3 Anstr 700, 4 R R 844

V HOW DISCHARGED

Not by Parol]—A covenant for payment of a sum certain, although the payment does not accrue until after notice given cannot be discharged by parol before breach Hemley v Spence, 8 Ex 668, 22 L J Ex 249

A plaintiff declared against an administratrix, upon a deed, entered into by her testator a plea that the testator died insolvent and then alleging a parol agreement with the plaintiff, upon the faith of which she was induced to take out letters of administration, to assign the deed to the plaintiff, the promise being that the plaintiff would not seek to charge her in that capacity, is bad as seeking to answer an agreement under seal by a parol promise, and, at the trial of the cause, it was not to be taken as alleging a deed under seal, but was proved by evidence of a parol agreement, and proof being given, a verdict for her was rightly entered Harris v Goodwyn, 2 Scott (N R) 459, 9 D P C 409, 2 Man & G 405, 10 L J, C P. 62

Held also, however, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment non obstante veredicto Ib

A declaration alleged the making of a lease in the lifetime of W, of whom the plaintiff was surviving executor, by which premises were demised to the defendant for a term, covenants being contained in the instrument to repair and maintain all erections and improvements on the premises, and to surrender and yield up the premises with all such improvements and erections well and sufficiently maintained and repaired Breach, alleging the making of a greenhouse which was an erection and an improvement on the premises, and its removal before the yielding up of the premises A plea that the defendant assigned the premises to B, who assigned to P, who assigned to H, and that it was agreed between the testator and H, and the testator promised H, that, if he would make and set up a greenhouse in and upon the premises, he should be at liberty to pull down and remove the same, is bad, as setting up a parol agreement to vary a contract under seal West v Blakeway, 9 D P. C 846, 3 Scott (N R) 199, 2 Man & G. 729, 10 L J, C. P 173, 5 Jur 630

By a deed of apprenticeship A became bound to B, described therein as an auctioneer, appraiser and corn-factor, as apprentice in the business of an auctioneer, appraiser, and corn-factor, to learn his art, and with him after the manner of an apprentice to serve, and C the father of A covenanted for the performance of his duties as an apprentice B sued C on the deed, alleging as a breach that A had absented himself from his service C pleaded that B. had given up the trade of a corn-factor. A replication, that B. had given it up with the consent of C., and that afterwards A. continued to serve until he absented himself, is bad, as setting up an alteration of the deed by parol. Ellen v. Topp, 7 Ex. 424 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 241 ; 15 Jur. 451.

Where land in the possession of a tenant for years is conveyed by deed, the right of the purchaser, as assignee of the reversion, to receive the whole rent for the current quarter cannot be controlled by a contemporaneous parol agreement to apportion the quarter's rent between the assignor and assignee. Flinn v. Calow, 1 Man. & G. 589.

A declaration after stating an agreement under seal, between the plaintiffs and a company, by which the plaintiffs agreed to build a ship for the company, and by which it was stipulated that no alterations should be made in the building of the ship, unless on the authority of a letter, signed by the secretary of the company, stating that the directors had directed such alterations ; alleged, that during the progress of the works the company required alterations to be made in the building of the ship, which the plaintiffs accordingly made, and that the company discharged the plaintiffs from the stipulation in the agreement as to requiring the authority of such letter signed by the secretary. Breach, the non-payment of the costs of such alterations. Plea, that such discharge was not a discharge by deed. Replication on equitable grounds, that the company, by parol, directed the plaintiffs to make the alterations, and that they, at the request of the company, made such alterations, and that the company took to the ship and enjoyed the benefit of such alterations, and that, by reason of the premises, the plaintiffs were, in equity, discharged by the company from the stipulation, and the company ought not, in equity, to be allowed to set up the want of a discharge by deed in bar to the claim for the cost of the alterations,—is bad, as contradicting the declaration, and showing that the plaintiffs had no legal right ; but, if any, only an equitable one. Thames Ironworks Co. v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 13 C. B. (N.S.) 358 ; 31 L. J., C. P. 169 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 100 ; 9 W. R. 942.

By Compulsory Sale.]—A landowner who has covenanted in the usual form that neither he nor his assigns shall build upon his land, is discharged from his covenant after selling the premises to a railway company under their compulsory powers, as the company become assignees of the land, not by the voluntary act of the former owner, but by compulsion of law. Baily v. De Crespigny, 38 L. J., Q. B. 98 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 180 ; 19 L. T. 681 ; 17 W. R. 494.

VI. BREACH.

1. What Amounts to.

To give First Refusal of Purchase.]—A. granted a lease to B. of tenements, and covenanted that if he, his heirs, or assigns, should, during the term, have any offer made for the disposal of certain land adjoining the demised premises, he or they should not dispose of the same without previously offering it to B., his executors, administrators, or assigns, at 5*l.* per cent. less than such offer. Before the expiration of the lease, A. sold to C. upon one entire contract, and for one entire sum, the whole of his estate, comprising the demised premises and the ground which was the subject of the covenant, without making any offer of the latter to B. :—Held, that this was no breach of the covenant, either absolute or implied, on the part of A. Callison v. Lettsom, 2 Marsh. 1 ; 6 Taunt. 224 ; 16 R. R. 605.

To Build.]—It is no defence to a covenant for not building a house within a reasonable time, that up to a certain day the house remained unbuilt with the plaintiff's knowledge, and that he then required the defendant to build the house, and that a reasonable time had not since elapsed. Fisher v. Ford, 1 Arn. & H. 12 ; 4 Jur. 1034.

In ejectment, on the ground of a forfeiture by reason of an alleged breach of covenant, it appeared that an ancestor of the plaintiff had conveyed the premises to trustees on behalf of the inhabitants of a parish for 1,000 years, by a deed, which contained a covenant on the part of the trustees, that they would build a workhouse, and would use and occupy the premises for the use and maintenance of the poor who should become chargeable to the parish, and would not convert the house or land, or employ the profits thereof to any other use ; with a condition for re-entry if the trustees should sell, assign, transfer or otherwise part with their estates, or if they should not observe, perform, fulfil and keep all the covenants therein contained. Afterwards the paupers were removed to a union workhouse, in consequence of an order by the poor law commissioners, and the workhouse was shut up ; and the land had since that time been let, and the rent applied in aid of the rates for the relief of the poor :—Held, first, that there was no breach of covenant ; and, secondly, that if there was any, it was excused by compulsion of law. Doe d. Anglesea (Marquis) v. Rugeley Churchwardens, 6 Q. B. 107 ; 13 L. J., M. C. 137 ; 8 Jur. 615.

To Pay.]—A covenant provided, that if a company should displace a certain person from his employment of agent to the company, they would repay the covenantee a sum of money paid to them by him for the agent's debts :—Held, that a transfer of their business to another company, and a voluntary dissolution, by which the place ceased to exist, was a displacement, and entitled the covenantee to sue for the money. Stirling v. Maitland, 5 B. & S. 840 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 1 ; 11 L. T. 337 ; 13 W. R. 76.

Action on a covenant in a coal lease to pay a certain proportion of the value of 9 cwt. of coals to be raised, unless prevented by unavoidable accident from working the pit. Plea, that the defendant was prevented by unavoidable accident. It appeared that the accident might have been remedied at a greater expense than the value of the coals to be raised :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Morris v. Smith, 3 Dougl. 279.

Not to open Door in Front of Street.]—A. enfeoffed B. with a piece of land bounded on the west by a street, and on the east partly by buildings belonging to B., and partly by buildings belonging to G. A. covenanted that he would not at any time after the feoffment permit or suffer any warehouse door to be opened or put out to the front of the street. A warehouse door was put out in the buildings belonging to G. at the eastern extremity of A.'s land, about eight feet distance from, but giving access to, the street :—

Held, that this was a breach of the covenant, though the premises in which the door was put out did not stand upon his land, were not in his occupation, and were not level with the front of the street. Liverpool Corporation v. Tomlinson, 7 D. & R. 556.

Not to use Rooms in a Particular Manner.]—A new breach of a covenant not to use rooms in a particular manner is committed every day the rooms are so used. Doe d. Ambler v. Woodbridge. 4 M. & Ry. 302; 9 B. & C. 376; S. P., Flower (Lord) v. Peck, 1 B. & Ad. 128.

To Sink for Coal.]—Where lessees of land and of coal mines covenanted forthwith to proceed to sink for coal as far as could and ought to be accomplished, or in default to pay so much to the lessor as arbitrators should award, and the lessees gave a bond to the lessor, conditioned to perform the award which was made:—Held, that to an action on the bond it was a sufficient answer that they had proceeded to sink for coal as far, &c. (in the words of the covenant), but that none could be found. Hanson v. Boothman, 13 East, 22.

To Keep on Foot a Policy.]—A party covenanted to do and perform all such acts, matters, and things as should be requisite for continuing and keeping on foot a policy:—Held, that this covenant could not be read negatively as if he had covenanted to do no act whereby it would become void, and therefore that the covenant was not broken by the suicide of the covenanter, whereby the policy became forfeited. Dormay v. Borrodaile, 10 Beav. 335; 16 L. J., Ch. 337; 11 Jur. 379. And see S. C., at law, 5 Man. & Gr. 639.

That Covenantor has Power to Transfer Ship.]—By a deed-poll, of the 21st October, 1836, the defendant sold and assigned to the plaintiff a particular ship or vessel, with her masts, tackle, and appurtenances; and covenanted that he had good right, full power, and lawful authority, to sell and assign the premises to the plaintiff. To a declaration on this covenant, assigning as breaches, that, at the time of making the deed-poll, the ship was wholly lost and destroyed, and was incapable of being assigned; and that the defendant had not, at that time, good right, &c., to assign:—the defendant pleaded, that the ship was not, at the time of making the deed-poll, wholly lost and destroyed; and that the defendant had good right, &c., to assign her. It appeared that, at the time of the sale, the ship was on a foreign voyage; that on the 13th October she went aground in a storm, on the coast of the Prince of Wales's Island, and was left by the crew, who, however, had access to her afterwards; that she lay aground five feet above water, on one side and with her masts standing, till the 24th, when the captain called a survey, and by the surveyor's advice sold her; that her bulk ends were strained, but that, if there had been facilities at hand, and if it had been a different season of the year, she might have been got off and repaired; and that she had sustained no more damage on the 21st October than when she first took the ground:—Held, that the covenant of the defendant, that he had power to transfer her as a ship, was not broken. Barr v. Gibson, 3 M. & W. 390; 1 H. & H. 70; 7 L. J., Ex. 124.

Relating to Theatres.]—A lease of the opera house contained covenants on the part of the lessee: first, not to use the house for any but purposes of a theatrical kind, and to use his best endeavours to improve the house for that purpose. The house was closed at the end of the season of 1852, and was not opened at all during the following year:—Held, that this was not a breach of the covenant. Croft v. Lumley, 6 H. L. Cas. 672; 27 L. J., Q. B. 321; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 913; 6 W. R. 523.

And, secondly, not to grant away, assign, dispose of or charge the stalls or boxes for any longer period than one year or season. On the 21st December, 1851, the lessee leased certain boxes for one year, to commence from March, 1852. On the 1st of August, 1852, he made another lease of the same boxes to a different person, with this habendum: "From the 1st of February next ensuing, or from such subsequent day during the year upon which the theatre shall be opened, and thenceforth for the full term of one year, to be computed from that day":—Held, that this was not a breach of the covenant. Ib.

And, thirdly, not to charge nor incumber the theatre, or the income thereof, or the terms hereby granted, by mortgaging the same, or granting any rent-charges or any other incumbrance whatever. The lessee was greatly in debt. In respect of his debts, he granted warrants of attorney, one of which was to secure payment of bills not then due, and another provided that it was a concurrent security, with an indenture therein recited, that judgment was to be entered up when the grantee thought fit, and be registered, and judgments were signed against him on those warrants of attorney, and upon judge's orders, and registered:—Held, that no breach of this covenant had been committed. Ib.

Not to Prejudice Premises — Insolvency.]—A trader assigned his household furniture by a mortgage deed, which provided that the trader should quietly enjoy until default made in payment of the demand. The deed contained a covenant by the trader not to execute, do, or suffer any act, deed, matter or thing, by means of which the premises should be assigned, charged or prejudicially affected, or whereby the mortgagee might be hindered from receiving, recovering or taking possession of the same:—Held, that filing a declaration of insolvency, while the goods were allowed to remain in the possession of such trader, was a breach of the covenant. Hill v. Cowdery, 1 H. & N. 360; 25 L. J., Ex. 285; 4 W. R. 681.

Erecting Wall instead of Houses.]—Land was sold, subject to a covenant entered into with a neighbouring landowner, that "no buildings, except dwelling-houses," to front a certain road, should be built thereon. The purchaser threw the land into his garden, and inclosed it, by erecting thereon, along the side of the road, a wall, 8 ft. 6 in. high, for the greater part, but carried up in one part to the height of 11 ft. 6 in., for the purpose of forming the back of vineries and a greenhouse. In a suit for an injunction, to restrain the wall from continuing:—Held, that the boundary garden wall 8 ft. 6 in. high was no breach of covenant, but the raising it for the purposes of the vineries was; but no substantial injury being caused, the court awarded damages instead of granting an injunction in respect of the breach. Bowes v. Law, 39 L. J.,

Erecting Stable instead of Houses.]—A covenant to the effect that private houses only, of a certain minimum value, are to be built on certain plots of land, is not broken by the erection on one of them of a stable with a bedroom over it, of such dimensions and in such a position that it would still be possible to build a house of the stipulated value upon the plot. Russell v. Baber, 18 W. R. 1021.

Charitable Institution.]—The erection of a building to be used for the education and lodging of 100 girls in connection with a charitable institution for the daughters of missionaries, supported by voluntary contributions:—Held, to be a breach of a covenant entered into by the purchaser that "no house or other building to be erected or built upon the land shall be used or occupied otherwise than as and for a private residence only, and not for any purpose of trade." German v. Chapman, 47 L. J., Ch. 250; 7 Ch. D. 271; 37 L. T. 685; 26 W. R. 149—C. A.

National School—Nuisance.]—The owner of one of the lots on a building estate having made a free gift of the same to the committee of a district national school, for the purpose of having a national school erected thereon:—Held, that the word "nuisance" in a covenant by which all the owners of the lots were bound must be restricted to its technical meaning; that the establishment of a national school is not a legal nuisance; and that the establishment of such a school on one of the above lots could not be restrained by the owner of a dwelling-house built on an adjoining lot, though his property would be depreciated thereby. Harrison v. Good, 40 L. J., Ch. 294; L. R. 11 Eq. 338; 24 L. T. 263; 19 W. R. 346.

Eating-House.]—B. demised an eating-house for a term of twenty-one years, and covenanted that he would not during the term let any house in the same street for the purpose of carrying on the business of an eating-house, provided always that the covenant should be binding only on B., and not on his heirs, administrators or assigns. Subsequently B. let the adjoining house for twenty-one years to another person, who covenanted with him not to carry on there any trade or business without B.'s licence. The first lease was subsequently assigned to K., and the second to G. K. brought an action against B. and G. to restrain G. from carrying on an eating-house on the premises comprised in the second lease, and B. from permitting him to do so:—Held, that the covenant could not be treated as a covenant that none of the houses should during the term be used as an eating-house, and that as B. had not let the second house for the purpose of an eating-house, the covenant was not broken by G.'s carrying on there the business of an eating-house, nor by B.'s not interfering with his doing so. Kemp v. Bird, 5 Ch. D. 549. Affirmed on appeal, 46 L. J., Ch. 828; 5 Ch. D. 974; 37 L. T. 53; 25 W. R. 838—C. A.

Private House—Auction on Premises.]—A covenant to use a house as a private house only is not broken by an auction sale on the premises of the furniture belonging to the house. Reeves v. Cattell, 24 W. R. 485.

Bay Windows.]—The purchaser of a plot of land, part of an estate laid out for building, covenanted with the vendors, who were the mortgagees in fee in possession of the estate, their heirs and assigns, not to erect any building on his plot nearer to the road in which it was situate than the line of frontage of the then present houses in that road, which houses were about forty feet apart, and about eighty feet from the road. He then erected two houses on his plot, each of which had a bay window projecting three feet beyond the line of the existing houses, and carried from the foundation up to the roof. Upon a bill for an injunction by the transferee from the mortgagees, and by a subsequent purchaser from them of a contiguous plot, who had entered into similar covenants:—Held, first, that the bay windows were buildings within the meaning of the covenant and the erection of them a violation of it. Manners (Lord) v. Johnson, 45 L. J., Ch. 404; 1 Ch. D. 673; 24 W. R. 481.

Held, secondly, that there being a clear breach of covenant, the covenantees were entitled to the injunction without the necessity of showing damage. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that invasion of privacy constituted damage. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the covenant being not to do an act the doing of which caused an invasion of privacy, it was not necessary for the covenant in terms to purport to preserve privacy. Ib.

Held, fifthly, that both the plaintiffs had material interests sufficient to support the suit. Ib.

To occupy Premises properly.]—A tenant's allowing a footpath to be made across a part of the demised premises is no breach of a covenant to occupy the premises in a proper manner. Doe d. Worcester (Trustees) v. Rowlands, 9 Car. & P. 734.

To Serve as Apprentice.]—By the terms of an indenture of apprenticeship, an infant was placed by his father (who was a party to the indenture) as apprentice to a master, described in the indenture as "an auctioneer, appraiser and cornfactor, to learn his art, and with him, after the manner of an apprentice, to serve." Afterwards, the master wholly relinquished the trade of corn-factor, whereupon the apprentice absented himself from his master's service:—Held, in an action on the indenture by the master against the father for the desertion of the apprentice, that the relinquishment by the master of his trade of corn-factor was a good answer. Ellen v. Topp, 6 Ex. 424; 20 L. J., Ex. 241; 15 Jur. 451.

As to Trade.]—A declaration stated, that the defendant assigned his practice of a surgeon and an apothecary to the plaintiff, and covenanted that he would not, directly or indirectly, by himself or in co-partnership with any person, carry on the practice of a surgeon or an apothecary within a certain distance, under a penalty; and alleged as breach the practising of the defendant within that distance. The defendant pleaded that he did not carry on the business of a surgeon. On several occasions, he acted as a surgeon and an apothecary within the prescribed distance, but he had done so with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff, and for the purpose of assisting him in his business :— Held, that the defendant's conduct did not amount to a breach of the covenant. Rawlinson v. Clarke, 14 M. & W. 187 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 364.

2. RELIEF FROM FORFEITURE.

Generally.]—Court of equity will not relieve against wilful voluntary breach of covenant. Descarlett v. Dennett, 9 Mod. 22.

Where defendant prevents plaintiff's performance of covenant, chancery will remove the opposition. Wood v. Tirrell, Cary, 59.

Relief against forfeiture, where compensation can be given, applies only to cases of contract, not to the provisions of a statute, or conditions in law. Where penalty only designed to secure the money, then relief may be given against it. Keating v. Sparrow, 1 Ball & B. 374.

Relief given against forfeiture by breach of covenant by lessee, where compensation can be made. Davis v. West, 12 Ves. 475.

Equity will not relieve against a breach of covenant, unless the payment of money will be an adequate compensation for it. Elliott v. Turner, 13 Sim. 477.

Not on ground of Acquiescence, unless Fraudulent.]—The court never on light grounds interposes against the legal effects of a covenant, on the ground of acquiescence ; there must be fraud, such as acquiescing for a benefit to arise from taking advantage of the breach, or giving reason to suppose there would not be any interference. Gerrard v. O'Reilly, 2 Con. & L. 165 ; 3 Dr. & War. 414.

VII. ACTION ON.

1. FORM OF.

When must be Covenant.]—An action in the nature of waste will lie against a lessee of a mine for an injury to the reversion by the removal of a barrier or boundary between it and an adjoining mine, although the act complained of might also be the subject of an action for the breach of an express covenant. Marker v. Kenrick, 13 C. B. 188 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 129 ; 17 Jur. 441.

A devisee in trust of mortgaged premises for sale and payment of the debts of the mortgagor, borrowed 200*l.* of the plaintiff for the purpose of paying off a portion of the debts of the mortgagor ; and by deed between him and the plaintiff, reciting these facts, charged the premises with payment of that amount, and covenanted that he and his heirs should out of the money that should come to his hands as such trustee, or out of the personal estate, if any, of the mortgagor, pay to the plaintiff the principal and interest secured by the deed :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue the devisee for money lent, but that his remedy was upon the covenant contained in the deed. Mathew v. Blackmore, 1 H. & N. 762 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 150 ; 5 W. R. 363.

A tenant under a lease cannot maintain an action on an implied promise for money paid under a distress by a superior landlord : the remedy is covenant on the express contract. Schlencker v. Moxey, 5 D. & R. 747 ; 3 B. & C. 789 ; 27 R. R. 482.

A lessee of premises granted and assigned them by indenture to the plaintiff, who, having been distrained upon for rent in arrear to the superior landlord before the assignment, brought an action to recover the money paid under the distress, and relied upon an express promise by the lessee to repay it :— Held, that as covenant would lie on the covenant implied in the word "grant," assumpsit would not lie on any implied contract to indemnify the plaintiff, nor on the express promise which was not founded on a new consideration. Baber v. Harris, 1 P. & D. 360 ; 9 A. & E. 532 ; 2 W. W. & H. 1 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 153.

For Injunction.]—An application for an injunction to restrain an alleged breach of covenant had been once ordered to stand over until the decision of two legal questions raised by defendant. On those questions being decided in the plaintiff's favour, and the motion coming on again, the defendant raised a third legal objection, and the court below, at his request, directed a case to be stated for the opinion of a court of law upon it, but, on the ground of the delay in bringing it forward, granted an injunction in the meantime. On appeal, however, the lord chancellor dissolved the injunction notwithstanding that circumstance, on the ground of the much greater facility of indemnifying the plaintiff than the defendant, according as the one or the other might succeed at law. Rigby v. G. W. Ry., 2 Ph. 44 ; 1 Coop. C. C. 3 ; 4 Railw. Cas. 491 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 266 ; 10 Jur. 531.

Where the interference of the court by injunction depends upon a legal right which is disputed, the court ought for its own security to put the matter into a course for ascertaining that right ; and if that is to be done by sending a case for the opinion of a court of law, this court ought not to leave it to the option of the defendant, but ought itself to direct a case to be prepared, with a reference to the master to settle it in case the parties differ. Ib.

Where a breach of covenant is threatened, and has been partly executed, the court, having jurisdiction to restrain the threatened breach, will also award damages in respect of the executed breach. Hindley v. Emery, 35 L. J., Ch. 6 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 874 ; 13 L. T. 272 ; 14 W. R. 25.

Where a breach of covenant is proposed, the court will not refuse to interfere on the ground that there has been a mistake on the part of both parties in the form of the covenants ; or that the aggrieved party may have already permitted some other infringement of the covenant ; or on the ground of inconvenience to the public, Lloyd v. L. C. & D. Ry., 34 L. J., Ch. 401 ; 12 L. T. 362 ; 13 W. R. 698.

Before the court would refuse to enforce a covenant, it must be clear that no substantial damage could arise from the breach of it. Ib.

A., owner of land through which a company proposed to make a railway upon a viaduct, withdrew his opposition to the company's bill in parliament, in consideration of an agreement by the company not to erect on the land to be taken by them from him, within eighty feet from other premises in his possession, any building, "except their proposed railway," above the height of eighteen feet. The bill passed, and a viaduct thirty-three feet high, part of which was within eighty feet from the plaintiff's premises, was erected on the land taken from A. This viaduct was wide enough for, and carried two lines only; subsequently to its erection, a conveyance of A.'s land to the company was prepared and executed, which contained a covenant on the part of the company to the same effect (omitting only the exception as to the railway, then completed) as the provision in the agreement restraining buildings. On the company afterwards beginning to build brick piers above the height of eighteen feet, within eighty feet of A.'s other premises, with a view to widening their viaduct so as to carry four lines instead of two, an injunction to restrain the company from erecting any such buildings in breach of their covenant was granted. Ib.

The circumstance that a work undertaken in breach of a valid covenant is one of great public importance, is not sufficient to induce a court of equity to refuse to restrain the breach of covenant. Ib.

It is no defence to an application for an injunction to restrain a breach of covenant to say that the covenantee sustains no damage from the breach, for, if the covenanter derives any benefit therefrom, the covenantee may reasonably demand a share of it as the price of his consent. Wells v. Attenborough, 24 L. T. 312; 19 W. R. 465.

Where, however, an injunction would inflict great injury on the defendant, and a delay in granting it would cause little or no loss to the plaintiff, the court will not grant it on an interlocutory application, but will express its opinion and direct the motion to stand over till the hearing. Ib.

Equity will interfere in the case of a breach of covenant, notwithstanding the covenantee might not have recovered damages for it at law. Elliott v. Turner, 13 Sim. 477.

There is no case where relief has been given in equity for satisfaction merely on an implied covenant. Saltern v. Melhuish, Ambl. 251.

2. Parties.

a. Generally.

Only Parties to Covenant can Sue or be Sued.]—A deed inter partes is only available between those who are parties to it. Barford v. Stuckey, 8 Moore, 88; 1 Bing. 225; 1 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 73.

An action of covenant only lies upon a deed inter partes between the parties thereto; therefore where, in an action upon an indenture of lease, it appeared that the landlord by writing, not under seal, authorised his attorney to execute a lease for and on his (landlord's) behalf, and the attorney signed and sealed the lease in his own name:—Held, that the landlord could not maintain an action against the tenant upon the indenture, although the covenants were expressly stated to have been made by the tenant to and with the landlord. Berkeley v. Hardy, 8 D. & R. 102; 5 B. & C. 355; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 184; 29 R. R. 261.

Where rent was reserved by a lease to a person who was not a party to the lease, and the lessees covenanted with him and the lessors to pay rent:—Held, that an action of covenant would not lie at the suit of him and the lessors. Southampton (Lord) v. Brown, 6 B. & C. 718; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 253; 30 R. R. 511.

When a deed is made inter partes, no one who is not expressed to be a party can sue on a covenant contained in it, and this is not a mere rule of construction, but a rule of positive law. Chesterfield and Midland Silkstone Colliery Co. v. Hawkins, 3 H. & C. 677; 34 L. J., Ex. 121; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 468; 12 L. T. 427; 13 W. R. 841.

In a lease, the lessor reserved a right to enter and cut timber, making reasonable satisfaction to the lessee for any damage occasioned thereby; an action of covenant does not lie by such lessee for any wrongful act of cutting down by a third person, if without the consent or authority of the lessor, however he may countenance the act afterwards. Griffiths v. Brome, 6 Term Rep. 66.

Where it only appeared that the lessor had promised to make compensation afterwards for such wrongful act, if the wrong-doer himself did not; this was not considered as an adoption of the act, nor as evidence of a prior consent to it whereon to found an action on the covenant. Ib.

Where two persons, for valuable consideration as between themselves, covenant to do some act for the benefit of a mere stranger, that stranger cannot enforce the covenant against the two, though either of the two might do so against the other. Colyear v. Mulgrave (Countess), 2 Keen, 81; 5 L. J., Ch. 335.

The owner of an estate granted a lease of a plot of ground to A., who covenanted that he, his executors, administrators, or assigns, would not during the term do on the premises anything which should be an annoyance to the neighbourhood or to the lessor or his tenants, or diminish the value of the adjoining property, nor build, nor allow to be built on the ground, any building or erection without first submitting the plans to the lessor and obtaining his approval. The landlord some years afterwards granted a lease of an adjoining plot to B., who entered into a similar restrictive covenant. Within twenty years A. commenced, with the approval of the lessor, to build upon his ground so as to darken the windows of B.'s house. On a bill by B. to restrain A. from erecting and the lessor from approving the building objected to:—Held, that B. was not entitled to relief either on the principle that the lessor could not derogate from his grant, or on the ground that the restrictive covenants in A.'s lease enured for B.'s benefit. Master v. Hansard, 46 L. J., Ch. 505; 4 Ch. D. 718; 36 L. T. 535.

Where Party to Covenant has not Executed.]—A covenantee in an ordinary indenture, who is a party to it, may sue the covenantor who executed it, although he himself had not executed it, notwithstanding there may be cross covenants on the part of the covenantee, which are stated in the deed to be the consideration for the covenants on the part of the covenantor. Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; 2 C. L. R. 696; 23 L. J., C. P. 64; 2 W. R. 193; Rose v. Poulton, 2 B. & Ad. 822; 1 L. J., K. B. 5.

But with respect to leases, the covenants which depend on the interest of the lease and are made because the covenantor has that interest, such as those to repair and pay rent during the term, are not obligatory if the lessor does not execute. Pitman v. Woodbury, 3 Ex. 4; Swatman v. Ambler, 8 Ex. 72; 22 L. J., Ex. 81. See Cooch v. Goodman, 2 Q. B. 580; 2 G. & D. 159; 11 L. J., Q. B. 225.

A lease for eleven years was executed by the lessee, but not by the lessor. The lessee entered under it, and occupied the premises during the whole term. The lessor died, after having devised the premises:—Held, that as he had not executed the lease, his devisee could not maintain an action of covenant as assignee of the reversion of the term of eleven years. Cardwell v. Lucas, 2 M. & W. 111; 6 L. J., Ex. 52.

Where tenant for life and remainderman are parties to an indenture, whereby they (so far as they legally can and may, according only to their respective estates and interests) demise their estate for a term of years, and the lessee enters into possession, the tenant for life may sue him for breach of covenant, although the indenture has not been executed by the remainderman. Hare v. Greek, 3 H. & C. 391; 34 L. J., Ex. 4; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1187; 11 L. T. 315; 13 W. R. 80.

A. covenanted with B. & C., their executors, administrators, and assigns, to pay a sum of money, to be held by them on certain trusts. C. did not assent to or execute the deed, and subsequently, by another deed to which neither A. nor B. was a party, disclaimed all the trusts of the first deed:—Held, that B. could not alone sue A. upon the covenant during the lifetime of C. Wetherell v. Langston, 1 Ex. 634; 17 L. J., Ex. 338—Ex. Ch.

Where two trustees of a marriage settlement did not sign:—Held, that they were, nevertheless, necessary parties to an action of covenant by the third. Petrie v. Bury, 3 B. & C. 353; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 29; 27 R. R. 383.

By a deed expressed to be made between G. of the first part, the defendant and two others, as sureties of G., of the second part, and the plaintiff of the third part, G., the defendant and the two other sureties jointly and severally covenanted to repay the plaintiff moneys advanced by him to G. The defendant, having been sued for a breach of this covenant, a plea that he executed the deed in the faith that P. (one of the sureties) should join therein and execute the same, and that P. never did join therein or execute the same, is a bad plea. Cumberlege v. Lawson, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 709; 26 L. J., C. P. 120; 5 W. R. 237.

Lease by Wife not Acknowledged by her.]—A husband and wife, seised in fee in right of the wife, demised land for a term of years. The deed was executed by both, but not acknowledged by the wife under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 79. The husband died during the term, but his widow did nothing to disaffirm the tenancy; and the lessee was in possession for the whole term:—Held, that an action was maintainable by the wife's executors against the lessee's sureties (parties to the lease) on the covenants in the lease. Tyler v. Slater, 37 L. J., Q. B. 33; L. R. 3 Q. B. 42; 17 L. T. 168; 16 W. R. 124.

Tenants in Common.]—A covenant to repair in a joint demise by tenants in common runs with the entire reversion, and all the tenants in common of the reversion at the time of the breach, or their representatives, must join in an action on such a covenant. Thompson v. Hakewill, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 713; 35 L. J., C. P. 18; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 732; 13 L. T. 289; 14 W. R. 11.

Tenants in common may sue a lessee of a house for negligence of repairs, who after the demise, but before the breach alleged, became a co-tenant of the plaintiffs in the same house. Yates v. Cole, 2 Br. & B. 660. S. C., nom. Gates v. Cole, 5 Moore, 534; 23 R. R. 524.

Chairman of Company.]—An action does not lie against the chairman of the board of directors of a company, not incorporated by act of parliament, upon a deed under the seal of a former chairman, though sealed by him for and on behalf of the company. Hall v. Bainbridge, 1 Scott (N.R.) 151; 1 Man. & G. 42; 8 D. P. C. 583; 9 L. J., C. P. 281.

Covenant with Mortgagee and Mortgagor—Action by Mortgagee alone.]—Declaration on a covenant for rent by the representative of a mortgagee for a term of 5,000 years upon an indenture of lease for 4,000 years, by the mortgagee, S., to which the mortgagor, Y., was a confirming party, against the assignee of the lessee, L.; the mortgage being prior to the making of the lease. The reddendum was in the following words:—"Yielding and paying yearly and every year during the term, unto S., his executors, &c., during the continuance of the mortgage, and after payment thereof, unto Y., his executors, &c., the yearly rent of 18*l*. 18*s*." The covenant was by L., "to and with S., his executors, &c., and also to and with Y., his executors, &c.," that L., his executors, administrators and assigns, would pay the yearly rent "on the several days and times, and in manner as the same was reserved and made payable." The plaintiff traced title from S., by deeds, to all of which Y.'s name appeared as a party; but the declaration did not aver that any one of them was executed by Y. Averment, that the plaintiff became possessed of the demised premises for all the residue and remainder of the term of 5,000 years, and that, after the making of the indenture of lease, and during the term granted, and after the defendant became assignee, and while he continued assignee, two years' rent became in arrear:—Held, that the covenant was several, and the action was properly brought by the representative of the mortgagee alone. Harrold v. Whitaker, 11 Q. B. 147; 15 L. J., Q. B. 345; 10 Jur. 1004. Affirmed in error, 11 Q. B. 163; 17 L. J., Q. B. 343; 12 Jur. 395—Ex. Ch.

Corporations.]—A declaration by A., B. and C., stated, that, by deed, they demised premises to the defendant for a term; that he covenanted to yield up the premises in good repair at the end of the term, and that, at the end of the term, he yielded up the premises out of repair. The defendant set out the deed, which appeared to be made between A., the master, and B. and C., the governors of a hospital of the one part, and the defendant of the other part. It stated that the master and governors demised the premises to the defendant, and that the covenant was made with the master and governors, and their successors; and it also contained covenants by the master and governors, for themselves and their successors, and concluded thus: "In witness whereof the master and governors have hereunto affixed their common seal." A seal, purporting to be a common seal, was affixed on the part of the lessors, and the deed purported to have been signed, sealed and delivered by the defendant. The defendant then pleaded that the deed was not signed by the plaintiffs, or their agent, lawfully authorised by writing; and that there was no demise of the premises signed by them or their agent, lawfully authorised by writing:—

Held, that it appeared by the record that the lease was made by a corporation, and that no action could be maintained upon it in the names of the plaintiffs. Cooch v. Goodman, 2 G. & D. 159 : 2 Q. B. 580 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 225 ; 6 Jur. 779.

b. Joint and Several.

Where Interest Joint, all must sue; where Interest Several, each may sue.]—Though a covenant is joint in its terms, yet if the interests of the covenantees are several, each may sue separately for a breach. Withers v. Bircham, 5 D. & R. 106; 3 B. & C. 254; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 30 ; 27 R. R. 350.

The criterion by which the propriety of the joinder or the nonjoinder of parties to a covenant in an action for breaches is to be ascertained, is the nature of the interest of the covenantees. If the interest is several, the action may be several ; if joint, it must be joint ; and the terms or language of the covenant do not control that principle. James v. Emary, 5 Price, 529 ; 2 Moore, 195 ; 8 Taunt. 245 ; 19 R. R. 503.

Though an agreement is made jointly with two parties, yet, where the interests are several, and the damages several, each of the covenantees may sue without joining the other. Palmer v. Sparshott, 4 Scott (N.R.) 743 ; 4 Man. & G. 137 ; 11 L. J , C. P. 204.

By articles of agreement for the sale of premises, the defendant covenanted with the plaintiff, and with the several other parties beneficially interested in the premises .—Held, that their interest was several, and that the plaintiff might sue alone. Poole v. Hill, 9 D. P. C. 300 ; 6 M. & W. 835 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 81.

Where a party covenanted by deed, for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, with each of certain parties thereto (proposed shareholders, the plaintiff being one, in the term and coal mines hereafter mentioned), his executors, administrators and assigns, that he would produce and show a good marketable title to a term of forty-two years, and the seams of coal, by the deed demised and granted ; and that he would effectually assign, assure and vest the same according to the true intent and meaning of the deed ; and that he would, with all practicable speed, proceed with, and within four years complete, the harbour and works :—Held, upon an action brought by the plaintiff alone for a breach of these covenants, that they were in their nature several, and, therefore, that the action was rightly brought. Mills v. Ladbroke, 7 Scott (N.R.) 1005 ; 7 Man. & G. 218 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 122 ; 8 Jur. 247.

Where the interest of the covenantees is joint, although the covenant is in terms joint and several, the action follows the nature of the contract, and must be brought in the names of all the covenantees Pugh v. Stringfield, 3 C. B. (N.S) 2 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 34. See S. C., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 364 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 225 ; 6 W. R. 487.

By articles of agreement, under seal, between L. and the defendant, of the one part, and the plaintiff and H., of the other part ; after reciting, that L. and the defendant, as solicitors of D., had applied to the plaintiff to lend D. 2,900*l.* out of moneys of H., in the plaintiff's hands, and held by him in trust for her, upon the security of a policy of insurance and other securities, but that the plaintiff had declined to do so without further security ; and that, thereupon L. and the defendant proposed to enter into the covenant hereinafter contained ; L. and the defendant, in pursuance of the agreement, and in consideration of the premises, and of the plaintiff having so advanced 2,900*l.* to D., at the request of L. and the defendant, did covenant with and to the plaintiff ; and also as a separate and distinct covenant with and to H., that L. and the defendant, or one of them, would pay to the plaintiff the interest on the 2,900*l.*, or such part thereof as should remain unpaid :—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action upon this covenant without joining H. Hopkinson v. Lee, 6 Q. B. 964 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 101 ; 9 Jur. 616.

Joint covenantees who may sue, must sue jointly, unless they have expressly disclaimed the covenant, which it lies upon the party suing to show. Petrie v. Bury, 5 D. & R. 152 ; 3 B. & C. 353 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 29 ; 27 R. R. 383.

Where the owner of one undivided moiety, and the mortgagor and mortgagee of the other, join in a demise, the covenants being with all three, although there is no reversion in the mortgagor, he is entitled to join with the other two in an action against the assignees in bankruptcy of the lessee for the rent. Magnay v. Edwards, 13 C. B. 179 ; 1 C. L. R. 141 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 170 ; 17 Jur. 839 ; 1 W. R. 331. Following Wakefield v. Brown, 9 Q. B. 209 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 373 ; 10 Jur. 853.

How Covenant Declared on.]—A joint and several covenant by A. and other persons, that "they, or some or one of them," will pay a certain sum, may be declared upon as a covenant by A. to pay. Caldwell v. Becke, 2 Ex. 318.

A covenant, whereby "A., B. and C., and any two of them jointly, and each of them separately," covenanted with D. that A., B. and C., "or some or one of them," shall pay D. a sum of money, is properly declared upon in an action of covenant against A alone as a covenant that A. would pay that sum to D. Addison v. Gibson, 10 Q. B. 106 ; 16 L. J.. Q. B. 165 ; 11 Jur. 654.

Who to be Sued.]—An action against A. and B., on a covenant supposed to be implied as incident to a demise by lease : on production of the lease, it appearing that, in point of law, A. only demised, and that B., who had an equitable interest, merely confirmed, the action is not maintainable against A. and B. Smith v. Pocklington, 1 C. & J. 445 ; 1 Tyr. 309.

If an obligee of a bond covenants not to sue one of two joint and several obligors, and, if he does, that the deed of covenant may be pleaded in bar, he may still sue the other obligor. Dean v. Newhall, 8 Term Rep. 168.

A plaintiff sued five out of a larger number of persons, joint and several covenantors ; before trial two of the five became bankrupt. The plaintiff was allowed to try the action against the remaining three, and the judge refused to compel them to bring the trustees in bankruptcy before the court to enforce contribution. Lloyd v. Dimmack, 47 L. J., Ch. 398.

c. Personal Representatives.

When Suing.]—Where an executrix declared, that the defendant, by deed, conveying to her testator lands in fee subject to redemption on payment of a sum certain, covenanted with the testator, that he was, at the time of the execution of the deed, seised in fee, and had a right to convey; and assigned for breach that the defendant was not seised in fee, and had not a right to convey:—Held, that the executrix could not maintain an action for such breaches of covenant, without showing some special damage to the testator in his lifetime, or that she claimed some interest in the premises. Kingdon v. Nottle, 1 M. & S. 355; 14 R. R. 462.

By an indenture tripartite between A. 1, B. 2, and C. 3, A., tenant for life, demised to C., and C. covenanted with B. (a receiver) and other the receiver or receivers for the time being, and to and with such other person, who for the time being should be entitled to the freehold, and to and with every of them. A. died:—Held, that his executrix could not maintain an action for a breach in her testator's lifetime, but that the action was joint, and survived to B. Southcote v. Hoare, 3 Taunt. 87; 12 R. R. 600.

An executor, though not named, may sue upon a covenant made with the testator in reference to a chattel. Doe d. Rogers v. Rogers, 2 N. & M. 550.

An executor of a lessor, tenant from year to year, may sue for a breach of covenant in a lease, for twenty-one years, granted by the lessor, though the breach was committed after the lessor's death. Mackay v. Mackreth, 2 Chit. 461; 4 Dougl. 213.

But such a declaration should state the termor's interest and title in the premises. Ib.

When Sued.]—If tenant in tail male demises for a term of ninety-nine years, and his lessee assigns over to another, but, before such assignment, the tenant in tail male dies without issue male, no action upon the lease can be maintained against the representatives of the grantor by such assignee, the lease being void at the time of the assignment, and no interest passing under it. Andrew v. Pearce, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 158; 8 R. R. 776.

A covenant by two joint lessees, if it is joint and several, will bind the executors of the deceased lessee. Enys v. Donnithorne, 2 Burr. 1190.

In an action against executors, in their own right on a covenant for good title and quiet enjoyment against any person or persons whatever, contained in an assignment of a lease of the testator (by way of mortgage), the declaration must show a breach by some act of the covenantors. Noble v. King, 1 H. Bl. 34.

In an action upon an indenture of lease against the surviving executrix of the lessee, the declaration stated, that, upon the death of the lessee, all his estate and interest in the premises came to and vested in the defendant and P., who were executrices of the last will and testament of the lessee, by reason whereof the defendant and P., as executrices, became and were possessed:—Held, a sufficient averment that the term vested in the defendant and P. as executrices. Ackland v. Pring, 3 Scott (N.R.), 297; 2 Man. & G. 937; 10 L. J., C. P. 231.

Held, also, that it was unnecessary to aver that the term had vested in the defendant and P. as executrices, as the vesting of a term in the lessee's personal representatives, together with the liability of such personal representatives to be sued upon the covenants of the lease, is in effect a conclusion of law. Ib.

E. covenanted that he, in his lifetime, or his heirs, executors, or administrators would, within three months after his death, pay 3,000*l.* He died, having devised real estate to trustees for E. for life, and remainders over, and other real estate to the same trustees, for payment of debts. The trustees, under an order of the court of chancery, conveyed the estate to new trustees, who became the legal personal representatives of the testator, and the tenant for life mortgaged his estate:—Held, that, after the death of the covenantor, an action of debt would lie upon that covenant. Coope v. Cresswell, 36 L. J., Ch. 114, L. R. 2 Ch. 112; 15 L. T. 42; 15 W. R. 242.

Held, also, that the action would lie against the trustees under the will and the heir, by 3 Will. & M. c. 14. s. 3, and execution would be thus obtained against the land; and that the alienation by the trustees was not such an alienation as would, under s. 7, prevent the action; nor was the alienation by the equitable tenant for life such an alienation. Ib.

Held, also, that the same conclusions would probably be arrived at, even if the legal estate in fee had been outstanding at the time of the testator's will and death, inasmuch as 3 Will. & M. c. 14, makes the devisees of an equitable estate liable for debts. Ib.

Held, also, that payment within twenty years of interest on the 3,000*l.* by the trustees, was not sufficient, within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 5, to prevent that statute from being pleaded in bar by the equitable tenant for life. Ib.

d. Heirs and Devisees.

Action by Heir]—On a covenant for further assurance, where the breach happened in the time of the covenantee, but the damage accrued to the heir, the heir has a preferable title to the executor to bring the action of covenant. King v. Jones, 1 Marsh. 107; 5 Taunt. 418; 15 R. R. 533. And see Kingdon v. Nottle, 1 M. & S. 355; 14 R. R. 462.

An action lies by the heir, upon a covenant made to the ancestor and his heirs, to whom lands are conveyed in fee by husband and wife, that he and his wife will make further assurance upon request of the ancestor and his heirs; and the heir may well assign for breach, that his ancestor requested the husband, that he and his wife should levy a fine to pass the estate of the wife legally to him and his heirs, which they refused to do before their decease, per quod after the death of the ancestor, the devisee of the wife ejected the heir. Jones v. King, 4 M. & S. 188; 15 R. R. 533.

Against Heir]—To an action against the heir on a covenant by his ancestor, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, a plea that he has not any lands by hereditary descent in fee-simple from his ancestor, is bad for omitting to negative that he had estates pur autre vie by descent from the covenantor. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 1 Ir. C. L. R. 347.

Against Devisees.]—The devisee of the equity of redemption (the legal fee being in a mortgagee) is not liable as assignee of all the estate, right, title and interest of the original covenantor. Carlisle Corporation v. Blamire, 8 East, 487; 9 R. R. 491.

An action of covenant does not lie upon the 3 Will. & M. c. 14, against the devisee of land, to recover damages for a breach of covenant made by the devisor; but the remedy thereby given is confined to cases where an action of debt lies. Wilson v. Knubley, 7 East, 127; 3 Smith, 128.

By Devisees.]—An action lies by a devisee of lands in fee, upon a covenant made by the defendant to the testator, to whom the defendant conveyed the lands in fee, that he was lawfully seised, and had a good right to convey; for such covenant runs with the land, and though broken in the lifetime of testator, it is a continuing breach in the time of the devisee, and it is sufficient to allege for damage, that thereby the lands are of less value to the devisee, and that he is prevented from selling them so advantageously. Kingdon v. Nottle, 4 M. & S. 53; 16 R. R. 379.

Where there was a devise to trustees and their heirs during the life of A., in trust for A., and after his decease to B. in fee: and the trustees recovered, in A.'s lifetime, damages for breach of covenant in a lease granted by the testatrix, and still subsisting. Upon A.'s death:—Held, that the damages belonged to her estate. Noble v. Cass, 2 Sim. 343; 29 R. R. 115.

Where a lessor had not executed the lease, his devisee could not sue on the covenants as assignee of the reversion. Cardwell v. Lucas, 2 M. & W. 111; 6 L. J., Ex. 52; ante, col. 1069.

e. Assignees.

Actions by.]—Devise to the use of I. for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to the use of the plaintiff for life:—Held, that the plaintiff, after the death of I., was an assignee within the 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, and might maintain an action of covenant against the lessee for rent in arrear after death of I., and during the continuance of the term. Isherwood v. Oldknow, 3 M. & S. 382; 16 R. R. 305.

An action of covenant will lie by the assignees of the reversion of part of the demised premises against the lessee for not repairing. Twynam v. Pickard, 2 B. & Ald. 105; 20 R. R. 368.

The fact of the plaintiff being assignee only of a part of the interest created by the lease will not preclude him from suing the lessor for and recovering damages in respect of the breach of the covenant. Simpson v. Clayton, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 758; 6 Scott, 469; 1 Arn. 299; 8 L. J., C. P. 59.

L. being seised in fee, demised to B. for twenty-one years, from June, 1814: B. demised to M. for twenty-one years, from June, 1814, wanting twenty-one days; and then by deed-poll granted to L. the indenture of lease to M., the premises thereby granted, and the rent reserved, to hold to L., his executors, &c., for the term mentioned in the demise to M.; L., by lease and release, conveyed the premises, the reversion and reversions, rents, issues and profits, and all his interest, in fee to the plaintiff, by way of mortgage; M. assigned his term to the defendant by way of mortgage, but the defendant never entered:—Held, that plaintiff might sue the defendant on the covenants in M.'s lease. Burton v. Barclay, 7 Bing. 745; 5 M. & P. 785; 9 L. J. (O.S.), C. P. 231.

By a deed to lead the uses of a recovery, lands were limited to the use of such a person as A. should by deed or will appoint, and in default of and until appointment, to the use of B. in trust for A., his heirs and assigns, reserving to A. a leasing power. A. (reciting the power) demised for a term to C., "yielding and paying unto A., his heirs and assigns during the term," a certain rent, with covenants to pay rent, to repair, &c., and a proviso for re-entry by A., his heirs and assigns, in case of breach:—Held, that the covenants enured in favour of the assignees of the reversion. Greenway v. Hart, 14 C. B. 340; 2 C. L. R. 370.

A. having only an equitable interest, made a lease of copyhold premises in 1762, subject to certain covenants, to be performed by the lessee and his assigns. In 1775 he obtained the legal estate:—Held, that the assignee of the reversion could not maintain an action against the assignee of the lessee, for breach of the covenants in the lease. After the lessor had obtained the legal estate, he granted another lease, in which the former lease of 1762 was recited; but it was agreed that it should continue in force, and the same rent remain reserved:—Held, that the assignee of the reversion could not sue for breach of the covenants contained in the lease of 1762. Whitton v. Peacock, 1 Hodges, 376.

By a will, power was given to a tenant for life to lease for twenty-one years, and to executors to mortgage in fee or for years. In 1812, after the testator's death, the tenant for life made a grant for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live; in 1814 he demised under his power for twenty-one years. In 1828, the executors mortgaged for 1,000 years under their power:—Held, that the leasing power under the will was not suspended by the lease of 1812, so far as regarded the grantee of the term under the power to demise by way of mortgage given to the executors, and consequently that such grantee had the immediate reversion in him, and might sue on the covenant in the lease of 1814. Bringloe v. Goodson, 6 Scott, 502; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 726; 1 Arn. 322; 8 L. J., C. P. 116.

The benefit of a covenant to repair in a joint demise by tenants in common runs with the entire reversion only, and therefore the representatives of all the tenants in common must join in suing for a breach. Thompson v. Hakewell, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 713; 35 L. J., C. P. 18, 13 L. T. 909; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 732; 14 W. R. 11.

Where a reversion in one person is devised to several as tenants in common, each has a separate right of action for breach of a covenant running with the land. Roberts v. Holland, 62 L. J., Q. B. 621; [1893] 1 Q. B. 665; 5 R. 370; 41 W. R. 494.

Where there are mutual covenants by owners of land, their heirs and assigns, with the owners of adjoining land, their heirs and assigns, to comply with certain stipulations, the subsequent lessee of one of the owners is entitled to the benefit of the covenants as an assign, and can sue to restrain a breach. Tuite v. Gosling, 48 L. J., Ch. 397; 11 Ch. D. 273; 40 L. T. 251; 27 W. R. 394.

See Cardwell v. Lucas, ante, col. 1075.

—— What sufficient Allegation of Title.]—Where the assignee of the reversion, who sued the defendant, alleged that the lessor was seised (without stating of what estate), and being so seised, devised to the plaintiff in fee, it is a sufficient allegation of title after verdict. Harris v. Beavan, 4 Bing. 646; 1 M. & P. 633; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 149.

Actions against.]—Under an absolute assignment of a term, the assignee may be sued on the covenants, before he has taken actual possession. Walker v. Reeves, 2 Dougl. 461, n.

An action of covenant for non-payment of rent lies against an assignee of a lease, to whom an assignment is made by way of mortgage security although he has never entered, or taken actual possession. Williams v. Bosanquet, 3 Moore, 500 ; 1 Br. & B. 238 ; 21 R. R. 585.

The assignee of a term declared against as such is not liable for rent accruing after he has assigned over, though it is stated that the lessor was a party executing the assignment, and agreed thereby that the term, which was determinable at his option, should be absolute. Chancellor v. Poole, 2 Dougl. 764.

A trustee to whom two leases were assigned in trust for securing an annuity, saying to the occupier of one of the demised houses, "You must pay the rent to me ; I am become landlord for my client, who has the annuity, and you must pay the ground-rents for me ; " is liable to the lessor, as assignee of both leases, for non-payment of rent and not repairing. Gretton v. Diggles, 4 Taunt. 766 ; 14 R. R. 662.

A plea in abatement, by a defendant sued in covenant as the assignee of a lease, that the right and interest in the premises vested in him jointly with another person therein named, is bad, for not showing how the premises came into the joint possession of himself and that person. Heath v. Livingston, 1 D. & L 334 ; 11 M. & W. 896 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 432 ; 7 Jur. 934.

The lessees of a theatre, by a deed agreed to pay certain money lent to them by the plaintiff, on a certain day, and that until payment the plaintiff, and such persons as he might appoint, should have the free use of two boxes in the theatre, one in the dress circle, and one in the circle above, no specific boxes being mentioned. The lessees afterwards assigned their interest in the theatre to the defendant :—Held, that this was a mere personal contract, and that no action could be maintained against the assignee for refusing to permit the plaintiff to use the boxes in the theatre. Flight v. Glossop, 2 Scott, 220 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 125; 1 Hodges, 263 ; 4 L. J., C. P. 268.

Action against the assignee of the lessee for the non-payment of rent : plea. that before the rent became due, he assigned all his estate and interest in the premises to A. and B.; replication, that in and by the indenture, the lessee, for himself, his executors, administrators, and assigns, covenanted that he, his executors or administrators, should not assign the premises without the consent of the lessor, and that no consent was given :—Held. first, that the replication was bad, inasmuch as the covenant of the lessee not to assign did not estop the assignee from the setting up the assignment ; and, secondly, that the action being founded on privity of estate, the liability of the assignee ceased as soon as the privity of estate was destroyed. Paul v. Nurse, 8 B. & C. 486 ; 2 M. & Ry. 525 ; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 12.

Where it appears on the face of a lease, as set out in a declaration, in an action on the covenant for rent, that the lessor has only an equitable interest, the covenant for the payment of the rent may be properly treated as a covenant in gross. Pargeter v. Harris, 7 Q. B. 708 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 113 ; 10 Jur. 260.

A., by an indenture, executed by himself and B., assigned to B. premises, subject to the payment of the rent, and to the performance of the covenants and agreements reserved and contained in the original lease. B. entered under this assignment, and afterwards assigned over to a third person :—Held, that B. was not liable to A. for rent which the latter had been called upon to pay, in consequence of the default of B.'s assignee : the words "subject to the payment of the rent, &c." being words of qualification and not of contract. Wolveridge v. Steward, 3 M. & Scott, 561 ; 1 C. & M. 644; 3 Tyr. 637 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 303 ; 3 L. J.. Ex. 360.

An action lies against the assignee of a lessee of an estate for part of the rent, as in such case the action is brought on a real contract in respect of the land, and not on a personal contract ; and in case of eviction the rent may be apportioned. Aliter in an action against the lessee himself, who is liable on his personal contract. Stevenson v. Lambard, 2 East, 575 ; 6 R. R. 511.

A covenant for renewal is in itself a mere personal contract, and at law the only remedy which lies for the breach of it is a personal action ; but a substantive, independent covenant binds the covenantor and his representative, in respect of the assets transmitted. Chandos (Duchess) v. Brownlow, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 405.

By 32 H. 8, c. 34 ; 10 Car. 1, c. 4, s. 2, it is now clearly settled, that to charge any person in covenant as an assignee, 1st, the covenant must relate to the land demised, and 2nd, there must be a privity of estate between the assignee and the covenantee, and if he is to be charged as assignee of the lessee, he must have in him the whole term and interest of the lessee. So, if the subject-matter of a covenant running with the land has existence at the time of the demise, the assignee is bound, though he be not named ; but a covenant in a lease can only affect assignee claiming subsequent to the lease. Ib.

If a lessee comes into equity to compel a specific execution of a covenant in a lease, as running with the estate of the reversioner, he must show that the defendant is personally liable at law, in respect of the covenant and of his estate. Ib.

The owners of a freehold property, on a sale of a plot of land to the plaintiff, covenanted with him not to allow any house built on the adjoining land to be used for the sale of liquor. They afterwards sold another plot to a person who granted a lease to the defendant, such lease purporting to allow the defendant to carry on the trade of a vendor of wines and spirits and bottled ale. The defendant at the date of his lease knew of the existence of the former covenant. The defendant having commenced to carry on the sale of wines, &c. :—Held, that an assign with notice was in the same position as a party to the covenant, and that, therefore, the court would not require substantial damages to be shown before granting an injunction to restrain a breach. Richards v. Revett, 47 L. J., Ch. 472 ; 7 Ch. D. 224 ; 37 L. T. 632 ; 26 W. R. 506.

An assignee of land with notice of a covenant is subject to the same measure of relief as if he had been party to the covenant, and the covenantee suing on breach of the covenant is no more bound to prove substantial damage in one case than in the other. Ib.

3. Pleadings.

a. Venue.

Where there are several facts material to the plaintiff's action arising in different counties, an action of covenant may be brought in either. London Corporation v. Cole, 7 Term Rep. 583.

In an action on a covenant by the assignee of the lessee of a term, the action is local, and the venue must be laid in the county where the lands are situated. Berwick Corporation v. Shanks, 11 Moore, 372; 3 Bing. 459; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 152.

b. Claim.

What sufficient.]—A defendant covenanted that he would pay over the first fruits and proceeds, which should be first realized and be at his disposition under a sequestration, forthwith upon the receipt thereof, to the plaintiff. In an action upon the covenant, the declaration stated, that, although divers first fruits and proceeds were realized, and at the defendant's disposition, yet he had not paid them over:—Held, sufficient, and that it was not necessary to aver a receipt of them by the defendant. Smith v. Nesbitt, 2 C. B. 286; 15 L. J., C. P. 9.

A. and B., lessees of a coal mine, A. being also lessee in trust for himself and B. of land adjoining, necessary for the working of the mine, covenanted with C. that they would do nothing whereby an annuity, charged (with power of entry upon the mine, and sale, in case the annuity should be in arrear) upon the profits which, after payment of the rent charged thereon, might be made under the leases of the mine and land, by the sale of the coal or otherwise, may be impeached. In an action on the covenant, C. assigned as breaches—first, that A. surrendered the land, and took a new lease to himself and B. jointly, in trust for other persons, whereby the annuity became and was impeached, and the plaintiff lost his remedies to enforce it; secondly, that A. and B. accepted a new lease of the land, at an increased rent, and, in other respects, upon less advantageous terms, for the fraudulent purpose of obtaining from the lessor a demise of mines under the land upon terms advantageous to A. and B. whereby the annuity became and was impeached; and thirdly, that A. and B. assigned such neighbouring mine and the land to D., whereby the annuity became and was impeached:—Held, that the declaration was insufficient, for not showing in what manner the acts complained of operated to impeach the annuity. Pitt v. Williams, 4 N. & M. 412; 2 A. & E. 419; 4 L. J., K. B. 131. See S. C., 5 A. & E. 885.

In an action on a covenant, to do no act whereby an annuity charged upon the profits of a coal mine shall be impeached, it is no ground of demurrer that the declaration does not allege that any profits have been made. Ib.

The reversion of lands demised to the defendant for years is conveyed to A. and B., and the heirs of B., in trust for A. and his heirs; A. declares singly on a covenant contained in the lease, and after setting out the above title, without averring the death of B., states himself to be "thereby seised of the reversion in his demesne as of fee." This is bad on general demurrer. Scott v. Godwin, 1 Bos. & P. 67.

In an action on a lease, it is sufficient if the declaration sets out the legal operation and effect of the demise. Wilson v. Bramhall, 1 Y. & J. 2.

A declaration alleging, that by indenture, purporting to be made between the plaintiff and defendant, it was witnessed that the defendant covenanted, is sufficiently certain. Baymon v. Batley, 8 Bing. 256; 1 M. & Scott, 339; 1 L. J., C. P. 75.

What a Variance.]—By deed it was covenanted that the defendant should obtain a licence from the lord of the manor, and should grant a lease to the plaintiff, and that such lease should contain a covenant that the defendant would, during the term, repair the premises demised, and that, till such licence was obtained and such lease granted, the plaintiff should hold the premises as tenant from year to year, subject to the terms and conditions specified. In an action upon the deed, the plaintiff, in his declaration, set out the covenant that the defendant should obtain the licence and grant the lease, and the proposed covenant to repair; and alleged that the parties further covenanted, that, till the licence should be obtained and the lease granted, the plaintiff should be considered as tenant from year to year, and that whilst the plaintiff should be possessed of the premises as tenant from year to year, under the provisions of the deed, the defendant should repair the premises:—Held, no variance. Price v. Birch, 4 Man. & G. 1; 1 D. (N.S) 720; 11 L. J., C. P. 198.

A declaration alleged that the defendant covenanted that he and all persons claiming under him would, upon request, and at the expense of the defendant, execute all such further assurances as might be required. It appeared by the deed when produced, that the covenant was, that the defendant "would, upon the request and at the expense of the defendant, execute," &c.:—Held, a variance. Whyte v. Burnby, 16 L. J., Q. B. 156.

A declaration in an action on a covenant for the assignment of a share in stock, professed to set out the covenant, and described it as a covenant to assign a certain sum of 2,000*l.* The defendant set out the deed, and demurred as for a variance, that the covenant was to assign stock, not money:—Held, to be no variance. Ross v. Parker, 2 D. & R. 662; 1 B. & C. 358.

In an action against a surety in an annuity bond, who had become bound to pay in twenty-eight days from the time specified for payment by the grantor, in case of failure by the latter, the declaration by mistake stated that the payment had become due from the surety on the day on which it had become due only from the principal:—Held, that as the bond and covenant were upon the whole set forth with sufficient certainty to prevent any reasonable mistake as to the ground of action, the inconsistent allegation might be rejected as surplusage. Hearn v. Cole, 1 Dow, 459, 463.

One may declare in an action that the deed was indented, made, and concluded on a day subsequent to the day on which the deed itself is stated on the face of it to have been indented, made and concluded. Hall v. Cazenove, 4 East, 477; 1 Smith, 272; 7 R. R. 611. And see Mayelston v. Palmerston (Viscount), M. & M. 6; 2 Car. & P. 474.

A declaration stated that the defendant covenanted to pay a certain sum of money at a certain time. Upon oyer, the covenant appeared to be to pay the money at that time, and also at a particular place. The defendant demurred, and assigned the variance as a cause of demurrer:—Held, that there was no material variance. Paine v. Emery, 4 D. P. C. 191; 1 Gale, 266; 5 Tyr. 1097; 2 C. M. & R. 304; 4 L. J., Ex. 250.

Where a declaration in an action by the reversioner against A., the assignee of a lease for years (granting licence to B. to continue a channel open through the bank of a navigable river, upon certain conditions), imported that the grantors had the entire right and absolute possession of the channel, and full power to grant the use of it to B., and it appeared from the indenture that they were described merely as the persons who had the greatest proportion or share in the profits of the navigation, and that they, by virtue of all or any powers and authorities vesting in or enabling them, granted the licence to B., his executors, administrators and assigns: —Held, that this was a variance, as the grantors had not the privilege which the deed, as set out in the declaration, purported to grant. Portmore (Earl) v. Bunn, 3 D. & R. 145; 1 B. & C. 694; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 196.

Declaration against a defendant as assignee of "all the estate," &c., in certain premises; evidence, that he is assignee of part, is a variance. Hare v. Cator, Cowp. 766.

Where a declaration stated the consideration to be that the plaintiff would assign to the defendant a bill of exchange, and that he did assign it to the defendant, and a promise by the latter accordingly, and it was proved that the parties had agreed that the plaintiff should give up the bill to the defendant, the latter, however, paying over the proceeds to the plaintiff; and in pursuance of the agreement, the plaintiff by deed assigned to the defendant the bill, and all sums of money due thereon, for the defendant's own use: and the defendant covenanted to pay the plaintiff a sum equal to any money he should receive on account of the bill:—Held, that as the declaration imported that the plaintiff had made an absolute assignment of the bill, and as the assignment in evidence was conditional only, it was a variance. Van Sandau v. Burt, 5 B. & Ald. 42.

—— In Statement of Consideration.] — A declaration alleged a deed to have been made for considerations therein mentioned; the deed itself contained only one (a pecuniary consideration) :—no variance. Gully v. Exeter (Bishop), 12 Moore, 591; 4 Bing. 290; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 178; 29 R. R. 565.

A declaration stated, that by an indenture it was witnessed that, as well in consideration of certain furnaces to be erected by the plaintiff, B. did demise. The defendant pleaded non est factum. On producing the deed, it appeared to be, that as well in consideration of the erection of the furnaces, "as also for building certain houses and payment of rent, B. did demise":— Held, a variance. Swallow v. Beaumont, 2 B. & Ald. 765; 1 Chit. 518.

—— In Description of Parties.]—In an action on a lease for not repairing, the instrument was described in the declaration to be made by the plaintiff of the one part, and the defendant of the other. On the production of the lease, it appeared to have been made by the plaintiff and his wife of the one part, and the defendant of the other:—Held, no variance, although the premises demised were the property of the wife before marriage. Arnould v. Revoult, 4 Moore, 66; 1 Br. & B. 433.

A declaration on a lease which stated that the plaintiffs derived their titles from two lessors only, and that two other lessors, who were also parties to the demise, had no interest therein, was supported by the production of the lease, which appeared to be a demise by the four. Wood v. Day, 1 Moore, 389; 7 Taunt. 646.

In an action against a mortgagor, a statement that the defendant bound himself, his heirs, executors, &c., is no variance, though the word "heirs" was not mentioned in the covenant. Hamborough v. Wilkie, 1 Chit. 518; 4 M. & S. 474, n.

What Sufficient Allegation of Breach.] — Action, upon an indenture, whereby the defendant demised to the plaintiffs, for ten years, a brewery at S., and, also, the exclusive or such other privilege as the defendant then enjoyed, of "supplying ale" to certain public houses, "then the property of the defendant, or then under his control, that is to say, the Punch Bowl." The declaration averred, that, at the time of making the indenture, the defendant was the landlord and owner of the Punch Bowl, and in the occupation thereof, and that afterwards he demised it to G., who covenanted with the defendant to purchase all the ale consumed on the premises from the plaintiff. Breach, that G., during his tenancy of the Punch Bowl, did not purchase all the ale from the plaintiff, but purchased it from the defendant and others:— Held, that this breach was not well assigned, and, also, that the declaration should have shown what privilege the defendant possessed. Hinde v. Gray, 1 Man. & G. 195; 1 Scott (N.R.) 123; 9 L. J., C. P. 253; 4 Jur. 392.

In an action on a covenant to allow a business to be carried on in a certain shop, a breach that the defendant improperly shut up the shop is sufficient, without alleging that the shop was shut up at unreasonable or improper times. Hodges v. Gray, 4 D. P. C. 733.

In a declaration on a covenant to "save harmless and keep indemnified W., his heirs and assigns, and also certain closes, &c., from and against all actions, suits, claims and demands whatsoever, both in law and equity, which should or might be had, made, commenced or prosecuted by any person or persons claiming any right, title or demand in, to or upon the closes, as heir at law of H. P. and others, of and from all costs, charges and expenses which W. should sustain or be put to, for or by reason or means of such actions, suits, claims or demands, or otherwise howsoever;" to which the breaches assigned were, first, that P. made claim and demand, and claimed to have right and title of, in, to and upon the closes, and entered into and upon the same, and cut down grass, and felled trees there growing, and converted them to his own use; and secondly, that he caused and procured, and suffered and permitted, one B., who then held and enjoyed the closes, to attorn to him, and to withhold the payment of the rents, issues and profits; and thirdly, that certain title deeds relating to the closes, were kept, detained and withholden by one A., at the instance, and through the means, and by and through the claim and demand of T. B., W. P., &c.:—Held, after the defendant had pleaded over, that these breaches were well assigned on the covenant declared upon. Fowle v. Welsh, 2 D. & R. 133; 1 B. & C. 29; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 17; 25 R. R. 291. And see Nash v. Palmer, 5 M. & S. 374; 17 R. R. 364.

The defendant purchased an estate charged with an annuity to S., and, as part of the bargain, covenanted to pay the annuity, and to indemnify the vendor against any charge in respect of it. Breach, in a declaration on this covenant, assigning non-payment of the annuity, without adding that the vendor had been thereby damnified, is sufficient. Saward v. Anstey, 2 Bing. 519 ; 10 Moore, 55 : 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 63. Affirmed, 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 1.

A declaration stated, that, by deed, the defendant covenanted that he would appear at an office for the insurance of lives within London, or the bills of mortality, and answer such questions as might be asked respecting his age, &c., in order to enable the plaintiff to insure his life, and would not afterwards do, or permit to be done, any act whereby such insurance should be avoided or prejudiced. It alleged, that the defendant, in part performance of his covenant, did, at the plaintiff's request, appear at the office of the Rock Life Insurance Company, and did answer certain questions asked of him ; and that the plaintiff insured the defendant's life with that company, by a policy containing a proviso that if the defendant went beyond the limits of Europe the policy should be null and void. Breach, that the defendant went beyond the limits of Europe, to wit, to the province of Canada, in North America :—Held, that the declaration was bad, for not averring that the defendant had notice that the policy was affected. Vyse v. Wakefield, 6 M. & W. 442 ; 8 D. P. C. 377 ; 4 Jur. 509 Affirmed, in error, 7 M. & W. 126 ; 8 D. P. C. 912 ; 9 L. J., Ex. 274 ; 4 Jur. 611.

Action upon a deed, in which it was recited, in effect, that the defendant had accepted securities from B., which were to be valid upon the advance of money by the defendant to B., and void upon the repayment of the same by B. to the defendant ; and that the defendant had, after taking the securities, but before making the deed, advanced 269*l.* to B., and that the money had not been repaid at the time of making the deed ; and that, in order to induce the plaintiff, in his turn, to advance money to the defendant, the defendant, by the deed, assigned to the plaintiff the securities which he held from B. ; and in which the defendant covenanted, that he had neither done nor omitted, at any time, any act by which the securities, or any estate or interest therein, should or might be in any manner affected, and that 269*l.* remained, at the time of making the deed, due upon the securities to the defendant. The breach alleged was, that the defendant never made any advances to B. upon the securities, nor was the sum of 269*l.*, or any part of it, owing to the defendant at the time of making the deed :—Held, that the breach was well assigned, and that the plaintiff was not estopped from denying that the defendant had made any advance ; for, as this fact was material for the validity to the plaintiff of the securities on which he advanced his money to the defendant, and as he took the covenant of the defendant to secure to him the truth of that fact, the true construction of the indenture was, that the recital in question was intended by the parties to be the statement of the covenantor only. Stronghill v. Buck, 14 Q. B. 781 ; 14 Jur. 741.

c. Defence and Replication.

Non est factum.]—Where a defendant sets out the deed, and pleads non est factum, the deed so set out becomes part of the declaration, and the only question at the trial upon that issue is, whether the deed set out was executed by the defendant. Snell v. Snell, 7 D. & R. 294 ; 4 B. & C. 741 ; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 44.

Where a deed is pleaded according to its supposed legal effect, non est factum (the deed not being set out on oyer) not only puts in issue the fact of its execution, but the construction of it, as alleged in the previous pleading. North v. Wakefield, 13 Q. B. 536 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 214.

Permission.]—Where to an action on a bond, which contained a condition that the defendant should not open a shop within a certain distance of premises demised in a lease, he pleaded that he opened a shop, by the licence of the plaintiff :—Held, bad, on the ground that a licence after breach was not good unless by deed. Sellers v. Brikford, 1 Moore, 460.

Traverse of Breach.]—The defendant covenanted with the plaintiff to use his best endeavours, and all due diligence, to forward certain works, so that the works should be completed in as short a time as practicable. To a declaration, alleging as a breach that the defendant did not nor would use his best endeavours, or due or any diligence to forward the works, so that the same might be completed in as short a time as practicable, a plea that he did use his best endeavours, and all due diligence to forward the works, so that the same might be completed in as short a time as practicable, but by causes wholly beyond his control, and without any default on his part, he was hindered and prevented from forwarding the works, is good, as a traverse of the breach. Vickers v. Overend, 7 H. & N. 92 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 388.

Performance pleaded otherwise than in the terms of the covenant itself is bad, even on general demurrer. Scuddamore v. Stratton, 1 Bos. & P. 455.

Non infregit conventionem cannot be pleaded where a plaintiff assigns a breach without setting forth the particulars of the title of a third person. adding, "and so the defendant did not keep his covenant." Hodgson v. East India Co., 8 Term Rep. 278.

Non infregit conventionem is not an issuable plea to a breach of covenant assigned in the negative. Bone v. Eyre, 2 W. B. 1312. S. C., nom. Boone v. Eyre, 1 H. Bl. 273, n.; 2 R. R. 768.

If a plaintiff assigned as a breach that the defendant did not repair, a plea that the defendant did not break his covenant was bad, on special demurrer, although the declaration concluded by averring that so the defendant has broken his covenant ; but it was good after verdict. Taylor v. Needham, 2 Taunt. 278 ; 11 R. R. 572.

Tender.]—Upon a bare covenant for the payment of money the defendant may plead a tender. Johnson v. Clay, 7 Taunt. 486 ; 1 Moore, 200.

Judgment.]—Where two out of three joint covenantors suffer judgment by default on counts on several deeds, and the third defends and succeeds on some counts, the plaintiff cannot hold his judgment on those counts against the other two. Morgan v. Edwards, 6 Taunt. 398 ; 2 Marsh. 201.

Acquiescence.]—Acquiescence in a breach of covenant not attended with substantial damage will not bar the right to restrain a subsequent breach so attended. Western v. M'Dermot, 35 L. J., Ch. 190 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 366. Affirmed, 36 L. J., Ch. 76 ; L. R. 2 Ch. 72 ; 15 L. T. 64 ; 15 W. R. 265.

The court will grant an injunction to restrain

Where a lessee, who has entered into a restrictive covenant as to user of premises, underlets to a person who, with his sanction, commits a breach of the covenant, he may properly be made a party to a suit for an injunction, and is liable for the costs. Ib.

Acquiescence in the violation of a covenant to a certain extent:—Held, a sufficient objection to an interlocutory application for an injunction against a greater violation of it. Child v. Douglas, 5 De G. M. & G. 739.

Where on a motion for an injunction to restrain an alleged breach of covenant the question in dispute appeared doubtful:—Held, that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to show that the balance of convenience was in favour of granting the injunction. Ib.

Where land was acquired from a corporation upon the terms that any lease of it must contain a covenant against its use for the sale of meat, and the corporation acquiesced in the building of houses upon the land, knowing that they were being built for the purpose of being let as butchers' shops:—Held, that the corporation could not enforce the restrictive covenant. London (Corporation) v. Sandon, 26 L. T. 86.

Where all the purchasers of an estate were bound by restrictive covenants not to use their houses otherwise than as private residences, and the vendor had given permission to one of the purchasers to open a school in his house, this was held not to be a waiver of the covenant as to another purchaser whose house was at some distance. German v. Chapman, 47 L. J., Ch. 250; 7 Ch. D. 271; 37 L. T. 685; 26 W. R. 149.

Other Defences.]—A declaration stated that, by a deed of the 20th July, 1825, between the plaintiff; E., the defendant's testator; and W.; E., for himself, his executors, &c., covenanted with the plaintiff to pay to W. 1,200*l.* Breach, non-payment by E. in his lifetime, or by the defendant, as his executor, to the plaintiff or W. The defendant pleaded, first, non est factum; and in the second plea set out the deed. In this deed it was stated that, by a mortgage, dated the 12th April, 1825, W. had become mortgagee of the premises to the plaintiff for 1,200*l.*, with a proviso, that if the plaintiff should, within six months after the demand of payment of the 1,200*l.* (such demand to be in writing, but not to be good or valid unless made after the 12th April, 1828), pay to W. 1,200*l.* and interest, W. would assign the premises to the plaintiff. The deed declared on then stated that, for the considerations therein mentioned, the plaintiff sold to E., his executors, &c., the premises for the residue of the term, subject to the mortgage to W., of the 12th of April, 1825, and to the payment of 1,200*l.* thereby secured, and interest. The plea then alleged that, after the breaches in the declaration, on the 24th October, 1825, the plaintiff became bankrupt; that the plaintiff obtained his certificate; and that the 1,200*l.* became payable by the plaintiff to W. before the bankruptcy of the plaintiff. The third plea stated that the deed declared on was the same as that set forth in the second plea; it then set out the proviso and covenant contained in the mortgage of the 12th April, 1825, and alleged that no demand in writing of payment of the 1,200*l.* had been given to the plaintiff. These pleas having been demurred to:—Held, that the declaration was good. Trott v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 688; 13 L. J., Ex. 178.

Held, secondly, that the 1,200*l.* was not due until after six months' demand in writing, subsequent to the 12th April, 1828; and that the second plea was a sufficient answer as to the principal of 1,200*l.* Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the interest on the 1,200*l.* being payable absolutely and not on demand, the plea which was pleaded to the interest as well as to the principal, being bad in part, was bad altogether and that the same objection applied to the first special plea. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the first plea was bad, as it negatived, on the face of it, any possibility of interest in the covenant on the part of the plaintiff's assignees, and therefore that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to reply that fact. Ib.

Where there are mutual covenants, one cannot be pleaded in bar of the other. Bone v. Eyre, supra.

Replication.]—Declaration by A., the surviving lessor in a lease for years, granted by A., B., and C., to the defendant, on a covenant to repair and leave in repair, assigning breaches in not repairing, and in not leaving in repair at the end of the term. Plea, that A., B., and C., from the time of making the demise until the death of B., and A. and C. afterwards, had a reversion for a longer term of years expectant on the lease: and that after B.'s death, and before any breach of covenant, A. and C. assigned such reversion to D., and thenceforward ceased to have any reversion in the premises. Replication, that A., B. and C. were not, until the death of B., nor were A. and C. afterwards, possessed of the reversion in the premises, is bad, as being a departure from the declaration. Green v. James, 6 M. & W. 656; 10 L. J., Ex. 73.

4. Evidence.

Description of Premises in Lease.]—If a lease describes the demised land as meadow land, no other evidence is necessary to prove that it was meadow land at the commencement of the term. Birch v. Stevenson, 3 Taunt. 469; 12 R. R. 679.

Under Defence of Non est factum.]—A fraudulent misrepresentation of the legal effect of a deed by which a party is induced to execute it, cannot be given in evidence under non est factum. Edwards v. Brown, 1 Tyr. 182; 1 C. & J. 307; 3 Y. & J. 423; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 84.

A, by deed, covenanted to pay B a sum of money on a certain day Such deed also contained an assignment by A to B of certain goods as per schedule In an action brought for a breach of the covenant for the non payment of the money, and non est factum pleaded —Held that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to produce the schedule referred to in proof of his case Dains v Heath, 3 C B 938, 16 L J, C P 117, 11 Jur 185

Extension of Time within which Work is to be Done]—A plaintiff covenanted to build two houses for 500*l* by a certain day, and averred in an action, that the houses were built in the time evidence that the time had been enlarged by parol agreement, and the houses finished within the enlarged time did not support the declaration Littler v Holland 3 Term Rep 590 See Bailey v Homan, 3 Bing (N C) 915, 5 Scott, 94, 3 Hodges, 184

Covenant by a lessee of a house that he would use his best endeavours to continue it open as a public licensed victualling house, and to increase its trade, and that he would not remove the trade or the licence to any other public house Breach, that he did not use his best endeavours to continue the house open as a public licensed victualling house, but allowed it to be discontinued and the licence to be removed The plea was only that the defendant did use his best endeavours to continue the house open and to increase the trade according to the covenant After the lease was granted, in consequence of complaints of irregularities in the conduct of it by the tenant, the licence was taken away by the magistrates, and from that time till the lease expired the house had not been licensed —Held, that it lay on the defendant to show that he did some act after the licence was taken away, such as applying for a rehearing of the case, or some other act endeavouring to obtain the continuance of the licence, and to get the house open again Lander v Pryor, 8 Car & P 518

5 Measure of Damages.

To Pay off Incumbrances]—A party, by a settlement made on his marriage, conveyed estates upon certain trusts, and covenanted with the trustees to pay off incumbrances on the estates, to the amount of 19,000*l*, within a year —Held, that on his failing to do so, the trustees were entitled to recover the whole 19,000*l*., though no special damage was laid or proved. Lethbridge v. Mytton, 2 B. & Ad. 773; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K.B. 330.

To Pay Amount of Promissory Note]—The plaintiff as surety joined the defendant in a promissory note and the defendant by deed covenanted with the plaintiff to pay him the amount of the note on a day certain the note not having been paid —Held, in an action on the covenant, that the measure of damages was the amount of the note though it remained unpaid Loosemore v Radford, 9 M & W 657 1 D (N S) 881 11 L J, Ex 284

When Unliquidated Sum]—In an action of covenant, the jury is not restricted to giving nominal damages, though no actual damage naturally arising from the breach is proved Hoy v Wyche, 2 G & D 569 12 L J, Q B 85 6 Jur 559

A covenant by a defendant, that the debts of a firm in which the defendant was about to be admitted as a partner did not exceed a specific sum, and that if they did the defendant would pay on demand of the plaintiff, the sum by which the debts might exceed the specific amount is a covenant for an unliquidated sum Waller v Broadhurst 8 Ex 889, 23 L J Ex 71

Held that it was properly left to the jury to say what loss the plaintiff had sustained by a breach of the covenant by the defendant Ib

Of Ship's Husband to take in Cargo]—A ship's husband covenanted that his ship should at one port take in brandy and convey it to another port, and there receive a cargo of fruit, which the freighters of the ship covenanted to supply He did not take the brandy and the freighters did not furnish a full homeward cargo for which he recovered damages against them They afterwards brought an action against his widow and representative to recover damages for the breach of his covenant —Held, that they could not recover in any shape, in that action, either the damages they had paid or the costs they had incurred in defending the former action, although they were prevented from obtaining the homeward cargo by the neglect of the ship's husband in not taking in the brandy Walton v Fothergill, 7 Car & P 392

That Defendant had not Encumbered]—In an action on a covenant that the defendant had done no act to encumber, contained in a conveyance of land by the defendant to the plaintiff, for a consideration of 150*l* —Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the whole amount due upon an outstanding mortgage, although it exceeded the purchase money and interest, and the mortgage included other lands sufficient in value to satisfy it Connell v Boulton, 2 Upp Can L J (N S) 240

6 Restraining Actions

Jurisdiction by injunction upon ground of vexation by repeated actions for breach of covenant Waters v Taylor, 2 Ves & B 302, 13 R R 91

By an award a plaintiff was directed to pay a gross sum and interest to the defendant by instalments, and if the plaintiff made default in payment, he should forthwith execute a mortgage of certain property to the defendant for the whole amount and interest Default was made, and after some negotiation, it was agreed that the residue of the sum should be paid by instalments other than those stated in the award, and that a deed embodying such new stipulations, and also a mortgage, should be prepared At the time of the execution of the deed, the plaintiff found that, by its terms, another sum of 100*l* was proposed to be added to the amount secured, and a proviso was to be inserted that in default of payment of any instalment the whole of the amount secured might immediately become payable, with a covenant by the plaintiff that, in default of payment of any instalment, he would on demand pay the whole amount and interest The plaintiff alleged that he signed the deed on the verbal assurance that this proviso and covenant should not be strictly enforced The deed was executed containing the new stipulations with a proviso and covenant to the effect above mentioned —Held that the proviso and covenant were inequitable and that a court of equity would restrain the enforcement of them Sterne v Beck, 8 L T 344

1. AS TO STATE OF MIND.

Mens rea.]—The general rule of law is that a person cannot be convicted in a proceeding of a criminal nature unless it can be shown that he had a guilty mind. Though the legislature may enact that persons shall be criminally responsible for certain acts even though they have no guilty mind, yet it is for the prosecution to show that the legislature has in fact so enacted —per Field, J. Chisholm v. Doulton, 58 L. J., M. C. 133; 22 Q. B. D. 736; 60 L. T. 966; 37 W. R. 749; 16 Cox, C. C. 675; 53 J. P. 550.

As a general rule no penal consequences are incurred where there has been no personal neglect or default, and a mens rea is essential to an offence under a penal enactment, unless a contrary intention appears by express language or necessary inference. Dickinson v. Fletcher, 43 L. J., M. C. 25; L. R. 9 C. P. 1; 29 L. T. 540.

By a railway act it was enacted "that if any person shall do any act, matter, or thing to obstruct the free passage of the railway or any part thereof," he shall be liable to a penalty :—Held, that, to render a party liable, he must have intended to have committed the obstruction complained of. Batting v. Bristol and Exeter Ry., 3 L. T. 665; 9 W. R. 271.

It is a general principle of our criminal law that there must be, as an essential ingredient in a criminal offence, some blameworthy condition of mind. Sometimes it is negligence, sometimes malice, sometimes guilty knowledge—but as a general rule there must be something of that kind, which is designated by the expression mens rea—per Cave, J. Chisholm v. Doulton, supra.

A guilty knowledge on the part of the sender is necessary to render him liable under a railway act providing that he shall mark the nature of dangerous goods on the outside of the package under a penalty. Hearne v. Garton, 2 El. & El. 66; 28 L. J., M. C. 216; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 7 W. R. 566.

I do not think that the maxim as to the mens rea has so wide an application as it is sometimes considered to have. In old times, and as applicable to the common law or to earlier statutes, the maxim may have been of general application; but a difference has arisen owing to the greater precision of modern statutes. It is impossible now to apply the maxim generally to all statutes, and it is necessary to look at the object of each act to see whether and how far knowledge is of the essence of the offence created —per Stephen, J. Cundy v. Lecocq, 53 L. J., M. C. 125; 13 Q. B. D. 207; 51 L. T. 265; 32 W. R. 769; 48 J. P. 599.

By a colonial statute the sale or delivery of wool subject to a registered lien without the written consent of the lienee "with a view to defraud" is made a punishable offence; in words immediately following, the sale of cattle subject to a statutory mortgage without such written consent is made penal, and the words "with a view to defraud" are omitted. In an information for such sale of cattle the respondent was committed for trial, but the crown refused to prosecute. The respondent thereupon brought an action for malicious prosecution, in which he swore that he had obtained the verbal consent of the appellants; but this the appellants denied. The jury found a verdict in favour of the respondent, and awarded damages. The supreme court discharged a rule for a new trial or for a nonsuit or verdict for the appellants :—Held, that intent to defraud was not a necessary element in the statutory offence charged, that the order of the supreme court must be discharged, and a verdict for the appellants made absolute, with costs. Bank of New South Wales v. Piper, 66 L. J., P. C. 73; [1897] A. C. 383; 76 L. T. 572; 61 J. P. 660—P. C.

In order to convict the licensee of a public-house under sub-s. 2 of s. 16 of the Licensing Act, 1872, for serving a constable with liquor or refreshment while on duty, mens rea or knowledge on the part of the defendant that the constable was on duty must be proved. Sherras v. De Rutzen, 64 L. J., M. C. 218; [1895] 1 Q. B. 918; 15 R. 388; 72 L. T. 839; 43 W. R. 526; 18 Cox, C. C. 157; 59 J. P. 440.

Under clause 3 of s. 27 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, in order to constitute the offence of giving a false warranty in writing to a purchaser in respect of an article of food or drug, a mens rea on the part of the seller at the time when the warranty was given must be proved. Derbyshire v. Houliston, 66 L. J., Q. B. 569; [1897] 1 Q. B. 772; 76 L. T. 624; 45 W. R. 527; 61 J. P. 374.

Honest belief as to Legality of Act.]—The belief, though erroneous, of a prisoner in the existence of a right to do the act complained of excludes criminality. Reg. v. Twose, 14 Cox, C. C. 327.

The defendant was convicted under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 44, of receiving two or more lunatics into her house, not being a registered asylum or hospital, or a house duly licensed under the above act or under any previous act, but it was specially found by the jury who convicted, that though the persons so received were lunatic, the defendant honestly, and on reasonable grounds, believed they were not lunatic :—Held, that such belief was immaterial, and that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Bishop, 49 L. J., M. C. 45; 5 Q. B. D. 259; 42 L. T. 240; 28 W. R. 475; 14 Cox, C. C. 404; 44 J. P. 330.

The prisoner was convicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57, of bigamy, having gone through the ceremony of marriage within seven years after she had been deserted by her husband. The jury found that at the time of the second marriage she in good faith and on reasonable grounds believed her husband to be dead :—Held, by majority of the court, that a bonâ fide belief on reasonable grounds of the death of the husband at the time of the second marriage afforded a good defence to the indictment, and that the conviction was wrong. Reg. v. Tolson, 58 L. J., M. C. 97; 23 Q. B. D. 168; 60 L. T. 899; 37 W. R. 716; 16 Cox, C. C. 629; 54 J. P. 4—C. C. R.

A man was convicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55, of unlawfully taking an unmarried girl, under the age of sixteen, out of the possession and against the will of her father. It was proved that he did take the girl, and that she was under sixteen; but that he bonâ fide believed and had reasonable ground for believing that she was over sixteen :—Held, that the latter fact afforded no defence, and that he was rightly convicted. Reg. v. Prince, 44 L. J., M. C. 122; L. R. 2 C. C. 154; 32 L. T. 700; 24 W. R. 76; 13 Cox, C. C. 138.

Scienter.]—In a colliery certain horses were worked while suffering from raw wounds. T. was an owner, and S. was the certificated manager, but neither was proved to be present or to have any notice or knowledge of the state of the horses :—Held, that the justices were wrong in convicting S. of illtreating the horses under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, merely because he was certificated manager, and that some knowledge of the matter was an essential ingredient of that offence. Small v. Warr, 47 J. P. 20.

Delirium tremens.]—Drunkenness is no excuse, but delirium tremens caused by drinking, and differing from drunkenness, if it produces such a degree of madness, even for a time, as to render a person incapable of distinguishing right from wrong, relieves him from criminal responsibility. Reg. v. Davis, 14 Cox, C. C. 563.

Ignorance of Law.]—Ignorance of a statute is no excuse for the violation of its provisions. Reg. v. Crawshaw, Bell, C. C. 303; 30 L. J., M. C. 58; 3 L. T. 510; 9 W. R. 38; 8 Cox, C. C. 375.

A foreigner is therefore guilty of a crime committed by him in England, though he did not know he was doing wrong, and the act was not an offence in his own country. Rex v. Esop, 7 Car. & P. 456.

Where a prisoner was indicted for an offence on the high seas under a statute passed a few weeks before, and before notice could have reached the place where the offence was committed:—Held, that as he could not have been tried before the passing of the statute, and could not have heard of it, he ought to be pardoned. Rex v. Bailey, R. & R. 1.

See further, MAXIMS.

2. AGENTS.

Innocent Agent—Liability of Employer as Principal.]—If a man does, by means of an innocent agent, an act which amounts to a felony, the employer, and not the agent, is accountable for the act. Reg. v. Bleasdale, 2 Car. & K. 765.

Where two persons were indicted for making and engraving a plate for the purposes of forgery, and it was proved that one of them gave the order for the manufacture of the plate to an innocent agent, who never saw the other until it was completed:—Held, that they were both correctly charged as principals. Reg. v. Bull, 1 Cox, C. C. 281.

Where persons employ an innocent agent to engrave a plate, they may be indicted for the felony of engraving it. Reg. v. Mazeau, 9 Car. & P. 676.

Prisoner induced a child of the age of nine years to rob his father's till and give him the money. On his indictment as principal for this offence, it is a question for the jury whether the child was an innocent agent or particeps criminis; and if the latter, the prisoner must be acquitted. Reg. v. Manley, 1 Cox, C. C. 104.

If A., by letter, desires B., an innocent agent, to write the name of S. to a receipt on a post-office order, and the innocent agent does it, believing that he is authorised so to do, A. is a principal in this forgery, and it makes no difference, that, by the letter, A. says to B. that he is at liberty to sign the name of S., and does not in express words direct him to do so. Reg. v. Clifford, 2 Car. & K. 902.

The prisoner employed a die-sinker to make, for a pretended innocent purpose, a die calculated to make shillings. The die-sinker, suspecting fraud, informed the commissioners of the Mint, and, under their directions, made the die, for the purpose of detecting the prisoner:—Held, that the die-sinker was an innocent agent, and the prisoner rightly convicted as a principal under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 34, s. 10. Reg. v. Bannen, 2 M. C. C. 309; 1 Car. & K. 295.

Where a prisoner, charged with uttering a forged note to A., knowing it to be forged, gave forged notes to a boy who was ignorant of that fact, and directed him to pay away the note mentioned in the indictment at A.'s for the purchase of goods, and the boy did so, and brought back the goods and the change to the prisoner:—Held, that it was an uttering by the prisoner to A. Rex v. Giles, Car. C. L. 191; 1 M. C. C. 166.

B. was one of many persons employed whose wages were paid weekly at a pay-table. On one occasion when B.'s wages were due the prisoner said to a little boy, "I will give you a penny if you will go and get B.'s money." The boy went innocently to the pay-table, and said to the treasurer, "I am come for B.'s money"; and B.'s wages were given to him:—Held, that the prisoner might be convicted of obtaining the money by false pretences. Reg. v. Butcher, Bell, C. C. 6; 28 L. J., M. C. 14; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1155; 7 W. R. 38; 8 Cox, C. C. 77.

The prisoner, knowing that some old country banknotes were valueless, gave them to a man to pass, telling him to say, if asked about them, that he had taken them from a man he did not know:—Held, that the prisoner was guilty of obtaining the money by false pretences. Reg. v. Dowey, 37 L. J., M. C. 52; 17 L. T. 481; 16 W. R. 344; 11 Cox, C. C. 115.

A prisoner was indicted for the murder of her infant child by poison. She purchased a bottle of laudanum, and directed the person who had the care of the child to give it a teaspoonful every night. The person did not do so, but put the bottle on the mantelpiece, where another little child found it, and gave part of the contents to the prisoner's child, who soon after died:—Held, that the administering of the laudanum by the child was as much, in point of law, an administering by the prisoner, as if she herself had actually administered it with her own hand. Reg. v. Michael, 9 Car. & P. 356; 2 M. C. C. 120.

Onus of Proof that Agent innocent.]—Where agents appear to have acted in good faith, and the prisoner relies on their being guilty, and therefore principals in the felony, the onus is on him to prove it. Reg. v. Valler, 1 Cox, C. C. 84.

Possession by Agent.]—In order to convict a person charged on 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 34, s. 8, with having in his possession more than three pieces of counterfeit coin, with intent to utter them, it was not necessary that the possession should be an individual possession, but it was enough if the coin was in the possession of the person so charged, or his immediate agent. Reg. v. Williams, Car. & M. 259. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 1.

Concealment of Birth—Burial by Agent.]—See post, col. 1482, et seq.

Liability of Master for Acts of.]—The owner of works carried on for his benefit by his agents and servants, is liable to an indictment for a nuisance, resulting from the mode of carrying on the business, although such nuisance was committed in opposition to his orders, and without his knowledge, the proceedings by indictment in such case being criminal in form only. Reg. v. Stephens, 7 B. & S. 710; 35 L. J., Q. B. 251; L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 961; 14 L. T. 593; 14 W. R. 859.

B. was a person who kept fireworks contrary to the statute. In his absence a fire broke out by the negligence of his servants, and a rocket ignited, flew across the road and killed a person:—Held, that a conviction of manslaughter was wrong, as the death was caused by the servant's negligence. Reg. v. Bennett, Bell, C. C. 1; 28 L. J., M. C. 27; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1088; 7 W. R. 40; 8 Cox, C. C. 74.

3. Persons under Coercion and Compulsion.

a. Presumed Coercion of Wife.

When Crime Committed in Husband's Presence.]—A wife cannot commit larceny in the company of her husband, for it is deemed his coercion and not her voluntary act. Anon., 2 East, P. C. 559.

The law, out of tenderness to the wife, if a felony is committed in the presence of the husband, raises a presumption primâ facie, and primâ facie only, that it was done under his coercion. Rex v. Hughes, 2 Lewin, C. C. 229.

A wife went from house to house uttering base coin. Her husband accompanied her, but remained outside:—Held, that the wife acted under the husband's coercion. Conolly's Case, 2 Lewin, C. C. 229.

Husband and wife were jointly tried upon an indictment charging them with feloniously wounding, with intent to disfigure. The jury found that the wife, at the time of the commission of the offence, acted under the coercion of her husband, and that she herself did not personally inflict any violence:—Held, that she could not be convicted. Reg. v. Smith, Dear. & B. C. C. 553; 27 L. J., M. C. 204; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 395; 6 W. R. 471; 8 Cox, C. C. 27.

If larceny is committed jointly by husband and wife, the latter is entitled to be acquitted, as she must be presumed to be under his coercion and control. Rex v. Knight, 1 Car. & P. 116.

Husband and wife were jointly indicted for a misdemeanor in uttering counterfeit coin:—Held, that the wife was entitled to an acquittal, as it appeared that she uttered the money in the presence of her husband. Rex v. Price, 8 Car. & P. 19.

But on an indictment against a married woman for falsely swearing herself to be next of kin, and procuring administration:—Held, that she might be guilty, although her husband was with her when she took the oath. Rex v. Dicks, 1 Russ. C. & M. 147.

Joint Commission of Crime—Absence of Wife—Marital Compulsion.]—The fact that the parties charged with a crime are married does not form a presumption of compulsion by the husband, and no such presumption arises where a woman procures and contrives the commission of an offence committed by the husband in her absence. Brown v. Att-Gen. of New Zealand, 67 L. J., P. C. 7; 77 L. T. 414—P. C.

Larceny—Possession of Goods—Question for Jury.]—Where goods are found in the house of a married man and such possession is proved as evidence of larceny, they must be considered in his possession and not in possession of his wife, unless she says something that implicates herself, in which case it is a question for the jury as to whose possession the goods were. Reg. v. Banks, 1 Cox, C. C. 238.

Receiving Stolen Goods.]—A wife cannot be convicted of feloniously receiving goods stolen by her husband. Reg. v. Brooks, Dear. C. C. 184; 22 L. J., M. C. 121; 17 Jur. 400; 1 W. R. 313; 6 Cox, C. C. 148.

A wife, jointly with her husband, cannot be convicted of receiving stolen goods. Reg. v. Matthews, T. & M. 337; 1 Den. C. C. 596; 14 Jur. 513; 4 Cox, C. C. 214.

Where both were found guilty on a joint indictment, the conviction of the husband affirmed, that of the wife quashed. Ib.

—— Application to Confession.] — Where stolen goods are found in a man's house, and his wife, in his presence, makes a statement exonerating him, and criminating herself:—Semble, that, with respect to the admissibility of this statement in evidence against her, it may be a question whether the doctrine of presumed coercion does not apply. Reg. v. Laugher, 2 Car. & K. 225.

Coining Implements Found in House.]— If coining implements are found in a house occupied by a man and his wife, the presumption is that they are in the possession of the husband alone; unless there are circumstances to show that the wife was acting separately and without her husband's sanction, they cannot both be convicted. Reg. v. Boober, 4 Cox, C. C. 272.

The fact of a wife attempting to break up coining implements at the time of her husband's apprehension, if done with the object of screening him, is no evidence of a guilty possession. Ib.

Crime Committed when Husband Absent.]—If a wife commits larceny in the absence of her husband, and by his mere command, she is punishable as if she was sole, and the husband, it is said, may be accessory to the wife. Anon., 2 East, P. C. 559.

A wife who takes an independent part in the commission of a crime, when her husband is not present, is not protected by her coverture. Reg. v. John, 13 Cox, C. C. 100.

A wife, by her husband's order and procuration, but in his absence, knowingly uttered a forged order and certificate for the payment of prize-money:—Held, that the presumption of coercion at the time of uttering did not arise, as the husband was absent; and that the wife might be convicted of the uttering, and the husband of procuring. Rex v. Morris, R. & R. C. C. 270.

Husband and wife were jointly indicted for stealing. The husband was in the employ of the prosecutors, and was seen near the spot when the property stolen arrived at the prosecutors'. The next day the wife was seen near the spot where her husband was engaged on his work. She was at a spot where there was no road, with a bundle concealed, and was followed home. On the following day she pledged the stolen property at two different places. At one of the places where she was not known she pledged in a false name:—Held, that upon this evidence the wife might be convicted of stealing the property. Reg. v. Cohen, 11 Cox, C. C. 99; 18 L. T. 489; 16 W. R. 941.

Presumption may be Rebutted.]—The doctrine of coercion, as applicable to a crime committed by a married woman in the presence of her husband, only raises a disputable presumption of law in her favour, which is in all cases capable of being rebutted by the evidence. Reg. v. Torpey, 12 Cox, C. C. 45.

To what Offences Applicable.]—This disputable presumption of law exists in misdemeanours, as well as in felonies, and the question for the jury is the same in both cases. Ib.

The doctrine applies to the crime of robbery with violence. Ib.

Upon an indictment for highway robbery with violence, D. and his wife were found guilty, the jury finding as to the wife that she had acted under the compulsion of her husband:—Held, that as to the wife the verdict amounted to one of not guilty. Reg. v. Dykes, 15 Cox, C. C. 771.

Husband and wife may be jointly convicted of an assault. Reg. v. Cruse, 2 M. C. C. 53; 8 Car. & P. 541.

Or for keeping a bawdy house. Rex v. Williams, 10 Mod. 63; 1 Salk. 384.

Or for keeping a gaming house. Rex v. Dixon, 10 Mod. 335.

If husband and wife jointly commit a murder, both are equally amenable to the law, as the doctrine of presumed coercion of the wife does not apply in murder. Reg. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903.

So also a wife is amenable as an accessory before the fact to a murder committed by her husband; but if the only part she took in the transaction was in harbouring and comforting her husband after the crime was committed, she is not liable as an accessory after the fact. Ib.

Indictment.]—Where a woman was indicted as "the wife of A." it is sufficient proof that she was so, without adducing further evidence to prove the fact. Rex v. Knight, 1 Car. & P. 116.

Question to be left to Jury.]—A husband and wife were jointly indicted for receiving stolen goods, and both convicted:—Held, that as the charge against the husband and wife was joint, and it had not been left to the jury to say whether she received the goods in the absence of the husband, the conviction of the wife was wrong, though she had been more active than her husband. Rex v. Archer, 1 M. C. C. 143.

When a wife was indicted with her husband for receiving stolen property and the evidence was, that although not present when her husband received the property she had subsequently dealt with it and ultimately destroyed it:—Held, that it was a question for the jury whether she acted for the purpose of aiding her husband in turning the goods to a profit, or whether she acted thus to conceal her husband's guilt and screen him from the consequences. In the first case she might be found guilty, in the second she ought to be acquitted. Reg. v. McClarens, 3 Cox, C. C. 425.

A woman and her husband and P. were indicted jointly for burglary and receiving. The jury found P. guilty of housebreaking, and the woman and her husband of receiving. Part of the stolen property was found in the house where she and her husband lived together; and she, in the absence of her husband, some time after the housebreaking, was seen dealing with part of the stolen things, when she made a statement importing a knowledge that they had been stolen. The judge declined to leave it to the jury to find whether she received the stolen property from her husband or in his absence:—Held, that the conviction could not be supported. Reg. v. Wardroper, Bell, C. C. 249; 29 L. J., M. C. 116; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 232; 1 L. T. 416; 8 W. R. 217; 8 Cox, C. C. 284.

Evidence of Marriage.]—A woman was indicted for uttering counterfeit coin. At the time of the commission of the offence she was in company with a man who went by the same name, and who was convicted at the previous assizes of the offence. When the prisoners were taken into custody, the constable addressed the female as the male prisoner's wife. He denied the fact in the hearing and presence of the woman. Since her committal she had been confined of a child:—Held, that, under the circumstances, although the woman had not pleaded coverture, and even although she had not asserted she was married to the male prisoner when he stated she was not his wife, it was a question for the jury whether, taking the birth of the child and the whole circumstances, there was not evidence of the marriage, and the jury thought there was, and acquitted her. Reg. v. M'Ginnes, 11 Cox, C. C. 391.

Where, on the trial of a man and woman for larceny, it appears that they addressed each other as husband and wife, and passed and appeared as such and were so spoken of by the witnesses for the prosecution, it will be for the jury to say whether they are satisfied that they are in fact husband and wife, even though the woman pleaded to the indictment, which described her as a single woman. Reg. v. Woodward, 8 Car. & P. 561.

In such a case a female ought not to be indicted as a single woman. Ib.

Where a woman is charged with comforting, harbouring and assisting a man who has committed a murder, if the counsel for the prosecution has reason to believe that she was married to the man, and it appears clearly that she considered herself as his wife, and lived with him as such for years, he will be justified in not offering any evidence against her, even though he has also reason to believe that the marriage was in some respects irregular, and, probably, invalid. Reg. v. Good, 1 Car. & K. 185.

If a man and woman be jointly indicted for larceny, the latter as a single woman, in order to entitle her to acquittal on the ground of coercion, the jury must be satisfied that the prisoners were in fact married, though it is not absolutely necessary to prove the actual marriage. Rex v. Hassall, 2 Car. & P. 434.

b. Other Persons under Compulsion.

When a Defence.]—An apprehension, though never so well grounded, of having property wasted or destroyed, or of suffering any other mischief not endangering the person, will afford no excuse for joining or continuing with rebels. Rex v. M'Growther, 1 East, P. C. 71.

But it is otherwise if the party joins from fear of death or by compulsion. Rex v. Gordon, 1 East, P. C. 71.

On an indictment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 4, for breaking a threshing-machine, the judge allowed a witness to be asked whether the mob, by whom the machine was broken, did not compel persons to go with them, and then compel each person to give one blow to the machine; and also, whether at the time when the prisoner and himself were forced to join the mob, they did not agree together to run away from the mob the first opportunity. Rex v. Crutchley, 5 Car. & P. 133.

A., who was insane, collected a number of persons together, who armed themselves, having a common purpose of resisting the lawfully constituted authorities; A. having declared that he would cut down any constable who came against him. A., in the presence of C. and D., two of the persons of his party, afterwards shot an assistant of a constable, who came to apprehend A. under a warrant:—Held, that C. and D. were guilty of murder, as principals in the first degree, and that any apprehension that C. and D. had of personal danger to themselves from A., was no ground of defence for continuing with him after he had so declared his purpose; and also, that it was no ground of defence that A. and his party had no distinct or particular object in view when they assembled together and armed themselves. Reg. v. Tyler, 8 Car. & P. 616.

The apprehension of personal danger does not furnish any excuse for assisting in doing any act which is illegal. Ib.

4. Corporations.

When Liable.]—A corporation aggregate may be guilty of a misdemeanor by nonfeasance, such as the non-repair of bridges which it is their duty to repair. Reg. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Ry., 3 Railw. Cas. 148; 2 G. & D. 236; 9 Car. & P. 478; 3 Q. B. 223; 6 Jur. 804.

In such a case an indictment is maintainable against it in its corporate name. Ib.

An indictment will lie against a corporation for a misfeasance at common law. Reg. v. Great North of England Ry., 9 Q. B. 315; 16 L. J., M. C. 16; 10 Jur. 755; 2 Cox, C. C. 70.

An incorporated company demurred to a bill in equity, because the discovery thereby sought might subject it to criminal prosecution under 59 Geo. 3, c. 69 (Foreign Enlistment Act):—Held, that a corporation was not liable to be indicted under that act, and the court overruled the demurrer. Two Sicilies (King) v. Willcox, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 334; 19 L. J., Ch. 488; 14 Jur. 751.

Where a corporation aggregate are defendants, they are not liable to a prosecution for perjury though their answer be never so false. Wych v. Meal, 3 P. W. 310.

Appearance—Certiorari.]—If indicted in the queen's bench, they can appear by attorney; but if indicted at the assizes, or sessions, where they cannot appear by attorney, they should apply for a certiorari and appear by attorney, and compel appearance by distress infinite. Reg. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Ry, 9 Car. & P. 478. See S. C., 1 G. & D. 457; 3 Q. B. 223; 5 Jur. 40.

Certiorari — Recognizances.]—Where an indictment against a corporation, for the non-repair of a highway, is removed by certiorari, at the instance of the prosecutor, the prosecutor is not required by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5, to enter into recognizances to pay the defendant's costs in case of acquittal, indictments against corporations being excepted from the operation of the act. Reg. v. Manchester Corporation, 7 El. & Bl. 453; 26 L. J., M. C. 65; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 839; 5 W. R. 373.

5. Deaf and Dumb Persons.

Arraignment of—Mute of Malice or by Act of God.]—See post, col. 1765.

Not Understanding Proceedings at Trial.]—A deaf mute being tried for felony, was found guilty, but the jury found also that he was incapable of understanding, and did not understand, the proceedings at the trial:—Held, that he could not be convicted, but must be detained as a non-sane person during the queen's pleasure. Reg. v. Berry, 45 L. J., M. C. 123; 1 Q. B. D. 447; 34 L. T. 590; 13 Cox, C. C. 189.

6. Drunkards.

No Defence.]—Drunkenness is not, in law, any excuse for crime. Rex v. Pearson, 2 Lewin, C. C. 144.

Although drunkenness is no excuse, delirium tremens caused by excessive drinking is different. If it produces such a degree of madness as to render the person incapable of distinguishing right from wrong at the time the offence is committed, he is relieved from criminal responsibility. Reg. v. Davis, 14 Cox, C. C. 563.

Drunkenness may rebut Malice.]—In a case of stabbing where the prisoner has used a deadly weapon, the fact that he was drunk does not at all alter the nature of the case: but if he had intemperately used an instrument, not in its nature a deadly weapon, at a time when he was drunk, the fact of his being drunk might induce the jury to less strongly infer a malicious intent in him at the time. Rex v. Meakin, 7 Car. & P. 297. See Reg. v. Monkhouse, 4 Cox, C. C. 55.

If a man is drunk, this is no excuse for any crime he may commit; but where provocation by a blow has been given to a person, who kills another with a weapon which he happens to have in his hand, the drunkenness of the prisoner may be considered on the question, whether he was excited by passion, or acted from malice; as, also, it may be on the question, whether expressions used by the prisoner manifested a deliberate purpose, or were merely the idle expressions of a drunken man. Rex v. Thomas, 7 Car. & P. 817.

Though drunkenness is no excuse for crime, it may be taken into account by the jury, when considering the motive or intent of a person acting under its influence. Reg. v. Gamlen, 1 F. & F. 90.

The intention of the party guilty of murder being an element of the crime itself, the fact that a man was intoxicated at the time he caused the death of another may be taken into consideration by the jury in determining whether he formed the intention necessary to constitute the crime of murder. Reg. v. Doherty, 16 Cox, C. C. 306.

Where, on the trial of an indictment for an attempt to commit suicide, it appeared that the prisoner was at the time of the alleged offence so drunk that she did not know what she did:—Held, that this negatived the attempt to commit suicide. Reg. v. Moore, 3 Car. & K. 319; 16 Jur. 750.

On a charge of attempting to commit suicide, the mere fact of drunkenness is no excuse for the crime; but it is a material fact for the jury to consider, before coming to the conclusion that the prisoner really intended to destroy his life. Reg. v. Doody, 6 Cox, C. C. 463.

7. Foreigners.

A person naturalised in this country becomes, to all intents and purposes, a British subject, and ceases to be an alien. Reg. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903; T. & M. 155; 1 Den. C. C. 467; 19 L. J., M. C. 1; 13 Jur. 962.

It is no defence on behalf of a foreigner charged in England with a crime committed there, that he did not know he was doing wrong, the act not being an offence in his own country. But though it is not a defence in law, yet it is a matter to be considered in mitigation of punishment. Rex v. Esop, 7 Car. & P. 456.

8. Infants.

Under Seven.]—An infant, under the age of seven years, cannot incur the guilt of felony. Marsh v. Loader, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 535; 11 W. R. 784.

Under Fourteen.]—If a child, more than seven and under fourteen years of age, is indicted for felony, it will be left to the jury to say whether the offence was committed by him, and, if so, whether, at the time of the offence, the prisoner had a guilty knowledge that he or she was doing wrong. The presumption of law is, that a child of that age has not such guilty knowledge, unless the contrary is proved. Rex v. Owen, 4 Car. & P. 236. S. P., Reg. v. Smith, 1 Cox, C. C. 260.

A boy under fourteen cannot be convicted of an assault with intent to commit a rape. Rex v. Eldershaw, 3 Car. & P. 366.

A boy who, at the time of the commission of the offence of rape, is under fourteen, cannot, in point of law, be guilty of an assault with intent to commit a rape; and if he is under that age, no evidence is admissible to show that, in point of fact, he could commit the offence. Reg. v. Phillips, 8 Car. & P. 736. S. P., Rex v. Groombridge, 7 Car. & P. 582.

A boy under fourteen years of age cannot, by law, be convicted of feloniously carnally knowing and abusing a girl under ten years old, even though it was proved that he was arrived at the full state of puberty. Reg. v. Jordan, 9 Car. & P. 118. S. P., Reg. v. Brimilow, 9 Car. & P. 366; 2 M. C. C. 122.

A boy under fourteen cannot be convicted under s. 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, of the offence of carnal knowledge of a girl under thirteen. Reg. v. Waite, 61 L. J., M. C. 187; [1892] 2 Q. B. 600; 67 L. T. 300; 41 W. R. 80; 17 Cox, C. C. 554.

But in such a case he may be convicted of an indecent assault under s. 9 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885. Reg. v. Williams, 62 L. J., M. C. 69; [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 5 R. 186; 41 W. R. 332.

A child under fourteen, indicted for murder, must be proved conscious of the nature of the act. Reg. v. Vamplew, 3 F. & F. 520.

Where coining implements were found in the house occupied by a man, his wife, and a child ten years of age, the jury was directed to acquit the child of a felonious possession. Reg. v. Boober, 4 Cox, C. C. 272.

9. Insane Persons.

When Insanity is a Defence.]—To justify the acquittal of a prisoner indicted for murder, on the ground of insanity, the jury must be satisfied that he was incapable of judging between right and wrong; and that, at the time of committing the act, he did not consider that it was an offence against the laws of God and nature. Rex v. Offord, 5 Car. & P. 168.

If, to an indictment for treason for attempting the life of the sovereign, by shooting at her majesty, the defence is insanity, the question for the jury will be, whether the prisoner was labouring under that species of insanity which satisfies them that he was quite unaware of the nature, character, and consequences of the act he was committing, or, in other words, whether he was under the influence of a diseased mind, and was really unconscious at the time he was committing the act that it was a crime. Reg. v. Oxford, 9 Car. & P. 525.

Semble, that, notwithstanding a party accused did an act which was in itself criminal, under the influence of an insane delusion, with a view of redressing or avenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, he is nevertheless punishable if he knew at the time that he was acting contrary to law. Macnaghten's case, 10 Cl. & F. 200; 8 Scott (N.R.) 595; 1 Car. & K. 130.

If the accused was conscious that the act was one which he ought not to do, and if the act was at the same time contrary to law, he is punishable. Ib.

A party labouring under a partial delusion must be considered in the same situation, as to responsibility, as if the facts, in respect to which the delusion exists, were real. Ib.

To entitle a prisoner to be acquitted on the ground of insanity, he must, at the time of the committing of the offence, have been so insane that he did not know right from wrong. Reg. v. Higginson, 1 Car. & K. 129.

Where, upon a trial for murder, the plea of insanity is set up, the question for the jury is, did the prisoner do the act under a delusion, believing it to be other than it was? If he knew what he was doing, and that it was likely to cause death, and was contrary to the law of God and man, and that the law directed that persons who did such acts should be punished, he is guilty of murder. Reg. v. Townley, 3 F. & F. 839.

The circumstance of a person having acted under an irresistible influence to the commission of homicide, is no defence if at the time he committed the act he knew he was doing what was wrong. Reg. v. Haynes, 1 F. & F. 666.

A mere uncontrollable impulse of the mind, co-existing with the full possession of the reasoning powers, will not warrant an acquittal on the ground of insanity; the question for the jury being, whether the prisoner, at the time he committed the act, knew the character and nature of the act, and that it was a wrongful one. Reg. v. Barton, 3 Cox, C. C. 275.

On an indictment for maliciously setting fire to a building, it is not necessary to prove actual ill-will in the prisoner towards the owner; and in order to justify a jury in acquitting a prisoner on the ground of insanity, they must believe that he did not know right from wrong; but if they find that the prisoner, when he did the act, was in such a state of mind that he was not conscious that the effect of it would be to injure any other person:—Held, that this will amount to a general verdict of not guilty. Reg. v. Davies, 1 F. & F. 69.

Where a person is in a state of mind in which she is liable to fits of madness, it is for the jury to consider whether the act done was during such a fit, though there is nothing before or after the act to indicate it, and though there is some evidence of design and malice. Reg. v. Richards, 1 F. & F. 87.

Evidence—What Admissible.]—Where an accused person is supposed to be insane, a medical man, who has been present in court and heard the evidence, may be asked, as a matter of science, whether the facts stated by the witnesses, supposing them to be true, show a state of mind incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong. Reg. v. Macnaghten, 10 Cl. & F. 200; 8 Scott (N.R.) 595; 1 Car. & K. 130. S. P., Rex v. Wright, R. & R. 456; Rex v. Searle, 1 M. & Rob. 75.

On a trial for murder evidence was called, on the prisoner's behalf, to prove his insanity. A physician, who had been in court during the whole trial, was then called on the part of the prosecution, and asked whether, having heard the whole evidence, he was of opinion that the prisoner, at the time he committed the alleged act, was of unsound mind?—Held, notwithstanding the opinion of the judges in Reg. v. Macnaghten (supra), that such a question ought not to be put, but that the proper mode of examination was to take particular facts, and assuming them to be true, to ask the witness whether, in his judgment, they were indicative of insanity on the part of the prisoner at the time the alleged act was committed. Reg. v. Frances, 4 Cox, C. C. 57.

To ask a witness whether, in his opinion, the prisoner is capable of judging between right and wrong, is an improper question, for that is what no witness thought of, or is prepared to answer. Reg. v. Layton, 4 Cox, C. C. 149.

A medical witness should give his opinion as to the state of mind, not as to the responsibility of the prisoner; the latter is for the jury, under the direction of the judge. Reg. v. Richards, 1 F. & F. 87.

In order to prove insanity it is not necessary to adduce medical evidence; if facts are proved indicating an unsound state of mind that is sufficient. Reg. v. Dart, 13 Cox, C. C. 143.

To prove a plea of insanity, evidence that the grandfather of the person had been insane may be adduced, after it has been proved by medical testimony that such disease is often hereditary. Reg. v. Tucket, 1 Cox, C. C. 103.

Presumption that Prisoner is Sane.]—In all cases of this kind the jurors ought to be told, that every man is presumed to be sane, and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crimes, until the contrary is proved to their satisfaction; and that, to establish a defence on the ground of insanity, it must be clearly proved that at the time of committing the act, the party accused was labouring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or that what he was doing was wrong. Reg. v. Macnaghten, 10 Cl. & F. 200; 8 Scott (N.R.) 595; 1 Car. & K. 130.

When the defence of insanity is set up, in order to warrant the jury in acquitting the prisoner, it must be proved affirmatively that he is insane; if the fact be left in doubt, and if the crime charged in the indictment is proved, it is their duty to convict. Reg. v. Stokes, 3 Car. & K. 185.

Where a prisoner sets up insanity as a ground of defence, one cardinal rule is, that the burden of proving his innocence on that ground rests on the party accused. The question in such a case for the jury is not whether the prisoner was of sound mind, but whether he has made out to their satisfaction that he was not of sound mind. Reg. v. Layton, 4 Cox, C. C. 149.

Evidence on which Presumption Rebutted.]—A married woman having killed her husband immediately after an apparent recovery from a disease (the result of childbirth) which caused a great loss of blood, and exhausted the vessels of the brain, and thus so weakened its power and so tended to produce insane delusions of the senses, which, while suffering under such disease, she complained of, and, which, by her own account, had been renewed at the time of the act of homicide (although they were not such as would lead to it):—Held, evidence from which a jury might properly find that she was not in such a state of mind at the time of the act as to know its nature or be accountable for it. Reg. v. Law, 2 F. & F. 836.

Where a married woman, fondly attached to her children, and apparently most happy in her family, had poisoned two of them with some evidence of deliberation and design; but it appeared that there was insanity in her family; and, from her demeanour before and after the act, which, although not wholly irrational, yet was strangely erratic and excited; and from recent antecedents, and the presence of certain exciting causes of insanity, and her own account of her sensations, the medical men were of opinion that she was labouring under actual cerebral disease, and that she was in a paroxysm of insanity at the time of the act; this was left to the jury as evidence on which they might rightly find her not guilty on the ground of insanity. Reg. v. Vyse, 3 F. & F. 247.

The delusions which indicate a defect of sanity such as will relieve a person from criminal responsibility, are delusions of the senses, or such as relate to facts or objects—not mere wrong notions or impressions, or of a moral nature; and the aberration must be mental, not moral, to affect the intellect of the individual. It is not enough that they show a diseased or a depraved state of mind, or an aberration of the moral feelings, the sense of right and wrong being still, although it may be perverted yet not destroyed; and the theory of a moral insanity, or insanity of the moral feelings, while the sense of right and wrong remains, is not to be reconciled with the legal doctrine on the subject. Reg. v. Burton, 3 F. & F. 772.

It was proved that the prisoner, a soldier, shot his officer through the head, the only evidence for the defence being that the act was sudden, without apparent motive, and that he had been addicted to drink, and had been suffering under depression;—Held, that this was not enough to raise the defence of insanity, that the sole question was whether the prisoner fired the gun intending to kill, and that his expressions soon after the act were evidence of this, and that alleged inadequacy of motive was immaterial, the question being not motive but intent. Reg. v. Dixon, 11 Cox, C. C. 341.

The jury may come to a conclusion on this point from the conduct and acts of the accused shortly before and down to the commision of the alleged crime. Although insanity on one point, for instance, a delusion as to property, will not exempt a party from responsibility, the fact is not immaterial in considering his responsibility at another time and on another subject. The want of motive for the commission of the crime, and its being committed under circumstances which render detection inevitable, are important points for the consideration of the jury, when coupled with evidence of insanity on any particular point. Reg. v. Layton, 4 Cox, C. C. 149.

On a trial for murder, the defence of insanity by the evidence showing a great amount of senseless extravagance and absurd eccentricity of conduct, coupled with habits of excessive intemperance, causing fits of delirium tremens, the prisoner, however, not having been labouring under the effects of such a fit at the time of the act, and the circumstances showing sense and deliberation, and a perfect understanding of the nature of the act :—Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to support the defence, as it rather tended to show wilful excesses and extreme folly than mental incapacity. Reg. v. Leigh, 4 F. & F. 915.

Grand Jury should Find True Bill.]—A grand jury has no authority by law to ignore a bill for murder on the ground of insanity ; it is their duty to find the bill ; otherwise the court cannot order the detention of the party during the pleasure of the crown, either on arraignment or trial, under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, ss. 1 & 2. Reg. v. Hodges, 8 Car. & P. 195.

Trial—Prisoner must be Produced.]—Where a bill had been found against an insane prisoner for murder, and he had been removed by order of the secretary of state to the county lunatic asylum, and the governor of the asylum had made an affidavit that he was in a hopeless state of insanity, the court will nevertheless require that he be brought up, and his alleged insanity inquired into by a jury, unless it is shown that it would be dangerous to bring him into court, and in that case the court will allow the witnesses their costs, and bind them over to appear when called upon. Reg. v. Dwerryhouse, 2 Cox, C. C. 446.

—— When Prisoner called on to Plead.]—When a person alleged to be insane is called upon to plead, the question is whether at that moment she understands she is charged with the offence alleged ; the fact that she has been insane at any time is not for this purpose material. Reg. v. Keary, 13 Cox, C. C. 143.

—— When Suggestion of Insanity should be made.]—A prisoner being arraigned on two indictments for murder, and having with apparent intelligence, pleaded to one and declined to plead to the other, the plea of not guilty was entered for him by statute with the assent of his counsel. The case being then opened, and the first witness examined, and it being then set up by his counsel that he was insane, or not in a fit state to be tried :—Held, that the proper time for making that suggestion was before the prisoner pleaded ; and, had it been so made, a jury should have been empanelled to try the question, whether he was sane and in a fit state to be tried, but as the trial had been begun, and it would be manifestly inconvenient to recommence the trial of the collateral issue, and as, moreover, the evidence as to the prisoner's present sanity was very much mixed up with the general question of his sanity, it was open to the court, under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, to take the whole of the evidence and then leave to the jury both questions as to his state of mind at the time of the act and at the time of the trial. Reg. v. Southey, 4 F. & F. 864.

—— Prisoner Repudiating his Insanity.]—The prisoner was indicted for shooting at his wife with intent to murder her, and was defended by counsel, who set up for him the defence of insanity. The prisoner, however, objected to such a defence, asserting that he was not insane ; and he was allowed by the judge to suggest questions to be put by his lordship to the witnesses for the prosecution, to negative the supposition that he was insane ; and the judge also, at the request of the prisoner, allowed additional witnesses to be called on his behalf for the same purpose. They, however, failed in shewing that the defence was an incorrect one ; and, on the contrary, their evidence tended to establish it more clearly, and the prisoner was acquitted on the ground of insanity. Reg v. Pearce, 9 Car. & P. 667.

—— Address to Jury.]—When a plea of insanity is set up, the prisoner's counsel has no right, in his address to the jury, to quote the opinions of medical men as given in their works. Reg. v. Crouch, 1 Cox, C. C. 94. S. P., Reg. v. Taylor, 13 Cox, C. C. 77.

Inquest—Evidence.]—A party having been indicted for a misdemeanour, of uttering seditious words, and upon his arraignment refusing to plead, and showing symptoms of insanity ; and an inquest being forthwith taken under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 2, to try whether he was insane or not :—Held, first, that the jury might form their own judgment of the present state of the prisoner's mind from his demeanour while the inquest was being taken ; and might thereupon find him to be insane, without any evidence being given as to his present state. Reg. v. Goode, 7 A. & E. 536.

Held, secondly, that, upon his showing strong symptoms of insanity in court during the taking of the inquest, it became unnecessary to ask him whether he would cross-examine the witnesses, or would offer any remark on the evidence. Ib.

—— Onus of Proof]—Where a jury is empannelled to try whether a prisoner is insane or not at the time when he is brought up to plead to an indictment, the counsel for the prosecution is to begin and call his witnesses to prove the sanity of the prisoner. Reg. v. Davis, 6 Cox, C. C. 326 ; 3 Car. & K. 328.

But where a jury is empannelled, at the instance of the counsel for a prisoner, to try whether he is insane or not at the time when brought up to plead to an indictment, the proof of the insanity is incumbent on his counsel. Reg. v. Turton, 6 Cox, C. C. 385.

Commitment.]—A commitment of an insane person, under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 3, is not a commitment in execution, and is not to be construed with the same strictness. Rex v. Gourlay, 7 B. & C. 669 ; 1 M. & Ry. 619 ; 31 R. R. 276. But see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 14.

1. PRINCIPALS.

When Act Committed by Means of Innocent Agent.]—See ante, col. 1103.

Actual Presence at time of Committing

Offence.]—If a man encourages another to murder himself, and is present abetting him while he does so, such person is guilty of murder as principal. Rex v. Dyson, R. & R. 523.

Where three persons were indicted jointly for cutting and wounding, and the third of them did not come up to the spot until after one of the first two had got away, and then kicked the prosecutor while he was on the ground struggling with the other :—Held, that the two who jointly assaulted the prosecutor, and wounded him at first, might be found guilty either of the felony, or of the assault only, but that the third must, under the circumstances, be acquitted altogether. Reg. v. M'Phane, Car. & M. 212.

Where a prosecutor left his goods in a cart standing in the street, and M. came and led the cart away, and having taken it a short distance, delivered it to another man with directions to take it to his, M.'s house. Upon the cart arriving at the house, S., who was at work in the cellar, having directed a companion to blow out the light, came up and assisted in removing the goods from the cart :—Held, that S could not be indicted as a principal Rex v. M'Makin, R. & R. 333, n. And see Rex v. Dyer, 2 East, P. C. 767.

If A. unlocks a door of a room of which he has the key, in order to allow B. to commit a larceny in it, and A. then goes away, and B., in his absence, enters the room and removes articles out of it, A. is not a principal in the larceny. Reg. v. Jeffries, 3 Cox, C. C. 85.

A. and B. were indicted for larceny as principals; A. had been sent by his master to deliver goods to C. He only delivered part, and the rest was stolen, and found in the possession of B. :—Held, that it was a question for the jury whether B. was present at the time when A. separated the stolen portion from the bulk; for that if he was, both were rightly charged as principals. Rex v. Butteris, 6 Car. & P. 147.

On a charge of personating a seaman, all persons aiding and abetting are principals, and the offence is not confined to the person only who personates the seaman. Rex v. Potts, R. & R. 353.

If several plan the uttering of a forged order for payment of money, and it is uttered accordingly by one in the absence of the others, the actual utterer is alone the principal. Rex v. Badcock, R. & R. 249.

Where a man and woman were indicted for uttering a bad shilling to B., and having in their possession another bad shilling at the time, and the uttering was by the woman alone in the absence of the man :—Held, that the man was not liable to be convicted with the actual utterer, although proved to be the associate of the woman on the day of uttering, and to have had other bad money about him for the purpose of uttering; and, secondly, that the woman could not be convicted of the second offence of having other bad money in her possession, on the evidence of her associating with a man not present at the uttering, but having large quantities of bad money about him for the purpose of uttering. Rex v. Else, R. & R. 142. But see Reg. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. C. C. 453; 5 Cox, C. C. 521.

J. had employed M. to load sacks of oats, the property of J., from a vessel in the trams of K., who was to carry them on the trams to the warehouse of K. By previous concert between M. and K., oats were taken by M. from two of the sacks and put into a nose-bag in the absence of K., and hidden under a tram. K. returned in a few minutes, and took the nose-bag, and its contents, from under the tram, and took them away, M. being then within three or four yards of him :—Held, that, as it was all one transaction, and both had concurred in it, and both had been present at some part of the transaction, both could be convicted as principals in the larceny. Reg. v. M'Carthy, 2 Car. & K. 379.

—— Encouraging and Promoting Offence.]—Where two persons go out to fight a deliberate duel and death ensues, all persons who are present encouraging and promoting that death will be guilty of murder. Reg. v. Cuddy, 1 Car. & K. 210.

Mere presence at a duel is not sufficient to make spectators principals in the combat; if, however, they sustain the principals either by advice or assistance, or go to the ground for the purpose of encouraging and forwarding the unlawful conflict, although they do not say or do anything, yet if they are present assisting and encouraging by their presence at the moment when the fatal shot is fired, they are, in law, guilty of murder. Reg. v. Young, 8 Car. & P. 644.

—— Assisting Apprehension under Pretence of Assisting in Offence.]—If several agree to commit a burglary, but one communicates the intent to an officer, that he may take the other two, and the officer is upon the watch accordingly; the person who has made that communication to the officer will not be particeps criminis in the burglary, although he is present when it is committed, and pretends to assist the other two, but in fact expedites their apprehension. Rex v. Dunnelly, R. & R. 310; 2 Marsh. 571.

Nor will it make any difference, although his object in detecting is to obtain for himself (by previous agreement with the officer) part of a reward that will be payable on conviction. Ib.

Actual Presence—During part of Offence.]—If several combine to forge Bank of England notes, and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, but they are not together when the notes are completed, they are nevertheless all guilty as principals. Rex v. Bingley, R. & R. 446.

If several make distinct parts of a forged instrument, each is a principal, though he does not know by whom the other parts are executed, and though it is finished by one alone in the absence of the others. Rex v. Kirkwood, 1 M. C. C. 304.

The makers of the paper and plate respectively, for the purpose of forging a note afterwards filled up by a third person, are principals in the forgery with that person, though each executed his part in the absence of the others, and without knowing by whom the other parts were executed. Rex v. Dade, 1 M. C. C. 307.

A room door was latched, and one person lifted the latch and entered the room and concealed himself, for the purpose of committing a robbery there, which he afterwards accomplished. Two other persons were present with him at the time he lifted the latch for the purpose of assisting him to enter, and screened him from observation by opening an umbrella :—Held, that the two were in law parties to the breaking and entering and were answerable for the robbery which took place afterwards, though they were not near the spot at the time when it was perpetrated. Rex v. Jordan, 7 Car. & P. 432.

—— Where Principal Insane.]—A count in an indictment charged A. with the murder of B., and also charged C. and D. with being present, aiding and abetting A. in the commission of the murder. A. was an insane person:—Held, therefore, that C. and D. could not be convicted on this count. Reg. v. Tyler, 8 Car. & P. 616.

Constructive Presence—Giving Assistance.]—Persons not present, nor sufficiently near to give assistance at the time of uttering forged notes, are not principals, although they may be accessories before the fact. Rex v. Stewart, R. & R. 363.

If all the prisoners on an indictment for poaching are associated together for that common purpose, and some of the party actually enter a field to effect that purpose, while the others remain near enough to aid and assist, they may all be convicted under an indictment charging them with being in such place for such purpose. Reg. v. Whittaker, 2 Car. & K. 636; 1 Den. C. C. 310; 17 L. J., M. C. 127; 3 Cox, C. C. 50.

On a charge of poaching it is not necessary to prove that all the prisoners were within the same close if they all were of one party with the same purpose in the place described in the indictment. Reg. v. Vessell, 2 Den. C. C. 274; T. & M. 598; 3 C. & K. 150; 20 L. J., M. C. 192; 15 Jur. 434; 5 Cox, C. C. 188.

To support an indictment for night-poaching by three or more, it is not sufficient to prove that one of the prisoners was in the place laid in the indictment and that the rest of the party was in another wood which was separated from the place mentioned in the indictment by a turnpike road. Rex v. Dowsell, 6 Car. & P. 398.

On an indictment for night-poaching by four, one being armed, semble, that if two enter the land laid in the indictment, and the other two remain outside the preserve, but are of the same party, and are there for the same purpose, all ought to be found guilty. Rex v. Lockett, 7 Car. & P. 300.

Those who are watching at the outside of a preserve for the purpose of giving the alarm, on the approach of the gamekeeper, to others who are in the preserve, and who afterwards go into the preserve for that purpose, are equally guilty with those who enter the preserve at first. Rex v. Passey, 7 Car. & P. 282.

In order to constitute the offence of stealing in a dwelling-house, and by menaces and threats putting persons being therein in bodily fear, it is not necessary that all the persons engaged in the crime should be actually in the house; and if one remains outside, he may be equally guilty of using menaces and threats, if there was a common purpose to inspire terror. Reg. v. Murphy, 6 Cox, C. C. 340.

If two utterers of counterfeit coin, with a general community of purpose, go different ways, and utter coin apart from each other, and not near enough to assist each other, their respective utterings are not joint utterings by both. Rex v. Manners, 7 Car. & P. 801. See Reg. v. Hurse, 2 M. & Rob. 360, infra.

On an indictment for a joint uttering of counterfeit coin where both are not present at the time of the uttering, the true question seems to be whether the one was so near the other as to help the other to get rid of the counterfeit coin. Reg. v. Jones, 9 Car. & P. 761; 2 M. C. C. 85; 2 Lewin, C. C. 119, 297.

Two prisoners together uttered counterfeit coin: they separated and one of them uttered on two occasions two counterfeit coins, but at the last utterings the former was not proved to have been near the other:—Held, that the proof of previous concert would not sustain a count of joint uttering in either the second or third utterings. Reg. v. West, 2 Cox, C. C. 237.

Where, on an indictment for privately stealing in a shop, it appeared that there were several acting together, some in the shop and some out, for the purpose of assisting those in the shop, and the property was stolen by the hands of one of those who were in the shop:—Held, that those who were on the outside were equally guilty as principals. Rex v. Gogerly, R. & R. 343.

Going towards a place where a felony is to be committed in order to assist in carrying off the property, and assisting accordingly, will not make a man a principal, if he was at such a distance at the time of the felonious taking as not to be able to assist in it. Rex v. Kelly, R. & R. 421.

A person waiting outside of a house to receive goods, which a confederate is stealing in the house, is a principal in the theft. Rex v. Owen, 1 M. C. C. 96.

It is not sufficient to make a man a principal in uttering a forged note, that he came with the utterer to the town where it was uttered, went out with him from the inn where they put up, joined him again in the street after the uttering at a little distance, and ran away when the utterer was apprehended. Rex v. Davis, R. & R. 113.

Common Purpose—Acting in Concert.]—If several act in concert to steal a man's goods, and he is induced by fraud to trust one of them in the presence of the others with the possession of the goods, and then another of the party entices the owner away, in order that the party who has obtained possession of the goods may carry them off, all will be guilty of the felony; the receipt by one, under such circumstances, being a felonious taking by all. Rex v. Standley, R. & R. 305.

Where two planned to rob the prosecutrix of some coats, and one got her to go with him that he might get some money to buy them of her, and she left the coats with the other, who immediately absconded with them:—Held, that the receipt by the one amounted to a felonious taking of the coats by both. Rex v. County, 2 Russ. C. & M. 193, 285.

Where the evidence against two, indicted for stealing oats, was that one of them took the oats from the prosecutor's sacks, and placed them under a cart, and the other came up a few minutes after, and said, "It is all right," and put the oats in a cart and took them to his house; on an objection that there was no evidence to connect the latter with the original taking:—Held, that the evidence showed one transaction in which both concurred. Reg. v. Kelly, 2 Cox, C. C. 171.

A. received goods from B. (who was the servant of C.) under colour of a pretended sale:—Held, that the fact of his having received such goods with knowledge that B. had no authority to sell, and that he was in fact defrauding his master, was sufficient evidence to support an indictment for larceny against A. jointly with B. Reg. v. Hornby, 1 Car. & K. 305.

If two jointly prepare counterfeit coin, and utter it in different shops apart from each other, but in concert, and intending to share the proceeds, the utterings of each are the joint utterings of both, and they may be convicted jointly. Reg. v. Hurse, 2 M. & Rob. 360. See Reg. v. Manners, supra.

When pieces of counterfeit coin are found on one of two persons, acting in guilty concert, and both knowing of the possession, both are guilty. Reg. v. Rogers, 2 M. C. C. 85; 2 Lewin, C. C. 119, 297.

A., who intended to sell his mare, sent his servant to M. fair, his servant having no authority either to sell the mare or deal with her in any way. The prisoner asked the servant the price, and desired the servant to trot her out; and the prisoner then went to two men, and, having talked to them, walked away. These two men then came up and persuaded the servant to exchange the mare for a horse they had, giving him 24*l.* for the bargain. They changed the saddles, and, without giving any money, rode away with the mare, leaving the servant with a horse of little value. Four days after the prisoner sold the mare at B., stating that he had got her in a chop at M. fair:—Held, that the prisoner ought to be convicted of stealing her, provided that the jury was satisfied that the prisoner was in league with the two other men, and that the three, by a fraud in which each of them was to take his part and did take his part, induced the servant to part with possession of the mare under colour of exchange, but intending all the while to steal the mare. Reg. v. Sheppard, 9 Car. & P. 121.

If three persons go out together poaching and two of them stand in the road and send their dog into a field to drive out hares, and after this the third leaves them in the road and goes poaching on his own account, this will not support an indictment against the three, as the third prisoner's poaching was not the joint act of the three. Reg. v. Nickless, 8 Car. & P. 757.

If one of a party of poachers is found in the land specified, the rest co-operating in the pursuit in adjoining land, all may be alleged to be found in the land specified. Rex v. Andrews, 2 M. & Rob. 37. S. P., Rex v. Lockett, 7 Car. & P. 300.

Two of the prisoners were seen together running out of a coppice, one of them with a gun. The third immediately afterwards came out of it alone with a gun and a pheasant:—Held, insufficient evidence of concert. Reg. v. Jones, 2 Cox, C. C. 185.

The offence of poaching is complete if three persons are in one common party unlawfully upon any land for the common purpose of illegally destroying game. Reg. v. Uezzell, 3 C. & K. 150; 2 Den. C. C. 274; 20 L. J., M. C. 192; 15 Jur. 434; 5 Cox, C. C. 188.

If gamekeepers attempt to apprehend a gang of night poachers, and one of the gamekeepers is shot by one of the poachers, this will be murder in all the poachers, unless it can be proved that any of them separated himself from the rest, so as to show that he did not join in the act. Rex v. Edmeads, 3 Car. & P. 390.

Where gamekeepers had secured two poachers, and they, having surrendered, called to a third, who came up and killed one of the gamekeepers, this is murder in all, though the two struck no blow, and though the gamekeepers had not announced in what capacity they had apprehended them. Rex v. Whithorne, 3 Car. & P. 394.

Where persons combine to stand by one another in a breach of the peace, with a general resolution to resist all opposers, and in the execution of their design a murder is committed, all of the company are equally principals in the murder, though at the time of the fact some of them were at such a distance as to be out of view. Reg. v. Howell, 9 Car. & P. 437.

All those who assemble themselves together, with an intent even to commit a trespass, the execution whereof causes a felony to be committed; and continue together, abetting one another, till they have actually put their design into execution; and also all those who are present when a felony is committed, and abet the doing of it, are principals in felony. Ib.

Where two persons are jointly engaged in an unlawful act, they may be severally convicted thereof. Mayhew v. Wardley, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 550; 2 N. R. 325; 8 L. T. 504.

If each of two persons is driving a cart at a dangerous rate and they are inviting each other to drive at a dangerous rate, and one of the carts runs over a man and kills him, each of the two is guilty of manslaughter. Reg. v. Swindall, 2 Car. & K. 230; 2 Cox, C. C. 141.

If A. and B. are riding fast along a highway as if racing, and A. rides by without doing any mischief, but B. rides against the horse of C., whereby C. is thrown and killed, this is not manslaughter in A. Rex v. Mastin, 6 Car. & P. 396.

If two or more persons go out together with a purpose to commit a breach of the peace, and, in the course of the accomplishment of that common design, one of them kills a man, the other also is guilty of manslaughter. Reg. v. Harrington, 5 Cox, C. C. 231.

Two private watchmen, seeing the prisoner and another person with two carts laden with apples, went up to them, intending, as soon as they could get assistance, to secure them; one of the watchmen walked beside the prisoner, and the other watchman beside the other person, at some distance from the prisoner. The other person wounded the watchman who was near him:—Held, that the prisoner could not be convicted of this wounding, unless the jury should be satisfied that the prisoner and the other person had not only gone out with a common purpose of stealing apples, but also had the common purpose of resisting, with extreme violence, any person who might attempt to apprehend them. Rex v. Collison, 4 Car. & P. 565.

The doctrine of constructive homicide, as regards offenders not actually present at, or parties to, an act of homicide, but sought to be made liable for it by reason of their being engaged in a common purpose, in the course of carrying out which the act of homicide occurs, only applies (there being no evidence of a common intent to carry out the purpose at all hazards, and by all means) where the common purpose is felonious; not where it is merely unlawful, as in the case of a misdemeanor, such as night-poaching. Reg. v. Skeet, 4 F. & F. 931.

Therefore, where several men were engaged at night-poaching, and in a scuffle with a gamekeeper he was killed by a shot from the gun of one of them:—Held, that whether or not the gun was fired, there being no evidence to show that the other prisoners were parties to the act of firing it, they were not guilty even of manslaughter, merely by reason of the act of homicide occurring in the course of poaching. Ib.

Section 4 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1883, provides that any person who makes or has in his possession and under his control any explosive substance, under certain circumstances, shall be liable to penal servitude, &c. :—Held, that if several persons are connected in a common design to have articles amounting to an explosive substance within the act, made for an unlawful purpose, each of the confederacy is responsible in respect of such articles as are in the possession of others connected in the carrying out of their common design. Reg. v. Charles, 17 Cox, C. C. 499.

More than nine men, of whom seven were armed with guns, being out at night in pursuit of game, were met, as they passed through a field from one wood to another, by a party of gamekeepers without firearms, but who at once assaulted them with sticks; and one of them with a dangerous weapon, a flail, likely to inflict deadly injury, with which he struck one of the poachers, upon which another of them fired and killed him. The grand jury was directed to throw out bills for murder against two of the men, one of whom was supposed to have fired the fatal shot, and the whole nine were indicted for manslaughter. There was evidence that they all stood in a row and cried "Shoot" :—Held, that whether or not the man who fired the shot could be identified, none of the prisoners would be guilty unless parties to the act of firing; and that, though their being in a row and crying out "Shoot" was evidence that they were parties to the act, it was only evidence, and its effect would depend upon how far all the circumstances showed that the firing was in pursuance of a common design to shoot, or only in consequence of a particular personal encounter. Reg. v. Luck, 3 F. & F. 483.

On an indictment of A. and B. for murder, it appeared that both followed the deceased out at night, and that A., who was the first to overtake him, threw him down a steep bank into a wet ditch, and then tried to rob him, and not being able, owing to his resistance, called to B., who then was on the top of the bank, to come and help, which he did, and they both forcibly committed the robbery. It did not appear that there was any serious injury, except that caused by the fall, and the deceased died three weeks afterwards of pneumonia, or inflammation of the lungs, which might either be caused by cold or violence :—Held, that though there was evidence against both for murder, there was not sufficient to convict, unless the jury was satisfied that there was a joint design to commit the violence, nor to convict either, unless satisfied that it caused the death. Reg. v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 63.

Where two persons go out with the common object of robbing a third person, and one of them, in pursuit of that common object, does an act which causes the death of that third person, under such circumstances as to be murder in him who does the act, it is murder in the other also. Reg. v. Jackson, 7 Cox, C. C. 357.

Six men assaulted another man who was killed by a stab inflicted by one of the assailants :—Held, that the five would be guilty of murder (a) if they participated in a common design to kill; or (b), there being no common design to kill, if the knife was used in pursuance of a common design to use it; or (c), there being no common design to use the knife, if, being present at the moment of stabbing, they assented and manifested their assent by assisting in the offence. Reg. v. Price, 8 Cox, C. C. 96.

On an indictment for wounding with intent to do some grievous bodily harm, it appeared that two persons, one of whom was the prisoner, attacked and wounded the prosecutor and robbed him; it was not proved which of the persons inflicted the wound :—Held, that if the prisoner inflicted the wound on the prosecutor, with intent to rob him, he having at the same time an intent to do him some grievous bodily harm to effectuate such his intention of robbing, he ought to be convicted on this indictment. Reg. v. Bowen, Car. & M. 149.

Held, also, that even if the prisoner's was not the hand that inflicted the wound, he ought to be convicted, if the jury was satisfied that the two persons were engaged in the common purpose of robbing the prosecutor, and that the other person's was the hand which inflicted the wound. Ib.

If A. is charged with the offence of inflicting an injury dangerous to life, with intent to murder, and B. is charged with aiding and abetting him, it is essential, to make out the charge as against B., that B. should have been aware of A.'s intention to commit murder. Reg. v. Cruse, 8 Car. & P. 541.

Persons present, aiding and abetting, are principals in the second degree, and are within the Riot Act. Rex v. Royce, 4 Burr. 2073.

When Act done not the Result of Confederacy.]—If several are out for the purpose of committing a felony, and upon an alarm run different ways, and one of them maims a pursuer to avoid being taken, the others are not to be considered principals in such act. Rex v. White, R. & R. 99.

If two persons commit a crime and one use violence, after the other has escaped, to prevent capture, only the one so using the violence is within the statute. Reg. v. Harvey, 1 Cox, C. C. 21.

If a gang of poachers attacks a gamekeeper and leaves him senseless on the ground, and one of them returns and steals his money :—Held, that one only can be convicted of the robbery, as it was not in pursuance of any common intent. Rex v. Hawkins, 3 Car. & P. 392.

A., B. and C. were indicted for having robbed and beaten D. A. knocked D. down and it was imputed that B. and C. stole the property from his pockets :—Held, that if B. and C. stole the property and A. did not participate in the robbery, A. could not be convicted of an assault, as the assault committed by him was an independent assault unconnected with the robbery; but that if the jury thought that D. was not robbed by any of the prisoners, but had been assaulted by all of them, they might find all guilty of the assault. Reg. v. Barnett, 2 Car. & K. 594; 3 Cox, C. C. 432.

All persons who even by their presence encourage a fight, from which death ensues to one of the combatants, although they neither say nor do anything, are guilty of manslaughter. But if the death is caused, not by blows given in the fight itself, but by other parties breaking the ring and striking the deceased with bludgeons, the persons who merely encouraged the fight by their presence are not answerable. Rex v. Murphy, 6 Car. & P. 103.

If A. and B. agree together to assault C. with their fists, and C. is killed by a chance blow of the fist from either of them, both are guilty of manslaughter. But should A., of his own impulse, kill C. with a weapon suddenly caught up, B. would not be responsible for the death, he being only liable for acts done in pursuance of the common design of himself and A. Reg. v. Caton, 12 Cox, C. C. 624.

Cannot be Treated as Receiver.]—A principal in the second degree cannot at the same time be treated as a receiver. Reg. v. Perkins, 2 Den. C. C. 459 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 152 ; 16 Jur. 481 ; 5 Cox, C. C. 554.

In Misdemeanors all are Principals.]—In misdemeanors all guilty participators are principals. Reg. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. C. C. 453 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 127 ; 16 Jur. 390 ; 5 Cox, C. C. 521.

J. was charged with "feloniously wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm," and the prisoner "with aiding and abetting the said J. to commit the said felony." J. was found guilty of the misdemeanor of "unlawfully wounding" :—Held, that the prisoner was rightly convicted of "aiding and abetting" the said J., because, by s. 8 of the Accessories and Abettors Act, 1861, he was liable to be tried, indicted, and punished as a principal offender. Reg. v. Waudby, 64 L. J., M. C. 231 ; [1895] 2 Q. B. 482 ; 15 R. 564 ; 73 L. T. 352 ; 44 W. R. 64 ; 18 Cox, C. C. 194 ; 59 J. P. 505—C. C. R.

The mere voluntary presence at a prize fight does not as a matter of law necessarily render persons so present guilty of an assault as aiding and abetting in such fight. Reg. v. Coney, 51 L. J., M. C. 66 ; 8 Q. B. D. 534 ; 46 L. T. 307 ; 30 W. R. 678 ; 15 Cox, C. C. 46 ; 46 J. P. 404.

Persons who are present at a prize-fight and who have gone thither with the purpose of seeing the persons strike each other, are all principals in the breach of the peace, and indictable for an assault, as well as the actual combatants, and it is not at all material which of the combatants struck the first blow. Rex v. Perkins, 4 Car. & P. 537.

A woman was delivered of a child, which died shortly after its birth ; she concurred with her paramour in endeavouring to conceal the birth, and he, in consequence of her persuasion, she remaining in bed, took the body and buried it in a field, intending thereby to conceal the birth :—Held, that he could be convicted of counselling, aiding, and abetting her in the offence. Reg. v. Bird, 2 Car. & K. 817. S. P., Reg. v. Skelton, 3 Car. & K. 119.

B. was summoned before justices for aiding and abetting S. to obtain money by false pretences, and both were committed for trial, S. on the charge of attempting to obtain money by false pretences, and B. on the charge of aiding and abetting S. to commit that offence. B. was found guilty and S. acquitted :—Held, that B. was rightly convicted, as in misdemeanors all are principals. Reg. v. Burton, 32 L. T. 539 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 71.

When several persons are found out together by night for the common purpose of housebreaking, and one only is in possession of the housebreaking implements, all may be found guilty of the misdemeanor of being found by night in possession of implements of housebreaking, without lawful excuse, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 58, for the possession of one is in such case the possession of all. Reg. v. Thompson, 21 L. T. 397 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 362.

The prisoner and J. were indicted for a misdemeanor in uttering counterfeit coin. The uttering was effected by J. in the absence of the prisoner, but the jury found that they were both engaged on the evening on which the uttering took place in the common purpose of uttering counterfeit shillings, and that in pursuance of that common purpose J. uttered the coin in question :—Held, that the prisoner was rightly convicted as a principal, there being no accessories in a misdemeanor. Reg. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. C. C. 453 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 127 ; 16 Jur. 390 ; 5 Cox, C. C. 521.

On an indictment for obtaining money under false pretences, a party who has concurred and assisted in the fraud may be convicted as principal, though not present at the time of making the pretence and obtaining the money. Reg. v. Moland, 2 M. C. C. 276.

An indictment against H. and W. charged H. with rape, and W. with aiding and abetting the rape. They were found not guilty, but the jury found H. guilty of attempting to commit the rape charged, and W. of aiding and abetting H. in the attempt :—Held, that H. was rightly convicted of a misdemeanor. Reg. v. Wyatt, or Hapgood, 39 L. J., M. C. 83 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 221 ; 21 L. T. 678 ; 18 W. R. 356 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 471.

If A. counsels and encourages B. to set fire to a malthouse, and B. attempts to set it on fire, both may be jointly indicted as principals for the misdemeanor of attempting to set the malthouse on fire, although A. was not present at the time of the attempt. Reg. v. Clayton, 1 Car. & K. 128.

2. ACCESSORIES.

Before the Fact.]—An accessory before the fact must be absent at the time when the crime is committed, and the act must be done in consequence of some counsel or procurement of his. Reg. v. Brown, 14 Cox, C. C. 144.

—— No Felony Committed.]—A person cannot be indicted under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2, for counselling another to commit a felony, unless a felony is actually committed by such other person. Reg. v. Gregory, 36 L. J., M. C. 60 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 77 ; 16 L. T. 388 ; 15 W. R. 774 ; 10 Cox, C. C. 459.

A soliciting and inciting a person to commit an offence where no other act is done except the soliciting and inciting, is a misdemeanor only. Ib.

To incite a servant to rob his master is a misdemeanor at common law, and it is no defence that the servant purposely submitted himself to the incitement with intent to betray the master. Reg. v. Quail, 4 F. & F. 1076.

—— Pleading — Absence of Principal.]—A party charged as an accessory before the fact could not be compelled to plead to the indictment if the principal did not appear to take his trial. Reg. v. Ashmall, 9 Car. & P. 236. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2.

—— Merger in Felony.]—If a party incited to commit a felony is not an an innocent agent, and the act incited be committed, the party inciting is a principal felon, inasmuch as he is an accessory before the fact to the felony, and the misdemeanor merges in the felony. Reg. v. Welham, 1 Cox, C. C. 192.

—— In what Cases.]—A person is not to be convicted of larceny if doubtful whether an accessory before or after the fact. Reg. v. Munday, 2 F. & F. 170.

A., a married woman, in the lifetime of her husband, married B., a widower:—Held, that if B. knew at the time of his marriage with A. that she was a married woman, he might be convicted of the felony of counselling A. to commit bigamy. Reg. v. Brawn, 1 Car. & K. 144; 1 Cox, C. C. 33.

A servant pretended to concur with two persons who proposed to him to unite with him in robbing his master's house. The servant, acting under instructions from the police, let one of them into the house, who was immediately placed in confinement. After this the servant fetched the other prisoner and let him into the house in the same way. This person was seized with a basket of plate in his hand:—Held, that the former prisoner might be indicted as an accessory before the fact to the stealing. Reg. v. Jones, Car. & M. 218.

A servant let a person into his master's house on a Saturday afternoon, and concealed him there all night in order that he might rob the house; and on the Sunday morning left the premises in pursuance of the previous arrangement. The man, in the servant's absence, broke into the bedroom of the master, and stole the contents of the cash-box:—Held, that the man who took the property from the cash-box was rightly charged as a thief, and the servant who let him into the house as an accessory before the fact. Reg. v. Tuckwell, Car. & M. 215.

If a wife, by the incitement of her husband, knowingly uttered in his absence a forged order and certificate for the reception of prize-money, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 123, they might be indicted together, she as a principal on the statute, and he as an accessory before the fact at common law. Rex v. Morris, 2 Leach, C. C. 1096.

Persons privy to the uttering of a forged note by previous concert with the utterer, but who were not present at the time of uttering, or so near as to be able to afford any aid or assistance, are not principals, but accessories before the fact. Rex v. Soares, R. & R. 25; 2 East, P. C. 974.

If a woman takes poison with intent to procure a miscarriage, and dies of it, she is guilty of self-murder, whether she was quick with child or not; and the person who furnished her with the poison for that purpose, will, if absent when she took it, be an accessory before the fact only. Rex v. Russell, 1 M. C. C. 356.

The deceased woman became pregnant by the prisoner, and died from the effects of corrosive sublimate taken by her for the purpose of producing abortion. The prisoner knowingly procured it for the deceased, at her instigation, and under the influence of threats of self-destruction, if the means of producing abortion were not supplied to her. The jury negatived the fact of his having administered it, or caused it to be taken by her:—Held, that he was not guilty of murder as an accessory before the fact. Reg. v. Fretwell, L. & C. 161; 31 L. J., M. C. 145; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 466; 6 L. T. 333; 10 W. R. 545; 9 Cox, C. C. 152. But see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. ss. 58, 59.

M. had the charge of the prosecutor's warehouse, in which bags were kept; S. for some years had been in the habit of supplying the prosecutor with bags, which were usually placed outside the warehouse, and shortly after so leaving them either S. or his wife called and received payment for them. M. went into his master's warehouse, and clandestinely removed twenty-four bags which had been marked by his master, and placed them outside the warehouse, in the place where S. used to deposit the bags before payment for them. Soon afterwards the wife of S. came and claimed payment for these bags. The prosecutor then sent for S., who, upon being asked respecting the twenty-four bags, said they had been placed there an hour previously by him, and demanded payment for them. The jury found that the bags had been so removed in pursuance of a previous arrangement between the prisoners:—Held, that S. was an accessory before the fact to the larceny. Reg. v. Manning, Dears. C. C. 21; 22 L. J., M. C. 21; 17 Jur. 28; 1 W. R. 40; 5 Cox, C. C. 86.

A man and woman were jointly indicted for feloniously administering to C. a noxious thing to the jurors unknown, with intent to procure miscarriage. C. being in the family way, went to the male prisoner, who said he would giver her some stuff to put her right, and gave her a light-coloured medicine, and told her to take doses of it till she became in pain. She did so, and it made her ill. She then went to him again, and he said the safest course would be to get her a place to go to. He told her that he had found a place for her at L., and gave her some more of the stuff, which he said would take effect when she got there. They went together to L. and met the female prisoner, who said she had been down to the station several times the day before to meet them. C. then began to feel pain, and told the female prisoner of it, whereupon the male prisoner told the latter what he had given C. They all went home to the female prisoner's, and the male prisoner then gave C. another bottle of similar stuff in the female prisoner's presence, and told her to take it like the other. She did so, and became very ill, and next day had a miscarriage, the female prisoner attending on her:—Held, that there was evidence of the female being an accessory before the fact, and a party, therefore, to the administration of the noxious thing. Reg. v. Hollis, 12 Cox C. C. 463; 28 L. T. 455.

If a person knowingly invites another to a certain place, in order that he may be murdered, and he is murdered accordingly, that would constitute such person an accessory before the fact to the murder. Reg. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903.

It is not essential that there should have been any direct communication between an accessory before the fact and the principal felon. It is enough if the accessory directs an intermediate agent to procure another to commit a felony; and it will be sufficient even if the accessory does not name the person to be procured, but merely directs the agent to employ some person. Rex v. Cooper, 5 Car. & P. 535.

The prisoner had procured certain drugs and gave them to his wife, with intent that she should take them in order to procure abortion. She took them in his absence and died from their effects. On an indictment against him for manslaughter, it was objected that he was only an accessory before the fact, and that in law there cannot be an accessory before the fact to manslaughter:—Held, that he was properly found guilty of manslaughter. Reg. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. C. C. 288: 7 Cox, C. C. 253.

Two men, having quarrelled, agreed to fight with their fists, and to bind themselves to fight; each put down 1*l.*, so that 2*l.* might be paid to the winner. The prisoner consented to hold the 2*l.* and pay it over to the winner. Otherwise he had nothing to do with the fight, and he was not present at it. There was no reason to suppose that the life of either man would be endangered. The men fought, and one of them received injuries of which he afterwards died. The prisoner having been informed who was the winner, but not knowing of the other man's danger, paid over the 2*l.* to the winner:—Held, that the prisoner was not an accessory before the fact to the manslaughter of the man killed. Reg. v. Taylor, 44 L. J., M. C. 67; L. R. 2 C. C. 147; 32 L. T. 409; 23 W. R. 616; 13 Cox, C. C. 68.

—— Effect of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2.]—Section 2 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, only applies where the accessory might at common law have been indicted with or after the conviction of the principal. A person therefore cannot be tried for inciting another to commit suicide, although that other commits suicide. Rex v Russell. 1 M. C. C. 356. S. P., Reg. v. Leddington, 9 Car. & P. 79.

After the Fact—In what Cases.]—H. and S. broke open a warehouse, and stole thereout thirteen firkins of butter which they carried along the street thirty yards; they then fetched the prisoner, who was apprised of the robbery, and he assisted in carrying away the property; he was indicted for theft:—Held, that he was only an accessory, and not a principal. Rex v. King, R. & R. 332.

Where three persons agreed to utter a forged note, and one uttered it at Gosport, and the other two, by previous concert, waited at Portsmouth, they were held to be accessories. Rex v. Soares, 2 East, P. C. 974; R. & R. 25.

Several persons were tried upon one indictment, some as principals in murder, others as accessories after the fact. The principals were convicted of manslaughter:—Held, that those charged as accessories might rightly be convicted as accessories to manslaughter. Reg. v. Richards, 46 L. J., M. C. 200; 2 Q. B. D. 311; 36 L. T. 377; 13 Cox, C. C. 611.

A. & B. were in partnership, and B., in fraud of the partnership, disposed of the goods of the firm to the prisoner, who knowingly received the same. Semble, that the prisoner might have been indicted and convicted as an accessory to or after the fact to the felony, either at common law or under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, ss. 1, 3. Reg. v. Smith, 39 L. J., M. C. 112; L. R. 1 C. C. 266; 22 L. T. 554; 18 W. R. 932; 11 Cox, C. C. 511.

A. was indicted for the wilful murder of B., and C. was indicted for receiving, harbouring, and assisting A., well knowing that he had committed the felony and murder aforesaid:—Held, that if the offence of A. was reduced to manslaughter, C. might, notwithstanding, be found guilty, as accessory after the fact. Rex v. Greenacre, 8 Car. & P. 35.

Where a person is charged as accessory after the fact to a murder, the question for the jury is, whether such person, knowing the offence had been committed, was either assisting the murderer to conceal the death, or in any way enabling him to evade the pursuit of justice. Ib.

To substantiate the charge of harbouring a felon, it must be shown that the party charged did some act to assist the felon personally. Reg. v. Chapple, 9 Car. & P. 355.

Upon an indictment against a party as an accessory after the fact in robbery, proof of the prisoner's knowledge of the felony, together with proof of his aiding the principal in disposing of the fruits of the robbery, is sufficient evidence of comforting and assisting, to support the indictment. Reg. v. Butterfield, 1 Cox, C. C. 39.

A prisoner who employed another person to harbour the principal felons may be convicted as accessory after the fact, though he himself did no act of relieving, and the prisoner may be found guilty on the uncorroborated testimony of the person who actually harboured. Rex v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Rob. 40.

A., a lad who was a clerk in a banking-house, robbed his employers: after doing so, he went to the lodgings of B., who was much older than himself, and who had relations in America. A. stayed twenty minutes at B.'s lodgings; and after that, on the same night, A. and B. started together by the coach, and went from Reading to Liverpool, intending to embark for America:—Held, that B. might be convicted as an accessory after the fact, in harbouring, receiving, and maintaining A., the principal felon. Rex v. Lee, 6 C. & P. 536.

Although a statute which creates a new felony will attach to that felony all the common-law incidents to felony, so that accessories thereto will be included, yet it will go no further. Rex v. Sadi, 1 Leach, C. C. 468; 2 East, P. C. 748.

A person is not to be convicted of larceny if it be doubtful whether he is an accessory before or after the fact. Reg. v. Munday, 2 F. & F. 170.

3. Practice relating thereto.

Grand Jury—Different Findings.]—If a charge against an accessory is, that the principal felony was committed by persons unknown, it is no objection that the same grand jury has found a bill imputing the principal felony to J. S. Rex v. Bush, R. & R. 372.

Trial.]—Where a principal and an accessory are indicted together, they will not be allowed to sever in their challenges so as to be tried separately. Reg. v. Fisher, 3 Cox, C. C. 68.

An accessory after the fact indicted in the ordinary way with the principal felon, may, since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 2, be tried before the principal. Reg. v. Hansill, 3 Cox, C. C. 597.

The act of aiding and assisting being a felony by 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 43, the defendant might be indicted before the principal had been tried; and the prosecution need not be instituted within one year after the offence committed, as required by 16 Geo. 2, c. 31, s. 4. Holloway v. Reg., 2 Den., C. C. 287; 17 Q. B. 319; 15 Jur. 825.

If two are indicted for jointly making a corrupt contract with a third person for the procuring an East India cadetship, one may be convicted, though the other is acquitted. Rex v. Taggart, 1 Car. & P. 201.

Indictment—Form of.]—In indicting a person for felony, since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, it is immaterial whether he is a principal in the first or the second degree, or an accessory before the fact, as in either case he is indictable as a principal. Reg. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903.

Semble, an indictment of an accessory should contain a positive averment that the principal was guilty. Reg. v. Read, 1 Cox, C. C. 65.

An accessory after the fact to a felony cannot be convicted upon an indictment charging the commission of the felony only; he should be indicted as an accessory after the fact. Reg. v. Fallon, L. & C. 217; 32 L. J., M. C. 66: 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1217; 7 L. T. 471; 11 W. R. 74; 9 Cox, C. C. 242.

An indictment in two counts charged A. and B. jointly with stealing. A third count charged A. alone with receiving the stolen goods. At the trial no evidence was offered against B., and he was acquitted, in order that he might be called as a witness against A. A. was an accessory before the fact to the stealing by B., and he afterwards received the stolen goods. The jury returned a verdict of guilty against A., which was entered upon all the counts:—Held, that he was not entitled to an acquittal upon the first two counts by reason of the principal, B., having been acquitted, the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1, having made the crime of being an accessory before the fact a substantive felony. Reg. v. Hughes, Bell, C. C. 242; 29 L. J., M. C. 71; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 177; 1 L. T. 450; 8 W. R. 195; 8 Cox, C. C. 278.

Held, also, that there was no inconsistency in the verdict found by the jury, and entered upon all the counts, and therefore the conviction could be supported. Ib.

Three persons were charged with a larceny, and two others as accessories in separately receiving portions of the stolen goods. The indictment also contained two other counts, one of them charging each of the receivers separately with a substantive felony, in separately receiving a portion of the stolen goods. The principals were acquitted:—Held, that the receivers might be convicted on the two last counts of the indictment. Reg. v. Pulham, 9 Car. & P. 280.

Inciting a servant to steal any silk that may be in the servant's care, without further defining the particular silk to be stolen, is sufficiently certain to support a conviction. Reg. v. Quail, 4 F. & F. 1076.

If two persons are indicted for murder, the one as a principal in the first degree, and the other as being present, aiding and assisting to commit it, the jury may find the principal in the first degree not guilty, and convict the principal in the second degree. Rex v. Taylor, 1 Leach, C. C. 360. S. C., nom. Shaw's Case, 1 East, P. C. 351.

An indictment stated that a certain evil-disposed person stole certain goods; that L. C. incited him to do so; that E. C. did the same; that E. M. received a portion of the property, knowing it to have been stolen; it also charged A. and the before-mentioned E. C. as receivers. All these persons having been found guilty, the conviction was held good against all except L. C., who was merely charged as accessory before the fact, and judgment was given as to the charges of receiving only. Reg. v. Caspar, 9 Car. & P. 289; 2 M. C. C. 101.

A count charged A. with the murder of B., and also C. and D. with being present, aiding and abetting A. in the commission of the murder. A. was an insane person:—Held, therefore, that C. and D. could not be convicted on this count. Reg. v. Tyler, 8 Car. & P. 616.

—— Joinder of Counts.]—A count charging a person with being accessory before the fact, may be joined with a count charging him with being accessory after the fact to the same felony, and the prosecutor cannot be required to elect upon which he will proceed, as the party may be found guilty upon both. Rex v. Blackson, 8 Car. & P. 43.

Principal and Accessory.]—Where an indictment contains two counts, the first charging the accused person as principal in a felony, the second charging him as accessory after the fact to the same felony, the prosecution must elect upon which count they will proceed. Reg. v. Brannon, 14 Cox, C. C. 394.

Evidence.]—A person indicted as an accessory befor the fact cannot be convicted of that charge upon evidence proving him to have been present, aiding and abetting. Rex v. Gordon, 1 Leach, C. C. 515; 1 East, P. C. 352.

An indictment against an accessory to a felony, committed by a person unknown, cannot be supported if it appears that the principal felon acknowledged his guilt before the grand jury. Rex v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264.

An accessory may controvert the guilt of the principal, notwithstanding the record of his conviction. Rex v. Smith, 1 Leach, C. C. 288.

An averment of the conviction of the principal is supported by the production of the record, however erroneous the judgment may be. Rex v. Baldwin, 3 Camp. 265.

On an indictment against an accessory, a confession by the principal is not admissible in evidence to prove the guilt of the principal. Rex v. Turner, 1 M. C. C. 347.

It must be proved aliunde, especially if the principal is alive. Ib.

Statements made by a principal are not evidence against an accessory before the fact, although the act was the consequence of such previous incitement of the prisoner. Reg. v. Read, 1 Cox, C. C. 65.

On the trial of an accessory in murder, the principal not being then on his trial, evidence is admissible of statements made by the principal in the absence of the accessory prior to the act charged as the murder, tending to show that it was done with malice; but statements of the principal in the absence of the accessory, describing the occurrence, are not admissible. Reg. v. Pym, 1 Cox, C. C. 339.

—— Sufficiency of.]—Proof that a man occasionally visited coiners; that the rattling of money was occasionally heard with them; that he was seen counting something, as if it was money, when he left them; that on coming to their lodgings just after the apprehension he endeavoured to escape, and was found to have bad money about him; is not sufficient evidence to implicate him as counselling, procuring, aiding, and abetting the coiners. Rex v. Isaacs, 1 Russ. C. & M. 216.

A statement by a prisoner that A. had proposed to him to murder B. on the following night, and that he (the prisoner) agreed to go, but did not do so, is not of itself evidence that the prisoner was accessory before the fact to the murder of B. by A. on that night. Reg. v. Tulfourd, 6 Cox, C. C. 333.

Evidence that A. was privy to a plot to murder B. by explosive machines, is sufficient to go to the jury on counts charging A. with the murder of C. (accidentally killed by the explosion)—with conspiring to murder him, and as an accessory to the fact. Reg. v. Bernard, 1 F. & F. 240.

1. RIGHTS OF THE CROWN.

Before 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23—Legacies.]—Where the legatee of a promissory note bequeathed by will is convicted of felony, the forfeiture caused by such conviction does not divest the executor of his right to sue the maker, though he is a trustee for the crown in respect of the proceeds of the suit. Bishop v. Curtis, 18 Q. B. 878: 21 L. J., Q. B. 391; 17 Jur. 23.

A testator devised real estate to his widow for life, and at her death to trustees, to sell and pay part of the proceeds to B, who committed a felony, but had undergone his punishment before the widow's death:—Held, that his interest was not forfeited to the crown. Thompson, In re, 22 Beav. 506.

The testator also directed his trustees to provide a fund out of his personalty and other real estate, to secure an annuity for his widow. The fund was provided:—Held, that B.'s interest, being vested, became forfeited to the crown by his conviction for felony in the widow's life, though he had undergone his punishment previously to her death. Ib.

A stock legacy, and a share of residuary personalty expectant on the death of a tenant for life, bequeathed to a minor, payable at twenty-one, with a limitation over in the event of his death under twenty-one, are interests which, prior to the 4th July, 1870, were forfeitable to the crown on the conviction of the minor for felony. Bateman's Trusts, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 553; L. R. 15 Eq. 355; 28 L. T. 395; 21 W. R. 435; 12 Cox, C. C. 447.

On a petition by the attorney-general for payment to the crown of personal property of a felon:—Held, that a conviction in New South Wales was sufficient to support the petition. Ib.

A father bequeathed to his son S. "the interest of 2,000*l.* to be paid him by my executor yearly so long as he lives, and then the principal to be divided amongst my real sons and daughters that are living except my son that has the interest paid him." The will contained no residuary gift. The father left S., and eight other children, who all predeceased S. One of the eight children was convicted of felony during the life of S, and died in prison. His interest under the will having been claimed by the crown:—Held, that the claim could not be sustained. Davis's Trusts, In re, 27 L. T. 477.

Intestacy.]—A., the wife of a felon under sentence of transportation, died intestate, leaving property acquired after the conviction of her husband:—Held, that such property belonged to the crown as accrued to the felon, and not to the next of kin of the wife. Coombes v. Queen's Proctor, 2 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 547; 16 Jur. 820.

Goods Stolen.]—Goods of an adjudged felon, stolen from his house, in the possession and occupation of his wife, may be described in an indictment for larceny as the goods of the Queen. But the house cannot be so described without office found. Reg. v. Whitehead, 2 M. C. C. 181.

Right of Action.]—A right of action for damages is not forfeited to the crown upon a conviction for felony. Fleming v. Smith, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 404.

But a right of action, in respect of money had and received, money paid, and upon an account stated, is forfeited. Ib.

Plea to the money counts, that the plaintiff had been convicted of felony, and sentenced to six years' penal servitude; and that the causes of action accrued after the plaintiff was convicted, and before he had endured the punishment to which he was adjudged; and that, by reason of the conviction, the moneys and rights of action for recovery thereof, became forfeited to the crown, and had not since been restored. Replication, that the felony was not punishable with death, and that before action, and after sentence, the sentence and punishment had been commuted, and that the plaintiff had endured the full term of the commuted punishment, is no answer. Ib.

Settlements.]—A., upon his marriage with B., settles land of 400*l.* per annum for her jointure, and covenants, that if the particular lands so settled should not yield 400*l.* per annum clear, B. should have so much of the rents of the residue of the settled estate as should make up the said 400*l.* per annum. A., being attainted of high treason, his estate became forfeited, and was granted by the crown to J. S. The particular jointure lands did not amount to 400*l.* per annum:—Held, that the jointress is entitled, as against the grantee of the crown, to have the deficiency made good. Eustace v. Keightley, 4 Bro. P. C. 588.

Quære, whether a foreign woman who marries a subject of England attainted for high treason shall forfeit her portion to the king. Drummond v. Decker, 9 Mod. 100.

The income of certain personal property is given to A. for life; and after his decease to B. A. is convicted of a capital felony, and receives sentence of death, which is commuted into transportation for life:—Held, that B.'s interest does not take effect by the forfeiture of A., and that the crown is entitled to the income during the life of A. Hiett v. Att.-Gen., 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 69.

A settlement contained a provision, that if any of the children who were the objects of the settlor's bounty should, previously to the assignment to him of the trust property, have alienated his expectant share, then his share should be forfeited and belong to the others. One of the children, before the assignment to him, and before his share vested, committed a felony, and then executed a deed purporting to be an assignment of his share:—Held, that this operated as a forfeiture to such of the others as were entitled to take under the settlement, and was valid against the crown. Blake v. Burnett, 2 Drew. & Sm. 117; 31 L. J., Ch. 898; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 812; 6 L. T. 886; 10 W. R. 767.

Freeholds.]—Freeholds of inheritance which, at the time of his death, belong to a man who dies felo de se, do not escheat to the crown, but pass to his heir-at-law. Norris v. Chambres, 29 Beav. 246; 30 L. J., Ch. 285; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 59. Affirmed on appeal, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 4 L. T. 345; 9 W. R. 794.

Land belonging to several persons was taken under a local act, and the purchase-money paid into court. One of the owners was afterwards convicted of felony, and sentenced to transportation for seven years, after the expiration of which he claimed his share of the purchase-money:—Held, that the money retained its character of realty, and was not forfeited to the crown. Harrop, In re, 3 Drew. 726; 26 L. J., Ch. 516; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 380; 5 W. R. 449.

In Att.-Gen. v. Sands (Hard. 488; 2 Freem. 129; 3 Ch. Rep. 33), it was held that the trust of a term attending on the inheritance was not forfeited by the felony of the cestui que trust, because it was no more than an accessory to the inheritance, which was not forfeited. It is not denied, however, that where a term is attending on the inheritance and the king extends the inheritance, he shall have a right to the term. Nicholls v. How, 2 Vern. 389.

A., seised of a freehold lease for lives, is indicted and found guilty of coining:—Held, that the whole estate is forfeited to the crown, notwithstanding the proviso in the act of 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, that no offence made treason or felony by that act shall extend to make any corruption of blood. Horton v. Kirton, 4 Bro. P. C. 141.

A sentence of outlawry for felony does not deprive a party of the right of absolutely disposing of the fee of his property, or directing the execution of a trust. Macrae v. Macrae, Macl. & R. 645. S. C., nom. Macrae v. Hyndman, 6 Cl. & F. 212.

Lands being settled by H. on sons of R., successively in tail male, with divers remainders over, and the ultimate reversion to H. and his heirs. H. is attainted of treason; and afterwards B., the issue in tail, being in possession under the limitations, suffers a recovery. Quære, if it is not a bar to the reversion vested in the crown by attainder. Blosse v. Clanmorris, 3 Bligh, 62.

The feoffee shall retain the land to his own use, sur attainder de felony. Anon., Cary, 11.

On forfeiture of an estate the crown or its grantee takes it subject to all charges fairly binding the party with reference to it, although voluntary, but not subject to debts at large. The crown in such cases has the same equity to be relieved against conveyance on the ground of fraud, etc., as the party would have. Bedford (Duke) v. Coke, 2 Ves. 116.

Mortgages.]—Where mortgagor was attainted, the court would not decree a foreclosure against the crown, but directed the mortgagee should hold and enjoy till the crown thought proper to redeem the estate. Powell v. Knowles, 2 Atk. 224.

J. S., having made a mortgage of his estate, was afterwards outlawed for high treason. The attorney-general on behalf of the crown was admitted to redeem. Att.-Gen. v. Crofts, 4 Bro. P. C. 136.

The title deeds of a leasehold estate were deposited with bankers by way of equitable mortgage, for securing the balance of a running account. The party making the deposit was subsequently convicted of felony. A bill was filed by the bankers, claiming to be equitable mortgagees by virtue of the deposit against the attorney-general for a sale of the property:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction, the legal estate being in the crown, to decree a sale of the estate, nor any power to compel a conveyance by the crown of the legal estate, but only to declare the plaintiffs, as equitable mortgagees, entitled to hold possession of the property until the crown should think fit to redeem. Hodges v. Att.-Gen., 3 Y. & Coll. 342; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 28.

Personal Property.]—Personal property not belonging to a felon convicted of simple larceny, and sentenced to transportation, at the time of his conviction, but accruing due to him afterward, before his time of transportation has expired, is forfeited to the crown. Roberts v. Walker, 1 Russ. & M. 752.

All the goods and chattels of a person convicted of felony, which he had at the time of his conviction, or which came to him since, and before the expiration of his sentence, or the period of his pardon, and also all moneys in the funds standing in the names of the trustees for the benefit of such person, are forfeited to the crown. Buckley v. Stapleton, 9 I. J. (O.S.) Ch. 263.

Where the husband was attainted of felony, and pardoned on condition of transportation, and afterwards the wife became entitled to some personal estate, as orphan to a freeman of London, this personal estate decreed to belong to the wife as to a feme sole. Newsome v. Bowyer, 3 P. W. 37.

Grantee of goods of a felon shall have an account of them, wherever they are. Anon., Cary, 15.

Practice.]—Order made under the Escheat Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, for a reference to inquire whether a person convicted of felony in the year 1822 was a trustee of stock standing in his name for the petitioner, and whether any grant thereof had been made by the crown:—Held, not necessary to serve the attorney-general on behalf of the crown with notice of the application to the court. Tyson, In re, 1 Jur. 281.

The affidavit of one of the clerks of the treasury, that he had searched the registry of grants in the office of the secretary of state, and had found no grant by the crown of the estate of a trustee who had been convicted of forgery, held sufficient evidence of the non-existence of that grant. Ib. 472.

2. Validity of Assignments by Felons.

In what Cases.]—After the commission of a felony, and before his conviction, a felon may sell or assign over his personal property for valuable consideration; and a debt existing at the time of the commission of the offence is a sufficient consideration to support such an assignment. But the sale must be bonâ fide, and not colourable and merely for the purpose of avoiding the forfeiture on conviction. Chowne v. Baylis, 31 Beav. 351; 31 L. J., Ch. 757; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1028; 6 L. T. 739; 11 W. R. 5.

The assignment by a felon of his goods and chattels after the offence committed, and before conviction, depends for its validity, as against the claim of the crown, upon valuable consideration and the bona fides of the transaction. Perkins v. Bradley, 1 Hare, 219; 6 Jur. 254.

A transfer made on the eve of bankruptcy from the fear of criminal process is valid. De Tastet, Ex parte, Latham, In re, Mont. 138. And see id. 153.

A conveyance made by a felon after he has committed the offence is a fraud. Buckley v. Stapleton, 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 263.

A voluntary settlement of personal estate, executed in favour of a wife and children, after the commission of a felony, but before and in fear of conviction, is invalid against the crown. Saunders, In re, 4 Giff. 179; 1 N. R. 256; 32 L. J., Ch. 224; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 570; 7 L. T. 704; 11 W. R. 276; 9 Cox, C. C. 279.

Although, by contemplation of law, the whole time during which assizes continue at one place is considered for some purposes as one legal day, yet the particular day on which a conviction actually took place may be proved when necessary: and therefore, where a convicted felon made a bonâ fide assignment of goods after the commission-day of the assizes, but before the day on which he was actually convicted:—Held, that the assignee could prove the actual day of the conviction, although the record mentioned only the commission-day, and that the assignment was valid. Whitaker v. Wisbey, 12 C. B. 44; 21 L. J., C. P. 116; 16 Jur. 411; 6 Cox, C. C. 109.

When a deed is made by a prisoner on the eve of his trial for a capital offence, which assigns his property to another, it cannot be supported without proof of consideration. Shaw v. Bran, 1 Stark. 319; 18 R. R. 772.

In January, 1815, A. was convicted of bigamy, and sentenced to seven years transportation. In April following, he conveyed away certain estates in which he had a life interest, by lease and release:—Held, that this conveyance was valid against the crown, there having been no attainder. Rex v. Bridger, 1 M. & W. 145; 1 Tyr. & G. 437; 5 L. J., Ex. 127.

If A., being in custody on a charge of felony, conveys all his property in trust for his wife for life, and then in trust for his son, and on the next day A. is convicted of the felony, this conveyance will be void as against the crown. Morewood v. Wilkes, 6 Car. & P. 144.

Exercise of Power of Revocation.]—A felon, shortly before his conviction, conveyed real estate to trustees upon certain trusts, reserving to himself a power of revocation. Whilst still undischarged he borrowed a sum of money, and, by a memorandum, agreed that it should be charged upon his settled estate:—Held, that the memorandum of charge was an equitable exercise of the power of revocation, and that such power was duly exercised in favour of the mortgagee. Mainprice v. Pearson, 25 W. R. 768.

Prisoner Acquitted on Ground of Insanity—Effect of Assignment by.]—A person being in prison on a charge of felony, in order to avoid a forfeiture of his property in the event of a conviction, executed a voluntary deed, assigning his personal estate to his brother absolutely. He was tried, found not guilty, on the ground of insanity, and ordered to be imprisoned as a lunatic during her Majesty's pleasure:—Held, that the deed, being without consideration, and executed by an insane person under a total misapprehension, was inoperative, and that the representatives of the brother took no interest under it. Manning v. Gill, 41 L. J., Ch. 736; L. R. 13 Eq. 485; 26 L. T. 14; 20 W. R. 357; 12 Cox, C. C. 274.

Property vested in Mortgagee on Trust.]—Section 8 of the Felony Act, 1870, which renders a convict during the time he is subject to the operation of the act incapable of alienating any property, does not apply to property vested in such convict as trustee or mortgagee. He could consequently alienate such property before the Trustee Act, 1893, by s. 48 of which it is provided that property so vested shall remain in the convict. Levy and the Debenture Corporation, In re, 8 R. 820; 42 W. R. 533.

3. Effect of Pardon.

A pardon granted to a felon under the sign manual, has not the effect of a pardon under the great seal. Gough v. Davies, 2 Kay & J. 623; 25 L. J., Ch. 677; 4 W. R. 618.

The 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 26, protects felons whose sentences have been remitted by the governor of a penal colony, in the enjoyment of property subsequently acquired by them, not only by their own industry, but also by other means. Ib.

Therefore, where a convict who had received a conditional free pardon subsequently became entitled, as one of a class which could not be previously ascertained, to a share of personal property bequeathed by a will made long before the date of his conviction, he was entitled to retain this share against the crown. Ib.

The 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 26, enables a felon who has obtained a remission of sentence to maintain an action in respect only of property to which he has acquired a title after conviction. Fleming v. Smith, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 404.

A conditional pardon, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 7, is valid, although no place is exempted from its operation. Blake v. Barnett, 2 Drew. & Sm. 117; 31 L. J., Ch. 898; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 812; 6 L. T. 886; 10 W. R. 767.

In 1833, A. was convicted of felony, and transported. At this time his wife was entitled to a fund, contingently on her surviving her mother. In 1846, A. obtained a conditional pardon, available in all places except the United Kingdom. The mother died in 1838, and the wife in 1852. On a petition by the crown for payment, the court, without deciding the right, merely ordered payment to the administrator of the wife. Harrington, In re, 29 Beav. 24.

A party sentenced to death for felony, which sentence was commuted to transportation for life, received a conditional free pardon in a penal colony:—Held, that such pardon did not alter the effect of the attainder in vesting his property in the crown. Church's Will, In re, 16 Jur. 517.

A., possessed of a lease for years, is outlawed for treason, the king grants away the term; the outlawry is reversed, the term ought to be restored. Peyton v. Ayliff, 2 Vern. 312.

Where a legacy was given to a person when he should attain the age of twenty-one, and if he should die under that age, without issue, over; and the legatee committed a felony and underwent the punishment to which he was sentenced for the offence before he attained twenty-one, which punishment, by the 9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 3, operates as a pardon, and restores the felon to his civil rights. It was held that the legatee, upon attaining twenty-one, was entitled to the legacy. Stokes v. Holden, 1 Keen, 145; 5 L. J., Ch. 291.

Where the husband was attainted of felony, and pardoned on condition of transportation, and afterwards the wife became entitled to some personal estate, as orphan to a freeman of London, this personal estate decreed to belong to the wife as a feme sole. Newsome v. Bowyer, 3 P. W. 37.

And see post, col. 1920.

4. CIVIL REMEDY SUSPENDED UNTIL PROSECUTION.

When Action Maintainable.]—Where a debt arises out of a felonious act of the debtor, the civil remedy is suspended only until public justice is satisfied. Dudley and West Bromwich Banking Co. v. Spittle, 1 Johns. & H. 14; 2 L. T. 47; 8 W. R. 351.

Therefore, where a party, who claimed to be a creditor for the amount paid by him on a forged cheque, had commenced a prosecution upon which a true bill was found and the prisoner was arraigned, but the prosecutor had abstained from bringing on the trial by direction of the judge, who thought the ends of justice satisfied by sentencing the prisoner for another forgery, to which he had pleaded guilty:—Held, that he had done enough to satisfy the rule of law, and that his civil remedy revived. Ib.

A., a banker's clerk, misappropriated the moneys of his employers, but the false entries relating to the transactions were not discovered until after his death. The banking company having filed a bill in equity against his legal personal representative for an account, the defendant demurred, on the ground that the acts of A. were felonious, and therefore could not be made the ground of a suit in equity. The rule of public policy not applying, the demurrer was overruled. Wickham v. Gatrell, 2 Sm. & G. 353; 2 Eq. R. 805; 23 L. J., Ch. 783; 18 Jur. 768; 2 W. R. 673.

The civil remedies for suing the felon, which belong to the person whose property has been feloniously taken, are suspended, after the discovery of the commission of the offence, until the conviction of the felon, in order that the dignity of the law may be vindicated by the prosecution and conviction of the felon. But it is indifferent by whom the felon is prosecuted. Chowne v. Baylis, 31 Beav. 351; 31 L. J., Ch. 757; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1028; 6 L. T. 739; 11 W. R. 5.

Where a claim is founded upon a matter which might be the subject of criminal proceedings, the person seeking to enforce it must prosecute for the criminal offence before he can sue in a civil action—per Halsbury, L. C. Vernon v. Watson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 472; [1891] 2 Q. B. 288; 64 L. T. 728; 39 W. R. 520; 56 J. P. 85.

Money embezzled by the felonious act of a clerk, and applied by him in the purchase of property, cannot be recovered in civil proceedings, nor can such property be followed or claimed. Cox v. Paxton, 17 Ves. 329; 11 R. R. 95.

In an action for the recovery of a brooch, the pleas being not guilty and not possessed, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff. A rule for a new trial having been obtained, on the ground that it appeared that the brooch was taken by the defendant under such circumstances as to prove a charge of felony, and that the judge ought therefore to have nonsuited:—Held, that the judge was bound to try the issues on the record, and that he was right in not having nonsuited the plaintiff. Wells v. Abrahams, 41 L. J., Q. B. 306; L. R., 7 Q. B. 554; 26 L. T. 433; 20 W. R. 659.

An action cannot be maintained where a declaration alleges a case of felony; secus, where the declaration alleges only a misdemeanor. Fissington v. Hutchinson, 15 L. T. 390.

In an action by a woman for assaulting her and forcibly violating her person, whereby she was delivered of a child, the judge, upon her evidence, directed a nonsuit:—Held, that the direction was right, for if a rape had been committed no action would lie until after the defendant had been prosecuted; and if the plaintiff had consented she could not maintain an action for the assault. Wellock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146; 32 L. J., Ex. 285; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 232; 7 L. T. 751. S. P., Quinlan v. Barber, Beat. 47.

An insurance company granted a fire policy to S., and during the currency of the policy S.'s wife feloniously burnt the property insured. The company, not admitting any claim on the policy, brought an action against S. and his wife for the damage done by the act of the wife:—Held, that the action for the felony, if it were maintainable, was maintainable without showing that the felon had been prosecuted. Midland Insurance Co. v. Smith, 50 L. J., Q. B. 329; 6 Q. B. D. 561; 45 L. T. 411; 29 W. R. 850; 45 J. P. 699.

In an action for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter a paragraph of the statement of claim alleged that the defendant administered noxious drugs to the daughter for the purpose of procuring abortion:—Held, that the paragraph could not be struck out as disclosing a felony for which the defendant ought to have been prosecuted, inasmuch as the plaintiff was not the person upon whom the felonious act was committed, and had no duty to prosecute. Appleby v. Franklin, 55 L. J., Q. B. 129; 17 Q. B. D. 93; 54 L. T. 135; 34 W. R. 231; 50 J. P. 359.

It is not necessary for the owner of stolen goods to prosecute the thief to conviction before he can recover them in an action against an innocent third person. Lee v. Bayes, or Robinson, 18 C. B. 599; 25 L. J., C. P. 249; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1093. S. P., White v. Spettigue, 13 M. & W. 603; 1 Car. & K. 673; 14 L. J., Ex. 99; 9 Jur. 70.

Debts Provable in Bankruptcy—Claim Arising out of Felony — No Prosecution.] — Bankers allowed a customer to overdraw his current account on his depositing with them as security for the overdraft some bills of exchange drawn by him upon, and purporting to be accepted by, a third person. After the customer had overdrawn his account the bankers discovered that the acceptances were forgeries. They then communicated with the customer, and ultimately gave up the forged acceptances to him, receiving from him in exchange joint and several promissory notes of himself and his father. The customer was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt. The notes were not paid at maturity:—Held, that though the bankers had not prosecuted the bankrupt for the felony, and whether they had or had not agreed not to prosecute him, they were entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for the balance due to them upon the bankrupt's current account. Leslie, Ex parte, Guerrier, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 689; 20 Ch. D. 131; 46 L. T. 548; 30 W. R. 344; 15 Cox, C. C. 125—C. A.

Per James and Bramwell, L.JJ.:—Even if a person injured by a felony is debarred from proving in the bankruptcy of the felon in respect of the injury until he has prosecuted the felon, the obligation to prosecute does not extend to his trustee in bankruptcy, though the injured person himself tendered his proof before his own bankruptcy. Bull, Ex parte, Shepherd, In re, 48 L. J., Bk. 57; 10 Ch. D. 667; 40 L. T. 141; 27 W. R. 563; 14 Cox, C. C. 237—C. A.

Per Baggallay, L.J.:—A person who has been injured by a felony is not allowed by the policy of the law to seek civil redress, if he has failed in his duty of bringing or endeavouring to bring the felon to justice. And the trustee in bankruptcy of the injured person stands in no better position than he himself. Ib.

But this rule does not apply where the offender has escaped from the jurisdiction, before a prosecution could have been commenced by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Ib.

Statement of Claim showing Felony.]—A statement of claim is not demurrable on the ground that it shows the cause of action to be a felony for which the felon has not been prosecuted. Roope v. D'Avigdor, 10 Q. B. D. 412; 48 L. T. 761; 47 J. P. 248.

—— Staying Proceedings.]—In an action for damages for acts amounting to a felony:—Held, that the court should not interfere summarily to stay the action on the ground of the unprosecuted felony in the absence of an application for the purpose by either party. S. v. S., or A. v. B., 16 Cox, C. C. 566; 24 L. R. Ir. 235.

5. OTHER POINTS RELATING TO.

Act of Bankruptcy—Convicted Felon not complying with Debtor Summons.]—Notwithstanding the provision contained in s. 8 of the act 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, that every convicted felon shall, during the time while he shall be subject to the operation of the act, be incapable of alienating or charging any property, such a convict can pay a debt which is claimed by a debtor summons issued and served on him after his conviction, and if he fails to pay the debt within the time limited by the summons, he will commit an act of bankruptcy, upon which an adjudication can be made against him. Graves, Ex parte, Harris, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 1; 19 Ch. D. 1; 45 L. T. 397; 30 W. R. 51; 46 J. P. 70; 14 Cox, C. C. 629; 15 Cox, C. C. 118—C. A.

Action by Felon.]—A testatrix by her will, dated in July, 1869, devised and bequeathed all her real and personal estate to T. K. in trust for her sister M. C. for life, and after her decease upon trust to pay to or permit H. C. D. to receive the interest for his life, but if he should become bankrupt, or publicly insolvent, or should compound with his creditors, or should assign or incumber his interest under the trust, or any part thereof, or should otherwise by his own act, or by operation of law, be deprived of the absolute personal enjoyment of the same interest, or any part thereof, then, and in either of such cases, the trust in favour of H. C. D. should be void, and T. K. should thenceforth apply the interest for the maintenance, education, and support of the children of H. C. D. The testatrix died in 1871, and M. C. died in 1881. In July, 1878, H. C. D. was convicted of felony, and sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. Before the expiration of his sentence he obtained a ticket-of-leave, and commenced this action for the administration of the estate of testatrix, and claimed the arrears of interest:—Held, that, under s. 30 of the act 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, he could commence the action. Held also that he had not been deprived of the actual enjoyment of the life interest by any operation of law; and that he was entitled to all arrears of interest. Dash, In re, Darley v. King, 57 L. T. 219.

A party appointed executor and after the testator's death convicted of felony is not thereby disentitled to maintain a suit for establishing the validity of the will. Smethurst v. Tomlin, 2 Sw. & Tr. 143; 30 L. J., P. 269; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 763; 4 L. T. 712.

A person attainted could be heard as a suitor in a court of justice only for the direct purpose of reversing the attainder, not in the prosecution of a civil right. Bullock, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 452; nom. Rex v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 82; 2 Leach, C. C. 966.

Actions against Attainted Persons.]—Ejectment may be maintained for freehold lands, on the demise of a person attainted of felony, when there has been no office found on behalf of the king. Doe d. Griffith v. Pritchard, 5 B. & Ad. 765; 2 N. & M. 489; 3 L. J., K. B. 11.

An action will lie against one attainted of treason. Ramsay v. M'Donald, 1 W. Bl. 30. S. C., nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

No Defence to Action against Master for Damage caused by Servant.]—The defence that the act complained of amounted to a felony does not apply to an action against a master for damages sustained through the wrongful act of a servant. Osborn v. Gillett, 42 L. J., Ex. 53; L. R. 8 Ex. 88; 28 L. T. 197; 21 W. R. 409.

Plea of Conviction.]—Where a plea, that the plaintiff since the last pleading has been convicted of felony, is pleaded darrein continuance, the plaintiff may confess the plea, and sign judgment for his costs. Barnett v. L. & N. W. Ry., 5 H. & N. 604; 2 L. T. 250; 8 W. R. 500.

II. MISDEMEANORS.

1. Where Evidence proves a Felony, 1143.
2. At Common Law, 1143.
3. Practice, 1147.

1. WHERE EVIDENCE PROVES A FELONY.

Felony partly Proved.]—Upon an indictment for a misdemeanor, it is no ground for an acquittal that the evidence necessary to prove the misdemeanor also shows it is part of a felony, and that the felony has been completed. Reg. v. Button, 11 Q. B. 929; 18 L. J., M. C. 19; 12 Jur. 1017; 3 Cox, C. C. 229.

2. AT COMMON LAW.

Attempt to Commit.]—Every attempt (not every intention, but every attempt) to commit a misdemeanor is a misdemeanor. Reg. v. Martin, 9 Car. & P. 215. S. P., Reg. v. Martin, 9 Car. & P. 213; 2 M. C. C. 123.

An attempt to commit a misdemeanor is a misdemeanor, whether the offence was created by statute or was an offence at common law. Rex v. Roderick, 7 Car. & P. 795; Rex v. ——, R. & R. 107; Rex v. Butler, 6 Car. & P. 368.

The moment a man takes one necessary step towards the completion of a misdemeanor, he commits a misdemeanor. Reg. v. Chapman, infra.

A soliciting and inciting a person to commit an offence where no other act is done except the soliciting and inciting, is a misdemeanor only. Reg. v. Gregory, 36 L. J., M. C. 60; L. R. 1 C. C. 77; 16 L. T. 388; 15 W. R. 774; 10 Cox, C. C. 459.

To incite a servant to rob his master is a misdemeanor at common law, and it is no defence that the servant purposely submitted himself to the incitement with intent to betray the master. Reg. v. Quail, 4 F. & F. 1076.

Overseer Removing Pauper pending Special Case.]—It is not indictable if an overseer, without fraud or menace, remove a pauper under an order, after it has been confirmed, on appeal, by the sessions, subject to the opinion of the Queen's Bench and before its final determination by that court. Reg. v. Cooper, 3 New Sess. Cas. 346; 18 L. J., M. C. 16.

Delivery of Dangerous Article for Carriage.]—It would seem that if persons put on board a ship an unknown article of a combustible and a dangerous nature, without giving due notice of its contents, so as to enable the master to use proper precautions in the stowing of it, they are guilty of a misdemeanor. Williams v. East India Co., 3 East, 192, 201; 6 R. R. 589.

Obstructing Coroner—Burning Dead Body.]—It is a misdemeanor to burn or otherwise dispose of a dead body, with intent thereby to prevent the holding upon such body of an intended coroner's inquest, and so to obstruct a coroner in the execution of his duty, in a case where the inquest is one which the coroner has jurisdiction to hold. Reg. v. Stephenson, 53 L. J., M. C. 176; 13 Q. B. D. 331; 52 L. T. 267; 33 W. R. 44; 49 J. P. 486.

To burn a dead body, instead of burying it, is not a misdemeanor, unless it is so done as to amount to a public nuisance. If an inquest ought to be held upon a dead body, it is a misdemeanor to dispose of the body so as to prevent the coroner from holding the inquest. Reg. v. Price, 53 L. J., M. C. 51; 12 Q. B. D. 247; 33 W. R. 45 n.; 15 Cox, C. C. 389.

Owner Burning House.]—Burning by a man of his own house which is contiguous to others is a misdemeanor at common law. Rex v. Probert, 2 East, P. C. 1030. S. P., Rex v. Isaac, 2 East, P. C. 1031.

Cheats.]—See infra, col. 1236.

Bribery—Common Law Offence.]—Payment or the promise of payment for votes at the election of an assistant overseer of a parish is bribery, and as such is an indictable common law misdemeanor. Reg. v. Lancaster, 16 Cox, C. C. 737.

The endeavour to bribe a man to commit an offence is itself a very serious offence. Wade v. Broughton, 3 Ves. & B. 173.

Affidavit of a bribe offered to a police officer, to assist in obtaining possession of a ward of the court, ordered to be laid before the attorney-general. Ib.

Being in Possession of Coining Tools.]—It is a misdemeanor at common law to have tools for coining in possession with intent to use them. Rex v. Sutton, 1 East, P. C. 172.

A., with the intent of coining counterfeit half dollars of Peru, procured dies in this country for stamping and imitating such coin. He was apprehended before he had obtained the metal and chemical preparations necessary for making counterfeit coin:—Held, that the procuring of dies was an act in furtherance of the criminal purpose, sufficiently proximate to the offence intended, and sufficiently evidencing the criminal intent, to support an indictment founded on it for a misdemeanor, although the same facts would not have supported an indictment for attempting to make counterfeit coin. Reg. v. Roberts, Dears. C. C. 539; 25 L. J., M. C. 17; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1094; 7 Cox, C. C. 39.

Base Coin.]—Procuring base coin with intent to utter it as good, is a misdemeanor. Rex v. Fuller, R. & R. 308.

But having counterfeit coin in possession with intent to utter it as good is no offence, for there is no criminal act done. Rex v. Stewart, R. & R. 288. S. P., Rex v. Heath, R. & R. 184.

Attempt to Commit Suicide.]—An attempt to commit suicide is a misdemeanor at common law. Reg. v. Doody, 6 Cox, C. C. 463.

Attempt to have Carnal Knowledge.]—Attempting to carnally know and abuse a girl between the ages of ten and twelve, if she consented to all that was done, was a misdemeanor. Reg. v. Martin, 9 Car. & P. 213; 2 M. C. C. 123.

S. P., Reg. v. Johnson, L. & C. 632 ; 34 L. J., M. C. 192 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 532 ; 12 L. T. 503 ; 13 W. R. 815 ; 10 Cox, C. C. 114.

To have Connection by False Pretences.]—A conspiracy to procure by false pretences, false representations, and other fraudulent means a young girl to have illicit carnal connection with a man is a misdemeanor at common law. Reg. v. Mears, T. & M. 414 ; 2 Den. C. C. 79 ; 20 L. J., M. C. 59 ; 15 Jur. 66 ; 4 Cox, C. C. 425. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95.

Procuring Indecent Prints with Intent to Publish.]—It is a misdemeanor to procure indecent prints with intent to publish them. Dugdale v. Reg., 1 El. & Bl. 425 : Dears. C. C. 64 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 50 ; 17 Jur. 546.

But to preserve and keep them in possession with such intent is not. Ib.

Therefore, where some counts charged that the defendant obtained and procured indecent prints, in order and for the purpose of unlawfully publishing and selling them, and thereby corrupting the public morals, and other counts charged that the defendant unlawfully and knowingly preserved and kept in his possession indecent prints, with the same intent :—Held, that the former counts were good, inasmuch as they charged an act done towards the commission of a misdemeanor ; but that the latter counts were bad, inasmuch as they did not charge such an act. Ib.

Indecent Exhibition.]—An obscene exhibition in a booth on a racecourse with closed doors, to a number of spectators who have paid for their admission upon the invitation of the keepers of the booth to the general public, is a misdemeanor at common law. Reg. v. Saunders, 45 L. J., M. C. 11 ; 1 Q. B. D. 15 ; 33 L. T. 677 ; 24 W. R. 348 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 116.

Uttering Bill with Genuine Indorsement.]—The uttering a bill with a genuine indorsement, under pretence of being the indorser, is only a misdemeanor. Rex v. Hevey, R. & R. 407, n. ; 2 East, P. C. 856, 856 ; 1 Leach, C. C. 229.

Uttering Instrument—Forgery at Common Law.]—Uttering a forged instrument, the forgery of which is only a forgery at common law, is no offence, unless some fraud is actually perpetrated by it. Reg. v. Boult, 2 Car. & K. 604.

Uttering Forged Character.]—Uttering a false testimonial to character, knowing it to be forged, with intent to deceive, and thereby obtaining a situation of emolument, is a misdemeanor at common law. Reg. v. Sharman, Dears. C. C. 285 ; 23 L. J., M. C. 51 ; 18 Jur. 157 ; 2 W. R. 227 ; 6 Cox, C. C. 312.

Administering Noxious Thing.]—Administering cantharides to a woman, with intent to injure her health, was not a misdemeanor at common law. Reg. v. Hanson, 2 Car. & K. 912 ; 4 Cox, C. C. 138.

Inciting to Commit Unnatural Offence.]—A count in an indictment charged that the prisoner unlawfully, wickedly, and indecently did write and send to H. a letter, with intent thereby to move and incite H. to attempt and endeavour, feloniously and wickedly, to commit an unnatural offence, and by the means aforesaid did unlawfully attempt and endeavour to incite H. to attempt to commit the crime aforesaid :—Held, that the count charged an indictable misdemeanor. Reg. v. Ransford, 31 L. T. 488 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 9.

The evidence was, that H. was a boy at school, and that he had received two other letters from the prisoner, which he read, but that when he received the one mentioned in the above count he did not read it, nor was he in any way aware of its contents, but handed it over to the school authorities :—Held, that the sending the letter proved the attempt to incite, although it might be doubtful whether it could be said to amount to inciting or soliciting, inasmuch as H. was not aware of its contents. Ib.

Demolishing House—Not Feloniously.]—Two men were convicted upon an indictment which averred that they "unlawfully and riotously did assemble, and unlawfully, riotously, and with force, demolish and pull down the house of W., and pull down and scatter a rick of hay of W." :—Held, that, upon the hypothesis that they had demolished the house, not feloniously, but in the assertion of a supposed right, the indictment could be sustained as for a misdemeanor at common law ; that is, for a riot, with a statement of the demolition of the house as matter of aggravation. Reg. v. Casey, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 408.

Act of Fraud on Public Officer.]—Any one act of fraud upon a public officer, with intent to deceive, whereby a matter required by law for the accomplishment of an act of a public nature is illegally obtained, amounts to an indictable misdemeanor ; and it need not be alleged or proved either that the act was in fact accomplished, or that the party, at the time of committing the fraud, intended that it should be. Reg. v. Chapman, 2 Car. & K. 846 ; 1 Den. C. C. 432 ; T. & M. 90 ; 18 L. J., M. C. 152 ; 13 Jur. 885 ; 3 Cox, C. C. 467.

A false oath taken before a surrogate, with intent to deceive such surrogate, and to obtain from him a licence for a marriage, is punishable as a misdemeanor, although it is not alleged in the indictment, nor proved in evidence, that the marriage was in fact celebrated, and although the party found guilty was not the person about to be married. Ib.

False Oath.]—H. was indicted for perjury in an affidavit under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854, for the purpose of getting a bill of sale filed. The affidavit was sworn before a commissioner for taking affidavits in the court of Queen's Bench :—Held, that this did not constitute perjury, but that he was guilty of taking a false oath, which offence was, under the circumstances, a common-law misdemeanor. Reg. v. Hodgkiss, 39 L. J., M. C. 14 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 212 ; 21 L. T. 564 ; 18 W. R. 150 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 365. S. P., Reg. v. Stone, Dears. C. C. 251 ; 23 L. J., M. C. 14 ; 17 Jur. 1106 ; 6 Cox, C. C. 235.

Orders made under Statutory Powers, Disobeying.]—Where a statute relating to matters concerning the public gives certain commissioners power to make orders relating to common lands, and orders are made accordingly, disobedience to them is a misdemeanor at common law. Reg. v. Walker, 44 L. J., M. C. 169 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 355 ; 33 L. T. 167 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 94.

3. Practice.

Power of Queen's Bench to enter Verdict for Defendant.]—Where a misdemeanor is tried in the Queen's Bench division, and a verdict of guilty has been found, the court has power on motion to enter a verdict for the defendant. Reg. v. Platts, 28 W. R. 915.

In Misdemeanors all are Principals.]—See ante, col. 1125.

C. PARTICULAR OFFENCES.

I. AGAINST PROPERTY OF INDIVIDUALS.

A. ARSON AND BURNING.

1. Generally, 1147.
2. Dwelling-houses with Persons therein, 1148.
3. Houses or Buildings, 1148.
4. Goods, &c., in Buildings, 1151.
5. By Gunpowder and Explosive Substances, 1151.
6. Woods, Stacks, or Straw, 1152.
7. Ships and Vessels, 1153.
8. Threats to Burn, 1154.
9. Indictment, 1155.
10. Evidence, 1157.

1. Generally.

Who may Commit.]—One put by overseers of the poor into a house to live there is merely a servant, and his possession is theirs, and therefore he may commit arson by burning it. Rex v. Gowan, 2 East, P. C. 1027; 1 Leach, C. C. 246.

One entitled to dower only out of a house, which was leased to another, may commit arson by burning it. Rex v. Harris, 2 East, P. C. 1023.

A wife was not indictable under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2, for setting fire to her husband's house with intent to injure him; as it is essential that there should be an intent to injure or defraud some third person, and not one identified with herself. Rex v. March, 1 M. C. C. 182. See Married Women's Property Act, 1882, s. 16.

The Offence.]—Burning a man's own house contiguous to others is a misdemeanor at common law. Rex v. Probert, 2 East, P. C. 1030. S. P., Rex v. Isaac, 2 East, P. C. 1031.

A sailor on board ship entered the spirit room and stole rum, and, while doing so, a lighted match held in his hand came into contact with the inflammable liquor, whence a conflagration ensued which destroyed the ship:—Held, that he was not rightly convicted of arson. Reg. v. Faulkner, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 8; 13 Cox, C. C. 550.

The feloniously burning a dwelling-house is arson at common law; but the burning of an out-house is a statutable felony. Rex v. Nash, 2 East, P. C. 1021.

What is a Burning.]—A small faggot was set on fire on the boarded floor of a room, and the faggot was nearly consumed; the boards of the floor were scorched black, but not burnt, and no part of the wood of the floor was consumed:—Held, not a sufficient burning to support an indictment for arson. Reg. v. Russell, Car. & M. 541.

If a person sets fire to a stack, the fire from which is likely to and does communicate to a barn, which is thereby burnt, the person is indictable for burning the barn. Rex v. Cooper, 5 Car. & P. 535.

To constitute a setting on fire it is not necessary that any flame should be visible. Rex v. Stallion, 1 M. C. C. 398.

It was proved that the floor near the hearth was scorched. It was charred in a trifling way. It had been at a red heat, but not in a blaze:—Held, that this would be a sufficient burning to support an indictment for arson. Reg. v. Parker, 9 Car. & P. 45.

Setting fire to paper only in a drying loft belonging to a paper-mill, no part of which was burnt, was not setting fire to an out-house within 9 Geo. 1, c. 22. Rex v. Taylor, 1 Leach, C. C. 49; 5 East, P. C. 1820.

2. Dwelling-houses with Persons Therein.

Prisoner only in House.]—A prisoner may be indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 2, with setting fire to a dwelling-house, a person being therein, though the prisoner himself, who set fire to the house, is the only person therein at the time. Reg. v. Pardoe, 17 Cox, C. C. 715.

Person being therein.]—A. was indicted under this statute for the capital offence of setting fire to B.'s dwelling-house, B. being therein. A. had set fire to an out-house under the same roof as the dwelling-house, and the fire communicated to the dwelling-house and burnt it. At the time that A. set fire to the out-house B. was in the dwelling-house, but had left it before the fire reached the dwelling-house:—Held, that the capital charge could not be sustained, as B. was not in the house at the time it was on fire. Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 Car. & K. 215. S. P., Reg. v. Warren, 1 Cox, C. C. 68.

Dwelling-house.]—The house set fire to must be a dwelling-house, and a common gaol occupied by none but prisoners is not a dwelling-house for this purpose. Reg. v. Connor, 2 Cox, C. C. 65.

Finding Guilty on another Section.]—On an indictment under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 2, for the capital offence of setting fire to a dwelling-house, some person being therein (the indictment not charging any intent to injure or defraud any person), the prisoner could not be convicted of the transportable offence of setting fire to the house, under s. 3; as an allegation of an intent to injure or defraud some person was essential to an indictment under that section. Reg. v. Paice, 1 Car. & K. 73. S. P., Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 Car. & K. 215.

3. Houses or Buildings.

House, What is.]—An unfurnished structure intended to be used as a house is not a house within the meaning of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 13. Reg. v. Edgell, 11 Cox, C. C. 132.

A building erected not for habitation, but for workmen to take their meals and dry their clothes in, which has four walls, a roof, a door, but no window, but in which a person slept with the knowledge, but without the permission of the owner, was not a house, the setting fire to which was felony, within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3. Reg. v. England, 1 Car. & K. 533; 1 Cox, C. C. 79.

A building which never had been inhabited, but was constructed as and intended for a dwelling-house, though only containing straw, boards and implements of husbandry, was not a house within 9 Geo. 4, c. 22, s. 7. Elsmore v. St. Briavels, 2 M. & Ry. 514; 8 B. & C. 461; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 372.

A common gaol was a house within 9 Geo. 1, c. 22. Rex v. Donnevan, 2 W. Bl. 682; 1 Leach, C. C. 69; 2 East, P. C. 1021. But see now Reg. v. Connor, 2 Cox, C. C. 65, supra.

In order to constitute the offence of setting fire to a house within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, the building must be shewn to be a dwelling-house. Reg. v. Kimbrey, 6 Cox, C. C. 464.

Stable—What is.]—Burning a stable is not supported by proof of burning a shed, which has been built for and used as a stable originally, but has latterly been used as a lumber shed only. Reg. v. Colley, 2 M. & Rob. 475.

A. was charged with setting fire to a stable: it was proved that some haulm had been carted from a field and stacked in a building originally intended for a stable, but it was afterwards divided into three parts by a wall which reached only to the eaves. One part was used as a stable, but that part was not the part fired:—Held, that the building was improperly described as a stable. Reg. v. Munson, 2 Cox, C. C. 186.

The prosecutor had built a place for an oven to bake bricks, but it was afterwards roofed and a door put to it. In this a cow was kept; adjoining to it, but not under the same roof, was a lean-to in which a horse was kept:—Held, that the building was not a stable and that if a person set fire to it (the lean-to not being burnt), he was not indictable for arson to a stable. Rex v. Haughton, 5 Car. & P. 555.

Semble, a building built originally for a stable does not cease to be a stable, though horses have not been kept in it for three years, if nothing has been done in the meantime to show an intention of never again employing it for that purpose. Reg. v. Hammond, 1 Cox, C. C. 60.

Out-house—What is.]—A. was indicted for setting fire to an out-house. The building set on fire was a thatched pigsty, situate in a yard in the possession of the prosecutor, into which yard the back door of his house opened, and which yard was bounded by fences and by other buildings of the prosecutor, and by a cottage and barn which were let by him to a tenant but which did not open into this yard:—Held, that the pigsty was an out-house within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3. Reg. v. Janes, 1 Car. & K. 303; 2 M. C. C. 308.

An out-house means something annexed to an in-house. Reg. v. Hammond, 1 Cox, C. C. 60.

A building separated from the house by a passage, used as a school-room, but within the curtilage, was an out-house within 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, s. 1, although not of the ordinary description of out-houses. Rex v. Winter, R. & R. 295.

A cart hovel, consisting of a stubble roof supported by uprights, in a field at a distance from other buildings, was not an out-house within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2. Rex v. Parrott, 6 Car. & P. 402.

A building had been built for an oven to bake bricks, but afterwards was roofed and a door put to it. In this place the prosecutor kept a cow; neither the prosecutor nor the person of whom he rented this building had any house or farmyard near it, nor did any wall connect it with any dwelling-house; the nearest dwelling being one hundred yards off, and not belonging to either the prosecutor or his landlord:—Held, that the building was not an out-house, and that, if a person set it on fire he was not indictable for arson. Rex v. Haughton, 5 Car. & P. 555.

An open building in a field at a distance from and out of sight of the owner's house, though boarded round and covered in, was not an out-house within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2. Rex v. Ellison, 1 M. C. C. 336.

An open shed in a farm-yard, composed of upright posts supporting pieces of wood laid across them, and covered with straw as a roof, was an out-house, within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2. Rex v. Stallion, 1 M. C. C. 398.

A building which had never been inhabited, but which was constructed as and intended for a dwelling-house, although it only contained straw, boards, and agricultural implements, was not an out-house within 9 Geo. 4, c. 22, s. 7. Elsmore v. St. Briavels, 2 M. & Ry. 514; 8 B. & C. 461; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 372.

A. was indicted for arson of an out-house; it was proved that some haulm had been carted from a field and stacked in a building originally intended for a stable but which was afterwards divided into three parts by a wall. The fire was kindled in a part containing the haulm and a quantity of tiles of the prosecutor, who was a builder:—Held, that the building was improperly described as an out-house. Reg. v. Munson, 2 Cox, C. C. 186.

Barn—What is.]—A building which never had been inhabited, but which was constructed as and intended for a dwelling-house, but which contained straw, boards, and implements of husbandry, was not a barn within 9 Geo. 4, c. 22, s. 7. Elsmore v. St. Briavels, 2 M. & Ry. 514; 8 B. & C. 461; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 372.

Shed—Building for carrying on Trade.]—A. was indicted for having set fire to a building twenty-four feet square, the sides of which were composed of wood, with glass windows; it was roofed, and was used by a gentleman, who built houses on his own property for the purpose of disposing of them, as a storehouse for seasoned timber, as a place of deposit for tools, and as a place where timber was prepared for use:—Held, that this was a shed, and also an erection used in carrying on trade. Reg. v. Amos, T. & M. 423; 2 Den. C. C. 65; 20 L. J., M. C. 103; 15 Jur. 90; 5 Cox, C. C. 222.

A first count charged the firing of a certain building used by O. for carrying on his trade as a builder; and other counts laid the arson as of a stable, an out-house, and a stack of haulm. It was proved that some haulm had been carted from a field and stacked in a building originally intended for a stable, but afterwards divided into three parts by a wall which reached only to the eaves. One part was used as a stable, and the part fired contained the haulm and a lot of tiles of the prosecutor, who was a builder. The fire had been kindled on the haulm:—Held, that the building was improperly described as a shed. Reg. v. Munson, 2 Cox, C. C. 186.

Held, further, that it was a building used by the prosecutor in carrying on his trade. Ib.

Building—What is.]—An unfinished house, brick built, of which all the walls external and internal were built and finished, the roof on and finished, the flooring of a considerable part laid, and the internal walls and ceilings prepared for plastering, is a building within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 6, the setting fire to which is a felony. Reg. v. Manning, 41 L. J., M. C. 11; L. R. 1 C. C. 338; 25 L. T. 573; 20 W. R. 102; 12 Cox, C. C. 106.

4. Goods, &c., in Buildings.

The Offence.]—A person who maliciously set fire to his own goods in his own house with intent, by burning the goods, to defraud an insurance company, but did not set fire to the house, might be convicted of felony under an indictment framed upon 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 8, and 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3. Reg. v. Lyons, Bell, C. C. 38; 28 L. J., M. C. 33; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 23; 7 W. R. 58; 8 Cox, C. C. 84.

No Intention to Burn House.]—Wilfully throwing a light into a post-office letter-box in a house with the intention of burning the letters, but not the house, is not a felony within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 7, 8. Reg. v. Batstone, 10 Cox, C. C. 20.

A person maliciously set fire to goods in a house, with intent to injure the owner of the goods, but he had no malicious intention to burn the house or to injure the owner of it. The house did not take fire:—Held, that if the house had thereby caught fire, the setting fire to it would not have been within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 7, as under the circumstances it would not have amounted to felony. Reg. v. Child, 40 L. J., M. C. 127; L. R. 1 C. C. 307; 24 L. T. 556; 19 W. R. 726; 12 Cox, C. C. 64.

The prisoner was indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 7, for wilfully and maliciously setting fire to a picture frame in a building, under such circumstances as if the building was thereby set fire to, would amount to a felony. The jury found that the prisoner did not set fire to the house apart from the frame, that he did set fire to the frame, that the probable result would be setting fire to the floor of the house, that he did not intend to set fire to the house, that he was not aware that what he did would probably set the house on fire, and so injure the owner, and that he was not reckless or indifferent whether the house was set on fire or not. Upon these findings a verdict of not guilty was directed by the judge. Reg. v. Harris, 15 Cox, C. C. 75.

If a person maliciously, with intent to injure another by merely burning his goods, sets fire to such goods in his house, that does not amount to a felony under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 7, even although the house catches fire, unless the circumstances are such as to show that the person setting fire to the goods knew that by so doing he would probably cause the house also to take fire, and was reckless whether it did so or not; in which case there would be abundant evidence that he intended to bring about the probable consequence of his act, viz., the burning of the house. Reg. v. Nattrass, 15 Cox, C. C. 73.

5. By Gunpowder and Explosive Substances.

Damaging House—Persons being therein.]—24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, was intended to apply to malicious injuries to houses by throwing explosive substances against or into them, with intent to destroy them or injure the inmates, and not to cases of wanton mischief or assault. Reg. v. Brown, 3 F. & F. 821.

On an indictment under s. 9 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, for maliciously damaging a building by the explosion of dynamite, whereby the lives of certain persons were endangered:—Held, that the endangering of life, to be within the section, must result from the damage done to the building particularised in the indictment; but that the enactment does not contemplate the necessity of the persons endangered being inside the building, and would include the case of persons outside whose lives were imperilled by anything proceeding from the damaged building. Reg. v. McGrath, 14 Cox, C. C. 598.

Evidence.]—Held, also, that for the purpose of proving such endangering of life, evidence of damage to other buildings that might be inhabited was not admissible, though such evidence would be admissible for the purpose of showing the nature and character of the explosion, the extent of the damage, and its tendency to injure or destroy the particular buildings. Ib.

—— Exposure to Risk.]—To endanger within s. 9, includes not only actual injury received by a person, but also exposure to risk or chance of injury, but it is for the jury in each case to say, from all the circumstances, whether or not the lives of persons were imperilled. Ib.

Damaging Building—Gunpowder—In what Condition.]—In order to support an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 10, for throwing gunpowder against a house with intent to damage, it is not enough to show simply that gunpowder or other explosive substance was thrown against the house; but it must also be shown that the substance was in a condition to explode at the time it was thrown, although no actual explosion should result. Reg. v. Sheppard, 19 L. T. 19; 11 Cox, C. C. 302.

6. Woods, Stacks, or Straw.

Woods.]—Setting fire to a single detached tree is not arson of any part of a wood within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 17. Reg. v. Davy, 1 Cox, C. C. 60.

A. and B. were charged with setting fire to a wood. They set fire to a summer-house which was in the wood, and from the summer-house the fire was communicated to the wood:—Held, that they might be convicted on this indictment. Reg. v. Price, 9 Car. & P. 729.

Stacks—What are.]—A. and B. were convicted for unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to a stack of grain. The stack was of the flax plant, with the seed or grain in it, and the jury found that the flax seed is a grain:—Held, that the stack was a stack of grain within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 10. Reg. v. Spencer, Dears. & B. C. C. 131; 26 L. J., M. C. 16; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1212; 5 W. R. 70; 7 Cox, C. C. 189.

An indictment for setting fire to a cock of hay cannot be sustained under a statute making it an offence to set fire to a stack of hay. Reg. v. M'Keever, Ir. R., 5 C. L. 86.

A quantity of straw, packed on a lorry, in course of transmission to market, and left for the night in the yard of an inn, is not a stack of straw within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 17, and the setting fire thereto wilfully and maliciously is not felony. Reg. v. Satchwell, 42

L. J., M. C. 63; L. R. 2 C. C. 21; 28 L. T. 569; 21 W. R. 642; 12 Cox, C. C. 449.

A stack, of which the lower part consisted of cole-seed straw and the upper part of wheat stubble was not a stack of straw; and the setting it on fire was not therefore a capital offence within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 17. Rex v. Tottenham, 7 Car. & P. 237.

Setting fire to a score of faggots which were piled one upon another in a loft, which was made by means of a temporary floor put over an archway roofed in between two houses, and under which carts could go, was not setting fire to a stack of wood within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 17. Rex v. Aris, 6 Car. & P. 348.

A count charged an attempt to set fire to a stack of haulm. It was proved that some haulm had been carted from a field, and stacked in a building, originally intended for a stable, but afterwards divided into three parts by a wall, which reached only to the eaves; one part was used as a stable, and the part fired contained the haulm and a lot of tiles:—Held, that the count was sufficient, inasmuch as it is not necessary to the character of a stack that it should be erected out of doors. Reg. v. Munson, 2 Cox, C. C. 186.

Setting fire to a parcel of unthreshed wheat was not a felony within 9 Geo. 1, c. 22. Rex v. Judd, 2 Term Rep. 255; 1 Leach, C. C. 484; 2 East, P. C. 1018; 1 R. R. 477.

Straw—What is.]—Sedge and rushes were not straw within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, which was confined to the straw of wheat, oats, barley and rye. Reg. v. Baldock, 2 Cox, C. C. 55.

The prisoners had set fire to a stack of stubble (which, in Cambridgeshire, is called haulm); they were indicted on a first indictment for setting fire to a stack of straw:—Held, that this was not straw. And, on their being again indicted for setting fire to a stack of straw called haulm, the judge intimated that to convict upon such a count would not be safe; and the verdict, in consequence, was taken upon other counts, charging the setting fire to a barn and a wheat stack. Rex v. Reader, 4 Car. & P. 245; 1 M. C. C. 239.

Attempt to set Stack on Fire—Overt Act.]—It was a sufficient overt act to render a person liable to be found guilty of attempting to set fire to a stack, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 7, if he went to the stack with the intention of setting fire to it and lighted a lucifer match for that purpose, but abandoned the attempt because he found that he was being watched. Reg v. Taylor, 1 F. & F. 511.

7. Ships and Vessels.

What are.]—Semble, a small pleasure boat eighteen feet long is a ship or vessel within s. 10 of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30. Rex v. Bowyer, 4 Car. & P. 559. See Rex v. Smith, 4 Car. & P. 569.

Indictment.]—An indictment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 10, for damaging a vessel need not have stated that the damage was done "otherwise than by fire," if it stated how it was done. Rex v. Bowyer, 4 Car. & P. 559.

Intent to Prejudice Part-owner.]—The destruction of a vessel by a part-owner shows an intent to prejudice the other part-owner, though he has insured the whole ship, and promised that the other part-owner should have the benefit thereof. Rex v. Philp, 1 M. C. C. 264.

Accessory before Fact.]—A person might be tried under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 89, ss. 6, 11, as an accessory before the fact to the offence of setting fire to a vessel of which he was a part-owner. Reg. v. Wallace, Car. & M. 200.

—— Convicted though Principal not tried.]—An indictment was properly framed, which stated that the principal felon cast away and destroyed a vessel, and that the accessory incited, moved, aided, counselled, hired and commanded him to do it; and the accessory might be convicted on an indictment so framed, although the principal had not been tried, and did not appear to be amenable to justice. Ib.

8. Threats to Burn.

What Property.]—Sending a letter threatening to burn standing corn was not an offence within 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 3. Reg. v. Hill, 5 Cox, C. C. 233.

Whose House.]—An indictment on 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 3, charging that the prisoner sent a letter to T. L., threatening to burn the house of J. R., was bad—as the threat must be to the owner of the property; and if the letter was sent to T. L. with intent that it should reach J. R., and did reach him, it should have been charged in the indictment as sent to J. R. Reg. v. Jones, 2 Car. & K. 398; 1 Den. C. C. 218; 1 Cox, C. C. 67.

An indictment for sending a threatening letter stated that one R. had lately built and completed a house; and then charged that the prisoner feloniously sent to one L. a certain letter, threatening to burn the house so built by the said R. Upon objection taken that the indictment ought to have charged a sending to R.:—Held, that the indictment was bad on that ground. Reg. v. Jones, 2 Cox, C. C. 434.

A conviction on 27 Geo. 2, c. 15, for sending a letter to the prosecutor, threatening "to set fire to his mill, and likewise to do all the public injury they were able to him, in all his farms and seteres," was wrong, when the prosecutor had not then any mill to which the threat of burning would apply (having parted with it three years before); and the threat as to the farm, &c., not necessarily implying a burning. Rex v. Jepson, 2 East, P. C. 1115.

Sending a letter to A. threatening to burn a house of which he was owner, but let by him to, and occupied by, a tenant, was not an offence within 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 3. Reg. v. Burridge, 2 M. & Rob. 296.

Indictment for sending a threatening letter under 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 3. First count charged G. with sending to R., and threatening to burn R.'s houses. It was proved that R. had only a reversionary interest in these houses. Quære whether G. could be convicted on that count. Reg. v. Grimwade, 1 Den. C. C. 30; 1 Car. & K. 592; 1 Cox, C. C. 85.

Threat—Question for Jury.]—It may be left to the jury to say whether the letter sent amounted to a threat to burn. Rex v. Tyler, 1 M. C. C. 428. See Reg. v. Carruthers, 1 Cox, C. C. 138.

Sending a Letter.]—If a letter threatening to burn the premises of A., but directed to B., is left at a gate on a public highway with the intention that it should reach as well A. as B., that was a sending to A. within 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 3. Reg. v. Grimwade, supra.

9. INDICTMENT.

Owner of House.]—It must appear upon the face of an indictment for arson that the house was that of another; and it must state whose house, and with that the proof should agree. Rex v. Rickman, 2 East, P. C. 1034. And see Rex v. Glandfield, 2 East, P. C. 1034.

A house, in part of which a man lives, and other parts of which he lets to lodgers, may be described, in an indictment for setting fire to it, as his house, though he has taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act, and executed an assignment including the house, if the assignee has not taken possession; at least, no objection can be made, if in other counts it is stated as the house of the assignee, and in others of the lodger whose room was set fire to. Rex v. Bull, 1 M. C. C. 30.

A common gaol was kept in repair by rates levied upon the inhabitants of the liberty in and for which the gaol was. The keeper of the gaol was appointed by the justices of the liberty. He did not reside at the gaol, but kept the keys and had the charge of it. He was also an inhabitant, and liable to be rated to the repair of the gaol:—Held, that in an indictment under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, s. 1, for setting fire to the gaol, it should have been laid to be in the possession of the keeper of the gaol. Reg. v. Connor, 2 Cox, C. C. 65.

An indictment for setting fire to the dwelling-house of A. and B. is not proved by showing that A. and B. are mortgagees of a house fit for dwelling in, unless it is shown that they reside in it. Reg. v. Allison, 1 Cox, C. C. 24.

A cottage, the tenant of which left it during the tenancy and removed his furniture to enable the landlord to do some repairs, cannot be described as the house of the landlord, but, semble, can be described as the house or dwelling-house of the tenant. Reg. v. Kimbrey, 6 Cox, C. C. 464.

—— Actual Occupier.]—A house may be described as in the possession of the actual occupier, though his possession is wrongful. Rex v. Wallis, 1 M. C. C. 344.

Averment of Property.]—Two were indicted, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, for feloniously setting fire to a shop "of and belonging to" one of them:—Held, that the averment of property was an immaterial averment which need not be proved. Reg. v. Newboult, 41 L. J., M. C. 63; L. R. 1 C. C. 344; 25 L. T. 883; 20 W. R. 343; 12 Cox, C. C. 148.

Thereby Burnt.]—It was not necessary to aver in an indictment on 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, for setting fire to a hay-stack, that the stack "was thereby burnt." Rex v. Salmon, R. & R. 26.

Absence of Malice no Answer.]—In an indictment on 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, for setting fire to a hay-stack, it was no answer to the charge that the prisoner had no malice or spite to the owner of the stack. Ib.

Place where Offence Committed.]—On an indictment for setting fire to a stack of beans, a mistake as to the name of the place where the offence was committed is immaterial; the charge is transitory, not local. Rex v. Woodward, 1 M. C. C. 323.

Intent to Injure or Defraud.]—A prisoner was convicted on an indictment for setting fire with intent to injure A. B. The property fired belonged to A. B. The jury found the intent to injure C. D.:—Conviction held good. Rex v. Newell, 1 M. C. C. 458.

So an indictment under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 17, for setting fire to a stack of straw, was good, without stating any intent to injure. Ib.

An indictment for setting fire to a barge, the property of another, ought to contain an averment that it was done with an intent to injure the owner. Rex v. Smith, 4 Car. & P. 569. Sed quære, see Rex v. Newell, 1 M. C. C. 458; and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 60.

On an indictment for setting fire to a mill, with intent to injure the occupiers thereof:—Held, that an injury to the mill being the necessary consequence of setting fire to it, the intent to injure might be inferred, for a man must be supposed to intend the necessary consequence of his own act. Rex v. Farrington, R. & R. 207.

It is not necessary in a count in an indictment laid under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 7, to allege an intent to defraud, and it is sufficient to follow the words of the section without substantively setting out the particular circumstances relied on as constituting the offence. Reg. v. Hesseltine, 12 Cox, C. C. 404.

A common gaol was kept in repair by rates levied upon the inhabitants of the liberty in and for which the gaol was:—Held, in an indictment under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, s. 1, for setting fire to the gaol, that the intent of the prisoner should have been laid to be to injure the inhabitants of the liberty. Reg. v. Connor, 2 Cox, C. C. 65.

Two persons were indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, for feloniously setting fire to a shop "of and belonging to" one of them:—Held, that the intent to injure another person as owner might be proved in support of the indictment. Reg. v. Newboult, 41 L. J., M. C. 63; L. R. 1 C. C. 344; 25 L. T. 883; 20 W. R. 343; 12 Cox, C. C. 148.

Upon an indictment for arson, with intent to injure the person in occupation of the premises, the prisoner may be found guilty, although his intent is proved to have been to obtain a reward for giving the earliest intimation of a fire at the engine station. Reg. v. Regan, 4 Cox, C. C. 335.

What set on Fire.]—An indictment for setting fire to an out-house was good, though it might have in point of law formed part of the dwelling-house, the burning of which was arson at common law. Rex v. North, 2 East, P. C. 1021.

Upon a statute which made it capital to set fire to a stack of pulse, it was sufficient to state that the prisoner set fire to a stack of beans. The judges will take notice that beans are pulse. Rex v. Woodward, 1 M. C. C. 323.

An indictment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 17, charging a party with setting fire to a stack of barley, of the value of 100*l.*, of R. P. W., was good, although the words of the statute creating the offence were "any stack of corn or grain." Rex v. Swatkins, 4 Car. & P. 548.

Feloniously, &c.]—Held, also, that if the indictment stated "that the prisoner feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously did set fire to a certain stack of barley, of the value of 100*l.*, of R. P. W., then and there being," this is sufficient, without stating that the prisoner feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously did then and there set fire to the stack. Ib.

An indictment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, ss 2 & 17, for setting fire to a barn and a stack of straw, charging the offences to have been committed "feloniously, voluntarily, and maliciously," instead of "feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously," was bad. Rex v. Reader, 4 Car. & P. 245; 1 M. C. C. 239.

10. Evidence.

Notice to Produce Policy.]—On an indictment for arson on the prosecution of an insurance company, their books are not evidence of the insurance, without notice to produce the policy. Rex v. Doran, 1 Esp. 127.

Upon an indictment for arson, with intent to defraud an insurance company, the nature of the proceedings does not give notice to the prisoner to produce the policy, so as to dispense with actual notice to produce it. Reg. v. Kitson, Dears. C. C. 187; 22 L. J., M. C. 118; 17 Jur. 422; 6 Cox, C. C. 159.

—— Length of.]—A prisoner tried at the assizes for arson, on Wednesday, the 20th of March, was on Monday, the 18th, served at the prison with a notice to produce a policy of insurance. The commission day was Friday, the 15th, and the prisoner's home was ten miles from the assize town:—Held, that the notice was served too late. Rex v. Ellicombe, 5 Car. & P. 522; 1 M. & Rob. 260.

Notice to produce policies of insurance, served on the prisoner's attorney on Tuesday evening, the prisoner then being in Maidstone, and the policies twenty miles off, is sufficient when the trial takes place on Thursday. Reg. v. Barker, 1 F. & F. 326.

Proof of Actual Ill-will.]—On an indictment for maliciously setting fire to a building, it is not necessary to prove actual ill-will in the prisoner towards the owner. Reg. v. Davies, 1 F. & F. 69.

Experiments.]—Evidence of experiments made subsequently to the fire is admissible in order to show the way in which the building was set on fire. Reg. v. Hesseltine, 12 Cox, C. C. 404.

What Admissible to show Motive and Intent.]—A. was indicted for wilfully setting fire to a rick by firing a gun close to it on the 29th of March: evidence that the rick was also on fire on the 28th of March, and that A. was then close to it, having a gun in his hand, is receivable to show that the fire on the 29th was not accidental. Reg. v. Dossett, 2 Car. & K. 306; 2 Cox, C. C. 243.

On an indictment for arson in setting fire to a rick, the property of A., evidence may be given of the prisoner's presence and demeanour at fires of other ricks, the property respectively of B. and C., occurring the same night, although those fires are the subject of other indictments against the prisoner, such evidence being important to explain his movements and general conduct before and after the fire of A.'s rick; but evidence is not admissible of threats, of statements, or of particular acts, pointing alone to other indictments, and not tending to implicate or explain the conduct of the prisoner in reference to that fire. Reg. v. Taylor, 5 Cox, C. C. 138.

Under an indictment for arson, where the prisoner is charged with wilfully setting fire to her master's house, the previous and abortive attempts to set fire to different portions of the same premises are admissible though there is no evidence to connect the prisoner with either of them. Reg. v. Bailey, 2 Cox, C. C. 311.

Upon an indictment for arson it is not competent for the prosecutors to show that other fires, of which notice was given by the prisoner, were of a similar nature to the one in question, and different from those of which notice was given by other parties. Reg. v. Regan, 4 Cox, C. C. 335.

On an indictment for arson, one count laying an intent to defraud, and it being opened for the prosecution that the motive might have been to realise the money insured by the prisoner upon her goods: evidence was received that she was in easy circumstances, with a view to show that she was at all events under no pecuniary temptation to commit such an act. Reg. v. Grant, 4 F. & F. 322.

On a charge of arson (the case turning on identity) evidence was rejected that, a few days previously to the fire, another building of the prosecutor's was found on fire, and the prisoner was seen standing by, with a demeanour which showed indifference or gratification. Reg. v. Harris, 4 F. & F. 342.

Upon a trial for arson with intent to defraud an insurance company, evidence that the prisoner had made claims on two other insurance companies in respect of fires which had occurred previously, and in succession, was admitted for the purpose of showing that the fire which formed the subject of the trial was the result of design and not of accident. Reg. v. Gray, 4 F. & F. 1102.

6. Stealing in a Dwelling-house, 1167.
7. Breaking into Shops, Warehouses, or Counting-houses, 1168.
8. Indictment, 1169.
9. Evidence and Trial, 1174.

1. Breaking and Entering.

Breaking—What Sufficient.]—There must be both a breaking and an entering to constitute a burglary, and the breaking must be such as will afford the burglar an opportunity of entering, so as to commit the intended felony. Rex v. Hughes, 1 Leach, C. C. 406; 2 East, P. C. 491.

—— Breaking Inner Door.]—Though a thief enters a dwelling-house at night through an open door or a window, yet if, when within, he breaks or opens an inner door with intent to commit felony, it is burglary. Rex v. Johnson, 2 East, P. C. 488.

—— Entry by Chimney.]—A chimney is a part of a dwelling-house, and therefore the getting in at the top is a breaking of the dwelling-house. Rex v. Brice, R. & R. 450.

—— Hole in Roof.]—An entry to a house through a hole in the roof left for the purpose of light, is not a sufficient breaking and entering. Rex v. Spriggs, 1 M. & Rob. 357.

—— Lifting Latch.]—Merely opening a latch is a burglarious breaking. Per Coleridge, J. Pugh v. Griffith, 7 A. & E. 827, 836.

—— Breaking by Threats.]—When the family within the house was forced by threats and intimidations to let in the offenders by one of them opening the door:—Held, that it was as much a breaking by those who made use of such intimidations without, to prevail upon them so to open it, as if they had actually burst the door open. Rex v. Swallow, 2 Russ. C. & M. 8.

—— Breaking by Consent of Servant.]—A servant pretended to concur with two persons, who proposed to him to unite with them in robbing his master's house. The master being away from home, the servant communicated with the police and acted on their instructions. In consequence of this the servant lifted the latch and let in the two persons:—Held, that neither of them could be convicted of burglary. Reg. v. Jones, Car. & M. 218.

—— Pushing against Window.]—Where a window opens upon hinges, and is fastened by a wedge, so that the pushing against it will open it; forcing it open by pushing against it is a sufficient breaking to constitute a burglary. Rex v. Hall, R. & R. 355.

—— Broken Pane—Removing Fastening.]—Removing the fastening of a window by the hand introduced through a partially broken pane of the window, and thereby opening the window and entering is a breaking; not by breaking the residue of the pane, but by unfastening and opening the window. Rex v. Robinson, 1 M. C. C. 327. S. P., Ryan v. Shilcock, 7 Ex. 72.

—— Window Open.]—A window was a little open, and the prisoner pushed it wide open and got in:—Held, no sufficient breaking. Rex v. Smith, Car. C. L. 293; 1 M. C. C. 178.

If there is an aperture in a cellar window to admit light, through which a thief enters in the night, this is not burglary. Rex v. Lewis, 2 Car. & P. 628.

—— Pushing in Cut Pane.]—A. was charged with breaking into the house of K. and stealing the goods of M. It was proved as to the breaking that the glass of the window had been cut about a month before, but that every portion of the glass remained in its place till he pushed it in, and stole the goods:—Held, a sufficient breaking. Reg. v. Bird, 9 Car. & P. 44.

—— Breaking Pane.]—And it is a sufficient breaking to constitute such an offence, if the party breaks a pane of glass of a window, and puts his hand in for the purpose of opening the shutter, although he did not succeed in doing so. Rex v. Perkes, 1 Car. & P. 300.

The breaking a pane of glass and the insertion of a knife by which the window fastener was pushed back is a sufficient entry. Reg. v. Tucker, 1 Cox, C. C. 73.

—— Window Kept in Position by Weight.]—Pulling down the sash of a window is a breaking sufficient to constitute burglary, although it has no fastening, and is only kept in its place by the pulley-weight; and it is equally a breaking although there is an outer shutter which is not put to. Rex v. Haines, R. & R. 451.

Raising a window which is shut down close, but not fastened, though it has a hasp which might have been fastened, is a breaking of the dwelling-house. Rex v. Hyams, 7 Car. & P. 441.

—— Lifting Flap.]—Lifting the flap of a cellar usually kept down by its own weight, is a sufficient breaking for the purpose of burglary. Rex v. Russell, 1 M. C. C. 377.

The lifting up of a trap-door covering a cellar, which was merely kept in its place by its own weight, and which had no fastenings, because, it being a new trap-door, they had not been put on, is not a sufficient breaking to constitute a burglary; but unlocking and opening a hall door and running away is a sufficient breaking out of the house. Rex v. Lawrence, 4 Car. & P. 231.

Where a mill, under the same roof and within the same curtilage as a dwelling-house, had a trap-door over a gateway, which was only fastened by a lid-door kept down by its own weight, without bolts or other interior fastenings:—Held, that an entry into the mill in the night with intention to steal flour by raising the lid-door amounted to burglary. Rex v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 487; 2 Leach, C. C. 1016, n.

Breaking and Entry on Different Nights.]—The prisoner broke the glass of a door on a Friday night, with intent to enter at a future time, and actually entered on the next Sunday night:—Held, to be burglary, the breaking and entering being both by night, and the breaking being with intent afterwards to enter. Rex v. Smith, R. & R. 417.

Breaking Out—Lawfully in House.]—If a person commits a felony in a house, and breaks out of it in the night-time, this is burglary, although he might have been lawfully in the house. Reg. v. Wheeldon, 8 Car. & P. 747.

If a lodger in a house has committed a larceny there, and in the night-time even lifts a latch to get out of the house with the stolen property, this is a burglariously breaking out of the house. Ib.

—— What sufficient.]—On an indictment for stealing wine out of a cellar, and burglariously breaking out therefrom, it appeared that the prisoner broke out of the cellar by lifting up a heavy flap by which the cellar was closed on the outside next the street; the flap was not bolted, but it had bolts:—Six judges were of opinion that there was a sufficient breaking to constitute burglary, but the remaining six were of a contrary opinion. Rex v. Callan, R. & R. 157. And see Rex v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 487; 2 Leach, C. C. 1016, n.

Unlocking and opening a hall door and running away is a sufficient breaking out of the house to constitute a burglary. Rex v. Lawrence, 4 Car. & P. 231.

Entry—What sufficient.]—It is not sufficient, to constitute the offence of burglary, that there was an entry without a breaking of the outer door, and a breaking without an entry of an inner one. Reg. v. Davis, 6 Cox, C. C. 367.

A chimney is a part of a dwelling-house, and therefore where the prisoner, by lowering himself in the chimney, made an entry into the dwelling-house, though he did not enter any of the rooms, it is sufficient to constitute burglary. Rex v. Brice, R. & R. 450. See Rex v. Spriggs, 1 M. & Rob. 357.

Introducing the hand between the glass of an outer window and an inner shutter is a sufficient entry to constitute burglary. Rex v. Bailey, R. & R. 341.

Where, in breaking a window in order to steal property in the house, the prisoner's finger went within the house:—Held, that there was a sufficient entry to constitute burglary. Rex v. Davis, R. & R. 499.

Throwing up a window, and introducing an instrument between such window and an inside shutter, to force open the shutter, if the hand or some part of it is not within the window, is not a sufficient entry to constitute burglary. Rex v. Rust, 1 M. C. C. 183.

So where the prisoner raised a window which was not bolted, and thrust a crowbar under the bottom of the shutter (which was about half a foot within the window), so as to make an indent on the inside of the shutter, but from the length of the bar his hand was not inside the house:—Held, that it was not a sufficient entry to constitute a burglary. Rex v. Roberts, Car. C. L. 293; 2 East, P. C. 487.

On an indictment for burglary, it was proved the legs of the prisoner were seen hanging about a foot from the ground, from a window, and no other part of his body was visible till he jumped down and ran away:—Held, that though it appeared there was a hole broken in the window large enough to admit a man's head and shoulders, there was no evidence to show that there had been any actual entry, no property being lost. Reg. v. Meal, 3 Cox, C. C. 70.

On an indictment for burglary, where any part of the person of the prisoner is within the dwelling-house, no matter with what immediate intent, there is a sufficient entry to constitute the offence, and therefore, where the hand was proved to have been inside the house, it is immaterial whether it was there for the purpose of lifting up a window or of abstracting property. But where no part of the prisoner's body is inside the premises, but he introduces an instrument within it for the mere purpose of effecting an entry, and not with any other object, semble, that the entry is not complete. Reg. v. O'Brien, 4 Cox, C. C. 400.

2. What is a Dwelling-house.

Permanent Building slept in occasionally.]—A public building used and slept in only for a short time for the purpose of a fair, may be treated as the dwelling-house of the person so occupying it, though unoccupied the rest of the year. Rex v. Smith, 1 M. & Rob. 256.

Goods in House—No one Sleeping there.]—A house into which the owner has only removed his goods, but has not slept in, is not his dwelling-house as to burglary. Rex v. Thompson, 2 Leach, C. C. 771; 2 East, P. C. 498.

A nocturnal breaking into a house of which the owner has no farther taken possession than by depositing in it sundry articles of merchandise, neither he nor any servant of his having slept in it, is not burglary, for it cannot be considered as the dwelling-house of the owner. Rex v. Harris, 2 Leach, C. C. 701; 2 East, P. C. 498.

A house under repair, but not inhabited, is not the dwelling-house of the owner, though part of his property is deposited therein. Rex v. Lyons, 1 Leach, C. C. 185; 2 East, P. C. 497, differently reported. S. P., Rex v. Fuller, 1 Leach, C. C. 186, n.

Where the owner of a house has never by himself, or by any of his family or servants, slept in the house, it is not his dwelling-house, so as to make the breaking in and stealing goods thereout burglary, though he has used it for his meals and all the purposes of his business. Rex v. Martin, R. & R. 108.

Servants Sleeping in House.]—Although a man leaves his house, and never means to reside in it again, yet, if he uses part of it as a shop, and lets a servant and his family live and sleep in another part of it, for fear the place should be robbed, and lets the rest to lodgers, the habitation by his servant and family is a habitation by him, and the shop will be considered as part of the dwelling-house, so as to constitute the breaking thereof burglary. Rex v. Gibbons, R. & R. 422.

A burglary committed in a baker's shop, in which no person slept, but to which there was a communication by a trap-door and a ladder from the upper rooms of the house, in which only a weekly workman and his family lived by the permission of the three partners, who were owners of the whole house, may be laid to have been committed in the dwelling-house of these partners, they inhabiting it by means of their servant. Rex v. Stock, 2 Leach, C. C. 1015; R. & R. 185; 2 Taunt. 339; 11 R. R. 605.

Buildings separated from the dwelling-house by a public road will not be a parcel of the dwelling-house, but if such buildings are used as a sleeping place for any of the servants of the dwelling-house, they may be deemed a distinct dwelling-house. Rex v. Westwood, R. & R. 495.

Where the prosecutor left his house without any intention of living in it again, and intending to use it as a warehouse only; though he had persons (not of his family) to sleep in it, to guard the property:—Held, that it could not be considered as the dwelling-house of the prosecutor, so as to support a conviction for stealing therein. Rex v. Flannagan, R. & R. 187.

The owner of a house puts a person into it to sleep there at nights till he can get a tenant, in order to protect some furniture there, which he had purchased of the last tenant, which servant had so slept there for three weeks before, but the owner never intended to inhabit it himself:—Held, that a thief could not be convicted of stealing goods in the dwelling-house of such owner to the value of 40*s.* within 12 Anne, c. 8. Rex v. Davis, 2 East, P. C. 499; 2 Leach, C. C. 876.

Or, if the owner of a house has no intention of residing in it himself, it cannot be considered his dwelling-house, although his servant sleeps in it every night, if his sleeping there be merely to protect the furniture. Ib.

A porter lying in a warehouse does not make it a dwelling-house. Rex v. Smith, 2 East, P. C. 497 ; 2 Leach, C. C. 1018, n. And see Rex v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 501 ; 2 Leach, C. C. 1018, n.

Whose Dwelling-House.]—A garret made use of as a workshop, and rented with a sleeping-room by the week, is the mansion of the lodger, if the landlord does not sleep under the same roof. Rex v. Carrell, 1 Leach, C. C. 287 ; 2 East, P. C. 506.

Lofts over coach-houses and stables, converted into lodging-rooms, are the dwelling-houses of their inhabitants if there is an outer door. Rex v. Turner, 1 Leach, C. C. 305 ; 2 East, P. C. 492.

Two adjoining houses belonging to two partners, of which the rent and taxes are paid from the joint fund, may still be the respective mansions of each partner, if there is no communication from one to the other but through the outer doors to the street. Rex v. Jones, 1 Leach, C. C. 537 ; 2 East, P. C. 504.

Part of Dwelling-House—What is.]—See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 76, s. 53, by which many of the following cases are affected, but they are retained as they may still serve to illustrate the subject.

If the out-house is adjoining to the dwelling-house, and occupied as parcel thereof, though there is no common inclosure or curtilage, it may still be considered as part of the mansion. Rex v. Brown, 2 East, P. C. 493.

On the trial of an indictment for breaking into a building within the curtilage, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29, s. 14, it appeared that the building was in the fold-yard of the prosecutor's farm ; and that, to get from his dwelling-house to the fold-yard, it was necessary to pass through a yard called the pump-yard, into which the back-door of the dwelling-house opened, the pump-yard being separated from the fold-yard by a wall four feet high, in which there was a gate, the fold-yard having another gate leading to fields on one side, a hedge, with a gate leading to the high road, on another, the other sides of the fold-yard being bounded by the farm buildings and a continuing wall from the dwelling-house :—Held, that the building was within the curtilage. Reg. v. Gilbert, 1 Car. & K. 84.

An out-house in the yard of a dwelling-house will be parcel of the dwelling-house if the yard is inclosed, though the occupier has another dwelling-house opening into the yard, and he lets such dwelling-house with easements in the yard. Rex v. Walters, 1 M. C. C. 13.

A summer-house used occasionally for tea and retirement, within the same inclosure as the house, though at the distance of about half a mile, was a building within 4 Geo. 2, c. 32. Rex v. Norris, R. & R. 69. And see Rex v. Parker, 1 Leach, C. C. 320, n.

A building within the same fence as the dwelling-house, and used with it as parcel of the dwelling-house, though it has no internal communication with the house but through an open passage, is parcel of the dwelling-house. Rex v. Hancock, R. & R. 170.

And such a building is equally part of the dwelling-house, though used partly for the separate business of the occupier of the dwelling-house, and partly for a business in which he was a partner. Ib.

The prisoner broke into a goose-house opening into the prosecutor's yard, into which his house also opened ; the yard was surrounded partly by other buildings of the homestead, and partly by a wall ; some of the buildings had doors opening backwards, and there was a gate in one part of the wall opening upon a road ; this goose-house was held part of the dwelling-house, so as to constitute the breaking thereof burglary. Rex v. Clayburn, R. & R. 360.

Buildings separated from the dwelling-house by a public road, however narrow, will not be a parcel of the dwelling-house, so as to constitute the breaking thereof burglary, if there is no common fence or roof to connect them, although held by the same tenure, and although some of the offices necessary to the dwelling-house adjoin thereto, and although there be an awning extending therefrom to the dwelling-house. Rex v. Westwood, R. & R. 495.

An area gate, opening into the area only, is not part of the dwelling-house so as to make the breaking thereof burglary, if there is any door or fastening to prevent persons in the area from entering the house, although such door or fastening may not be secured at the time. Rex v. Daris, R. & R. 322.

A door which only forms part of the outward fence of the curtilage, and opens into no building but into the yard only, is not such a part of the dwelling-house as that the breaking thereof will constitute burglary. Rex v. Bennett, R. & R. 289.

—— No Internal Communication.]—A shutter-box partly projected from a house, and adjoined the side of the shop window, which was protected by wooden panelling, lined with iron :—Held, that the breaking and entering the shutter-box did not constitute burglary. Rex v. Paine, 7 Car. & P. 135.

The prosecutor's house was at the corner of a street, and adjoining thereto was a workshop, beyond which a stable and a coach-house adjoined ; all were used with the house, and had doors opening into a yard belonging to the house, which yard was surrounded by adjoining buildings, so as to be altogether an inclosed yard ; the workshop had no internal communication with the house, and it had a door opening into the street ; its roof was higher than that of the dwelling-house ; the street-door of the workshop was broken open in the night :—Held, the workshop was parcel of the dwelling-house. Rex v. Chalking, R. & R. 334.

W. let part of his house, viz. a shop, passage, cellar, &c., to his son, who did not sleep therein, and there was a distinct entrance into the son's part, but his passage led to his father's cellars, and they were open to his father's part of the house. The shop was broken into, and the prisoner was convicted thereof :—Held, that by reason of the internal communication, the son's part continued part of the father's house, and therefore that it was burglary. Rex v. Sefton, R. & R. 202.

A shop adjoining to a house, if under the same roof, and within the curtilage, is part of the dwelling-house, although there is no internal communication between the shop and the house, and although no person sleeps in the shop. Rex v. Gibson, 1 Leach, C. C. 357 ; 2 East, P. C. 508.

A room in a dwelling, occupied therewith and under the same roof, will be deemed part of the dwelling-house, though it has a separate outer door and no internal communication with the rest of the house. Rex v. Burrows, 1 M. C. C. 274.

On the trial of an indictment for burglary, it appeared that adjoining to the prosecutor's dwelling-house was a kiln, one end of which was supported by the end wall of the dwelling-house, and that adjoining to the kiln was a dairy, one end of which was supported by the end wall of the kiln. There was no internal communication from the dwelling-house to the dairy, and the roofs of the dwelling-house, kiln, and dairy were of different heights:—Held, that the dairy was not part of the dwelling-house, and that a burglary could not be committed by breaking into it. Reg. v. Higgs, 2 Car. & K. 322.

A building used with and under the same roof with a dwelling-house, but having no internal communication with it, although opening into an inclosed yard belonging to the house, and also into an adjoining street, may be parcel of the dwelling-house so as to constitute the breaking and entering thereof a burglary. Rex v. Lithgo, R. & R. 357.

A manufactory carried on in the centre building of a great pile, in the wings of which several persons dwelt, but having no internal communication with the same, though the roofs of all were connected, and the entrances of all were out of the same common inclosure:—Held, not a dwelling-house in which burglary could be committed. Rex v. Eggington, 2 East, P. C. 494, 666; 2 Leach, C. C. 913; 2 Bos. & P. 508; 5 R. R. 689.

3. Breaking into Churches and Places of Divine Worship.

Church or Chapel—What is.]—A dissenting meeting-house was not within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10, which made it a capital offence to "break and enter any church or chapel, and steal therein." Rex v. Richardson, 6 Car. & P. 335. S. P., Rex v. Warren, 6 Car. & P. 335, n.

A prisoner was indicted under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10, for breaking and entering a chapel, and stealing several fixtures, and a bell not fixed. The chapel was a Wesleyan chapel, and not a chapel of the Church of England:—Held, that the case must be confined to the act of simple larceny, for stealing the bell. Rex v. Nixon, 7 Car. & P. 442.

Part of Church.]—If a church tower is built higher than the church, and has a separate roof, but has no outer door, and is only accessible from the body of the church, from which it is not separated by any partition; this tower is a part of the church within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10. Rex v. Wheeler, 3 Car. & P. 585.

The vestry of a church was broken open and robbed. It was formed out of what before had been a church porch, but had a door opening into the churchyard, which could only be unlocked from the inside:—Held, that this vestry was part of the fabric of the church, and within the meaning of an indictment for sacrilegiously breaking and entering the church. Reg. v. Evans, Car. & M. 298.

At Common Law.]—Burglary may be committed in a church at common law. Reg. v. Baker, 3 Cox, C. C. 581.

Goods the Subject of Larceny.]—The provisions of 1 Edw. 6, c. 12, s. 10, were not confined to goods used for divine service; they extended to articles kept in the church to keep it in repair, and therefore a conviction on an indictment on that act, for stealing a snatch-block to raise weights in case the bells wanted repairing, and an iron pot for charcoal, used to air the vaults, was held right. Rex v. Rourke, R. & R. 386.

To warrant a conviction for breaking and entering a church under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 10, there must have been a stealing therein of some chattel. Stealing a fixture was not sufficient. But if the stealing of fixtures was averred in such count, the prisoner might be convicted simply thereof under s. 44. Reg. v. Baker, 3 Cox, C. C. 581.

A. and B. were indicted for sacrilegiously breaking into a church and stealing a box and money:—Held, that the box (under the circumstances) was not affixed to the freehold, but was constructively in the possession of the vicar and churchwardens. Reg. v. Wortley, 1 Den. C. C. 162; 2 Car. & K. 283; 2 Cox, C. C. 32.

Ownership of Property.]—In an indictment for breaking into a church in the night-time, it is sufficient to allege an intent to steal the property in the church without stating the ownership of such property. Reg. v. Nicholas, 1 Cox, C. C. 218.

4. Intent.

Breaking and entering a house in the night-time to recover tea, which had been seized, is no burglary, being intended for the benefit of the supposed owner. Rex v. Knight, 2 East, P. C. 510.

If several agree to commit a burglary, but one communicates the intent to an officer, that he may take the other two, and the officer is upon the watch accordingly; the person who has made that communication to the officer will not be particeps criminis in the burglary, although he is present when it is committed, and pretends to assist the other two, but in fact expedites their apprehension. Rex v. Dannelly, R. & R. 310; 2 Marsh. 571.

Nor will it make any difference, although his object in detecting is to obtain for himself (by previous agreement with the officer) part of a reward that will be payable on conviction. Ib.

5. Armed with Intent to Break or Enter.

What are Implements of Housebreaking.]—Keys are implements of housebreaking within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 58; for though commonly used for lawful purposes, they are capable of being employed for purposes of housebreaking, and it is a question for the jury whether the person found in possession of them by night, had them without lawful excuse, and with the intention of using them as implements of housebreaking. Reg. v. Oldham, 2 Den. C. C. 472; 3 Car. & K. 249; 21 L. J., M. C. 134; 16 Jur. 505; 5 Cox, C. C. 551.

Semble, per Maule, J., that the printed copy of the section of the statute is wrongly punctuated, and that the word key is within the express terms of the statute. Ib.

Intent to commit Felony Immaterial.]—An intent to commit felony forms no ingredient of the offence of being found by night in the possession of housebreaking instruments without lawful excuse. Reg. v. Bailey, Dears. C. C. 244; 23 L. J., M. C. 13; 17 Jur. 1106; 2 W. R. 64; 6 Cox, C. C. 241.

Particular House must be specified.]—Where persons are charged, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 58, with being found by night armed with an offensive weapon, with intent to break and enter into a dwelling-house or other building, and to commit a felony therein, the particular house or building must be specified in the indictment, and proof given of their intent to break and enter such house or building. Reg. v. Jarrald, L. & C. 301; 32 L. J., M. C. 258; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 629; 8 L. T. 515; 11 W. R. 787; 9 Cox, C. C. 307.

Implements of Housebreaking—Possession by one is Possession by all.]—When several persons are found out together by night for the common purpose of housebreaking, and one only is in possession of the housebreaking implements, all may be found guilty of the misdemeanor of being found by night in possession of implements of housebreaking without lawful excuse under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 58, for the possession of one is in such case the possession of all. Reg. v. Thompson, 21 L. T. 397; 11 Cox, C. C. 362.

6. Stealing in a Dwelling-House.

Charge of Stealing Specified Goods.]—A. was indicted for breaking and entering a dwelling-house, and stealing certain specified goods. At the time of breaking and entering, the goods named in the indictment were not in the house, but there were other goods there belonging to the prosecutor. The jury found that he was not guilty of the felony charged, but that he was guilty of breaking and entering the dwelling-house of the prosecutor, and attempting to steal his goods therein:—Held, that there was no attempt to commit the felony charged within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, and therefore the verdict could not be sustained. Reg. v. M'Pherson, Dears. & B. 197; 26 L. J., M. C. 134; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 523; 5 W. R. 525; 7 Cox, C. C. 281.

No Actual Stealing.]—An indictment for feloniously breaking and entering a dwelling-house, with intent feloniously to steal therein, and not for actually stealing, cannot be sustained, the felony created by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 12, being entering and stealing. Reg. v. Wenmouth, 8 Cox, C. C. 348.

Asportation.]—A. broke into a house and took two half-sovereigns from a bureau, which he, on being disturbed, threw under the grate in the same room:—Held, a sufficient removal to constitute the offence. Rex v. Amier, 6 Car. & P. 344.

In whom Property in Goods Laid.]—A prisoner was indicted for breaking into the house of Elizabeth A. and stealing her goods. There was a second count laying the property of the goods in the Queen. It was shown by proof of the record that the husband of Elizabeth A. had been convicted of felony, and it was also proved that he was in prison under his sentence, and that the articles stolen were his before his conviction, and had remained in the house from the time of his apprehension, and that the wife continued in possession of the house and goods till they were stolen:—Held, that the prisoner might be properly convicted of larceny on the second count, which laid the property of the goods in the Queen, although there had been no office found, and that he could not be convicted of housebreaking as that part of the indictment which laid the goods and the house to be those of Elizabeth A. could not be supported. Reg. v. Whitehead, 9 Car. & P. 429.

A. was charged with breaking into the house of K., and stealing the goods of M. It was proved by M. that K., his brother-in-law, had taken the house, and that M. (who lived on his property) carried on the trade of a silversmith for the benefit of K. and his family, having himself neither a share in the profits nor a salary. M. stated that he had authority to sell any part of the stock, and might take money from the till, but that he should tell K. of it; and that he sometimes bought goods for the shop, and sometimes K. did it:—Held, that M. was a bailee, and that the goods in the shop might properly be laid as his property. Reg. v. Bird, 9 Car. & P. 44.

Prisoner Admitted by Servant.]—A servant pretended to concur with two persons, who proposed to him to unite with them in robbing his master's house. The master being out of town, the servant communicated with the police, and acted under their instructions. In consequence of this, a little after nine o'clock one evening, he let in one of the persons, by lifting the latch; but before that person had taken any property he was seized by the police, and, a crowbar being found upon him, was immediately placed in confinement. After this the servant went out again, and fetched the second person, and let him in in the same manner. This person was seized with a basket of plate in his hand, which he had carried from the kitchen, part of the way upstairs:—Held, that neither of the persons could be convicted of burglary; but that the one who was seized with the plate might be convicted of stealing in a dwelling-house. Reg. v. Jones, Car. & M. 218.

7. Breaking into Shops, Warehouses, or Counting-Houses.

Shops.]—A shop, to be within the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 15, and 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 2, must be a shop for the sale of goods, and a mere workshop will not be sufficient. Reg. v. Sanders, 9 Car. & P. 79.

But a person who breaks into a blacksmith's shop and steals goods there might be convicted of breaking into a shop and stealing goods under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 15. Reg. v. Carter, 1 Car. & K. 173.

An opening of a door in a shop under the same roof where the prisoner lived as a servant, for the purpose of committing a felony, was a breaking and entering within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 12, Reg. v. Wenmouth. 8 Cox, C. C. 348.

Warehouses.]—A cellar used merely for the deposit of goods intended for removal and sale is a warehouse. Reg. v. Hill, 2 M. & Rob. 458.

Counting-houses.]—A building formed part of premises employed as chemical works; it was commonly called the machine-house, a weighing machine being there, where all the goods sent out were weighed, and a book being kept there in which entries of the goods so weighed were made. The account of the time of the workmen employed in the works was kept in this place, the wages of the men were paid there; the books in which the entries of time and the payment of wages were entered were brought to the building for the purpose of making entries and paying wages, but at other times they were kept in what was called the office, where the general books and accounts of the concern were kept:—Held, that this building was properly described in an indictment as a counting-house within 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29, s. 15. Reg. v. Potter, 2 Den. C. C. 235; 3 Car. & K. 179; T. & M. 561; 20 L. J., M. C. 170; 15 Jur. 498; 5 Cox, C. C. 187.

8. INDICTMENT.

Owner of House—Name is Essential.]—The name of the owner of the house is essential in an indictment for burglary, and for stealing in the dwelling-house. Rex v. White, 1 Leach, C. C. 252; 2 East, 513, 780. S. P., Rex v. Woodward, 1 Leach, C. C. 253, n.

—— Actual Occupier.]—A. an insolvent lived in a house taken by his daughter who carried on business there for her parent's benefit but she did not live there:—Held, to be rightly laid as the dwelling house of A. Reg. v. Bridges, 1 Cox, C. C. 261.

—— Club—Whose Dwelling-house and Goods.] A member of a club was indicted for stealing some of the plate used at the club-house. The house-steward slept in the house, and stated that he had the charge of all the plate, and was responsible for it; but the plate was delivered every night to the under-butler, who was appointed by the club, and by him placed in a chest in the pantry. The indictment described the goods as the property of the house-steward, and alleged it to have been stolen in his dwelling-house:—Held, that upon the evidence, it was wrong in both respects, inasmuch as his sleeping in the house was only as a servant of the club, and his alleged responsibility was not coupled with any custody of the property, either by himself or his own servants. Reg. v. Ashley, 1 Car. & K. 198.

—— Caretaker.]—A prisoner was indicted for burglary in the dwelling-house of B. B. worked for W., who did carpenter's work for a public company, and put B. into the house, which belonged to the company, to take care of it, and some mills adjoining. B. received no more wages after than before he went to live in the house:—Held, not rightly laid. Rex v. Rawlings, 7 Car. & P. 150.

—— Workhouse.]—In an indictment for burglary in the workhouse of a poor law union, the workhouse, being under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, s. 7, may be described as the dwelling-house of the guardians of the poor of that union. Semble, that the workhouse cannot be described as the dwelling-house of the master of the workhouse. Reg. v. Frowen, 4 Cox, C. C. 266.

—— Tenant at Will.]—If the owner of a house suffers a person to live in it rent-free, it may be stated, in an indictment for breaking into such house in the day-time, to be that person's house; such person being tenant at will, Rex v. Collett, R. & R. 498.

—— Joint Tenants.]—If a house is let to A., and a warehouse under the same roof, with an internal communication to the house, to A. and B.; the warehouse, in an indictment for burglary, cannot be described as the dwelling-house of A. Rex v. Jenkins, R. & R. 244.

If two or more rent of the same owner different parts of the same house, so as to have amongst them the whole house, and the owner does not reserve or occupy any part of it, the separate part of each may be described as the dwelling-house of each. Rex v. Bailey, 1 M. C. C. 23.

A house the joint property of partners in trade, and in which their business is carried on, may be described as the dwelling-house of all the partners, though only one of them resides in it. Rex v. Athea, 1 M. C. C. 329. See Rex v. Jones, 1 Leach, C. C. 537; 2 East, P. C. 504.

—— Married Women.]—If a married woman takes a house, in which a burglary is committed, the house must be laid as the house of the husband, although she is living separate from him. Rex v. Smyth, 5 Car. & P. 201. See Married Women's Property Act, 1882.

The house of a husband in which he allows his wife to live separate from him may be described in an indictment for burglary as the house of the husband, although the wife lived there in adultery with another man who paid the housekeeping expenses; and although the husband suspected a criminal intercourse between his wife and the other man when he allowed her to live separate. Rex v. Wilford, R. & R. 517.

Where a married woman lived apart from her husband, upon an income arising from property vested in trustees for her separate use:—Held, that a house which she had hired to live in was, in an indictment for burglary, properly described as her husband's dwelling-house, although she paid the rent out of her separate property, and the husband had never been in it. Rex v. French, R. & R. 491.

—— Lodgers.]—The apartments of lodgers will be considered as their respective dwelling-houses, if the owner of the premises does not sleep under the same roof. Rex v. Rogers, 1 Leach, C. C. 89; 2 East, P. C. 506. See Rex v. Carrell, 1 Leach, C. C. 287; 2 East, P. C. 506.

A house, the whole of which is let out in lodgings, and has only one outer door common to all its inmates, is the mansion-house of its several inhabitants. Rex v. Trapshaw, 1 Leach, C. C. 427; 2 East, P. C. 506, 780. See Rex v. Turner, 1 Leach, C. C. 305; 2 East, P. C. 492.

—— Innkeeper or Guest.]—Where one, under pretence of being robbed, forced the door of a guest's chamber in an inn, at night, and stole his goods:—Held, that the burglary must be laid to be in the dwelling-house of the innkeeper, and not of the guest. Rex v. Prosser, 2 East, P. C. 502.

—— Company or Officer or Agent.]—If a burglary is committed in the house of a trading company, in the house belonging to which an agent of the company resides, with his family, for the purpose of carrying on the business, it may be laid to be the dwelling-house of the agent, although the rent is paid and the lease is held by the company. Rex v. Margetts, 2 Leach, C. C. 930.

Though a servant lives rent-free in a house belonging to an insurance company, and the company pays the taxes, and the company's business is carried on in the house, yet if the servant and his family are the only persons who sleep in the house, and the part in which the company's business is carried on is at all times open to those parts in which the servant lives, it may be stated as the servant's house, though the only part entered by the thief was that in which the company's business was carried on; and though the judges would not say that it might not have been described as the company's house, they thought it might, with equal propriety, be described as the house of the servant. Rex v. Witt, 1 M. C. C. 248.

A burglary in the apartments of officers of a public company must be laid to be in the mansion-house of such company. Rex v. Hawkins, 2 East, P. C. 501.

—— Rooms in College.]—So of the apartments of a college not occupied by the students, as the buttery. Rex v. Maynard, 2 East, P. C. 501.

—— Master or Servant.]—Though a servant lives rent free for the purpose of his service in a house provided for that purpose; yet, if he has the exclusive possession, and it is not parcel of any premises which his master occupies, it may be described as the house of the servant; especially if the house belongs not to his master, but to some person paramount to his master; as in the case of a toll-collector's house, occupied by the servant of the lessee of the tolls for the purpose of collecting the tolls. Rex v. Camfield, 1 M. C. C. 42.

If the owner of a cottage lets one of his workmen, with his family, live in the cottage free of rent and taxes, and he lives there principally, if not wholly, for his own benefit, it may be described as the workman's dwelling-house in an indictment for burglary. Rex v. Joblin, R. & R. 525.

A. was in the service of B. and lived in a house close to B.'s place of business. B. did not live in the house himself, but he paid the rent and taxes. A. paid nothing for his occupation. Part of the house was used as store-rooms for B.'s goods:—Held, that this was the dwelling-house of B., and was improperly described in the indictment as the dwelling-house of A. Reg. v. Courtenay, 5 Cox, C. C. 218.

A gardener lived in a house of his master, quite separate from the dwelling-house of his master, and the gardener had the entire control of the house he lived in, and kept the key:—Held, that on an indictment for burglary, the gardener's house might be laid either as his or as his master's. Rex v. Rees, 7 Car. & P. 568.

If a servant lives in a house of his master's at a yearly rent, the house cannot be described as the master's house, though it is on the premises where the master's business is carried on, and although the servant has it because of his services. Rex v. Jarvis, 1 M. C. C. 7.

Where a servant had part of a house for his own occupation, and the rest, in which a burglary is committed, is reserved by the proprietor for other purposes, the part reserved cannot be deemed part of the servant's dwelling-house. Rex v. Wilson, R. & R. 115.

And it will be the same if any other person has part of the house, and the rest is reserved. Ib.

Place.]—It is sufficient to allege that the burglary was committed at a place, naming it, e.g. "at Norton-juxta-Kempsey, in the county aforesaid," without stating the place to be a parish, vill, chapelry, or the like. Reg. v. Brookes, Car. & M. 544.

An indictment for breaking into a warehouse, and stealing goods, stated the offence to have been committed in "the parish of St. Peter the Great, in the county of W." Part only of the parish of St. Peter the Great is in the county of W.:—Held, that indictment could not be supported for the breaking into the warehouse, but that it was sufficient for the larceny; and that to be good as to the breaking, it should have charged the offence to have been committed "in that part of the parish of St. Peter the Great which lies within the county of W." Ib.

A dwelling-house situated partly in parish A. and partly in parish B. is rightly described as being in parish A., where the part broken is in that parish. Reg. v. Howell, 1 Cox, C. C. 190.

An indictment for housebreaking, after charging the breaking and entering in the usual form, charging that the prisoner, "forty-two pieces of the current gold coin of this realm, called sovereigns, of the value of 42*l.*, in the same dwelling-house then and there being found, then and there feloniously did steal and carry away": is good, and the words "then and there," in the last allegation, are sufficient without the words "in the same dwelling-house" being added to them. Reg. v. Andrews, Car. & M. 121.

An indictment alleging that J. F., late of the parish of F., in the county of M., with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the dwelling-house of the guardians of the poor of the P. Union, there situate, feloniously did break and enter, is a sufficient description of the situation of the workhouse, the words "there situate" referring not to the union but to the parish before mentioned. Reg. v. Frowen, 4 Cox, C. C. 266.

Time at which Offence Committed.]—It is sufficient in an indictment for burglary to allege that the offence was committed burglariously, without stating the time at which the offence was committed, or even that it was done in the night time. Reg. v. Thompson, 2 Cox, C. C. 377, 445. Contra, Rex v. Waddington, 2 East, P. C. 513.

Property in Goods.]—An indictment for burglary charged the prisoner with breaking, in the night time, into the dwelling-house of E. B., "with intent the goods and chattels in the same dwelling-house then and there being feloniously and burglariously to steal, and stealing the goods of E. B." It was proved that the house was that of E. B., but that the goods the prisoner stole were the joint property of E. B. and two others:—Held, that if it was proved that the prisoner broke into the house of E. B. with intent to steal the goods there generally, that would be sufficient to sustain the charge of burglary contained in the indictment, without proof of an intent to steal the goods of the particular person whose goods the indictment charged that he did steal. Reg. v. Clarke, 1 Car. & K. 421.

An indictment for burglariously breaking and entering the house of A., with intent to steal the goods of B., is bad, if no person of that name had any property in the house. Rex v. Jenks, 2 Leach, C. C. 774; 2 East, P. C. 514.

An indictment which charges that the prisoner unlawfully broke and entered the dwelling-house of R. P. P., "with intent the goods and chattels in the dwelling-house then and there being then and there feloniously to steal, take and carry away," is good, although it does not state whose goods the prisoner intended to steal. Reg. v. Lawes, 1 Car. & K. 62.

A. and B. were indicted for sacrilegiously breaking into a church and stealing a box and money:—Held, that the property was rightly laid in the vicar and others, in their individual names. Reg. v. Wortley, 1 Den. C. C. 162; 2 Car. & K. 283; 2 Cox, C. C. 32.

Breaking out.]—An indictment for burglary stating in one count that the prisoner "did break to get out" and in another that he did break and get out was sufficient, since the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 11, which used the words break out. Rex v. Compton, 7 Car. & P. 139.

Burglary and Striking.]—An indictment on 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 86, s. 2 for the capital offence of burglary and striking, must have charged both the burglary and the striking, and the proof must correspond with the indictment. Reg. v. Parfitt, 8 Car. & P. 288.

A. was indicted for a burglary in the house of S. W., and striking D. James. The burglary was proved as laid, but the person struck was D. Jones:—Held, that the prisoner must be acquitted of the capital charge, and convicted of burglary only. Ib.

Intent to Commit Felony.]—It must be alleged and proved either that a felony was committed in the dwelling-house, or that the party broke and entered with intent to commit some felony within the same. Rex v. Dobbs, 2 East, P. C. 513.

And whatever be the felony really intended, the same must be laid in the indictment and proved agreeably to the fact. Rex v. Vandercomb, 2 East, P. C. 514, 517; 2 Leach, C. C. 708.

But the same fact may be laid with several intents. Rex v. Thompson, 2 East, P. C. 515; 2 Leach, C. C. 1105, n.

An indictment for burglary, charging in one count an intent to steal the goods of the owner, and in another an intent to murder him, is good, for it is the same fact and evidence, only laid in different ways. Ib.

Against the Form of the Statute.]—The alterations made in the law with respect to burglary, by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 86, as to the hours, and as to the punishment, did not make it necessary for an indictment for that offence to conclude contra formam statuti, as the alteration with respect to the hours did not alter the offence, and the mere diminution of the punishment did not make that conclusion necessary. Reg. v. Polly, 1 Car. & K. 77. See now 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24.

9. EVIDENCE AND TRIAL.

For what Offence Prisoners may be Convicted.]—On an indictment for burglary by breaking into a house in the night-time and stealing to the value of 5*l.* or more, the prisoner might be convicted of burglary, or of housebreaking, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 12, or of stealing in a dwelling-house to the value of 5*l.* Rex v. Compton, 3 Car. & P. 418.

On an indictment for burglary, the prisoner may be acquitted of the breaking, and found guilty of stealing in the dwelling-house. Rex v. Withal, 1 Leach, C. C. 88; 2 East, P. C. 515, 517.

On an indictment for burglariously breaking and entering a dwelling-house (omitting the words "with intent to steal"), and then and there stealing goods therein, the prisoner may be well convicted of the burglary if the larceny be proved: secus if not. Rex v. Furnival, R. & R. 445.

Where the felony is laid to constitute the burglary, an acquittal of the burglary is an acquittal of stealing in the dwelling-house. Rex v. Comer, 1 Leach, C. C. 36.

Where a party is indicted both for burglary and feloniously stealing in the dwelling-house, and is acquitted of the burglary, but found guilty of the stealing, the verdict should be entered thus:—"Jury say not guilty of breaking and entering the dwelling-house in the night, but guilty of stealing (the property) in the dwelling-house." Rex v. Hungerford, 2 East, P. C. 518; 1 Leach, C. C. 88.

—— Indictment against Two Persons.]—Upon an indictment for burglary and larceny against two, one may be found guilty of the burglary and larceny, and the other of the larceny only. Rex v. Butterworth, R. & R. 520.

Day in Indictment not Proved.]—If a prisoner is charged with a burglary and stealing the goods, the prosecutor, on failing to prove that these facts were committed on the day laid in the indictment, cannot be admitted to prove that the larceny was committed on a prior day. Rex v. Vandercomb, 2 Leach, C. C. 708; 2 East, P. C. 519.

Impression of Shoe—When made not Proved.]—In an indictment for burglary, the entry was proved to have been effected by breaking open a window at the back of a house:—Held, that the correspondence of the prisoner's shoe with an impression in the front garden, not proved to have been made during that night, was not any evidence to go to the jury to show a connection with such entry. Reg. v. Coots, 2 Cox, C. C. 188.

Possession of Goods as Evidence.]—On the night following the commission of a burglary, two boys were found concealed in a corn-chest in an open gig-house with which they were not in any way connected, and half a mile from the house of the prosecutor. Outside the corn-chest was found some of the stolen property, and on the loft over the gig-house was found another portion of the stolen property:—Held, that there was no evidence to go to the jury of possession by the boys of any of the stolen articles. Ib.

On a charge of burglary, possession by the prisoners of part of the stolen property very soon after the burglary, with an account given of it not reasonable or credible, is sufficient primâ facie evidence, without express evidence to falsify it. It is so, however, only if, upon all the circumstances in the case, the account given is not reasonably credible. Reg. v. Exall, 4 F. & F. 922.

Other Offences of same Character.]—Upon a trial for breaking into a booking-office at a railway station, evidence was admitted that the prisoners had, on the same night, broken into three other booking-offices belonging to three other stations on the same railway, the four cases being all mixed up together. Reg. v. Cobden, 3 F. & F. 833. See Reg. v. Rearden, 4 F. & F. 76.

1. WHAT MAY BE EMBEZZLED.

Debts Assigned to Trustees.]—B. being in difficulties, assigned all his book debts, estate, and effects to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. He was employed by the trustees at a salary to manage the business and to collect the debts for them. He received the amount of two of the debts, but did not account for the sums received:—Held, that, inasmuch as the debts, being choses in action, could not be legally assigned, he had received only money which was in law, though not in equity, his own; and, therefore, that he could not be guilty of embezzling it. Reg. v. Barnes, 8 Cox, C. C. 129.

Halves of Bank-notes.]—The halves of country bank-notes, sent in a letter, are goods and chattels; and a person who embezzles them is indictable for such embezzlement. Rex v. Mead, 4 Car. & P. 535.

Exchequer Bills.]—If an indictment charges the prisoner with having embezzled "certain bills, commonly called Exchequer Bills," and it appears that the person who signed them on the part of government was not legally authorised so to do, the indictment is bad; for they are not the things which they are averred to be. Rex v. Aslett, 2 Leach, C. C. 954, 958; 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 1; R. & R. 67.

Game.]—The prisoner being employed as a gamekeeper, and having no authority to kill rabbits for his own use, killed and removed wild rabbits in and from a wood belonging to his master with the intention of selling them. The killing, removing, and selling were one continuous act:—Held, that he was not guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Read, 47 L. J., M. C. 50; 3 Q. B. D. 131; 37 L. T. 722; 26 W. R. 283; 14 Cox, C. C. 17.

2. WHAT IS EMBEZZLEMENT.

Goods in Possession of Master.]—A. had agreed to buy straw from B. and had sent his servant C. to fetch it. C. did so, and put down the whole quantity at the door of A.'s stable which was in the court-yard of A. Part of the straw was put into the hay-loft, but part was taken away by C. and sold:—Held, that this was larceny and not embezzlement, as the delivery was complete when the straw was put down at the stable door. Reg. v. Hayward, 1 Car. & K. 518.

The prisoner was sent with his master's cart for some coals. The coals were delivered to the prisoner and deposited in the cart; on the road home the prisoner disposed of a portion of them:—Held, no embezzlement, as the prisoner having determined his exclusive possession of the coals when they were deposited in the cart, the possession from that time became the master's. Reg. v. Reed, Dears. C. C. 257; 2 C. L. R. 607; 23 L. J., M. C. 25; 18 Jur. 67; 2 W. R. 190; 6 Cox, C. C. 284.

Employment as Servant or Authority to Receive.]—An indictment for embezzlement cannot be supported, unless there is either an employment of the prisoner as a servant by the prosecutor, or an express authority be given to him to demand and receive the money charged to have been embezzled by him. Reg. v. Beareock, 1 Cox, C. C. 187.

Proportional part of Price as Wages.]—If a servant receive money for his master for an article made of his master's material, it will be within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, if he embezzle it, though he made the article and was to have a given proportion of the price for making it. Rex v. Hoggins, R. & R. 145.

Alleged Right to Keep Sums admittedly Received.]—Embezzlement necessarily involves secrecy and concealment. If, therefore, instead of denying the appropriation of property, the prisoner, in rendering his account, admits the appropriation, alleging a right in himself, no matter how unfounded, or setting up an excuse, no matter how frivolous, his offence in taking and keeping is no embezzlement. Reg. v. Norman, Car. & M. 501.

Wilful Omission to Account.]—It was the duty of a servant authorised to receive money for his employer to account to his employer on the evening of every day for the money received during the day by him for his employer, and to pay over the amount. He received three sums for his employer on three different days, and neither accounted for those sums nor paid them over. He never denied the receipt of them, or tendered any written account in which they were omitted:—Held, that if he wilfully omitted to account for these sums and pay them over on the respective days on which he received them, these were embezzlements, and that such wilful omissions to account and pay over were equivalent to a denial of the receipt of them. Reg. v. Jackson, 1 Car. & K. 384.

Particular Sum or Part thereof must be Proved.]—It was the duty of a clerk to receive money for his employer and pay wages out of it, and to make entries of all moneys received and paid in a book, and to enter the weekly totals of receipts and payments in another book, upon which last book he from time to time paid over his balances to his employer. The clerk having entries of weekly payments in his first book amounting to 25*l.*, he entered them in the second book as 35*l.*; and, two months after, in accounting with his employer, by these means made his balance 10*l.* too little, and paid it over accordingly:—Held, that he could not be convicted of embezzlement, without it being shown that he had received some particular sum on account of his employer, and had converted either the whole or part of that sum to his own use. Reg. v. Chapman, 1 Car. & K. 119; 1 Cox, C. C. 48. See Reg. v. Lambert, 2 Cox, C. C. 309.

Absconding after Accounting for all Sums Received.]—If a person whose duty it is to receive money for his employer receives money and renders a true account of all the money he has received, he is not guilty of embezzlement if he absconds and does not pay over the money; but, if he had received the money, and had rendered an account in which it was omitted, this would be evidence to show that he had embezzled the amount. Reg. v. Creed, 1 Car. & K. 63.

Money received from Master — Debiting Master with Amount Expended.]—The prisoner who was clerk to the prosecutor, was indicted for embezzling certain moneys belonging to his master. The evidence showed that the prisoner had received at different times several sums of money from the prosecutor, a dealer in skins, for the purpose of purchasing skins. The prisoner obtained the skins on credit, and applied the money to his own use, but debited prosecutor in his day-book with several sums of money as having been paid for the skins:—Held, guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Goodenough, Dears. C. C. 210; 1 W. R. 417; 6 Cox, C. C. 206.

—— More stated to have been Paid Away than actually done.]—If a clerk receives money from his master to pay away on his master's account, and he states in his accounts that one of the payments was to a greater amount than it really was, this will be no embezzlement. Rex v. Murray, 5 Car. & P. 145; 1 M. C. C. 276.

—— Entry of Smaller Sum—Payment over of Money Received.]—If a servant, immediately on receiving a sum for his master, enters a smaller sum in his master's books, and ultimately accounts to his master for the smaller sum, he may be considered as embezzling the difference at the time he makes the entry; and it will make no difference though he received other sums for his master on the same day, and in paying those and the smaller sum to his master together he might give his master every piece of money or note he received at the time he made the false entry. Rex v. Hall, R. & R. 463; 2 Stark. 67.

Entry in Ledger of Remittance—No Entry of Receipt.]—The prisoner was convicted of embezzlement. It was his duty to receive remittances from the customers of his masters, to enter them to the credit of such customers in a day or cash-book, and to enter the whole amount received by him on the credit side of a banker's deposit account, and to pay in the amount to the credit of the prosecutors with their bankers; and it was his duty afterwards to post the amounts in a ledger, which contained the accounts of the different customers. The prisoner received a remittance, which he appropriated to his own use; he made an entry of this amount, in the ledger to the credit of the customer, but he made no entry of its receipt:—Held, that the conviction was right, as the entry made in the ledger did not exempt the prisoner from the operation of the 47th section of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29. Reg. v. Lister, Dears. & B. 118; 26 L. J., M. C. 26; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1124; 5 W. R. 50; 7 Cox, C. C. 203.

Entries Correct, but no Remittance.]—It was the duty of a clerk to receive moneys daily at N., to enter all such moneys so received in a book, and to remit the amount weekly to L. His entries were all correct, and admitted the receipt of all the moneys; but he did not remit them to L., as was his duty:—Held, no embezzlement. Rex v. Hodgson, 3 Car. & P. 422.

Entries Correct, but Less Paid Over.]—B. was employed to drive a coach and it was his duty to inform a book-keeper how much he had received during the day; the book-keeper then entered the amount in a book and on the way bill. B.'s duty then was to pay over the money received to his employer. B. gave true accounts to the book-keeper who made these entries, but B. accounted to his employer for smaller sums and paid them over to him, saying that they were all he received:—Held, that this was embezzlement. Reg. v. White, 8 Car. & P. 742.

Entry in Ledger by Banker's Clerk.]—A banker's clerk taking money from the till, intending to embezzle it, is guilty of felony, although the cheque of a customer is left in lieu of it, if that customer has really no cash in the banker's hands, though both he and the banker may suppose he has, and if the cheque is drawn by the customer, not to pledge his own credit with the bank, or draw out money of his own, but to draw out money the prisoner falsely pretends to have in his name. Rex v. Hammon, R. & R. 221; 2 Leach, C. C. 1083; 4 Taunt. 304; 13 R. R. 596.

Entries in Books—Fraudulently obtaining Receipts.]—G. was convicted upon an indictment for embezzlement. It was his duty, as the assistant overseer of a township, to collect the rates; and the course was, upon receipt, to pay them into a bank to the account of the overseers' receipts for the sums so paid. It was his duty also to enter the rates when received in a book, and at the audit he charged himself by the entries in his book and discharged himself by the receipts of the overseers. Having misappropriated certain moneys, which he duly entered in the book when received, he fraudulently obtained from the overseers receipts for the several sums stated in the indictment, by falsely telling them that he had paid the money into the bank. These receipts he produced to the auditor, and so deceived him as to his having handed over the moneys:—Held, that he was rightly convicted, and that the fact of his entering the sums, when received, in his book, did not alter the character of his offence. Reg. v. Guelder, Bell, C. C. 284; 30 L. J., M. C. 34; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1214; 3 L. T. 337; 9 W. R. 38; 8 Cox, C. C. 372.

Goods given by Master to Servant to Sell—Servant deferring Payment.]—A person hired by a market gardener to do a day's work was requested by him to take some vegetables to market, sell them, and bring back the money; the prisoner thereupon sold four pots of potatoes, and received the money. He sold four other pots, but did not receive the money. On his return to his master, he stated correctly the price he sold the potatoes for, but said that he would settle with him on a subsequent day, as he had not received the money, and did not offer the sum received, or say he had been paid for a part, and subsequently made the same excuse, and never paid any part of the money:—Held, that this was not embezzlement, unless he, when he said he had not received the money, meant that he had not received any part of it. Reg. v. Winnall, 5 Cox, C. C. 326.

A miller's foreman employed to sell goods for his master, sold some to a customer, received the money but did not account for the money in any way:—Held, that the prisoner was guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Betts, Bell, C. C. 90; 28 L. J., M. C. 69; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 274; 7 W. R. 239; 8 Cox, C. C. 140.

Goods or Notes given by Master to Servant.]—Where the prosecutor gave his servant a five-pound note to get changed, which he did, and made off with the change:—Held, that it was an embezzlement and not a larceny. Rex v. Sullens, Car. C. L. 319; 1 M. C. C. 129.

The prisoner, having been intrusted by his master with a number of articles of soldiers' clothing for the purpose of selling them, and ten pounds in silver, to enable him to give change, sailed in a ship for the coast of Africa, having, before his departure, written to his master to say that he would send the account, together with a remittance, from Madeira:—Held, that he could not be convicted of embezzlement, having received the goods from his master himself, and not from another for and on account of his master; but that he might have been convicted of larceny. Reg. v. Hawkins, 1 Den. C. C. 584; T. & M. 328; 14 Jur. 513; 4 Cox, C. C. 224.

Money received from Fellow Servant.]—The prisoner had, as a servant, in the course of his duty, received from a fellow-servant money paid to that servant for his master by another servant, who had received it from the customers. It was the duty of the prisoner, after such receipt, to hand the money to another servant (the cashier) of his master, but instead of handing it over, he fraudulently retained it:—Held, that this was embezzlement. Reg. v. Masters, 1 Den. C. C. 332; T. & M. 1; 2 C. & K. 930; 3 New Sess. Cas. 326; 18 L. J., M. C. 2; 12 Jur. 942; 3 Cox, C. C. 178.

Marked Money given by Master to Third Person to pass at Shop.]—The prosecutor gave some marked money to J. W. to expend at his (the prosecutor's) shop, for the purpose of detecting a servant, of whom the master had suspicions. The servant was convicted of embezzling a portion of the marked money:—Held, that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Gill, Dears. C. C. 289; 23 L. J., M. C. 50; 18 Jur. 70; 2 W. R. 222; 6 Cox, C. C. 295.

If a servant secretes moneys which his master has marked and sent by a friend to make a purchase at his shop, with a view to try the honesty of his servant, it is a felonious breach of trust, and an embezzling, and not a larceny at common law. Rex v. Headge, 2 Leach, C. C. 1033; R. & R. 160. S. P., Rex v. Whittingham, 2 Leach, C. C. 912.

When Society or Partnership is illegally or irregularly Constituted.]—Where a society, in consequence of administering to its members an unlawful oath, is an unlawful combination and confederacy under 37 Geo. 3, c. 123; 39 Geo. 3, c. 79; 52 Geo. 3, c. 104; and 57 Geo, 3, c. 19; a person charged with embezzlement, as clerk and servant to such society, cannot be convicted. Reg. v. Hunt, 8 Car. & P. 642.

It is embezzlement in the clerk of a friendly society fraudulently to withhold the rents of a house collected in the course of his duty as clerk. It is no defence that the business of the society has not been conducted according to the statute. Reg. v. Miller, 2 M. C. C. 249.

An officer of a friendly society, some of whose rules were in restraint of trade, embezzled its money:—Held, that rules in restraint of trade are not criminal, although they may be void as being against public policy, and that a society having such rules is entitled to the protection of the criminal law for its funds, and, consequently, that the officer might legally be convicted of embezzlement. Reg. v. Stainer, 39 L. J., M. C. 54; L. R. 1 C. C. 230; 21 L. T. 758; 18 W. R. 439; 11 Cox, C. C. 483. See 32 & 33 Vict. c. 61.

A. was secretary and cashier to a company calling themselves "The R. M. & H. Coal Co. (Limited)"; the number of members exceeded twenty, but no certificate of incorporation was put in evidence:—Held, that A. was rightly convicted of embezzlement as servant of B. and others, there being no evidence which ought to have been left to the jury that the company was incorporated. Reg. v. Frankland, L. & C. 276; 32 L. J., M. C. 69; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 388; 7 L. T. 799; 11 W. R. 346; 9 Cox, C. C. 273.

—— Property Laid in Joint Beneficial Owners.]—Where, in a prosecution for embezzlement by one of two or more beneficial owners, the property in the money embezzled is laid in the individual beneficial owners, the indictment is good, notwithstanding that such beneficial owners together form an unregistered association which, as it consists of more than twenty persons for the acquisition of gain, is made illegal by s. 4 of the Companies Act, 1862. Reg. v. Tankard, 63 L. J., M. C. 61; [1894] 1 Q. B. 548; 10 R. 149; 70 L. T. 42; 42 W. R. 350; 17 Cox, C. C. 719; 58 J. P. 300—C. C. R.

Where Master has no Right to Money Received.]—If a servant receives money on his employers' account, and embezzles it, he is guilty of a felony, although they had no right to it, and were wrong-doers in receiving it. Rex v. Beacall, 1 Car. & P. 454.

What Sum Embezzled—Weekly Aggregates.]—The prisoner was a member of a co-partnership. It was his duty to receive money for the co-partnership, and once a week to render an account and pay over the gross amount received during the previous week. During each of three several weeks, within six months, the prisoner received various small sums, and failed to account for them at the end of the week, or to pay over the gross amount, but embezzled the money: —Held, that he might properly be charged with embezzling the weekly aggregates; that three acts of embezzlement of such weekly aggregates within six months might be charged and proved under one indictment; and that evidence of the small sums received during each week was admissible to show how these aggregates were made up. Reg. v. Balls, 40 L. J., M. C. 148; L. R. 1 C. C. 328; 24 L. T. 760; 19 W. R. 876; 12 Cox, C. C. 96.

A person received 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* in his capacity of clerk to overseers of a parish, and made an entry in a book of the receipt of that sum accordingly, and placed the money with other sums in his possession; the entry of 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* was afterwards erased, and 5*l.* 6*s.* 10½*d.* substituted for it, and the prisoner only accounted to the parish officers for 5*l.* 6*s.* 10½*d.* On an indictment for embezzling 1*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*, and conviction thereon: —Held, that as the prisoner might have paid over the whole of what he received for the 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*, and have taken the 1*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* from other moneys he received, he was improperly convicted. Rex v. Tyers, R. & R. 402.

Time of Embezzlement not Fixed.]—A treasurer to guardians of the poor not accounting for a portion of money received for the guardians is an embezzlement, although no precise time could be fixed at which it was the prisoner's duty to pay over the money alleged to be embezzled. Reg. v. Welch, 2 Car. & K. 296; 1 Den. C. C. 199; 2 Cox, C. C. 85.

Receipt by Servant for or in the Name of or on the Account of his Master.]—Embezzlement of money by a servant under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68, must be in respect of money delivered to or received, or taken into possession by the servant for or in the name of or on the account of his master. Reg. v. Cullum, 42 L. J., M. C. 64; L. R. 2 C. C. 28; 28 L. T. 571; 21 W. R. 687; 12 Cox, C. C. 469.

When a servant, whose duty it was to take a barge belonging to his master with cargo from A. to B., and receive back such return cargo, and from such persons as his master should direct, and such only, contrary to the express orders of his master, which were to return empty from B. to C., part of the return voyage to A., took, nevertheless, a return cargo from B. to C., and received the freight from the owner of the cargo, who knew only the servant in the transaction, and did not account to his master for the freight, and denied having carried such return cargo: —Held, that the money was not received by him for or in the name of or on the account of his master, and that he was not guilty of embezzlement. Ib.

It was part of the duties of the prisoner as head manager of a fire insurance company at the head office to receive remittances and cheques sent to the head office from the managers of district branches. These cheques were usually drawn on the local bank and made payable to prisoner's order. On receipt it was also part of his duty to indorse them and hand them over to the cashier, who paid them into the company's bankers and accounted for them in his books. He received two cheques for the company from district managers of the amounts respectively of 400*l.* and 200*l.* Instead of handing them over to the cashier, he indorsed and cashed the cheques through private friends of his own, and later in the day paid the amount, viz. 600*l.*, to the cashier to be put against his salary account, which was overdrawn to that amount. The cashier did so, and returned him I O U's to that amount. After some interval of time the fraud was discovered. The prisoner was indicted for embezzling the two sums of 400*l.* and 200*l.*: —Held, that he had been guilty of embezzlement of the money, notwithstanding that the cash was paid to him by his friends on his own account. Reg. v. Gale, 46 L. J., M. C. 134; 2 Q. B. D. 141; 35 L. T. 526; 13 Cox, C. C. 340. Cp. Reg. v. Wheeler, 14 W. R. 848.

The prosecutor had contracted with a railway company for finding and providing them with necessary horses and carmen for the purpose of conveying and delivering to the customers of the company the coals of the company in their own waggons, and that he or his carmen should day by day duly account for and deliver to the company's coal manager all moneys received in payment for coals so delivered. The delivery notes, as well as receipted invoices of the coals, were handed to the carmen of the prosecutor, and the former were taken to his office, but the invoices receipted by the company were left with the customers on payment of the amount. The prisoner was the servant of the prosecutor, employed as his carman in the delivery of coals pursuant to the contract, and it was his duty to pay over direct to the clerks of the company such moneys as he might receive for coals. He delivered coals to one of the company's customers, and brought the delivery order to the office to be entered; he received for the coals 5*l.* 10*s.*, leaving the receipted invoice with the customer, which sum he converted to his own use. He was convicted of embezzling the moneys of the prosecutor, who had contracted with the company:—Held, that there was such privity between the prisoner and the company as to make the prisoner the agent of the company in receiving the money, and that such money was not received for or on account of the prosecutor, but for and on account of the company, and that he was wrongly convicted of embezzling the prosecutor's money. Reg. v. Beaumont, Dears. C. C. 270; 2 C. L. R. 614; 23 L. J., M. C. 54; 18 Jur. 159; 2 W. R. 235; 6 Cox, C. C. 629.

The prosecutor was agent to a railway company for delivering goods. He employed his own servants, of whom the prisoner was one, his own drays and horses, and was answerable to the company for the money received by his servants for the carriage of goods. It was the prisoner's duty to go out with the dray, to take with him goods, and a delivery book handed to him by a clerk of the company, to deliver the goods and receive the amount of carriage, and to account for moneys received to the clerk of the company. The prisoner embezzled certain sums which he had received as due to the company, and for which he had given receipts in the company's name:—Held, that although the money was received in the name of the company, it was received on the account of the prosecutor, his master, and that a conviction for embezzlement was right. Reg. v. Thorpe, Dears. & B. 62; 27 L. J., M. C. 264; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 466; 6 W. R. 502; 8 Cox, C. C. 29.

The prisoner was employed to superintend the grinding of corn at the mill of the county gaol. It was his duty to direct any person bringing grain to be ground at the mill to obtain a ticket at the porter's lodge. This ticket was his order for grinding the grain so brought to him, and it would have been a breach of his duty to have ground any grain without a ticket. Having ground the corn, he was to receive the money, and hand it over to the governor of the gaol. The prisoner had received money from different persons, whose corn he had ground without the production of a ticket, and appropriated it to his own use:—Held, that he had not received the money on account of his master, and was not therefore guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Harris, Dears. C. C. 344; 2 C. L. R. 464; 23 L. J., M. C. 110; 18 Jur. 408; 2 W. R. 413; 6 Cox, C. C. 363.

Where the defendant was employed as a town traveller and collector to receive orders from customers and enter them in the books and receive the money therefor, but had no authority to take or direct delivery of goods from his master's shop, and a customer having ordered two articles of the defendant, he entered one of them only in the order book for which an invoice was made out by the prosecutor to the customer, but the defendant entered the price of the other at the bottom of the invoice, and having caused both to be delivered to the customer, received the price of both and accounted to the prosecutor for the former article only, this was held to be larceny and not embezzlement. Reg. v. Wilson, 9 Car. & P. 27.

Constructive Receipt.]—It was the duty of police constables to account for and pay over weekly to their superintendent all moneys received by them, the superintendent making a weekly return to the chief constable of such moneys and paying the constables wages weekly. The practice was for the superintendent to set-off the sums received by the constables against their wages, the balance struck going over to the next week, and no money actually passing. The superintendent fraudulently omitted in the weekly account to the chief constable a sum for which a constable accounted to him:—Held, that there was a constructive receipt of the sum by the superintendent from the constable, that the superintendent was the clerk and servant of the chief constable and not of the county treasurer to whom the chief constable transmitted all sums received by him from the superintendent. Reg. v. Baxter, 5 Cox, C. C. 302.

Receipt by Servant by Virtue of Employment.]—Embezzlement of money by a servant not authorised to receive it, was not within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47. Rex v. Thorley, 1 M. C. C. 343.

If a servant generally employed by his master to receive sums of one description, and at one place only, is employed by him in a particular instance to receive a sum of a different description and at a different place, this latter sum was to be considered as received by him by virtue of his employment, within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85. Rex v. Smith, R. & R. 516.

A clerk, intrusted to receive money at home from outdoor collectors, received it abroad from outdoor customers:—Held, that such a receipt of money might be considered by virtue of his employment, within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, although it was beyond the limits to which he was authorised to receive money for his employers. Rex v. Beechey, R. & R. 319.

A. was convicted on an indictment charging him with embezzlement. He was storekeeper and clerk of a county gaol, and it was no part of his duty (which was defined by written instructions) to receive money, but he had from time to time received moneys in the absence of the governor of the gaol, and to the knowledge of some of the justices. It was submitted that he had not received the money by virtue of his employment, and that that question ought to be left to the jury; but the recorder directed the jury that if they believed that A. received the money, he did receive it by virtue of his employment:—Held, that the question whether he received the money by virtue of his employment ought to have been left to the jury, and that the conviction was wrong. Reg. v. Arman, Dears. C. C. 575; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1115, 1117; 7 Cox, C. C. 45.

A. was employed to lead a stallion, and he was to charge 30*s.* a mare, and not take less than 20*s.* He received the sum of 6*s.* for the covering of a mare:—Held, no embezzlement, as the sum was not received by virtue of his employment. Rex v. Snowley, 4 Car. & P. 390.

A collector of poor-rates, as a servant of the overseers, has authority to receive the rates from the landlord, if he will pay them to him; and therefore receives such sums by virtue of his employment. Reg. v. Adey, 4 New Sess. Cas. 360; 1 Den. C. C. 571; T. & M. 296; 3 Car. & K. 339; 19 L. J., M. C. 149; 14 Jur. 556; 4 Cox, C. C. 208.

3. By whom Offence Committed.

a. Clerk or Servant.

Question for Jury.]—On an indictment for embezzling moneys, it is for the jury to say whether the relation of master and clerk existed between the prosecutor and prisoner. Reg. v. Chater, 9 Cox, C. C. 1.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Employment of Assignor by Trustee.]—B., being in difficulties, assigned all his book debts, estate and effects to trustees for the benefit of creditors. He was employed by the trustees at a salary to manage the business and to collect the debts for them. He received the amount of two of the debts and did not account for it:—Held, that he was not a clerk or servant within the meaning of the act. Reg. v. Barnes, 8 Cox, C. C. 129.

Of Corporation—Appointment.]—If the party embezzling is employed as the servant of a corporation, although not duly appointed their servant, nor even under their common seal, he may be guilty of embezzlement. Rex v. Wellings, 1 Car. & P. 459.

Bank of England—"Entrusted" with Note.]—A clerk of the Bank of England employed to post into the ledger and read from the cash book bank notes from 100*l.* in value up to 1,000*l.*, in the course of his employment had access to a file upon which paid notes of every description were filed, and took from that file a paid bank note for 50*l.*:—Held, that he could not be considered as "entrusted" with this note within a section corresponding to s. 73 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Rex v. Bakewell, R. & R. 35.

Female.]—A female servant is within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, similar in terms to s. 68 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Rex v. Smith, R. & R. 267.

Apprentice.]—An apprentice, though under age, is within the 39 Geo. 3, c. 85. Rex v. Mellish, R. & R. 80.

Distraining Broker—Sole Service.]—A person employed as a distraining broker, if engaged in the service of the prosecutor only, and paid a salary by him, is a servant within s. 67 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Flanagan, 10 Cox, C. C. 561.

Assistant Overseer.]—Upon an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, s. 68, for embezzlement by a clerk or servant, it is necessary to prove that the prisoner was appointed or employed to collect or receive money for his employer. C., having been nominated by the inhabitants of a township as an assistant overseer, and the nomination not specifying as one of the duties he was to perform the duty of collecting or receiving money:—Held, that inasmuch as under 59 Geo. 4. c. 12, s. 7, an assistant overseer can only be appointed by justices for such purposes as are specified in the nomination, C. could not be convicted of embezzling rates collected by him as a clerk or servant of the inhabitants within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, s. 68. Reg. v. Coley, 56 L. T. 747; 16 Cox, C. C. 226; 51 J. P. 710—C. C. R.

An assistant overseer, appointed under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7, is not a clerk or servant to the overseers so as to be guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Sampson, 1 Cox, C. C. 355.

Collector of Poor-rate.]—The prisoner agreed with one of the overseers of a parish to collect the poor-rate and keep the books connected therewith. The overseer left the method of collection and of keeping the books entirely in the hands of the prisoner, and gave him no orders during his management of the business. The prisoner applied to his own use a portion of the moneys so received:—Held, that the prisoner was not a "clerk or servant" within the meaning of s. 68 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, and could not be convicted of embezzlement. Reg. v. Bowers (L. R. 1 C. C. 41) discussed. Reg. v. Harris, 5 R. 402; 69 L. T. 25; 17 Cox, C. C. 656; 57 J. P. 729—C. C. R.

Accountant and Treasurer to Overseers.]—One who was employed at a yearly salary under the appellation of accountant and treasurer to the overseers of a township, whose duty it was to receive all moneys receivable or payable by them, was a clerk and servant within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85. Rex v. Squire, 2 Stark. 348; R. & R. 349.

Person in the Service of a Company of which he is a Director.]—A director and shareholder of a limited company who was employed by the company, at a salary, to superintend the business of the company and to collect moneys due to them, may be convicted of having, while employed as a servant to the company, received moneys on their account and embezzled the same. Reg. v. Stuart, 63 L. J., M. C. 63; [1894] 1 Q. B. 310; 10 R. 124; 70 L. T. 44; 42 W. R. 303; 17 Cox, C. C. 723; 58 J. P. 299—C. C. R.

Captain of Barge Employed to Sell Coal.]—Where the owner of a colliery employed the prisoner, as captain of one of his barges, to carry out and sell coal, and paid him for his labour by allowing him two-thirds of the price for which he sold the coals above the price charged at the colliery:—Held, that the prisoner was a servant within the meaning of 39 Geo. 3, c. 85; and having embezzled the price, he was guilty of larceny within the meaning of that act. Rex v. Hartley, R. & R. 139.

Payment of Commission.]—B., in answer to an application, was informed by letter from the prosecutors, "We are not disposed to appoint any agent at N., but for all business you do for us we shall be happy to pay you a commission." He afterwards obtained some orders, and misappropriated some moneys received by him. The jury found that it was his duty to account to the prosecutors for any money he might receive for them immediately on receipt of it:—Held, that B. was not a clerk or a servant, and could not be convicted of embezzlement. Reg. v. May, L. & C. 13; 30 L. J., M. C. 81; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 3 L. T. 680; 9 W. R. 256; 8 Cox, C. C. 421.

A. was indicted for embezzlement. He was engaged by the prosecutor as a commercial traveller, to be paid by commission, and he was at liberty to obtain orders for other persons:—Held, that there was evidence of his being a servant to the prosecutor. Reg. v. Tite, L. & C. 29; 30 L. J., M. C. 142; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 556; 4 L. T. 259; 9 W. R. 554; 8 Cox, C. C. 458.

Solicitor Employed to Collect Rents.]—An indictment charged a person, who was a solicitor, with embezzlement. It appeared from his appointment, as entered in the minute-book of the company, that he was a land agent to the company, and that in the course of his duties he collected the rents of houses, refreshment-stalls, book-stalls, &c., and should have paid the sums over to the company, and that he managed the parochial assessments, as to the justness of claim. His salary was 300*l.* a year, and an extra sum was allowed for travelling expenses:—Held, that he was a clerk or a servant. Reg. v. Gibson, 8 Cox, C. C. 436.

No Remuneration Agreed upon.]—A., who had been a farm servant of B., but who had ceased to be so, was employed by B. to collect his debts, it being B.'s intention to go to America, and to take A. with him and set him up there in business for himself. There was no agreement for any remuneration to be paid by B. to A. for collecting the debts:—Held, that A. could not be convicted of embezzling the sums received by him on behalf of B. Reg. v. Hoare, 1 F. & F. 647.

Drover of Cattle.]—A drover of cattle was employed by a grazier in the country to drive eight oxen to London; his instructions were that if he could sell them on the road, he might do so; and that those he did not sell on the road he was to take to a particular salesman in Smithfield Market, who was to sell them for the grazier; the drover received the money for the beasts and applied it to his own use:—Held, that he could not be convicted of embezzlement. Reg. v. Goodbody, 8 Car. & P. 665.

Treated as Debtor, not as Servant.]—The prisoner kept a refreshment-house at B., and whilst doing so was engaged by the prosecutors, manure manufacturers, to get orders, which they supplied from their stores. He was to collect the money and send it at once to them, and also to furnish weekly accounts. He was paid by commission, and it did not appear that he had undertaken to give any definite time or labour to the business, but he was to act in a particular district, and was called agent for the B. district. He was to go through the country, see the farmers and get orders, and during the season was to be continually among the farmers. Subsequently the prosecutors rented stores at B., which were placed under the prisoner's control, and from them he supplied orders he obtained. The first mode, however, or the mixed mode, might have been resorted to, according to the convenience of the prosecutors. After some time a proposal was made to a guarantee society to insure the prosecutors in respect to their connection with the prisoner. This proposal was signed by the prisoner. It was a printed form issued by the society, and contained a notice that some salary must be payable, or the society would not insure. It stated that the prisoner's salary was 1*l.* a year besides commission, estimated at 65*l.* a year. At this time the prosecutors had agreed to give the salary of 1*l.* a year. The prisoner was allowed to get in arrear, and was treated by the prosecutors as a debtor in respect of the arrears. Having, however, received money from certain customers, he fraudulently returned their names as not having paid, and for this he was tried and convicted of embezzlement:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, as it was not established by the evidence that the prisoner was the servant of the prosecutors. Reg. v. Walker, Dears. & B. 600; 27 L. J., M. C. 207; 4 Jur. (N S) 465; 6 W. R. 505; 8 Cox, C. C. 1.

Where Duty not Compulsory.]—A butty collier, who received a certain sum for every ton of coal he raised, was also allowed to sell coal for his employer, the owner of the colliery. It was his duty to pay over the gross money received on such sales, and he was subsequently allowed a poundage thereon. Having converted money received for coal to his own use, he neglected to account for it:—Held, that although the sale of the coal was not compulsory, he was servant to the owner of the colliery, so as to support an indictment for embezzlement. Reg. v. Thomas, 6 Cox, C. C. 403.

A person whose duty it is to obtain orders when and where he likes, and to forward them to his principal for execution, and then has three months within which to collect the money for the goods sent, is not a clerk or a servant. Reg. v. Mayle, 11 Cox, C. C. 150.

If such a person, at the request of his principal, collects a sum of money from a customer, with the obtaining of whose order he has nothing to do, he is a mere volunteer, and is not liable to be prosecuted for embezzlement if he does not pay over or account for the money so received. Ib.

A person who is employed to get orders for goods, and to receive payment for them, but who is at liberty to get the orders and receive the money where and when he thinks proper, being paid by a commission on the goods sold, is not a clerk or servant within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68. Reg. v. Bowers, 35 L. J., M. C. 206; L. R. 1 C. C. 41; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 550; 14 L. T. 671; 14 W. R. 803; 10 Cox, C. C. 250.

A person was employed as traveller to solicit orders, and collect the moneys due on the execution of the orders, and to pay over moneys on the evening of the day when collected, or the day following. He had no salary, but was paid by commission. He might get orders when and where he pleased within his district. He was to be exclusively in the employ of the prosecutors, and to give the whole of his time—the whole of every day, to their service:—Held, that he was a clerk and servant within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68. Reg. v. Bailey, 24 L. T. 477: 12 Cox, C. C. 56.

The prisoner was employed by a coal merchant under an agreement "that he was to receive 1*s.* per ton procuration fee, payable out of the first payment, 4 per cent. for collecting, and 3*d.* on the last payment. Collections to be paid on Friday evening before 5 p.m., or Saturday before 2 p.m." He received no salary, was not obliged to be at the office except on Friday or Saturday to account for what money he had received. He was at liberty to go where he pleased for orders:—Held, that he was not a clerk or servant within the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68, relating to embezzlement. Reg. v. Marshall, 21 L. T. 796; 11 Cox, C. C. 490.

A person engaged to solicit orders and paid by commission on the sums received, which sums he was forthwith to hand over to his employers, who was at liberty to apply for orders when he thought most convenient, and was not to employ himself for any other persons, is not a clerk or servant within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68. Reg. v. Negus, 42 L. J., M. C. 62; L. R. 2 C. C. 31; 28 L. T. 646; 21 W. R. 687; 12 Cox, C. C. 492.

An accountant and debt collector was employed by the prosecutors to collect certain debts specified in a list given to him. The time and mode of collecting the debts were in his discretion, and he was authorised to sue for them, if necessary, but at his own charge. In no case was he to receive from the prosecutors more than five per cent. on the amount collected by him and paid over to the prosecutors. The jury having found, on these facts, that he was employed in the capacity of clerk, and convicted him of embezzlement of certain sums received by him and not paid over to the prosecutors:—Held, that the finding was wrong, and that he was not employed as a clerk. Reg. v. Hall, 31 L. T. 883; 13 Cox, C. C. 49.

Occasional Employment.]—A man was sufficiently a servant within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, although he was only occasionally employed when he had nothing else to do. Rex v. Spencer, R. & R. 299.

And it is sufficient, if he was employed to receive the money he embezzled, although receiving money may not be in his usual employment, and although it was the only instance in which he was so employed. Ib.

A., who was convicted of embezzlement, was secretary of a money club. His duties were cognate to that of receiving money, although the receipt of money was not expressly named as one of them in the rules, which were in writing. He was directed by the club to sue upon a joint promissory note, their property, or get better security, and the note was handed to him by the treasurer, not a member of the club, who desired that his name should not be used in legal proceedings. The note was payable to the treasurer's order, and A. indorsed the treasurer's name on the note, and employed an attorney, who issued a writ at the suit of A. In consequence of the action money was paid to him by one of the makers of the note, the receipt of which he denied, and fraudulently withheld the money from the club, and appropriated it:—Held, that he was rightly convicted. Reg. v. Tonque, Bell, C. C. 289; 30 L. J., M. C. 49; 3 L. T. 415; 9 W. R. 59; 8 Cox, C. C. 386.

Embezzlement by one who is neither clerk nor servant, nor in any respect under the control of the person by whom he is in a single instance only requested to receive moneys, was not punishable under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49, as he did not come within the description of clerk, or servant, or a person employed for the purpose of, or in the capacity of a clerk or servant. Rex v. Nettleton, 1 M. C. C. 259.

A person employed to collect the sacrament money from the communicants is not the servant of the minister, churchwardens or poor, so as to be within 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29, s. 47, if he embezzles the money. Rex v. Burton, 1 M. C. C. 237.

The prisoner had worked for the prosecutor, sometimes as a regular labourer and sometimes as a roundsman; but at the time in question, he not being at all in the prosecutor's service, was sent by the prosecutor to get a cheque cashed at a banker's, for doing which he was to be paid sixpence. He got the cash, and made off.—Held, no embezzlement, as the prisoner was not a servant of the prosecutor within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47. Rex v. Freeman, 5 Car. & P. 534.

A person hired by a market gardener to do a day's work, and who is requested by his employer to take some vegetables to market and sell them, and bring back the produce, is a servant to his employer in respect of such employment, within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47. Reg. v. Winnall, 5 Cox, C. C. 326.

A. was secretary to a benefit building society. It was no part of his duty, as prescribed by the rules, to receive money for the society; but, according to the course of business, the subscriptions were frequently received by him, and when mortgages were redeemed the money was paid to him as secretary, but for and upon receipts signed by the trustees. Having embezzled the redemption-money upon a mortgage so paid to him, he was indicted under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47:—Held, that there was evidence for the jury that he was employed by the trustees as their servant to receive money on their behalf. Reg. v. Hastie, L. & C. 269; 32 L. J., M. C. 63; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 235; 7 L. T. 695; 11 W. R. 293; 9 Cox, C. C. 264.

A servant may be found guilty of embezzlement, though he is not a general servant, and is employed to receive in a single instance only. Rex v. Hughes, 1 M. C. C. 370.

Employment by other Masters.]—A person employed by A. to sell goods for him at certain wages may be convicted of embezzlement as the servant of A., though at the same time employed by other persons and for other purposes. Reg. v. Batty, 2 M. C. C. 257.

The prisoner agreed with a manufacturer of earthenware to act as his traveller, and "diligently employ himself in going from town to town in England, Ireland, and Scotland, and soliciting orders for the printed and decorated earthenware manufactured by him, and that he would not, without his consent in writing, take or execute any order for vending or disposing of any goods of the nature or kind aforesaid, for or on account of himself or any other person." It was further agreed that the prisoner should be paid by commission, and should render weekly accounts. The manufacturer subsequently gave the prisoner written permission to take orders for two other manufacturers. The prisoner being indicted for embezzlement under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68:—Held, that he was a clerk or servant of the prosecutor within that statute. Reg. v. Turner, 22 L. T. 278; 11 Cox, C. C. 551.

A person employed upon commission to travel for orders and collect debts, was a clerk within 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, and might have been indicted for embezzlement, although he was employed by many different houses on each journey, and paid his own expenses out of his commission on each journey, and did not live with any of his employers, nor act in any of their counting-houses. Rex v. Carr, R. & R. 198.

Employment by Father—Father Clerk to Local Board.]—The prisoner's father was clerk to a local board, and held other appointments. The prisoner lived with his father, and assisted him in his office and in the business of the board. In his father's absence the prisoner acted for him at the meetings of the board, and when present he assisted him. The prisoner was not appointed or paid by the board; and there was no evidence that he received any salary from his father. The board having occasion to raise a loan on mortgage, the prisoner managed the business for his father; and at his father's office received the money from the mortgagees, and appropriated a part of it to his own use:—Held, that there was evidence that the prisoner was a clerk or servant, or employed as a clerk or servant, and was guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Foulkes, 44 L. J., M. C. 65; L. R. 2 C. C. 150; 32 L. T. 407; 23 W. R. 696; 13 Cox, C. C. 63.

Servant or Partner.]—An instrument in the following form is a contract for service by a labourer, and not a contract of partnership:—"S. W. engages to take charge of the glebe land of the Rev. A. B., his wife undertaking the dairy and poultry, at 15*s.* a week, till Michaelmas, 1850, and afterwards at a salary of 25*l.* a year, and a third of the clear annual profits, after all the expenses of rent, rate, labour and interest on capital, &c., are paid, on a fair valuation made from Michaelmas to Michaelmas. Three months' notice on either side to be given, at the expiration of which the cottage to be vacated by S. W., who occupies it as bailiff, in addition to his salary.—March 12th. 1850.—(Signed) A. B., S. W."—The prisoner was directed to account, and was in the habit of accounting, with the wife of the prosecutor. On the 4th October, the prisoner, in accounting with her, denied the receipt of two sums of money which he had received for and on account of his master, and appropriated them to his own use:—Held, that he was properly convicted of embezzlement, although Michaelmas was the time agreed upon when a valuation was to take place and the profits were to be ascertained. Reg. v. Wortley, T. & M. 636; 2 Den. C. C. 333; 21 L. J., M. C. 44; 15 Jur. 1137; 5 Cox, C. C. 382.

A. was a cashier and collector to commission agents. He was paid partly by salary and partly by percentage on the profits, but was not to contribute to the losses, and had no control over the management of the business:

—Held, that he was a servant within the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47, and not a partner. Reg. v. M'Donald, L. & C. 85 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 67 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1127 ; 5 L. T. 330 ; 10 W. R. 21 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 10.

By Members of Partnerships or by Joint Beneficial Owners.]—A treasurer who was also a member of a friendly society (duly enrolled and the rules of which had been certified by the barrister appointed in that behalf), whose duty it was to receive the moneys paid into the society, and hold them to the order of the secretary, countersigned by the chairman or a trustee, and to account whenever called upon, to which office no salary was attached, is not a clerk or a servant liable to be indicted for embezzlement under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68. Reg. v. Tyree, 38 L. J., M. C. 58 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 177 ; 19 L. T. 657 ; 17 W. R. 334 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 241.

A member of a friendly society was employed to receive the weekly payments made by the members. He gave correct receipts to the members, but omitted to enter in the contribution and cash books a large number of the sums so received. On being called upon for an explanation, he admitted that he had received the sums so omitted :—Held, that he was guilty of embezzlement. Reg. v. Proud, L. & C. 97 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 71 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 142 ; 5 L. T. 331 ; 10 W. R. 62 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 22.

A member of two unenrolled benefit clubs, paid as secretary and intrusted with the funds to deposit in the bank in the joint names of himself and the treasurer, dishonestly appropriated the sums so intrusted to him :—Held, that he could not be convicted of embezzlement as a servant. Reg. v. Marsh, 3 F. & F. 523.

Two friendly societies appointed a committee, of which the defendant was a member, to conduct an excursion ; the committee employed him and several others to sell tickets. It was his duty to pay over the money so received, which was to belong to the two societies, to a person appointed by the committee, but he received no remuneration for his services :—Held, that he was a joint owner of the money, and not a clerk or servant within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68, liable to be indicted for embezzlement, Reg. v. Bren, L. & C. 346 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 59 ; 9 L. T. 452 ; 12 W. R. 107 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 398.

A clerk of a banking company, established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, may be convicted of embezzling the money of the company, although he is a shareholder or partner in such company, Reg. v. Atkinson, Car. & M. 525 ; 2 M. C. C. 278.

—— Moneys of "Copartnership"—Association not for Purposes of Gain.]—An association having for its object, not the acquisition of gain, but the spiritual and mental improvement of its members, is not a "copartnership," within the meaning of the term as used in 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, s. 1. Consequently a member of such an association who has embezzled moneys belonging to it cannot be convicted under the above-mentioned act of embezzling the moneys of a "copartnership." Reg. v. Robson, 55 L. J., M. C. 55 ; 16 Q. B. D. 137 ; 53 L. T. 823 ; 34 W. R. 276 ; 15 Cox, C. C. 772 ; 50 J. P. 488—C. C. R.

Servant or Independent Officer.]—Under an order of the Poor Law Commissioners, in pursuance of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 46, the board of guardians of a union appointed A. to the office of collector of rates for the S. district, which district formed a part of the union. In the order of the poor law commissioners, the duties of the collector, and the compensation he was to receive, were fully set forth, and upon the receipt of the order the guardians appointed him verbally, which appointment was afterwards submitted for approval to the poor law commissioners, and ratified by them. The power of dismissal rested with the poor law commissioners alone. The collector, on his appointment, gave a bond for the proper performance of his duties to the guardians, and to them he was bound to give in a statement of his accounts weekly. There were separate rates for each parish or district of the union, and the duty of the collector was to collect the rates of the S. district, and pay in the amount to a banker, to the credit of the overseers of that district, they alone having the right of disposing of it. Out of this sum the overseers paid the collector a percentage for his services :—Held, that an indictment for embezzlement was not sustainable, there being no such service to any one as the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47, required, the collector being, under the circumstances, an independent officer. Reg. v. Truman, 2 Cox, C. C. 306.

Servant or Trustee.]—A. was a carrier, residing at Somerton and going from that place to Stoke and back, employed, however, only between the glove sewers at Somerton and the manufacturers at Stoke, in carrying the gloves from and to the one and the other. The manufacturers knew nothing of the sewers, but A. gave the name of and took out a number for any woman desiring to be employed, received unsewn gloves from the manufacturers, and conveyed them to the women at Somerton, taking back the gloves when finished and receiving the amount due to the women for their work. The manufacturers looked to the women for the work ; but if any were missing, and the women not found, they held the prisoner accountable for it. In accordance with this course of proceeding, A. received sewn gloves from two of the women, delivered them to the manufacturers, and received the amount due for the work, but fraudulently applied the money so received to his own use. He was tried for, and convicted of, embezzling the money of the two women :—Held, that the relation of master and servant did not subsist, but A. was a mere trustee, and was only guilty of a breach of trust, and not of embezzlement, and therefore the conviction was wrong. Reg. v. Gibbs, Dears. C. C. 445 ; 24 L. J., M. C. 62 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 118 ; 6 Cox, C. C. 455.

b. Trustees.

Who is Trustee.]—A person, who was trustee, treasurer and secretary of a savings bank, was indicted for misappropriation as a trustee. As secretary he received the money deposited, which, by the rules of the savings bank, it was his duty to hand over to the treasurer, who was required by the Savings Bank Acts to pay it over, when demanded, to the trustees, whose duty, as defined by the rules, was to vest it in the public funds in the names of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt. He falsified his accounts, and appropriated to his own purposes part of the money so deposited with him as secretary, with intent to defraud :—Held, first, that he was a trustee for the benefit of other persons. Reg. v. Fletcher, L. & C. 180 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 206 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 649 ; 6 L. T. 545 ; 10 W. R. 753 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 189. See Reg. v. Gibbs, supra.

—— Creation of Express Trust.]—Held, secondly, that there was an express trust created by the rules, although they were made before the appointment of the trustee and the existence of the trust fund. Ib.

By Trustee.]—T., a fruit broker, applied to his bankers for an advance as against certain goods which had been consigned to him and were then at sea, he depositing with them the indorsed bills of lading. Before making the advance the bankers required him to sign a letter of hypothecation, by which he undertook to hold the goods in trust for the bankers, and to hand over to them the proceeds, "as and when received," to the amount of the advance :—Held, that this letter contained a declaration of an express trust, such as would make the giver of it a trustee of the proceeds within the meaning of s. 80 of the Larceny Act, and his appropriation of them to his own use an offence against that section. Reg. v. Townshend, 15 Cox, C. C. 466.

Instrument in Writing.] — The rules of a savings bank are an instrument in writing. Reg. v. Fletcher, supra.

Indictment—Whose Property.]—A trustee of a friendly society (a lodge of oddfellows) was appointed, by resolution of the society, to receive money from the treasurer and carry it to the bank. He received the money, but instead of taking it to the bank, he applied it to his own purposes. He was indicted as a bailee of the moneys of the treasurer R. C., feloniously converting the money to his own use ; and also for a common law larceny of the money of R. C. The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 18, vests the property of such societies in the trustees, and directs the property to be laid in the names of the trustees in indictments :—Held, that the prisoner could not be convicted of feloniously converting or stealing the moneys of R. C., as charged in the indictment. Reg. v. Lowse, Bell, C. C. 259 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 132 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 513 ; 2 L. T. 254 ; 8 W. R. 422 ; 8 Cox, C. C. 302.

Sanction of Court of Chancery to Proceedings.]—The Court of Chancery sanctioned criminal proceedings upon an affidavit, stating that a trustee had paid 1,409*l.* into his private bankers, had drawn out the whole, with the exception of 28*l.*, and had paid a private debt of 150*l.* out of the trust funds. Wadham v. Rigg, 1 Drew. & Sm. 216.

c. Brokers and Agents.

Agents Intrusted in Course of Business.]—The 52 Geo. 3, c. 63, applied only to persons to whom securities were intrusted in the exercise of their function or business. Rex v. Prince, 2 Car. & P. 517.

Whilst in treaty with Messrs. G. & P. for the sale and transfer of a public-house licence, the prisoner was required by them to give security for the purchase-money before they would assist him in procuring a transfer. To enable him to give the required security, the prosecutor accepted three bills of exchange drawn upon him by the prisoner, which the latter was to deposit with G. & P. by way of security, and not negotiate or use for any other purpose, and if the transfer was not effected, was to return to the prosecutor. The prisoner, instead of depositing them with G. & P., converted two of them to his own use :—Held, that he was not an agent within s. 75 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, and could not be convicted under that section. Reg. v. Cosser, 13 Cox, C. C. 187.

Where a party established a savings bank, consisting of 130 members, each of whom paid a weekly subscription of 2*s.* 1*d.*, the odd penny being paid to him for the trouble of managing the affairs of the bank, the funds of which were to be disposed of once a week by a lottery, consisting of 129 blanks, and one prize amounting to 13*l.*, which was to go to the holder of the fortunate ticket ; and the defendant having absconded, after receiving from one of the subscribers deposits to the amount of 10*l.* 8*s.*, without receiving any benefit therefrom :—Held, that he was not indictable under the 52 Geo. 3, c. 63, for embezzling the money as an agent, or as a person having the possession of money for safe custody. Rex v. Mason, D. & R. N. P. C. 22.

A. placed valuable securities in the hands of B., with a written direction to invest the proceeds in the funds, "in case of any unexpected accident happening to A." No accident did happen to A., and the proceeds were by B. converted to his own use :—Held, that B. was not indictable under 52 Geo. 3, c. 63 (repealed) ; and it seemed that he would not be so under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49. Rex v. White, 4 Car. & P. 46.

Sale by Agent after Authority Countermanded.]—If any chattel or valuable security is intrusted to any broker or agent originally for the purpose of sale, but the authority to sell is afterwards countermanded, and the broker or agent, notwithstanding that countermand, sells the goods in violation of the orders of his principal, such broker or agent might be convicted of misdemeanour, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49. Reg. v. Gomm, 3 Cox, C. C. 64.

Misappropriation of Property Intrusted for Safe Custody to Agent.]—N., a solicitor, was intrusted by a client with money to invest on mortgage on the client's behalf ; he, instead of so doing, fraudulently appropriated the money to his own use :—Held, that N. was not intrusted with such money for "safe custody" within s. 76 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Newman, 51 L. J., M. C. 87 ; 8 Q. B. D. 706 ; 46 L. T. 394 ; 30 W. R. 530 ; 46 J. P. 612.

An attorney was employed to raise a loan of money on mortgage, of which he was to employ a part in paying off an earlier mortgage, and to hand over the rest to the mortgagor. He prepared the mortgage deed, received the mortgage money, and handed over the deed to the mortgagee in exchange. He then misappropriated a part of the money to his own use :—Held, that no offence had been committed under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75 or 76. Reg. v. Cooper, 43 L. J., M. C. 89 ; L. R. 2 C. C. 123 ; 30 L. T. 303 ; 22 W. R. 555 ; 12 Cox, C. C. 600.

An insurance broker was employed to effect three policies upon a vessel, which he did, advancing the premiums. A total loss having occurred the broker received the necessary documents to collect the moneys insured, and thereupon collected the amounts due upon two of the policies, by cheques payable to his order, which he paid into his own bank to his own credit. The premiums advanced by the broker and his commission on effecting the policies and receiving the losses were unpaid to him. The broker on being asked for the moneys after they had been received, said they were not due until a future day, and subsequently made excuses, and did not pay over the sums received on account of the losses to the prosecutor. The jury, in answer to a question left to them, found that the policies had been intrusted to the broker for a special purpose, viz. that he should receive the moneys due on them, and forthwith pay them over to the prosecutor. There was no evidence to support such a finding in the case:—Held, that there was a miscarriage, and as the court had no power to direct a new trial, the conviction should be quashed. Reg. v. Tatlock, 46 L. J., M. C. 7; 2 Q. B. D. 157; 35 L. T. 520; 13 Cox, C. C. 328.

Trust money having been invested on mortgage, the mortgage was paid off and the money left in the hands of the family solicitor, and was subsequently appropriated by him:—Held, that this was a fraudulent conversion to his own use of property intrusted to the solicitor for safe custody within s. 76 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Fullagar, 14 Cox, C. C. 370; 44 J. P. 57.

—— Security for Payment of Money—Bill of Exchange.]—A document which is a complete bill of exchange in all respects except that of the signatnre of the drawer is, when in the hands of the intended drawer, a valuable security; and is also by virtue of s. 18 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, a bill of exchange. Such a document is therefore a security for the payment of money within s. 75 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Bowerman, 60 L. J., M. C. 13; [1891] 1 Q. B. 112; 63 L. T. 532; 39 W. R. 207; 17 Cox, C. C. 151; 55 J. P. 373.

Money intrusted for Specific Purpose—Conversion of Money by Stockbroker]—On the 2nd November, 1885, W., by letter instructed the prisoner, a stockbroker, to buy for him on the following day certain stock at 90, to hold for a rise, the time to close to be left open, and inclosed a cheque for 21*l.* 5*s.* "for cover and commission." On the 3rd November the stock specified was at 91¼, and the prisoner paid the cheque into his bank without purchasing, and subsequently spent the money for his own use, the balance standing to his credit at his banker's on the 14th November being only 8*l.* Upon a case reserved at the trial of an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75, which charged the prisoner for that he having been intrusted as a broker and agent with a security for the payment of money, with a direction in writing to apply it for a specific purpose, in violation of good faith, and contrary to the terms of such direction, converted to his own use such security:—Held, that the prisoner was merely the agent of W. to hold and apply the money for which the cheque was sent for a specific purpose, and that he was rightly convicted under the circumstances of having converted the cheque to his own use, as charged in the indictment. Reg. v. Cronmire, 54 L. T. 580; 51 J. P. 104; 16 Cox, C. C. 42—C. C. R.

Direction in Writing—Vendee of Goods.]—B. agreed to purchase corn from S. and T. at a certain price, and received delivery orders for the same. Before actually taking delivery, B. signed an undertaking directed to S. and T. to the following effect:—"In consideration of your delivering to me the Indian corn bought this day, I hereby undertake to hand you the proceeds of the same as and when received, and to hold myself responsible for deficiency should there be any." B. subsequently sold the corn and appropriated the proceeds to his own use:—Held, that B. was not an agent but the vendee of the goods, and that s. 75 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, did not apply. Reg. v. Bredin, 15 Cox, C. C. 412.

"Or other Agent."]—In 24 & 25 Vict. c. 69, s. 75—which enacts that whosoever, having been intrusted as a banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or other agent, with any chattel or valuable security for safe custody or for any special purpose, without any authority to sell, negotiate, transfer, or pledge, shall in violation of good faith and contrary to the object or purpose for which such chattel, security, &c., was intrusted to him, sell, negotiate, &c., or in any manner convert to his own use or benefit such chattel or security, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour—the words "or other agent" apply to persons whose occupation is similar to those enumerated in the section, and do not include any ordinary agent who may from time to time be intrusted with valuable securities. Where, therefore, the prisoner, who was not a banker, merchant, broker, or attorney, was employed by the prosecutors, who were railway contractors, to procure for them a contract for the construction of a foreign railway, and was charged under s. 75 with having misappropriated valuable securities with which the prosecutors had intrusted him in the course of his employment:—Held, that the facts disclosed no offence within the meaning of the section, and that the prisoner was not liable to be committed with a view to his extradition. Reg. v. Portugal or De Portugal, In re, 55 L. J., Q. B. 567; 16 Q. B. D. 487; 34 W. R. 42; 50 J. P. 501.

Broker or Agent—Question for Jury.]—Whether a person intrusted with a security for the payment of money with a direction in writing as to its application, or as to the application of the proceeds thereof, was so intrusted as a broker or agent within the meaning of s. 75 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, is a question of fact for the jury; and the mere fact that such person had an interest in the transaction greater than that of a mere agent would not deprive him of his capacity of agent. Reg. v. Bowerman, supra.

"Direction in Writing to apply Money."]—Trust money had been invested on mortgage. The mortgage was paid off, and the money left in the hands of the family solicitor, who wrote to the person beneficially interested, "R.'s money was paid on Saturday, the 6th day of April, 2,500*l.* and interest. . . . . Let me know how you would like to have the 2,500*l.* invested, whether in the funds or on mortgage. I can get you 4 per cent. on a good security, but no more. More than 4 per cent. is not to be obtained upon such securities as trustees would be justified in investing." The answer was dated the 9th day of April: "Will consult C. at once about the money, and let you know. I do not wish it placed in the funds. I am very glad it is paid over, and hope it is well secured by this time." At or near the date of these letters it was clear that the money had been fraudulently appropriated to his own use by the solicitor:—Quære, whether the above letters amounted to a direction in writing to apply the money within s. 75 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Fullagar, 14 Cox, C. C. 370; 44 J. P. 57.

Where money was intrusted, without any direction in writing, to the prisoner as a notary, with a view to re-investment as soon as either he or his customer should have found a suitable investment, and he misappropriated such money:—Held, that there was no evidence of any offence against 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75, because the first part of that section requires that the money should have been intrusted with a direction in writing, and the second part does not apply to money. Bellencontre, In re, 60 L. J., M. C. 83; [1891] 2 Q. B. 122; 64 L. T. 461; 39 W. R. 381; 55 J. P. 694; 17 Cox, C. C. 253.

A stock and share dealer was employed by a lady to purchase securities for her. He bought in his own name, and received money from her from time to time to cover the amounts he had paid or had to pay for the securities. Such payments were not made against any particular item, but in cheques for round sums. On one occasion he wrote to her, "I inclose a contract note for 300*l.*, Japanese bonds, at 112, 336*l.*;" and the contract note ran, "Sold to Mrs. S. 300*l.* J. at 112, 336*l.*," and was signed by him. She wrote in reply, "I have just received your note and contract note for the Japanese shares, and inclose a cheque for 336*l.* in payment." The dealer never paid for the bonds, but in violation of good faith appropriated to his own use the proceeds of the cheque:—Held, that the letter was a direction in writing to apply the proceeds of the cheque to pay for the bonds, if they had still to be paid for, within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75; and that he was rightly convicted of a misdemeanour under that section. Reg. v. Christian, 43 L. J., M. C. 1; L. R. 2 C. C. 94; 29 L. T. 654; 22 W. R. 132; 12 Cox, C. C. 502.

An agent was employed to sell goods on commission, and as soon as he received moneys from customers he was to remit them to his employers. During the employment his employers wrote to him, "We will send H., B., and P. their bills at the end of the month, and the same day that you receive the money from the customers you must remit it to us. We will attend to your order, as our arrangements were to remit as soon as you received it, as you said they would not pay much before the 20th of each month":—Held, that this letter was not a direction in writing as to the application or disposition of moneys received by the agent within s. 75 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Brownlow, 39 L. T. 479; 14 Cox, C. C. 216.

—— Evidence.]—An allegation in an indictment that A. placed valuable securities in the hands of B. "with an order in writing to invest the proceeds in the government funds," is not supported by proof of an order in writing, directing B. to invest the proceeds in the government funds, in case of any unexpected accident happening to A. Rex v. White, 4 Car. & P. 46.

Indictment—Written Direction.]—An indictment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49, against a broker for embezzlement of a security for money, must have alleged a written direction to him as to the application of the proceeds. Reg. v. Golde, 2 M. & Rob. 425.

Disclosure of Circumstances—In what Cases Applicable.]—Semble, a disclosure of any illegal act to which the statute relates must, to be rendered available as a protection, be made bonâ fide, and must not be a mere voluntary statement made for the express purpose of screening the person making it from the consequences of his acts. Strahan, Paul and Bates, In re, 7 Cox, C. C. 85.

An agent intrusted with a bill of lading, without authority of his principals, and in violation of good faith, deposited it with bankers for his own benefit, as a security for advances. He was charged with this offence before a magistrate. The depositions which were taken in support of the charge contained ample evidence to support it. Having become bankrupt, he was taken by his creditors and examined respecting the subject-matter of the charge before a commissioner in bankruptcy, and then made a statement in every respect in accordance with the evidence in the depositions. He was afterwards indicted on the same charge. On the trial, his examination in bankruptcy was offered by him as a defence, as showing that he had disclosed the act before a commissioner in bankruptcy previously to being indicted for the offence, and that therefore he was not liable to conviction, by virtue of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 6. This evidence of a disclosure was held to be admissible under not guilty. Reg. v. Sheen, Bell, C. C. 97; 28 L. J., M. C. 91; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 151; 7 W. R. 255; 8 Cox, C. C. 143.

The majority of the court was, however, of opinion, that as the agent only stated before the commissioner matter which had been previously known, and previously proved before the magistrate, he had not made any disclosure within the meaning of the statute, and consequently was not entitled to protection. The minority held, that as the statement of the agent was obtained on a compulsory examination, instituted bonâ fide by the creditors for their own interest, it was a disclosure before a commissioner within the act, notwithstanding the previous publicity of the matter there inquired into. Ib.

d. Persons employed in Public Service.

Who are—County Court Bailiff.]—The high bailiff of the county court appointed one Parsons, under the powers contained in the county court acts, a bailiff to assist him in his duties. Parsons acted under the orders of the high bailiff; his duties thus prescribed were to execute writs of fi. fa., and to return the proceeds to the registrar of the county court within twenty-four hours:—Held, that Parsons was not a person "employed in the public service of Her Majesty" within the meaning of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 70, but was the servant of the bailiff. Reg. v. Glover (9 Cox, C. C. 501); Reg. v. Graham (13 Cox, C. C. 57), distinguished. Reg. v. Parsons, 16 Cox, C. C. 498.

—— Inspector of Prisons.]—An inspector of prisons duly authorised to receive the contributions of parents towards the maintenance of their children committed to reformatory and industrial schools under 29 & 30 Vict. cc. 117, 118, and instructed to pay the amount received into the Bank of England, to the credit of the paymaster-general, employed the prisoner, a member of the police force of a borough, as his agent in taking proceedings against the parents of such children for the recovery of such contributions on his behalf, and for generally carrying out the provisions of the Reformatory and Industrial Schools Act. Under this employment the prisoner received and misappropriated moneys, the contributions of parents, ordered by magistrates to be paid for the maintenance of their children in the schools:—Held, that he was, while so employed, in the public service of her Majesty, so as to render him amenable to an indictment for embezzlement under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 70. Reg. v. Graham, 32 L. T. 38; 23 W. R. 326; 13 Cox, C. C. 57.

Money received by Virtue of Employment.]—It was proved that a post-office letter-carrier was in the daily habit of calling at the lodge of an infirmary, and there receiving letters, with a penny on each, to prepay the postage of them; and that he took them, with the penny, to the post-office; and that, during his illness, a person who had performed his duties did the like. There was no evidence of any appointment:—Held, in an indictment under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 4, s. 1, for embezzling some of the pence thus received, that this was evidence to go to the jury, that the pence were received by the prisoner by virtue of his employment as a letter-carrier. Reg. v. Townsend, Car. & M. 178.

Evidence of Service.]—On an indictment for embezzlement against a letter-carrier, as a person employed in the public service of her Majesty, it is not necessary to prove his appointment as a letter-carrier, but evidence of his having acted as such is sufficient. Rex v. Borrett, 6 Car. & P. 124.

If the wife of a party to whom a letter is directed pays the postage of the letter, she is entitled to demand an overcharge made for it; and a refusal on the part of the letter-carrier to account for it to her is evidence of an embezzlement by him. Ib.

4. Indictment.

a. Averment as to whose Service.

Whilst Prisoner a Clerk.]—An indictment for embezzlement of money received by a clerk, whilst such, was good under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 4, without alleging the embezzling to have taken place whilst he was clerk. Rex v. Lovell, 2 M. & Rob. 236.

Against Clerks of Joint-Stock Companies.]—A. was indicted for embezzlement whilst clerk to B. and others. A. was secretary and cashier to a company calling themselves "The R., M. and H. Coal Company (Limited);" the number of members exceeded twenty; the name of the company was over the door; the shares were transferable without the consent of the other shareholders; and a minute-book, in which the resolutions were entered, was kept. No certificate of incorporation was put in evidence:—Held, that he was rightly convicted as the servant of B. and others, there being no evidence which ought to have been left to the jury that the company was incorporated. Reg. v. Frankland, L. & C. 276; 32 L. J., M. C. 69; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 388; 7 L. T. 799; 11 W. R. 346; 9 Cox, C. C. 273.

Against Persons Employed by Partners.]—A servant in the employment of two persons, as partners, must be considered as the servant of each. Rex v. Leech, 3 Stark. 70.

A., being one of several proprietors of a coach, employed B. to drive it when he did not himself drive it. It was B.'s duty, on each day he drove, to tell a book-keeper how much money he had taken; the book-keeper entering that sum in a book and also on the way-bill; B.'s duty then was to pay over the sums to A. B. gave true accounts to the book-keeper, who made true entries; but B. accounted for smaller sums to A., saying that those were all, and paid over to A. these smaller sums. All the proprietors were interested in the money, but A. was the person to receive it, and he was accountable to his co-proprietors:—Held, on an indictment for embezzlement, that B. was rightly described in the indictment as the servant of A. Reg. v. White, 8 Car. & P. 742.

Collector of Poor-Rates.] — A collector of poor-rates, employed by the overseers, is properly charged with embezzlement, as servant to the overseers, although there are churchwardens for the same parish, who took part in making the rate. Reg. v. Adey, 1 Den. C. C. 571; 4 New Sess. Cas. 360; T. & M. 296; 3 Car. & K. 339; 19 L. J., M. C. 149; 14 Jur. 556; 4 Cox, C. C. 208.

Assistant Overseer.]—An assistant overseer, appointed by a parish council, is properly described in an indictment for embezzlement as the servant of the inhabitants of the parish. Reg. v. Smallman, 66 L. J., Q. B. 82; [1897] 1 Q. B. 4; 75 L. T. 594; 45 W. R. 249; 18 Cox, C. C. 451; 61 J. P. 312—C. C. R.

An assistant overseer of a parish, elected by the parishioners in vestry, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7, who fix his duties and salary, is to be deemed the servant of the inhabitants of the parish, and to receive money collected by him for the poor-rate levied upon the parish as such servant, and may be so described in an indictment for embezzling such moneys so received. Reg. v. Carpenter, 35 L. J., M. C. 169; L. R. 1 C. C. 29; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 380; 14 L. T. 572; 14 W. R. 773; 10 Cox, C. C. 246.

Under an order of the Poor Law Commissioners, founded on 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 46, the board of guardians of a union appointed A. an assistant overseer of a district in the union, of which the township of F. formed a part, and his duty was to assist the overseers of each of the townships of the district. A. was paid a salary by the guardians. A. received sums for poor-rate from ratepayers of the township of F., which he ought to have paid over to the bankers of the overseers of that township, instead of which he embezzled them:—Held, that A. was not indictable for embezzling this money as the money of the overseers, as he was not their servant; and that he was not indictable for this embezzlement as the servant of the guardians, because, if he was their servant, it was not their money. Reg. v. Townsend, 2 Car. & K. 168; 1 Den. C. C. 167; 2 Cox, C. C. 24.

Treasurer to Guardians.]—The treasurer to the guardians of the poor of Birmingham, appointed under a local and personal act, is a servant of the guardians, and as such is indictable for embezzlement. Reg. v. Welch, 2 Car. & K. 296 ; 1 Den. C. C. 199 ; 2 Cox, C. C. 85.

Bailiff of County Court.]—A bailiff of a county court who has fraudulently appropriated the proceeds of levies made under the process of the county court, cannot for this misconduct be convicted as a servant of the high bailiff with having embezzled the moneys of the high bailiff his master. Reg. v. Glover, L. & C. 466 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 169 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 710 ; 10 L. T. 582 ; 12 W. R. 885 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 500.

Servant of Joint Committee.]—A. was employed at a railway station belonging to four different companies, and which was maintained out of a joint fund. The servants at this station were appointed and paid, and might be dismissed, by a committee of directors of the several companies. A.'s duty was to deliver parcels which arrived at the station by the trains of the different companies, and to pay over the money received for them to the chief clerk of the parcels office. The chief clerk then paid over such money to the cashier of the committee, who kept a separate account for each company, and paid the money over directly to the company to which it belonged, or its bankers. A. having embezzled money received by him in the course of his duty, he was charged in different counts of an indictment as being the servant of the particular company whose money he had embezzled, of the four companies, of the committee, and of the station-master :—Held, that, at all events, he was properly charged as being the servant of the four companies. Reg. v. Bayley, Dears. & B. 121 ; 26 L. J., M. C. 4 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1171 ; 5 W. R. 48 ; 7 Cox, C. C. 179.

Effect of Reassignment by Creditor's Trustee to Debtor.]—The prisoner was engaged by U. at weekly wages to manage a shop. U. assigned all his estate and effects to R., and a notice was served on the prisoner to act as the agent of R. in the management of the shop. For fourteen days afterwards R. received from U. the shop moneys. Then the shop money was taken by U. as before. The prisoner received his weekly wages from U. during the whole time. Some time after a composition deed was executed by R. and U., and U.'s creditors, by which R. reconveyed the estate and effects to U. ; but this deed was not registered until after the embezzlement charged against the prisoner :—Held, that he was the servant of U. at the time of the embezzlement. Reg. v. Dixon, 19 L. T. 384 ; 17 W. R. 180 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 178.

Officers of Friendly Societies, &c.—Trustees.]—The trustees of a benefit building society borrowed money for the purposes of their society on their individual responsibility (there being no rule of the society authorising them to borrow money). The money on one occasion was received by the secretary, and embezzled by him :—Held, that he might be charged in an indictment for embezzlement as the servant of W. and others, W. being one of the trustees and a member of the society. Reg. v. Redford, 21 L. T. 508 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 367.

In an indictment against the clerk of a savings bank for embezzlement, he is properly described as clerk to the trustees, though elected by the managers. Rex v. Jenson, 1 M. C. C. 434.

A member of and secretary to a society fraudulently withholding money received from a member to be paid over to the trustees, may be indicted for embezzlement, and may be stated to be the clerk and servant of the trustees ; and the money may be properly stated to be their property, though the society is not enrolled, and though the money ought in the ordinary course to have been received by a steward. Rex v. Hall, 1 M. C. C. 474.

A. was indicted for embezzlement as being a clerk and a servant of B., C. and D. A. was a member of, and secretary to, a properly certified friendly society, of which B., C. and D. were the trustees, and had, from time to time, received (though not in his capacity of secretary) funds belonging to the society, some part of which he appropriated :—Held, that A. was properly convicted of embezzlement as the clerk and servant of B., C. and D. Reg. v. Proud, L. & C. 97 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 71 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 142 ; 5 L. T. 331 ; 10 W. R. 62 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 22.

It is embezzlement in the clerk of a friendly society fraudulently to withhold the rents of a house collected in the course of his duty as clerk ; and he may be laid to be the clerk or servant of the trustees to whom the house was conveyed, if appointed either by them or the society. Reg. v. Miller, 2 M. C. C. 249.

The secretary of an unenrolled friendly society, whose duty it is to receive the weekly contributions of the members, to enter them in a book, and hand over the amount to the treasurer, who in his turn pays it into a bank in the names of the trustees of the society, may be properly described as the servant of the trustees in an indictment charging him with embezzling sums so received, and he cannot be described as the servant of the treasurer. Reg. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, C. C. 251.

A secretary of a friendly society under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, in which no trustee had ever been appointed, was convicted on an indictment for embezzlement, the indictment describing him as the servant of the treasurer, and also as the servant of C. (a member) and others :—Held, that the conviction was wrong. Reg. v. Diprose, 19 L. T. 292 ; 17 W. R. 180 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 185. S. P., Reg. v. Blackburn, 11 Cox, C. C. 157.

A member of and secretary to a benefit society, deriving a percentage from the funds of the society, received in the course of his duty certain money from the members of the society, which it was his duty to pay into an account in the savings bank kept in the names of certain other members of the society. Instead of paying the money into the bank he appropriated it :—Held, that he could not be convicted of embezzling the money upon an indictment charging him to be the servant of "A. B. and others," and laying the money to be that of "A. B. and others," A. B. being an ordinary member of the society. Reg. v. Taffs, 4 Cox, C. C. 169.

b. Averment as to whose Money or Goods.

That Money Embezzled is Property of Master.]—In an indictment under 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, against a servant for embezzling money received on his master's account, it is not sufficient to follow the words of the statute, but there must be a positive allegation that the money was the property of the master. Rex v. M'Gregor, 3 Bos. & P. 106; R. & R. 23. S. P., Rex v. Beacall, 1 M. C. C. 15.

Against Collectors of Rates.]—A. was employed by the overseers of a parish to collect poor-rates on their account. As their agent he demanded the amount of a rate from the landlord of a house who usually paid his tenants' poor-rates; he entered the amount in his book as uncollected and as legally excused, and embezzled the sum:—Held, that although the overseers might not have been able to enforce the payment of the sum so embezzled, he received it in virtue of his employment, and on account of his employers, and that it was not necessary to lay the money as the joint property of the churchwardens and overseers. Reg. v. Adey, 4 New Sess. Cas. 360; 1 Den. C. C. 571; T. & M. 296; 3 Car. & K. 339; 19 L. J., M. C. 149; 14 Jur. 556; 4 Cox, C. C. 208.

In such case it is sufficient to describe the money received by the collector for the rate as the property of the overseers only, naming them. Ib.

Against Servant Employed by Partners.]—A., being one of several proprietors of a Hereford and Birmingham coach, horsed it from Hereford to Worcester, and employed B. to drive it when he did not himself drive it; B. having all the gratuities as well when A. drove as when B himself did so. It was the duty of B., on each day when he drove, to tell the book-keeper at Malvern how much money he had taken; the book-keeper entering that sum in a book and on the way-bill, together with what he had taken himself; and he then had to pay over the latter to B., who was to give the two sums to A. B. gave true accounts to the book-keeper, who made true entries; but B. accounted for smaller sums to A., saying that those were all, and paid over to A. these smaller sums. All the proprietors were interested in the money; but A. was the person to receive it, and he was accountable to his co-proprietors:—Held, that the money embezzled was properly laid as the money of A. Reg. v. White, 8 Car. & P. 742.

Savings Bank.]—The property of a savings bank may be laid as the property of A. B. (a trustee of the bank) and others, under s. 14 of 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, notwithstanding s. 8 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 9, requires it to be stated as the property of the trustees in their proper names. Reg. v. Bull, 1 Cox, C. C. 137.

Against Secretary of Friendly Society.]—Where, by the rules of certain unenrolled friendly societies, the members of one lodge were at liberty to pay their contributions to another lodge, if more convenient to them so to do:—Held, that in an indictment against the secretary of a lodge for embezzling moneys received from a member of another lodge, the moneys may be laid as the property of the trustees of his lodge, to whose account all moneys received by him ought to be paid, although the trustees, in their turn, would, in this instance, have to account to the other lodge for the particular sum received on its behalf. Reg. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, C. C. 255.

A member of and secretary to a society fraudulently withholding money received from a member to be paid over to the trustees, may be indicted for embezzlement, the money being stated to be the trustees' property, though the society is not enrolled, and though the money ought in the ordinary course to have been received by a steward. Rex v. Hall, 1 M. C. C. 474.

Amendment.]—The secretary of a friendly society, of which A. B. and others were trustees, was charged with embezzling money belonging to the society. In the indictment the property was laid as "of A. B. and others," without alleging that they were trustees of the society:—Held, that the indictment might be amended by adding the words "trustees of," &c. Reg. v. Marks, 10 Cox, C. C. 367.

c. Other Points.

Within Six Calendar Months.]—An indictment, which charges in one count that within six calendar months the prisoner received three sums, laying a day to the receipt of each, and that, "on the several days aforesaid," he embezzled these sums, is bad, because it does not show that the sums were embezzled within six months of each other; and this objection ought to be taken on demurrer. Reg. v. Purchase, Car. & M. 617.

An indictment which contains three charges of embezzlement should not only aver that the moneys which are the subject of the charges were received within six months, but should also aver that they were embezzled within six months. Reg. v. Noake, 2 Car. & K. 620.

From whom Money Received.]—In an indictment for embezzling money, it is not necessary to state from whom the money so embezzled was received. Rex v. Beacall, 1 Car. & P. 313, 454.

Exact Sum not Necessary.]—An indictment for embezzling need not have specified the exact sum embezzled. Rex v. Carson, R. & R. 303. S. P., Rex v. Grove, 1 M. C. C. 447.

"Clerk or Servant" or "In the Capacity of Clerk or Servant."]—The secretary of an unenrolled friendly society, who is paid a yearly salary out of its funds, is properly described in the indictment as clerk and servant to the trustees, and it would be incorrect to designate him as employed in the capacity of clerk and servant. The latter description only applies where the prisoner is employed on temporary occasions, and does not usually fill the situation of clerk or servant. Reg. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, C. C. 255.

Feloniously.]—An indictment is sufficient that states in the conclusion that the prisoner feloniously did steal, &c., though the word feloniously was not inserted in the former part of the indictment before the word embezzled. Rex v. Crighton, R. & R. 62.

Joinder of Counts.]—A count for embezzling bank-notes upon the statute may be joined with a count for larceny. Rex v. Johnson, 3 M. & S. 539.

Where, in an indictment for embezzlement, there is a second count charging another act of embezzlement within six months from the first, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 48, but alleging the money to be the property of a different person from that mentioned in the first count, the words connecting the second count with the first may be rejected as surplusage, and the second count dealt with as an independent count. Reg. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, C. C. 251.

A prisoner was indicted in the first count for embezzlement, and in the second for larceny, as a bailee. After plea pleaded and the jury was charged, and in the course of the trial, it was objected for the prisoner that the indictment was bad for misjoinder of counts. The court overruled the objection, and directed the prosecutor to elect upon which count he would proceed, and the prosecutor having elected to proceed upon the second count, the prisoner was found guilty thereon:—Held, that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Holman, L. & C. 177; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1082; 6 L. T. 474; 10 W. R. 718; 9 Cox, C. C. 201.

Where an indictment for embezzlement could not be supported because the offence was not an embezzlement but a larceny, and the larceny count stated the larceny to have been committed "in manner and form aforesaid":—Held, that the prisoner could not be convicted. Rex v. Murray, 5 Car. & P. 145; 1 M. C. C. 276.

5. Trial and Evidence.

Venue.]—A clerk, whose duty it was to remit at once to his employers in Middlesex all moneys collected by him as their clerk, collected at York, on the 18th of April, a sum of money as such clerk, but never remitted any portion of it. On the 19th and 20th of April he wrote and posted from places in Yorkshire to his employers in Middlesex letters, making no mention of the money so collected, and on the 21st of April he wrote and posted at Doncaster in Yorkshire to his employers in Middlesex a letter which was intended to make them believe that he had not then in fact collected the money in question. These letters were duly received by the employers in Middlesex:—Held, that the receipt of the letter of the 21st of April in Middlesex was sufficient to give jurisdiction to try the prisoner in Middlesex. Reg. v. Rogers, 47 L. J., M. C. 11; 3 Q. B. D. 28; 37 L. T. 473; 26 W. R. 61; 14 Cox, C. C. 22.

It was the duty of a commercial traveller to remit daily to his employers, who resided in London, the moneys which he collected, without reduction. He, on the 1st and 2nd March, 1878, collected at Newark two sums of money which he did not remit or account for till the first week in April, when one of his employers went to Grantham, where the prisoner resided, saw him, and taxed him with receiving moneys and not accounting to them for them. The prisoner then and there handed to his employer a list of moneys he had collected and not accounted for, including the above two sums. There was no evidence that the prisoner returned to Grantham on either of the days, or at what time of the respective days he received the two sums of money. He was indicted and convicted at the borough of Grantham Quarter Sessions for embezzling the above two sums of money:—Held, that the conviction was bad, as there was no evidence of any embezzlement within the borough of Grantham. Reg. v. Treadgold, 39 L. T. 291; 14 Cox, C. C. 220.

An indictment for embezzlement may be either laid in the county in which the money was received, or in the county where the prisoner disowned having received the money. Rex v. Hobson, R. & R. 56; 1 East, P. C. Add. xxiv.; 2 Leach, C. C. 975.

If a servant receives money for his master in the county of A., and being called upon to account for it in the county of B., there denies the receipt of it, he may be indicted for the embezzlement in the latter county. Rex v. Taylor, 3 Bos. & P. 596.

A prisoner, who was employed as a travelling salesman by a tradesman living at Nottingham, received two sums of money for his master in the county of Derbyshire, and, having appropriated them to his own use, neglected to return and account to his master for the money, as it was his duty to do; and having been, about two months after the receipt of the money, met by his master in Nottingham, and on being asked by him respecting the two sums of money, said he was sorry for what he had done—that he had spent the money:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury of an embezzlement in Nottingham, and that the prisoner was rightly tried there. Reg. v. Murdock, 2 Den. C. C. 298; T. & M. 604; 21 L. J., M. C. 22; 16 Jur. 19; 5 Cox, C. C. 360.

Particulars of Charges—Contents.]—If a prisoner does not know the specific acts of embezzlement intended to be charged against him, he should apply to the prosecutor for a particular of the charges; and if it is refused, the judge will, on motion supported by proper affidavits, grant an order for such particular to be given, and postpone the trial, if necessary. Such particular ought at least to state the persons from whom money is alleged to have been received. Rex v. Hodgson, 3 Car. & P. 422. S. P., Rex v. Bootyman, 5 Car. & P. 300.

—— Jurisdiction to Order.]—The Court of Queen's Bench has no jurisdiction to make an order upon a prosecutor to deliver the particulars. The application should be made to the judge at the assizes. Reg. v. Haslam, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1139; 4 W. R. 122.

Evidence—That Prosecutor a Trustee of Bank.]—A clerk to a savings bank was convicted on an indictment charging him with embezzlement, the property being laid in A. In order to prove that A. was a trustee of the bank, he was called, and stated that since the commission of the offence he had been acting as a trustee, but that before that date he had attended only one meeting, having on that occasion been requested to do so lest there should be a deficiency of trustees; but he was also a manager of the bank, and it did not appear that any act was done by him at that meeting which he might not have done as a manager:—Held, that this was insufficient evidence of acting to support the inference of the legal appointment of A. as a trustee, and that the conviction was wrong. Reg. v. Essex, Dears. & B. 369; 27 L. J., M. C. 20; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 15; 6 W. R. 82; 7 Cox, C. C. 384.

—— That Prisoner a Servant.]—If a person receives money as steward of another, proof of that circumstance is sufficient evidence of his being a steward, to support an indictment for embezzling such money. Rex v. Beacall, 1 Car. & P. 312, and Rex v. Wellings, 1 Car. & P. 454, 457.

A person indicted as servant to guardians of the poor of a parish:—Held, that the admission by him contained in the condition of his bond for the performance of his duties as treasurer, coupled with an act of parliament specifying those duties, was sufficient evidence of the nature of his appointment, viz. that he was to receive money for the guardians, and account to them for his receipts. Reg. v. Welch, 1 Den. C. C. 199 ; 2 Car. & K. 296 ; 2 Cox, C. C. 85.

—— That particular Sum Received.]—On an indictment for embezzlement it is not necessary to prove that any particular sum or sums were received from any particular person. Where a prisoner had debited himself with an amount, forming the balance of a large number of receipts and payments, the indictment was held sufficient. Reg. v. Lambert, 2 Cox, C. C. 309. Contrà, Reg. v. Jones, 8 Car. & P. 288 ; Reg. v. Chapman, 1 Car. & K. 119 ; 1 Cox, C. C. 48.

—— Counterfoil of Cheque.]—The prisoner was the managing director of a company, and had promised to send a cheque for 4,000*l.* to A. on 16th August. The cheque could not be found, but in the counterfoil book was one for 4.000*l.* in favour of A., following a counterfoil dated 16th August :—Held, that this counterfoil was admissible as evidence against the prisoner. Reg. v. Wilkinson, 10 Cox, C. C. 537.

—— Admissibility of other Cases to Show Intent.]—An indictment charged the prisoner with having embezzled three sums of twenty-one pounds, the moneys of his employers, he being a clerk or servant. Evidence was given of the embezzlement of these sums, and it was then proposed to give evidence of other sums not charged in the indictment, but which had also been embezzled, to show that if it should be contended the sums charged in the indictment were subjects of a mistake in keeping the accounts, there being many other sums unaccounted for, admitting evidence of such sums would assist the jury in determining what value was to be attached to the suggestion :—Held, that such evidence was admissible. Reg. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F. 343 ; 8 Cox, C. C. 448.

An indictment charged a prisoner with having as a booking clerk of certain steamship owners embezzled the moneys of his masters on three separate occasions, the charges being contained in three counts of the same indictment. In support of the first count, it was proved, amongst other things, that the prisoner received money for the carriage of animals by steamer which it was his duty to pay over to his masters' cashier ; in support of the second count, that he was supplied with a number of tickets for issue to passengers by his masters' steamers, which purported to be numbered consecutively, but were not examined before they were delivered to him. The tickets were tied up in bundles, and were in the prisoner's charge, he alone having a key of the case in which they were kept. Certain tickets, bearing numbers corresponding to the numbers of certain of the tickets in one of the bundles delivered to the prisoner, assuming such bundle to have been complete, were put in evidence, which tickets were stamped in a manner similar to other tickets which the prisoner had issued to passengers by one of the steamers, and which were notched as they would have been had they been used by passengers on board such steamer, and evidence was given that the prisoner had not handed over to the cashier any money in respect of such tickets. Evidence was also given in support of the third count, but upon this count the jury found the prisoner not guilty, while they convicted him upon the first and second counts. The jury were directed, as to the first count, that they might take into consideration the evidence given as to the prisoner's conduct in relation to the matters charged in the second and third counts ; and as to the second count, that if they were of opinion, from the whole of the evidence, that the prisoner had issued the tickets for money in the ordinary way, and taken the money he had received for his own use, making false entries in his books to conceal it, they might find him guilty :—Held, that the jury were justified in presuming from the evidence in support of the second count that the prisoner had issued tickets and received money for them, which he had appropriated ; and that they were at liberty, in order to arrive at a conclusion upon any one of the charges, to take into consideration the evidence given in support of the other charges, notwithstanding the fact that upon one of such charges they found a verdict of not guilty. Reg. v. Stephens, 58 L. T. 776 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 387 ; 52 J. P. 823—C. C. R.

A member of a friendly society was employed to receive weekly payments made by other members, and appropriated certain sums thus paid. Upon the trial, the books of the society were tendered generally in evidence, and received, although it was objected that the evidence ought to be confined to the entries forming the subject of the indictment :—Held, that they were rightly admitted. Reg. v. Proud, L. & C. 97 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 71 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 142 ; 5 L. T. 331 : 10 W. R. 62 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 22.

—— Whether confined to Days Stated.]—A. was indicted for embezzlement as being a clerk and a servant of B., C. and D. A first count laid the offence, to wit, on the 18th of August, 1861. A second count laid a second act of embezzlement within six months, to wit, on the 1st of September. A third count laid a third act of embezzlement, also within six months, under the same videlicet. A. was a member of, and secretary to, a properly certified friendly society, of which B., C. and D. were the trustees, and had, from time to time, received, though not in his capacity of secretary, funds belonging to the society, some part of which he had appropriated : —Held, that the evidence of the acts of embezzlement need not to be confined to the days stated under the videlicets. Ib.

—— To Show that Cheque Cashed.] — An indictment for embezzling money under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68, is not proved by showing merely that the prisoner embezzled a cheque, without evidence that he has converted the cheque into money. Reg. v. Keena, 37 L. J., M. C. 43 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 113 ; 17 L. T. 515 ; 16 W. R. 375 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 123.

Sufficiency of Evidence.]—A conductor of a tramway car was charged with embezzling 3*s.* It was proved that on a certain journey there were fifteen threepenny fares and twenty-five twopenny fares, and the conductor was seen to give tickets to each fare and to receive money from each, but what sum did not appear. He made out a way-bill for the journey debiting himself with only nine threepenny fares and sixteen twopenny fares. The mode of accounting was to deliver the way-bills for each journey to a clerk, and to hand him all the money received during each day on the following morning. The prisoner's money should have been 3*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.*, according to his way-bill for the day, but he paid in only 3*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.*:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of the receipt of 7*s.* 11*d.*, the total amount of fares of the particular journey, and of the embezzlement of 3*s.*, part thereof Reg v. King, 24 L. T. 670; 12 Cox, C. C. 73.

To support a charge of embezzlement against the secretary of a company, whose duty it was to receive moneys and pay wages, &c., out of the moneys, and to account for the balance, proof must be given of a specific appropriation of a particular sum of money. Reg. v. Wolstenholme, 11 Cox, C. C. 313. See Reg. v. Lambert, supra.

Upon the trial of an indictment under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 4, s. 1, charging that A., being intrusted by virtue of his employment in the public service with the receipt and custody of certain money, the property of the crown, did fraudulently and feloniously apply the same to his own use, it was proved that A., being a receiver of taxes, had kept in his own hands a balance very much exceeding that which he was allowed to retain; and upon being asked whether he was prepared to pay over that balance or any part of it, he replied that he was not. He was then reminded that there was a balance of excise duties alone of about 300*l.* standing against him from the previous Monday, which was a receipt-day at a particular place in his district. He then produced 25*l.*, and said that was all he had in the world; and that the rest he had spent in an unfortunate speculation:—Held, that there was evidence of the receipt of a particular sum of 300*l.* by virtue of his employment, and of a misapplication by him of a part of it; and that, therefore, the conviction was right, even if evidence of a general deficiency on a balance of accounts would not alone have supported such an indictment. Reg. v. Moah, Dears. C. C. 626; 25 L. J., M. C. 66; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 213; 4 W. R. 255; 7 Cox, C. C. 60.

Upon an indictment for embezzling 6*s.* it was proved that the prisoner was a drayman in the employment of the prosecutors, who were brewers, and that his duty was to sell porter at a certain fixed price only, viz. 9*s.* 6*d.* per dozen. He sold some at 6*s.*, but did not receive the money for some time. In the interval the customer had informed the prosecutors of the transaction, and they told him to pay the money when the prisoner came for it. The prisoner accordingly received it, and did not account for it:—Held, that the evidence was sufficient to support the indictment. Reg. v. Aston, 2 Car. & K. 413; 2 Cox, C. C. 234.

It was the duty of a banking clerk to receive money, and to pay it either into a box or a till, of each of which he kept the key, and to make entries of his receipts in a book; the balance of each evening being the first item with which he debited himself in the book the next morning. On the morning of the day in question he had thus debited himself with 1,762*l.*; and on being called on in the evening by his employer to produce his money, he threw himself on his employer's mercy, and said he was about 900*l.* short. Upon an indictment for embezzling:—Held, that this was evidence upon which the jury might convict, although no evidence was given of the persons from whom the money was received, or of the coin of which it consisted. Rex v. Grove, 7 Car. & P. 635; 1 M. C. C. 447.

It is not enough to prove that a clerk has received a sum of money and not entered it in his book, unless there is also evidence that he has denied the receipt of it, or the like. Rex v. Jones, 7 Car. & P. 833.

A., a servant of B., was sent to receive rent due to B.; A. received it, and immediately went off with it to Ireland:—Held, that A.'s thus leaving her place and going off to Ireland, was evidence from which the jury might infer that A. intended to embezzle the money. Rex v. Williams, 7 Car. & P. 338.

—— Written Agreement—Parol Evidence of.]—Where there has been a written agreement between master and servant, in which the nature of the service is defined, on an indictment for embezzlement against the latter, parol evidence of the service is not admissible, unless notice has been given to produce the agreement. Reg. v. Clapton, 3 Cox, C. C. 126.

Verdict of Larceny on Indictment for Embezzlement.]—Upon an indictment under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, against a partner or a joint beneficial owner for stealing, charging him with being a partner in one set of counts, and in another with being a beneficial owner of the property stolen:—Held, that if upon the evidence it turned out that he was guilty of embezzlement and not of larceny, he might, upon a proper direction to the jury, be found guilty of embezzlement upon the indictment, by virtue of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72. So also, if the charge in the indictment had been one of embezzlement, and not larceny, he could have been found guilty of larceny if the evidence warranted it. Reg. v. Rudge, 31 L. T. 590; 13 Cox, C. C. 17.

—— Cases before Larceny Act.]—A. was indicted for larceny as a servant. At the trial there was evidence of embezzlement, but none of larceny:—Held, that although by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 13, a person indicted for larceny might be convicted of embezzlement, yet he could not be convicted of larceny if there was only evidence of embezzlement. Reg. v. Gorbutt, Dears. & B. 166; 26 L. J., M. C. 47; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 371; 5 W. R. 294; 7 Cox, C. C. 221.

On a charge for receiving goods knowing them to have been feloniously stolen and carried away, the prisoner may be convicted if the goods have been embezzled, and he received them knowing them to have been embezzled, for by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47, embezzlement is deemed stealing. Reg. v. Frampton, Dears. & B. 585; 27 L. J., M. C. 229; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 566; 6 W. R. 514; 8 Cox, C. C. 16.

1. General Principles.

Existing Fact — What is.] — The prisoner obtained money by representing that he was collecting information for a new county directory that W. & Co. were getting up, and that by paying one shilling the prosecutor could have his name inserted in large type, and would receive other advantages. There were several similar charges. W. & Co., an existing firm, were now getting up a new county directory, and the prisoner was not employed by them to canvass or collect information. The prisoner's defence before the magistrate (in evidence at the trial) was, that he was going to bring out a directory, and that he was not aware he was doing wrong in using the name of W. & Co. At the trial the prisoner's counsel urged that there was no misrepresentation of any existing fact, but only a promise to do something in future:—Held, that this was a misrepresentation of an existing fact. Reg. v. Speed, 46 L. T. 174; 15 Cox, C. C. 24; 46 J. P. 451. See Reg. v. Woolley, 3 Car. & K. 98; 1 Den. C. C. 559; T. & M. 279; 4 New Sess. Cas. 341; 19 L. J., M. C. 165; 14 Jur. 465; 4 Cox, C. C. 193.

The defendant was convicted of attempting to obtain money upon the false pretence that he had power to communicate with the spirits of deceased and other persons, although such persons were not present in the place where he then was; and also that he had power to produce and cause to be present, such spirits as aforesaid in a materialised or other form; and also that divers musical instruments, by the sole means of such spirits so caused to be present, produced musical and other sounds:—Held, that the defendant was thereby charged with falsely pretending an existing fact; and that the indictment so alleging the false pretence was good and valid within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Reg. v. Lawrence, 36 L. T. 404.

Although to constitute the statutable offence of obtaining money by means of false pretences the pretence must be false at the time: Semble, it need not necessarily be of some alleged existing fact, capable of being disproved by positive testimony, but may depend on the bonâ fide intention and willingness of the defendant at the time of entering into a contract to perform it, or to do some act at a future period. Reg. v. Jones, 6 Cox, C. C. 467.

The prosecutor lent 10*l.* to the prisoner on the false pretence that he was going to pay his rent, and if the prisoner had not told him that he was going to pay his rent, the prosecutor would not have lent the money:—Held, that this was not a false pretence of any existing fact to warrant a conviction. Reg. v. Lee, L. & C. 309; 8 L. T. 437; 11 W. R. 761; 9 Cox, C. C. 304.

To have constituted an offence within 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 1. money or goods must have been obtained by a false pretence with an intention to defraud; but the pretence might have related to a future transaction. Rex v. Young, 1 Leach, C. C. 505; 2 East, P. C. 82, 833; 3 Term Rep. 98.

—— Combined with Future Promises.] — Where an indictment charges a false pretence of an existing fact calculated to induce the confidence which led to the prosecutor's parting with his property, though mixed up with false pretences as to the prisoner's future conduct, it is sufficient. Reg. v. Bates, 3 Cox, C. C. 201.

Where the false pretence is as to the status of the party at the time, or as to any collateral fact supposed to be then existing, it will equally support an indictment. Ib.

A false pretence as to an existing, essential fact will sustain an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, although it is united with false promises, which alone would not have supported the conviction. Reg. v. Jennison, L. & C. 157; 31 L. J., M. C. 146; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 442; 6 L. T. 256; 10 W. R. 488; 9 Cox, C. C. 158.

Money was obtained by the prisoner from an unmarried woman on the false representations that he was a single man, and that he would furnish a house with the money, and would then marry her:—Held, that the false representation of an existing fact (that he was a single man) was sufficient to support a conviction for false pretences, although the money was obtained by that representation, united with the promise to furnish a house and then marry her. Ib.

A fraudulent misrepresentation of an existing matter of fact, accompanied by an executory promise to do something at a future period, as that the prisoner had bought certain skins, and would sell them to the prosecutor, is a false pretence within the statute, although it appears that the promise, as well as such misrepresentations of fact, induced the prosecutor to part with the money. Reg. v. West, Dears. & B. 575; 27 L. J., M. C. 227; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 514; 6 W. R. 506; 8 Cox, C. C. 12.

A. was indicted for obtaining goods by false pretences. He obtained the goods from the prosecutor by pretending that he wanted them for S., whom he represented as living at N., and being a person to whom he would trust 1,000*l.*, and who went out twice a year to New Orleans to take goods to his sons. The jury found that all these representations were false, and that the prosecutor, believing that A. was connected with S., and employed by him to obtain the goods, contracted with A., and not with the supposed S., and delivered the goods to A. for himself, and not for S.:—Held, that A. was rightly convicted. Reg. v. Archer, Dears. C. C. 449; 3 C. L. R. 623; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 479; 6 Cox, C. C. 515.

An attorney, who had appeared for a person who was fined 2*l.* on a summary conviction, called on a person's wife and told her that he had been with another person, who was fined 2*l.* for a like offence to Mr. B. and Mr. L., and that he had prevailed upon Mr. B. and Mr. L. to take 1*l.* instead of 2*l.*, and that if she would give him 1*l.* he would go and do the same for her. She gave the attorney a sovereign, and afterwards paid him for his trouble. It was proved that the attorney never applied to either Mr. B. or Mr. L. respecting either of the fines, and that both were afterwards paid in full:—Held, that he was guilty of obtaining money by false pretences. Rex v. Asterley, 7 Car. & P. 191.

A defendant was tried upon an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, in which it was alleged that she had represented that she kept a shop, and that the prosecutrix might go and live with her till she got a situation. It was proved that the defendant did not keep a shop, and the prosecutrix stated that she lent the defendant the money because the latter had said that she kept the shop, and that she, the prosecutrix, should have the money when she got home with her. The jury returned a special verdict, finding the defendant guilty of fraudulently obtaining the money, the prosecutrix parting with it under the belief that the defendant kept a shop, and that the prosecutrix should have it when she went home with her:—Held, that the defendant was properly convicted of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Fry, Dears. & B. 449; 27 L. J., M. C. 68; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 266; 6 W. R. 245; 7 Cox, C. C. 394.

Express Words not Necessary.]—It is not necessary that the false pretences should be made in express words, if it can be inferred from all the circumstances attending the obtaining of the property. Reg. v. Giles, L. & C. 502; 34 L. J., M. C. 50; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 119; 11 L. T. 643; 13 W. R. 327; 10 Cox, C. C. 44.

Hewers and putters in a colliery had tokens differently marked, which they placed on the tubs of coal drawn up the pit, and which were then taken off and put into a box, and their wages calculated according to the number of tokens sent up by them. The putter fetched the empty tub to the hewer, and took it when full to the station to be drawn up to the bank; before the tub was filled he placed his token on it, to denote the sum he was entitled to for his labour in putting and removing the tub to the station, and the hewer put his token also to denote the amount he was entitled to for hewing the coal and filling the tub. A hewer removed the putter's token after the tub was brought to him and substituted one of his own, and then put an additional token of his own for hewing and filling the tub. The tub was then drawn up, and the two tokens thrown into the box. The contents of the box were then taken away by the tokenman, and the accounts of the different workmen made up according to the number of tokens found with their initials on. In that way the hewer obtained money for hewing and filling two tubs of coal instead of one only:—Held, that this amounted to an indictable false pretence. Reg. v. Hunter, 17 L. T. 321; 16 W. R. 342; 10 Cox, C. C. 642—C. C. R.

A., employed in a tannery, clandestinely removed certain skins of leather from the warehouse to another part of the tannery, for the purpose of delivering them to the foreman and getting paid for them as if they had been his own work:—Held, that this did not amount to larceny, but to an attempt to commit the misdemeanour of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Holloway, 1 Den. C. C. 370; T. & M. 40; 3 New Sess. Cas. 410; 2 Car. & K. 942; 18 L. J., M. C. 60; 13 Jur. 86; 3 Cox, C. C. 241.

If a person at Oxford, who is not a member of the university, goes to a shop for the purpose of fraud, wearing a commoner's cap and gown, and obtains goods; this appearing in a cap and gown is a sufficient false pretence to satisfy the statute, although nothing passes in words. Rex v. Barnard, 7 Car. & P. 784.

The prisoner, on entering the service of a railway company, signed a book of rules, a copy of which was given to him. One of the rules was, "No servant of the company shall be entitled to claim payment of any wages due to him on leaving the company's service until he shall have delivered up his uniform clothing." On leaving the service he knowingly and fraudulently delivered up, as part of his uniform, to an officer of the company, a great coat belonging to a fellow servant, and so obtained the wages due to him:—Held, that he was properly convicted of obtaining the money by false pretences. Reg. v. Bull, 36 L. T. 376: 13 Cox, C. C. 608.

It was a false pretence within 30 Geo 2, c. 24, s. 1, where the prisoner obtained money from the keeper of a post-office, by assuming to be the person mentioned in a money order, which he presented for payment, though he did not make any false declaration or assertion in order to obtain the money. Rex v. Story, R. & R. 81.

Where a prisoner, who had previously pledged ingots of silver with the prosecutor, brought bars of worthless metal, similar in appearance, saying "eight ounces each, at four shillings an ounce, the same as before," and the prosecutor, without testing them, advanced money upon them:—Held, a sufficient false pretence. Reg. v. Stevens, 1 Cox, C. C. 83.

When Prosecutor knows Pretences are False—Attempt to Obtain.]—The prisoner wrote a begging letter to the prosecutor, in which, by certain false statements, he attempted to obtain money. The prosecutor sent the prisoner five shillings, but stated at the trial that he knew the pretences were false:—Held, that he might be convicted of an attempt to obtain money by false pretences. Reg. v. Hensler, 22 L. T. 691; 19 W. R. 108; 11 Cox, C. C. 570. See also Reg. v. Keighley, Dears. & B. 145; 7 Cox, C. C. 217.

An indictment for obtaining money by false pretences cannot be sustained, if the prosecutor when he parted with his money knew the representation to be false. Reg. v. Mills, Dears. & B. 205; 26 L. J., M. C. 79; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 447; 5 W. R. 528; 7 Cox, C. C. 263.

The defendant represented to the prosecutor that he had done a certain quantity of work, and claimed a certain sum as due to him in respect of such work. The prosecutor paid him the amount claimed, although he knew that the representation was untrue:—Held, that this was not an obtaining money by means of false pretences. Ib.

When Prosecutor might have known Pretence was False.]—A false pretence must be the false pretence of an existing fact, and if the person to whom it is made is defrauded by it, it makes no difference that he might have known that the pretence was false, or that it is not such a pretence as would be likely to defraud a person of ordinary caution. Reg. v. Woolley, 3 Car. & K. 98; 1 Den. C. C. 559; T. & M. 279; 4 New Sess. Cas. 341; 19 L. J., M. C. 165; 14 Jur. 465; 4 Cox, C. C. 193.

Therefore, where A., the secretary of a lodge of oddfellows, told B., a member of the lodge, that he owed the society 13*s.* 9*d.*, when in fact

B. only owed 2*s.* 3*d.*; and A., by this false pretence, obtained the money of B.:—Held, that this was an obtaining of money by false pretences. Ib.

If the prosecutor, a brickmaker, has after inspection been induced to take a field by false representations by the defendant as to specific matters of fact relating to the quality and character of the soil—e.g. that the defendant had himself made good bricks therefrom—this is sufficient to sustain an indictment for false pretences. Reg. v. English, 12 Cox, C. C. 171.

When too Remote.]—The prisoner was charged with obtaining a prize in a certain swimming race by false pretences. He obtained his competitor's ticket for the race by representing himself to be member of a certain club, and by a letter purporting to be written by the secretary of that club. On the faith of these representations, which turned out to be false, he was allowed twenty seconds' start in the race, and won the prize:—Held, that the false pretences were too remote, and that the count charging them could not be sustained. Reg. v. Larner, 14 Cox, C. C. 497.

An indictment alleged that the defendant falsely pretended that he had a lot of trucks of coal at a railway station on demurrage, and that he required forty coal bags. The evidence was that he saw the prosecutor and gave him his card, "J. Willot & Co., timber and coal merchants," and said that he was largely in the timber and coal way, and inspected some coal bags, but objected to the price. The next day he called again, showed the prosecutor some correspondence, and said that he had a lot of trucks of coal at the railway station under demurrage, and that he wanted some coal bags immediately. The prosecutor had only forty bags ready, and it was arranged that the defendant was to have them, and pay for them in a week. They were delivered to the defendant, and the prosecutor said he let the defendant have the bags in consequence of his having the trucks of coal under demurrage at the station. There was evidence as to his having taken premises, and doing a small business in coal, but he had no trucks of coal on demurrage at the station. The jury convicted the defendant:—Held, that the false pretence charge was not too remote to support the indictment, and that the evidence was sufficient to sustain it. Reg. v. Wilmot, 24 L. T. 758; 12 Cox, C. C. 68—C. C. R.

When a contract has been entered into by reason of false representations, and goods or money obtained under the contract, it is too remote to charge the obtaining of the goods or money by the false pretences. Reg. v. Bryan, 2 F. & F. 567.

A., by means of false pretences, engaged with the prosecutrix for lodging at 10*s.* a week. He accordingly became a lodger in her house, and a few days afterwards expressed a wish to become a boarder. He was then supplied with board as well as lodging at 1*l.* 1*s.* per week. He was afterwards indicted for obtaining goods (the board) by means of false pretences, and convicted:—Held, that the conviction could not be supported, as the goods were supplied too remotely from the false pretence. Reg. v. Gardner, Dears. & B. 40; 25 L. J., M. C. 100; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 598; 4 W. R. 526; 7 Cox, C. C. 136.

Obtaining Gift of Money.]—Obtaining a gift of money by means of false statements is obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Jones, T. & M. 270; 4 New Sess. Cas. 353; 1 Den. C. C. 551; 3 Car. & K. 346; 19 L. J., M. C. 162; 14 Jur. 533; 4 Cox, C. C. 198.

A begging letter, making false representations as to the condition and character of the writer, by means of which money is obtained, is a false pretence. Ib.

Intention to Pay for Goods when Able.]—The crime of obtaining goods by false pretences is complete, although at the time when the prisoner made the pretence, and obtained the goods, he intended to pay for them when it should be in his power to do so. Reg. v. Naylor, 35 L. J., M. C. 61; L. R. 1 C. C. 4; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 910; 13 L. T. 381; 14 W. R. 58; 10 Cox, C. C. 149.

Question on whose behalf Goods Ordered.]—Where a prisoner, being employed at a hospital, wrote to the prosecutor, as manager, for a small quantity of linen, not saying it was for the hospital, and in point of fact he was not manager, and the goods were really ordered for himself, but not sent, on an indictment for an attempt to obtain them, the question left to the jury was, whether he ordered the goods as for and on behalf of the hospital or in his own name, there being no evidence of an intention to pay cash, but evidence of its absence. Reg. v. Franklin, 4 F. & F. 94.

Prosecutor Laying Trap for Prisoner.]—If a party obtains money by a false pretence, knowing it to be false at the time, it is no answer to show that the party from whom he obtained the money laid a plan to entrap him into the commission of the offence. Rex v. Ady, 7 Car. & P. 140.

Intention to Permanently Deprive Owner of Chattel.]—To constitute an obtaining by false pretences, it is essential that there should be an intention to deprive the owner wholly of the property in the chattel, and, consequently, the obtaining by false pretences the use of a chattel for a limited time only, without an intention to deprive the owner wholly of the chattel, is not an obtaining by false pretences within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88. Reg. v. Kilham, 39 L. J., M. C. 109; L. R. 1 C. C. 261; 22 L. T. 625; 18 W. R. 957; 11 Cox, C. C. 561.

With what Object.]—To constitute the offence of obtaining any chattel, money, or valuable security by false pretences, the obtaining must be in accordance with the wish, or for the advantage, or for the purpose of effecting some object of the party making the false pretence. Reg. v. Garrett, Dears. C. C. 232; 2 C. L. R. 106; 23 L. J., M. C. 20; 17 Jur. 1060; 2 W. R. 97; 6 Cox, C. C. 260.

Property Obtained before False Pretence.]—A carrier, having ordered a cask of ale, said, after he had possession of it, "This is for W.":—Held, that an indictment for obtaining it by falsely pretending that he was sent for it by W. could not be sustained. Reg. v. Brooks, 1 F. & F. 502.

Property parted with by reason of Inducement Charged.]—A prisoner was charged with obtaining a filly by the false pretence that he was a gentleman's servant, and had lived at Brecon, and had bought twenty horses in Brecon fair. It appeared that he bought the filly of the prosecutor for 11*l.*, making him this statement, which was false, and also telling him that he would come down to the Cross Keys and pay him. The prosecutor stated that he parted with his filly because he expected the prisoner would come to the Cross Keys and pay him, and not because he believed that the prisoner was a gentleman's servant:—Held, that if the prosecutor did not part with his filly by reason of the false pretence charged, or any part of it, the prisoner must be acquitted. Rex v. Dale, 7 Car. & P. 352

Pretences made by Others besides Accused.]—If it appears that money has been obtained partly by false pretences actually made by the accused, and partly by those made by another person with whom the accused is proved to have been connected for the purpose of conspiring to obtain the money, a conviction will be upheld. Reg. v. Kerrigan, L. & C. 383; 33 L. J., M. C. 71; 9 L. T. 843; 12 W. R. 416; 9 Cox, C. C. 441.

Pretences to whom made.]—The pretence need not be made to the person from whom the money is obtained, the mode in which the pretence to A. affects an obtaining of money from B. being a matter of evidence. Reg. v. Brown, 2 Cox, C. C. 348.

Prosecutor partly influenced by Pretences.]—Where a prosecutor is influenced partly and materially but not entirely by the false pretences, that is sufficient to sustain a charge of obtaining money, &c., thereby. Reg. v. English, 12 Cox, C. C. 171.

Pretence whether continuing.]—It is not necessary that the chattel should be in existence when the false pretence is made, but the obtaining is within the statute if the pretence is a continuing one, so that the chattel is made and delivered in pursuance of the pretence; the question whether the pretence is or is not such a continuing one, is one of fact for the jury. Reg. v. Martin, 36 L. J., M. C. 20; L. R. 1 C. C. 56; 15 L. T. 54; 15 W. R. 358; 10 Cox, C. C. 383.

Pretence by Advertisement — Question for Jury.]—The following advertisement was inserted by the prisoner in a newspaper, viz.: "Barnardo.—2*l.*, 1*l.*, 10*s.*, for most words from Barnardo. No single letters to be used. All others in heavy black type from Nuttall's 1886 Dict. Proceeds to go to Dr. Barnardo's Home for Destitute Children. Alphabetical lists, with 1*s.* 3*d.*, to Rev. A. Brient, Holt, Trowbridge, Wilts, by March 5. Result, 8th." No such person as the Rev. A. Brient existed at the address given, and sums of money which certain persons were induced to send in the belief that a bonâ fide competition was indicated by the advertisement, were received and appropriated by the prisoner:—Held, that the advertisement was capable of the construction put upon it in the indictment; that it was intended to convey the impression that there was a person named A. Brient, living at Holt, Trowbridge, in the county of Wilts, who was a minister of religion, and that he had instituted a bonâ fide competition, and had made arrangements to present prizes to the successful competitors, and to give the proceeds derived from the entrance fees of competitors, after deducting the prizes, to a charitable institution; and that it was a question for the jury whether the persons who had sent the moneys, with the obtaining which the prisoner was charged, had sent them acting under that impression. Reg. v. Randell, 57 L. T. 718; 16 Cox, C. C. 335; 52 J. P. 359—C. C. R.

Sufficiency and Character of False Pretence.]—An indictment charged that the prisoner falsely pretended that he had got a carriage and pair, and expected it down to T. that day or the next, and that he had a large property abroad. The evidence was that he was at E., assuming to be a man of position and wealth, but was in a destitute condition, and could not pay his hotel and other bills; and that three days afterwards he came to T. and induced the prosecutor to part with goods on the representation that he had just come from abroad, and had shipped a large quantity of wine to R. from England, and expected his carriage and pair to come down, and that he had taken a large house at T. and was going to furnish it:—Held, that the false pretences charged were sufficient in point of law, and also that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction. Reg. v. Howarth, 23 L. T. 503; 11 Cox, C. C. 588.

A money-lender having a claim for a small sum against a borrower for money lent and high interest, caused an attorney to issue process for a sum double the amount, making up the difference by items charged on various pretences, and after receiving payment from a third party of the sum lent, so that only a sum of 5*l.* remained due for interest, still prosecuted the suit for the whole amount indorsed on the process, and then tried to get from the debtor a charge on property of far greater value, and represented to the third party that the whole sum claimed was really due. The money-lender and the attorney being indicted for attempting to obtain money from the third party by means of false pretences, it was held, that there was a case for the jury; and that if the jury believed the two combined together to enforce by legal process payment of sums they knew not to be due, and falsely represented them to be due, in order to obtain payment, they were liable to be convicted, as they accordingly were. Reg. v. Taylor (No. 1), 15 Cox, C. C. 265.

On a motion for a new trial on behalf of two defendants, an attorney and his client, indicted for atempting to obtain money by false pretences, there being evidence that they combined together to enforce, by means of the abuse of legal process, payment of sums they must have known not to be due, and also made false representations with that object:—Held, that there was evidence for the jury on the charge, that a direction to the jury that if they were satisfied of these facts they ought to convict was correct, and that the conviction, therefore, was right, Reg. v. Taylor (No. 2), 15 Cox, C. C. 268.

The prosecutor lent money to the prisoner at interest, on the security of a bill of sale on furniture, a promissory note of the prisoner and another person, and a declaration made by the prisoner that the furniture was unencumbered. The declaration was untrue at the time it was handed to the prosecutor, the prisoner having a few hours before given a bill of sale for the furniture to another person, but not to its full value:—Held, that the e was evidence in support of a charge of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Meakin, 11 Cox, C. C. 270; 20 L. T. 544; 17 W. R 683.

A., by falsely representing that a house and some shops had been built upon certain land, obtained from the prosecutor an advance of money. A. deposited the lease of the land, signed an agreement to execute a mortgage and executed a bond as security for the money:—Held, that he was rightly convicted of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Burgon, Dears. & B. 11, 25 L J., M. C 105, 2 Jur. (N.S) 596; 4 W. R. 525; 7 Cox, C C 131.

A. owed B. a debt, of which B. could not get payment. C., a servant of B., went to A.'s wife and obtained two sacks of malt from her, saying that B. had bought them of A. C knew this to be false, but took the malt to B, his master, to enable him to pay himself the debt:—Held, that if C. did not intend to defraud A., but merely to put it into his master's power to compel A. to pay him a just debt, C ought not to be convicted of obtaining the malt by false pretences. Rex v. Williams, 7 Car & P. 354.

B. was indicted for having falsely pretended that he was Mr. H., who had cured Mrs. C. at the Oxford Infirmary, and thereby obtaining 5*s.* with intent to defraud G P. B. made the pretence, and thereby induced the prosecutor to buy, at the expense of 5*s.*, a bottle containing something which he said would cure the eye of the prosecutor's child. It was proved that B. was not Mr. H.:—Held, that this was a false pretence. Reg. v. Bloomfield, Car. & M. 537; 6 Jur. 224.

A person who makes a false pretence of having a power to do something, whether the power is physical, moral, or supernatural, for the purpose of obtaining money or goods, is indictable for false pretences. Reg. v Giles, L. & C. 502; 34 L. J., M. C. 50; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 119; 11 L. T. 643; 13 W. R. 327; 10 Cox, C. C. 44.

A pretence that a person would do an act that he did not mean to do (as a pretence to pay for goods on delivery), was not a false pretence within 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 1. Rex v. Goodhall, R. & R. 461.

But pretending to have been intrusted by one to take his horses from Ireland to London, and to have been detained by contrary winds till all his money was expended, was within 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s 1. Rex v. Villeneuve, 2 East, P. C. 830.

A pretence to a parish officer, as an excuse for not working, that the party has not clothes, when he really has, although it induces the officer to give him clothes, was not obtaining goods by false pretences within 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 1. Rex v. Wakeling, R. & R. 504.

The offence of obtaining money under false pretences, created by 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 1, was complete only where the money was obtained. Rex v. Buttery, cited 5 D. & R. 616; 3 B. & C. 700.

It is a false pretence if a carrier obtains the carriage-money by pretending to have delivered the goods and lost the bailee's receipt for them. Rex v. Airey, 2 East, P. C. 831; 2 East, 30. S. P., Rex v. Coleman, 2 East, P. C. 672.

2. In respect of what Chattels or Securities.

Dogs.]—Dogs, not being the subject of larceny at common law, were not chattels within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53. Reg. v. Robinson, Bell, C. C. 34; 28 L. J., M. C. 58; 5 Jur. (N.S) 203; 7 W. R. 203; 8 Cox, C. C. 115.

Valuable Security.]—G., secretary to a burial society, was indicted for falsely pretending that a death had occurred, and so obtaining from the president an order on the treasurer in the following form: "Bolton United Burial Society, No. 23 Bolton, September 1st, 1853. Mr. A. Entwistle, treasurer; please to pay the bearer 2*l.* 10*s.*, Greenhalgh, and charge the same to the society. Robert Lord Benjamin Beswick, president":—Held, that this was a valuable security under 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29, s. 53, as explained by s. 5. Reg. v. Greenhalgh, 1 Dears. C. C. 267; 2 W. R. 171; 6 Cox, C. C. 257.

Bank Notes.]—Bank notes were not money, goods, wares or merchandises, within 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 1. Rex v. Hill, R. & R. 190. But 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, extended 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, to persons obtaining, by false pretences, any valuable security.

Ticket.]—B. was indicted for obtaining by false pretences from a railway company a printed ticket, with intent to defraud the company of the same; the ticket enabled the prisoner to travel free from B. to H., and was to be given back to the company at H.:—Held, that the ticket was a chattel within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, and that the attempt to defraud the company of the same was not affected by the fact of the ticket having to be returned at the end of the journey. Reg. v. Boulton, T. & M. 201; 3 New Sess Cas. 705; 1 Den. C. C. 508; 2 Car & K. 917; 19 L. J., M. C. 67; 13 Jur. 1034; 3 Cox, C. C. 576.

Chattel not in Existence at time of Pretence made.]—A conviction for obtaining a chattel by false pretences is good, although the chattel is not in existence at the time of the pretence being made, provided the subsequent delivery of the chattel is directly connected with the false pretence. Reg. v. Martin, 36 L. J., M. C. 20; L. R. 1 C. C. 56; 15 L. T. 54; 15 W. R. 358; 10 Cox, C. C. 383.

Meal Consumed at Restaurant without Means to Pay for it.]—A person who orders and consumes a meal at a restaurant without being possessed of the means to pay for it does not obtain goods by false pretences under s. 88 of the Larceny Act, 1861, but does incur a debt or liability by fraudulently obtaining credit so as to constitute an offence within the meaning of s. 13 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Reg. v. Jones, 67 L. J., Q. B. 41; [1898] 1 Q. B. 119; 77 L. T. 503—C. C. R.

3. As to Quantity or Weight of Articles of Merchandise.

What is.]—The defendant had contracted with the guardians of a poor law union to deliver loaves of a specified weight to any poor persons bringing a ticket from the relieving officer. The tickets were to be returned by the defendant at the end of each week, with a statement of the number of tickets sent back, whereupon he would be credited for the amount, and the money would be paid at the time stipulated in the contract. The defendant delivered to certain poor people who brought tickets loaves of less than the specified weight, returned the tickets with a note of the number sent, and obtained credit in account for the loaves so delivered, but before the time for payment had arrived the fraud was discovered:—Held, that the delivery of a less quantity of bread than that contracted for was a mere private fraud, no false weights or tokens having been used, and therefore not an indictable offence: that the defendant was properly convicted of attempting to obtain money, for although he had only obtained credit in account, and could not, therefore, have been convicted of the offence of actually obtaining money by false pretences, yet he had done all that was depending on himself towards the payment of the money, and was therefore guilty of the attempt: and that this was a case within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, because it was an attempt to obtain money by a false and fraudulent representation of an antecedent fact; it was not a mere sale of goods by a false pretence of their weight. Reg. v. Eagleton, Dears. C. C. 515; 3 C. L. R. 1145; 24 L. J., M. C 158; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 940; 4 W. R. 17; 6 Cox, C. C. 559.

The defendant agreed with the prosecutrix to sell and deliver to her a load of coals, at a certain price per cwt. He accordingly delivered a quantity of coals, to his knowledge weighing 14 cwt. He, however, falsely and fraudulently represented that the quantity he had delivered weighed 18 cwt., and thereby obtained the price of 18 cwt.:—Held, that he was properly convicted of the offence of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Sherwood, Dears. & B. 251; 26 L. J., M. C. 81; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 547; 5 W. R. 577; 7 Cox, C. C. 270.

A prisoner was convicted on an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences. The prosecutors bought of the prisoner and paid him for a quantity of coal, upon a false representation by him that there were 14 cwt., whereas, in fact, there were only 8 cwt., but so packed in the cart in which they were as to have the appearance of a larger quantity:—Held, that the false representation as to the quantity of coal was an indictable false pretence, and that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Rugg, Bell, C. C. 215; 29 L. J., M. C. 86; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 178; 1 L. T. 337; 8 W. R. 193; 8 Cox, C. C. 262.

If a man is selling an article by weight, and falsely represents the weight to be greater than it is, and thereby obtains payment for a quantity greater than that delivered, he is indictable for obtaining money by false pretences. Secus, if he is selling the article for a lump sum, and merely makes the false representation as to weight in order to induce the purchaser to conclude the bargain. Reg. v. Ridgway, 3 F. & F. 838.

A false affirmation of the weight of an article sold by weight, with intent to defraud, is indictable as a false pretence. Reg. v. Lee, L. & C. 418; 33 L. J., M. C. 129; 10 L. T. 348; 12 W. R. 750; 9 Cox, C. C. 460.

Upon indictment for obtaining money by falsely pretending that certain loads of soot weighed certain tons, whereas they did not, the evidence was that the prisoners weighed at a public weighing machine some cartloads of what apparently was soot, but amongst which were bags of old bricks, and having obtained tickets of the weights, subsequently removed the bags containing bricks, and on selling the soot to the prosecutor represented to him that the weight ascribed in the tickets was the weight of what they sold:—Held, that this false representation of the weight was within the statute. Ib.

An indictment charged, that H. R. having in his possession a certain weight of 28 lbs., did falsely pretend to C. that a quantity of coals which he delivered to C. weighed 16 cwt. (meaning 1,792 lbs. weight), and were worth 1*l.*, and that the weight was 56 lbs.; by means of which he obtained a sovereign from C., with intent to defraud him of part thereof, to wit, 10*s.*; whereas the coals did not weigh 1,792 lbs., and were not worth 1*l.*; and whereas the weight was not 56 lbs.; and whereas the coals were of the weight of 896 lbs. only, and were not worth more than 10*s.*; and whereas the weight was of 28 lbs. only. It was objected that all the pretences, except that respecting the weight, were false affirmations, and that, as to the weight, there was no allegation to connect the sale of the coals with the use of the weight. The defendant was convicted, and the conviction was held to be wrong. R. v. Reed, 7 Car. & P. 848.

4. As to Quality or Value of Articles of Merchandise.

Specific Fact stated which is Untrue.]—The prisoner induced the prosecutor to purchase a chain from him by fraudulently representing that it was 15-carat gold, when, in fact, it was only of a quality a trifle better than 6-carat, knowing at the time that he was falsely representing the quality of the chain as 15-carat gold:—Held, that the statement that the chain was 15-carat gold, not being mere exaggerated praise, or relating to a mere matter of opinion, but a statement as to a specific fact within his knowledge, was a sufficient false pretence to sustain an indictment for obtaining money under false pretences. Reg. v. Ardley, 40 L. J., M. C. 85; L. R. 1 C. C. 301; 24 L. T. 193; 19 W. R. 478; 12 Cox, C. C. 23.

On an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, it was proved that the prisoner, a travelling hawker, represented to the prosecutor's wife that he was a tea-dealer from Leicester, and induced her to buy certain packages which he stated contained good tea, but three-fourths of the contents of which was not tea at all, but a mixture of substances unfit to drink and deleterious to health. The jury found that the prisoner knew the real nature of the contents of the packages, that it was not tea, but a mixture of articles unfit for drink, and that he designedly falsely pretended that it was good tea with intent to defraud; and the prisoner was convicted:—Held, that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Foster, 46 L. J., M. C. 128; 2 Q. B. D. 301; 36 L. T. 34; 13 Cox, C. C. 393.

A false representation that a stamp on a watch was the hall mark of the Goldsmiths' Company, and that the number 18, part thereof, indicated that the watch was made of 18-carat gold, is an indictable offence, and is not the less so because accompanied by a representation that the watch was a gold one, and some gold was proved to have been contained in its composition. Reg. v. Suter, 17 L. T. 177; 16 W. R. 141; 10 Cox, C. C. 577.

A man went into a pawnbroker's shop in the middle of the day, and laid down eleven thimbles on the counter, saying, "I want 5*s.* on them;" the pawnbroker's assistant asked the man if they were silver, and he said they were. The assistant tested them, and found they were not silver, and in consequence did not give the man any money, but sent for a policeman, and gave him into his custody —Held, that the conduct of the man who presented the thimbles amounted to an attempt to commit the statutable misdemeanour of obtaining money under false pretences, and by consequence that if the money had been obtained that statutable offence would have been complete Reg v Ball Car & M 249

A falsely pretended to a pawnbroker that a chain was silver The pawnbroker lent A 10*s* on the chain, without placing any reliance upon the statement of A, but relying on his own examination and test The chain was made of a composition worth about one farthing an ounce — Held, that he was properly convicted of attempting to obtain money by false pretences, the statement being a false pretence within the statute Reg v Roebuck Dears & B 24 25 L J, M C 101, 2 Jur (N S) 597 4 W R 514, 7 Cox, C C 126

A wilful misrepresentation of a definite fact with intent to defraud, cognisable by the senses —where the seller by manœuvring contrives to pass off tasters of cheese as if extracted from the cheese offered for sale, whereas it is not—is a false pretence Reg v Goss Bell C C 208 29 L J, M C 86, 6 Jur (N S) 178, 1 L T 337 8 W R 193 8 Cox, C C 262

Knowingly exposing to sale and selling wrought gold under the sterling alloy, as and for gold of the true standard weight, which is indictable in a goldsmith, is a private imposition only in a common person Rex v Bower, Cowp 323

B was in the habit of selling baking powders wrapped in printed wrappers, entitled "B s Baking Powders' and having his printed signature at the end The prisoner got printed a quantity of wrappers in imitation of those of B, only leaving out B's signature, and sold spurious powders wrapped up in these labels as B's powders —Held, that the prisoner was not guilty of forging the wrappers, or uttering forged wrappers, though he might be indictable for the fraud, on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences Reg v Smith, Dears & B 566, 27 L J, M C 225 4 Jur (N S) 1003, 6 W R 495, 8 Cox, C C 32

An indictment charged that the defendant knowingly and falsely pretended that a horse was sound and that he himself was a farmer at O, negativing both pretences in the usual way The defendant was convicted, but a case reserved in which, after stating that the various allegations in the indictment were proved, and that the defence was that this was a case of giving a false warranty, and therefore not indictable, the question was put, whether the conviction could be sustained The court having directed an amendment, the facts proved were set out more specifically, but it was not stated as a fact that the defendant knew the horse to be unsound, though evidence was stated from which that inference might be drawn nor was it stated what direction had been given to the jury —Held, that, as the case was framed, the conviction must be quashed as the court, not knowing what direction had been given, could not answer the question put in the affirmative, and as it was consistent with the case that the jury might have been told that even if the defendant did not know that the horse was unsound, he might be convicted upon the other false pretence alone Reg v Keighley, Dears. & B. 145, 7 Cox, C. C. 217.

An indictment for false pretences will be sustained by evidence that the prisoner had sold to the prosecutor blacking which he had asserted to be "Everett's Premier and which bore a label nearly but not precisely imitating Everett s labels, the said blacking not being Everett s Premier, but a spurious manufacture of his own Reg v Dundas, 6 Cox, C C 380

Exaggerated Praise not Sufficient to Constitute]—A simple misrepresentation of the quality of goods is not a false pretence provided the goods are in specie that which they are represented to be Reg v Bryan, Dears & B 265, 26 L J, M C 84 3 Jur (N S) 620, 5 W R 598, 7 Cox, C C 312

For the purpose of procuring advances of money by way of pledge a party produced spoons to the prosecutors who were pawnbrokers, and falsely and fraudulently stated that "they were of the best quality that they were equal to Elkington s A that the foundation was of the best material, and that they had as much silver on them as Elkington s A —Held, that the representations being merely as to the quality of the articles were not false pretences within the statute, as the articles delivered to the pawnbrokers were the same in specie as he had professed them to be, though of interior quality to what he had stated Ib

On the trial of an indictment for false pretences, it was proved that the prisoner offered a chain in pledge to a pawnbroker and required money to be advanced upon it representing that it was gold On being tested it turned out to be a compound of brass, silver and gold but the gold was very minute in quantity —Held, not a false pretence Reg v Lee 8 Cox, C C 233

L & W induced the prosecutor to buy certain plated goods at an auction, at which L was acting as auctioneer, for 7*l*, on the representation that they were the best silver plate, lined with gold, and worth 20*l* the foundation of the goods was Britannia metal, instead of nickel, as in the best goods, covered with a transparent film of silver, and they were worth only about 30*s* —Held that there was no false pretence, and that an agreement between two persons to dispose of these goods in the way they were disposed of was not a conspiracy Reg v Levine, 10 Cox, C C 371

5 By Promises of Marriage

When it Lies]—An indictment will lie for fraudulently obtaining goods under a pretence of a treaty of marriage Anon, Lofft 146

An indictment for obtaining money from H under the false pretence that the prisoner intended to marry H, and wanted the money to pay for a wedding suit he had purchased is not sufficient to sustain a conviction Reg v Johnston, 2 M. C C 254.

A, obtaining money from the prosecutrix by falsely pretending that he was unmarried, that he would furnish a house with the money, and would then marry her, is properly convicted of obtaining money under false pretences Reg v Jennison, L & C 157, 31 L. J, M C 146, 8 Jur (N S) 442, 6 L T 256, 10 W R 488, 9 Cox, C C 158

Evidence]—The prisoner paid his addresses to the prosecutrix, and obtained a promise of marriage from her, which promise she afterwards refused to ratify. He then threatened her with an action, and by this means obtained money from him During the whole of the transactions the prisoner had a wife On an indictment against him for obtaining money under false pretences the pretences laid were first that he was unmarried, and secondly, that he was entitled to bring and maintain his action against her for a breach of promise of marriage —Held per Lord Denman, C J, and Maule J that the fact of the prisoner paying his addresses was sufficient evidence for the jury on which they might find the first pretence that he was a single man and in a condition to marry and per Maule, J that there was sufficient evidence on which to find the falseness of the other pretence that he was entitled to maintain his action for breach of promise of marriage and that such latter false pretence was a sufficient false pretence within the statute Reg v Copeland, Car & M 516

6 Representations as to Business

Question for Jury as to Prisoner's Meaning]—C was convicted of obtaining potatoes by falsely pretending that he was then in a large way of business that he was in a position to do a good trade in potatoes and that he was able to pay for large quantities of potatoes as and when the same might be delivered to him The evidence that C had so pretended was the following letter written by him to the prosecutor — Sir,—Please send me one truck of regents and one truck of rocks as samples, at your prices named in your letter let them be good quality then I am sure a good trade will be done for both of us I will remit you cash on arrival of goods and invoice Yours &c—P S —I may say if you use me well I shall be a good customer An answer will oblige saying when they are put on —Held that the words of the letter were fairly and reasonably capable of a construction supporting the pretences charged and that it was a question for the jury whether the writer intended the prosecutor to put that construction upon them Reg v Cooper 46 L J M C 219, 2 Q B D 510, 36 L T 671, 25 W R 696, 15 Cox, C C 617

Deposit by Prosecutor as Security]—On an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences it appeared that the prisoner on engaging an assistant from whom he received a deposit represented to him that he was doing a good business, and that he had sold a good business for a certain large sum, whereas the business was worthless, and he had been bankrupt —Held, that the indictment could not be sustained upon either of the representations Reg v Williamson, 21 L T 444, 11 Cox, C C 328

A prisoner obtained a sum of money from the prosecutor by pretending that he carried on an extensive business as an auctioneer and a house agent and that he wanted a clerk and that the money was to be deposited as security for the prosecutor's honesty as such clerk The jury found that the prisoner was not carrying on any such business at all —Held that this was an indictable false pretence Reg v Crab, 18 L T 370, 16 W R 732, 11 Cox, C C 85

Prisoner's Knowledge of Conduct of Business]—On an indictment for obtaining goods in a market by falsely pretending that a room had been taken at which to pay the market people for their goods, the jury found that the well-known practice was for buyers to engage a room at a public-house and that the prisoner conveyed to the minds of the market people that she had engaged such a room and that they parted with their goods on such belief —Held, there being no evidence that the prisoner knew of such a practice and the case being consistent with a promise only on her part to engage such a room and pay for the goods there a conviction could not be sustained Reg v Burrow, 20 L T 499, 17 W R 682, 11 Cox C C 258

7 Arising out of Contracts

Effect of False Pretence on]—A false pretence knowingly made to obtain money is indictable, though the money is obtained by means of a contract which the prosecutor was induced to make by the false pretence of the prisoner Reg v Abbott 1 Den C C 273 2 Car & K 630, 2 Cox C C 430 5 P Reg v Burk 1 Den C C 276, Reg v Kenrick D & M 208 5 Q B 49, 12 L J, M C 135

Delivering less than Contracted for]—Delivering less beer in a cask than contracted for as the due quantity is not an indictable offence Rex v Wheatley 1 W Bl 273 2 Burr 1129

Nor is delivering less oats than the quantity contracted for as the due quantity Rex v Dunnage, 2 Burr 1130

Previous Sale of Goods Contracted to be Sold]—If one professes to sell an interest in property, and receives the purchase money the vendee taking the usual covenant for title, and it turns out that the vendor has in fact previously sold his interest in the property to a third person, this is not sufficient to support an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences Rex v Codrington, 1 Car & P 661

Effect of Ratification of]—The prisoner pretended to sell goods to A which he pretended to have bought for him from B, the goods having been sent by B to A, the prisoner got the money from A —Held not indictable for obtaining goods from B by false pretences Reg v Martin 1 F & F 501

The prisoner by false and fraudulent representations made to the prosecutor, as to his business customers and profits, induced the prosecutor to enter into a partnership with him, and to advance 500*l* as part of the capital of the concern and the prosecutor after such advance, recognized and acted upon such partnership — Held that this was not an obtaining of money by false pretences Reg v Watson, Dears & B 348 27 L J, M C 18 4 Jur (N S) 14, 6 W R 67, 7 Cox, C C 364

Partnership Accounts]—The prisoner entered into partnership with the prosecutors, and it was subsequently agreed that he should travel about the country to obtain orders, and have a commission upon all orders he might receive, such commission to be paid to him as soon as he received the orders, and to be payable out of the capital funds of the partnership before dividing any profits He falsely represented to his partners that he had obtained a certain order, and in consequence was paid his commission thereon —Held that this was a mere matter of account between the partners, and that the prisoner was, therefore, not guilty of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Evans, L. & C. 252; 32 L. J., M. C. 38; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 184; 7 L. T. 507; 11 W. R. 125; 9 Cox, C. C. 238.

8. By Means of False Orders.

Of Innocent Agent.]—B. was one of many persons employed whose wages were paid weekly at a pay-table. On one occasion when B.'s wages were due, the prisoner said to a little boy, "I will give you a penny if you will go and get B.'s money." The boy innocently went to the pay-table, and said to the treasurer, "I am come for B.'s money;" and B.'s wages were given to him. He took the money to the prisoner, who was waiting outside, and who gave the boy the promised penny:—Held, that the prisoner could not be convicted on the charge of obtaining the money from the treasurer by falsely pretending to the treasurer that he, the prisoner, had authority from B. to receive his money, or of obtaining it from the treasurer and the boy, by falsely pretending to the boy that he had such authority, or of obtaining it from the boy by the like false pretence to the boy; but that he might have been convicted on a count charging him with obtaining it from the treasurer, by falsely pretending to the treasurer that the boy had the authority from B. to receive the amount. Reg v. Butcher, Bell, C. C. 6; 28 L. J., M. C. 14; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1155; 7 W. R. 38; 8 Cox, C. C. 77.

Order given by Person having Authority to Order for Another.]—A surveyor of highways, having authority to order gravel for the roads, ordering gravel as usual, and applying it for his own use, is not liable to a charge of obtaining it by false pretences; nor for larceny, unless it appears that he did not mean to pay for it. Reg. v. Richardson, 1 F. & F. 488.

Order given without Authority.]—An indictment that B. obtained twenty yards of carpet by falsely pretending that a certain person who lived in a large house down the street, and had had a daughter married some time back, had been at him about some carpet, and had asked him to procure a piece of carpet, whereas no such person had been at him about any carpet, nor had any such person asked him to procure any piece of carpet. The evidence was that B. obtained twenty yards of carpet by stating to the prosecutor, who was a shopkeeper in a village, that he wanted some carpeting for a family living in a large house in the village who had had a daughter lately married; that B. afterwards sold the carpeting so obtained to two different persons, and a lady was called, who lived in the village, whose daughter was married about a year previously, and who stated that she had not sent B. to the prosecutor's shop for the carpet:—Held, that there was a sufficient false pretence alleged and proved, and that it was sufficiently negatived by the evidence. Reg. v. Burnsides, Bell, C. C. 282; 30 L. J., M. C. 42; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1310; 3 L. T. 311; 9 W. R. 37; 8 Cox, C. C. 370.

E. was convicted for stealing a cheque. He was a clerk to a savings bank, and received the cheque from the manager of the bank, upon a false representation that one of the depositors had given notice of withdrawal and for the purpose of handing it over to the depositor. According to the usual course of business, if a depositor could not attend at a proper time to receive the cheque, it was handed to E. as the agent of the depositor:—Held, that the case was one of false pretences, and not larceny. Reg. v. Essex, Dears. & B. 371; 27 L. J., M. C. 20; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 16; 6 W. R. 82; 7 Cox, C. C. 384.

An indictment charged that the prisoner was living separately from her husband, and receiving an income from him for her separate maintenance under a deed of separation, which stipulated that he should not be liable for her debts; and that she falsely pretended to U., a servant of W., that she was living under the protection of her husband, and was authorised to apply to W. for goods on the credit of her husband, and that he was willing to pay for them; and that she wanted them to furnish a house in his occupation. It was proved that on the 4th of August she called at W.'s shop, and on being served by U., selected certain goods, and, being asked for a deposit, said it was a cash transaction, that her husband would give a cheque as soon as the goods were delivered. The deed was proved, and it was also proved that the annuity covenanted to be paid by the husband was duly paid; that the house which she gave as her address, and which was found shut up after the goods had been sent to it, had been taken by her whilst in company with a man with whom she had been living as his wife from the middle of July till the end of August:—Held, that there was abundant evidence to support a conviction. Reg. v. Davis, 19 L. T. 325; 17 W. R. 127; 11 Cox, C. C. 181.

Effect of Forged Order.]—A person who obtained goods on delivering a forged letter—"Please to let the bearer, W. T., have for J. R. four yards of linen," signed J. R., was not indictable for obtaining goods by false pretence, as this was uttering a forged request for the delivery of goods, which was a felony under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will 4, c. 66, s. 10. Rex v. Evans, 5 Car. & P. 553.

9. By Means of False Accounts.

Larger Sum of Money Obtained.]—A workman, employed by clothiers, was to keep an account of the number of shearmen employed, and the amount of their earnings and wages, which he was to deliver weekly to a clerk, in writing, who paid him the amount; he delivered in a false account, charging for more work, and of other men, than was actually done, by which he obtained a larger sum than was actually due:—Held, an obtaining money under false pretences, within 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, because without the false pretence he would not have obtained the credit, and it was not like a case of money paid generally on account. Rex v. Mitchell, 2 East, P. C. 830.

Where a manufacturer's foreman, who received from his master money to pay the workmen's wages, obtained by means of false accounts more than the men had earned or he had paid to them, this was held to be within the statute, for where the false pretence creates the credit, it is within the statute, and the defendant would not have obtained the excess above what was really due to the workmen were it not for the false account delivered. Ib.

Credit not Money Obtained.]—The prisoner having entered into an agreement to act as captain of a vessel belonging to the prosecutor, upon receiving two-thirds of the net profits of the vessel, delivered in a bill for repairs to a larger amount than he had actually paid, and was allowed the amount in the settlement of accounts:—Held, no indictment would lie, since the prisoner did not by false pretence obtain that amount of money but only credit for the difference between the amount actually paid and the amount which he charged. Reg. v. Crosby, 1 Cox, C. C. 10.

Part of Total Sum only Appropriated.]—A., the servant of B., rendered an account to B. of 14*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.*, as due from A. to his workmen, and B. gave A. a cheque for the amount. All that sum was so due except 7*s.*, which A. kept, when he got the cheque cashed, and paid the workmen the residue. In an indictment it was charged that by this false pretence, A. obtained the cheque from B., with intent to defraud him of the same. It was objected, that the intent was only to defraud B. of a part of the proceeds of the cheque. A. was convicted, and the judges held the conviction right, and that the evidence supported the count. Reg. v. Leonard, 2 Car. & K. 514; 1 Den. C. C. 304; 3 Cox, C. C. 284.

Receipt Required.]—A servant of A. applied to B. for payment of 17*s.* due from B. to A. B. refused to pay it without A.'s receipt. The servant went away and returned with this document, whereupon B. paid the debt:—Held, a question for the jury, whether the servant tendered the receipt as the handwriting of A., which would make him liable on this indictment, or as his own, which would make his act a false pretence. Reg. v. Inder, 1 Den. C. C. 325; 2 Car. & K. 635.

False Pretences or Larceny.]—It was the prisoner's duty, as bailiff to the prosecutor, to pay and receive moneys. Upon an account rendered of such payments and receipts, it appeared he had charged his master with five payments of 1*l.* 8*s.*, instead of 1*l.* 4*s.*, the sums he had actually paid. There was also a similar over-charge of two other amounts:—Held, that the prisoner was wrongly convicted of larceny, the offence, if any, being that of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Green, Dears. C. C. 323; 2 C. L. R. 603; 18 Jur. 158; 2 W. R. 264; 6 Cox, C. C. 296.

It was the duty of the prisoner, who was a servant of the prosecutors, in the absence of their chief clerk, to purchase and pay for, on behalf of his masters, any kitchen stuff brought to their premises for sale. On one occasion he falsely stated to the chief clerk that he had paid 2*s.* 3*d.* for kitchen stuff which he had bought for his masters, and demanded to be paid for it. The clerk on this paid him 2*s.* 3*d.* out of the money which his master had furnished him with to pay for the kitchen stuff. The prisoner applied the money to his own use:—Held, that as the clerk had delivered the money to the prisoner with the intention of parting with it altogether, the prisoner was not liable to an indictment for stealing the money, but that he might have been indicted for obtaining by false pretences. Reg. v. Barnes, T. & M. 387; 2 Den. C. C. 59; 20 L. J., M. C. 34; 14 Jur. 1123; 5 Cox, C. C. 112.

It was the duty of a servant to ascertain daily the amount of dock dues payable by his master, and, having ascertained it, to apply to his master's cashier for the amount, and then to pay it in discharge of the dues. On one occasion, by representing falsely to the cashier that the amount was larger than it really was, as he well knew, he obtained from the cashier the sum he stated it to be, and then paid the real amount due, and appropriated the difference:—Held, that his offence was not larceny, but obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Thompson, L. & C. 233; 32 L. J., M. C. 57; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1162; 7 L. T. 393; 11 W. R. 41; 9 Cox, C. C. 222.

Obtaining Cheque.]—By means of a false wages sheet the prisoner obtained from his master a cheque for the amount stated in the sheet to pay the men's wages. The cheque was informally drawn, and refused payment by the bank. The prisoner returned it to his master, telling him of the cause of its non-payment, and the master tore it up and gave another, which the prisoner cashed, and appropriated the difference between what was really due for wages and what was falsely stated to be due. On an indictment charging him with obtaining 8*s.* 6*d.*, the actual sum appropriated by him, it was objected that the above evidence did not prove the charge, for that he had only obtained a valueless piece of paper:—Held, that the false pretence was a continuing one, and that the second valuable cheque was obtained thereby equally with the first, and that the charge was proved. Reg. v. Greathead, 38 L. T. 691; 14 Cox, C. C. 108.

Substitution by Prisoner of Proper Accounts for other Purposes.]—An indictment alleged that the prisoner obtained a coat by falsely pretending that a bill of parcels of a coat, value 11*s.* 6*d.*, of which 4*s.* 6*d.* had been paid on account, and that 10*s.* only was due, was a bill of parcels of another coat of the value of 22*s.* The evidence was that the prisoner's wife had selected the 14*s.* 6*d.* coat for him, subject to its fitting him, and had paid 4*s.* 6*d.* on account, for which she received a bill of parcels giving credit for that amount. On trying on the coat it was found to be too small, and the prisoner was then measured for one to cost 22*s.* When that was made it was tried on by the prosecutor, who was not privy to the former part of the transaction. The prisoner, when the coat was given to him, handed the bill of parcels for the 14*s.* 6*d.* and 10*s.*, saying, "There is 10*s.* to pay." The bill was receipted, and the prisoner took the 22*s.* coat away with him. The prosecutor stated that believing the bill of parcels to refer to the 22*s.* coat, he parted with that coat on payment of 10*s.*, otherwise he should not have done so:—Held, that there was evidence to support a conviction. Reg. v. Steels, 17 L. T. 666; 16 W. R. 341; 11 Cox, C. C. 5.

10. By Means of Cheques, Bills of Exchange, and Promissory Notes.

At Common Law.]—A person who, under a mere false pretence of purchasing lottery tickets, bargains with the holder of them, and obtains the delivery of them by giving a draft on a banker, with whom he had no cash, for the amount of them, is not indictable for a fraud at common law; for, in order to constitute this offence, the property must be obtained either by conspiracy, or by means of a false token as well as a false pretence, and not, as in this case, by a mere false assertion, or a bare naked lie. Rex v. Lara, 2 Leach, C. C. 652; 2 East, P. C. 819, 827; 6 Term Rep. 565.

Knowledge that Cheque, &c., will not be Paid.]—Obtaining goods by means of a cheque which the party knows will not be paid, is an indictable offence. Rex v. Jackson, 3 Camp. 370 ; 14 R. R. 756.

Prosecutor agreed to sell a mare, warranted sound, to the prisoner for 20*l.* 10*s.* The prisoner came and took the mare away on a Thursday, giving a cheque for the price, which, at his request, the prosecutor agreed not to cash till Saturday. He, however, paid the cheque to his bankers on the same Thursday ; they returned it to him on the Saturday indorsed "no account." The prisoner had no effects at the bank on the Saturday, or on any day for a long time previously. For the prisoner, B. a witness, proved that he had requested prisoner to buy a horse for him (B.), and that prisoner had told B. that he thought he knew of a mare that would suit, and asked B. for a cheque, which B. did not give, as he had not his cheque-book with him ; that the prisoner, on the Monday after the Saturday, told B. he had bought a horse for him for 20*l.* 10*s.*, and that B. sent a cheque to him on the following day for the amount. On the Wednesday the mare was sent back to the prosecutor, with a veterinary certificate that she was not sound, a summons against the prisoner having been taken by the prosecutor and left at the prisoner's house on the previous Monday. The prisoner's counsel contended that the prisoner ought to be acquitted, first, because the prosecutor having broken the contract, the charge of false pretences could not be maintained ; secondly, because there was no false pretence of an existing fact, as the prisoner did not allege he had funds at the bank at the time he drew the cheque ; and thirdly, because, upon B.'s evidence, the prisoner had reasonable cause to believe that the cheque would be paid on the Saturday. The court overruled the objections, and directed the jury that if they believed that the prisoner knew he had no funds at the bank at the time he gave the cheque, and that the prosecutor had parted with the mare upon the belief that the cheque was a good and valid one, they must find the prisoner guilty. The jury thereupon found the prisoner guilty.—Held, that the direction was wrong, and that the case ought not to have been left to them, and that the conviction ought to be quashed. Reg. v. Walne, 23 L. T. 748 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 647.

A man who makes and gives a cheque for the amount of goods purchased in a ready money transaction, saying that he wishes to pay ready money, makes a representation that the cheque is a good and valid order for the amount inserted in it ; and if such person has only a colourable account at the bank on which the cheque is drawn, without available assets to meet it, and has no authority to overdraw, and knows that the cheque will be dishonoured on presentation, and intends to defraud, he may be convicted of obtaining such goods by such false pretences. Reg. v. Hazelton, 44 L. J., M. C. 11 ; L. R. 2 C. C. 134 ; 31 L. T. 451 ; 23 W. R. 139 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 1.

A. was charged with falsely pretending that a post-dated cheque, drawn by himself, was a good and genuine order for 25*l.*, and of the value of 25*l.*, by means of which he obtained a watch and a chain. It was found by the jury that, before the completion of the sale, and the delivery of the watch by the prosecutor to the prisoner, the prisoner represented to the prosecutor that he had an account with the bankers on whom the cheque was drawn, and that he had a right to draw the cheque, though he postponed the date for his own convenience, all which was false ; and that he represented that the cheque would be paid on or after the day of the date, but that he had no reasonable ground to believe that it would be paid, or that he could provide funds to pay it. The prisoner was convicted, and the judges held the conviction right. Rex v. Parker, 7 Car. & P. 825 ; 2 M. C. C. 1.

Obtaining credit in account from the party's own banker, by drawing a bill of exchange on a person on whom the party has no right to draw, and which has no chance of being paid, is not a false pretence within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, though the banker pays money for him in consequence to an extent that he would not otherwise have done. Rex v. Warell, 1 M. C. C. 224.

—— Payment by Bank Cashier.]—To constitute larceny, there must be a taking of the property against the will of the owner. But the cashier of a bank has authority, arising from the nature of his employment, to pay the money of the bank to persons presenting genuine orders, and to judge of their genuineness. Therefore, a cashier, who, deceived by a forged order, purporting to be drawn by a customer, pays money to the payee, who presents it knowing it to be forged, thereby parts with the property in the money of the bank to the payee so as to bind his employer, and the payee is therefore not guilty of larceny, but of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Prince, 38 L. J., M. C. 8 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 150 ; 19 L. T. 264 ; 17 W. R. 179 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 193.

Cheque Signed in Fictitious Name.]—R. M., in payment for a pony and cart, purchased by him from the prosecutor, drew a cheque in the name of W. M., in the presence of the prosecutor, upon a bank at which he, the prisoner, had no account, and gave it to the prosecutor as his own cheque, drawn in his own name. At the time he drew the cheque the prisoner knew that it would be, as in fact it was, dishonoured. The prosecutor received the cheque in the belief that it was drawn in the prisoner's own name :—Semble, that R. M. was guilty of obtaining the pony and cart by false pretences. Reg. v. Marton, 49 L. J., M. C. 11 ; 5 Q. B. D. 34 ; 41 L. T. 531 ; 28 W. R. 232 ; 14 Cox, C. C. 375 ; 44 J. P. 74.

Bill not Due till After Time Stated.]—Where a prisoner obtained goods on the faith of a false statement that a bill which he gave for the price of them would be paid on the following day, he may be convicted of obtaining goods under false pretences, though such bill on the face of it was not due till after that day. Reg. v. Hughes, 1 F. & F. 355.

Indictment—Form and Contents of.]—If an indictment for attempting to obtain money under false pretences, charges it to have been attempted by means of a paper writing purporting to be an order for money, and the instrument cannot be considered as stated in the indictment to be such an order, it is bad. Rex v. Cartwright, R. & R. 106.

But an indictment that A. unlawfully did falsely pretend that a printed paper was a good and valid promissory note, is sufficient, without setting out the paper. Reg. v. Coulson, T. & M.

332; 1 Den. C. C. 592; 19 L. J., M. C. 182; 14 Jur. 557; 4 Cox, C. C. 227.

An indictment stated that the defendant falsely pretended to W. that he was a captain in the East India Company's service, and that a promissory note which he "then and there produced and delivered to W., purporting to be made for the payment of 21*l.*, not saying by whom it purported to be drawn, nor otherwise describing it, was a good and valuable security for 21*l.*; by which false pretences he obtained," &c.: whereas the defendant was not a captain in the company's service: and whereas the promissory note which he then and there produced, and delivered to W., "was not a good and valuable security for 21*l.*, or for any other sum":—Held, that the indictment did not sufficiently describe the note, or show how it was wanting in value; and that a conviction could not be supported on the representation as to the defendant's character, because the false pretences were so connected on the record, that one could not be separated from the other. Reg. v. Wickham, 2 P. & D. 333; 10 A. & E. 34; 8 L. J., M. C. 87.

11. Inducing Persons by Fraud to Execute Valuable Securities.

Obtaining Valuable Security.]—Inducing a person by a false pretence to accept a bill of exchange, was not an obtaining a valuable security by a false pretence within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53. Reg. v. Danger, Dears. & B. 307; 26 L. J., M. C. 185; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1011; 5 W. R. 738; 7 Cox, C. C. 303. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 90.

If a person, by false pretences, obtains a cheque on a banker on unstamped paper, payable to D. F. J., and not payable to bearer, it is not an obtaining a valuable security by false pretences. Rex v. Yates, Car. C. L. 333; 1 M. C. C. 170.

But obtaining, as a loan, from the drawer of a bill accepted by the prisoner and negotiated by the drawer, part of the amount, for the purpose of paying the bill, under the false pretence that the prisoner was prepared with the residue of the amount, is an offence within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, the prisoner being shown not to be so prepared, and not intending so to apply the money. Rex v. Crossley, 2 M. & Rob. 17; 2 Lewin, C. C. 164.

Security of no Value till Delivered to Prisoner.]—The offence of fraudulently causing a person to "make a valuable security" within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 90, is complete, although the promissory note in question might not be of value until it had been delivered into the hands of the prisoner. Reg. v. Gordon, 58 L. J., M. C. 117; 23 Q. B. D. 354; 60 L. T. 872; 16 Cox, C. C. 622; 53 J. P. 807—C. C. R.

False Pretences or Larceny.]—The prisoner was convicted upon an indictment, charging him with stealing a cheque. It was proved that he was clerk to a savings bank, and received the cheque from a manager of the bank, upon a false representation that one of the depositors had given notice of withdrawal, and for the purpose of handing it over to the depositor. It was found that, according to the usual course of business, if a depositor could not attend at a proper time to receive the cheque, it was handed to the prisoner, as the agent of the depositor:—Held, that the case was one of false pretence, and not larceny, and that the conviction was wrong. Reg. v. Essex, Dears. & B. 371; 27 L. J., M. C. 20; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 16; 6 W. R. 82; 7 Cox, C. C. 384.

12. By Passing off Flash or Worthless Bank Notes.

Counterfeit Notes.]—The fact of uttering a counterfeit note as a genuine one is tantamount to a representation that it was so: and it is a false pretence, notwithstanding the note upon the face of it would have been good for nothing in point of law, even if true. Rex v. Freeth, R. & R. 127. See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12.

Passing off a flash note as a Bank of England note on a person unable to read, and obtaining from him in exchange for it five pigs of the value of 3*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, and 1*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* change, is a false pretence. Reg. v. Coulson, T. & M. 332; 1 Den. C. C. 592; 19 L. J., M. C. 182; 14 Jur. 557; 4 Cox, C. C. 227.

The defendant fraudulently offered a 1*l.* Irish bank note as a note for 5*l.*, and obtained change as for a 5*l.* note. The person from whom the change was obtained could read, and the note itself upon the face of it clearly afforded the means of detecting the fraud:—Held, that this was obtaining money by means of false pretences. Reg. v. Jessop, Dears. & B. 442; 27 L. J., M. C. 70; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1153; 6 W. R. 245; 7 Cox, C. C. 399.

Halves of Bank Notes.]—A person who obtains goods by sending by post half notes in payment, but sends the corresponding halves to another person in payment for other goods, is properly convicted of obtaining the first mentioned goods under false pretences. Reg. v. Murphy, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 308; 13 Cox, C. C. 298.

Proof that Notes are Valueless.]—The prisoner, knowing that some old country banknotes had been taken by his uncle forty years before, and that the bank had stopped payment, gave them to a man to pass, telling him to say, if asked about them, that he had taken them from a man he did not know. The man passed the notes and the prisoner obtained value for them. It appeared that the bankers were made bankrupt:—Held, that he was guilty of obtaining money by false pretences, and that the bankruptcy proceedings need not be proved. Reg. v. Douey, 37 L. J., M. C. 52; 17 L. T. 481; 16 W. R. 344; 11 Cox, C. C. 115.

On an indictment for obtaining money by falsely pretending that the promissory note of a bank that has stopped payment by reason of bankruptcy, was a good and valuable security for the payment of the amount mentioned in it, and was of that value, it is not necessary to prove the proceedings in bankruptcy. It is sufficient to prove the time when the bank stopped payment, and that cash could not be obtained for the note on its being presented for payment at the place where it was made payable. Reg. v. Smith, 6 Cox, C. C. 314.

On an indictment for delivering in payment for a horse certain promissory notes, as for good and available promissory notes, which the prisoner knew to be not good, nor of any value; the notes purported to be the notes of a country bank which was supposed to have failed :—Held, that at all events it was necessary to prove that the notes were bad and of no value. Rex v. Flint, R. & R. 460.

Where the prisoner in 1857 gave in exchange for the sum of 5*l.* a promissory note for the payment of 5*l.* on a bank and stated that the note was a good one though the bank had in 1851 to the prisoner's knowledge stopped payment :—Held, that he could not be convicted of obtaining the 5*l.* by false pretences. Reg. v. Williams, 7 Cox, C. C. 351.

Evidence that Notes may be of some Value.]—Indictment for false pretences, in passing a note of a bank that had stopped payment as a good note. The prisoner knew that the bank had stopped payment; but it appeared that two only of the partners of the bank had become bankrupt, and that the third had not :—Held, that the prisoner must be acquitted. Rex v. Spencer, 3 Car. & P. 420.

If a person pass a note of a country bank for 5*l.* payable on demand as a good note, and as of the value of 5*l.*, knowing that the bank is insolvent, and has stopped payment, and cannot pay the note in full, he may be indicted for obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Evans, Bell, C. C. 187; 29 L. J., M. C. 20; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1361; 1 L. T. 108; 8 W. R. 48; 8 Cox, C. C. 257.

But where the evidence shows that the bank has paid a dividend, the direction to the jury that there is evidence that the note is not of any value, will be wrong. Ib.

Indictment—Form and Contents of.] — An indictment charging that the defendant unlawfully did pretend to S. that a paper writing which he produced to S. was a good 5*l.* Ledbury Bank note, by means whereof he unlawfully obtained money from S., with intent to cheat and defraud him of the same; whereas, in truth and in fact, the paper writing was not a good 5*l.* note of the Ledbury Bank,—is bad, as it does not charge that the defendant knew that it was not a good 5*l.* note of the Ledbury Bank, and is not aided by the allegation of the intent to defraud. Reg. v. Philpotts, 1 Car. & K. 112.

The prisoner was convicted of attempting to obtain a sewing machine by false pretences. The indictment alleged that she did falsely pretend that a paper partly in print and partly in writing, produced by her to the prosecutor, and purporting to be a banknote for the payment to the bearer of 5*l.*, was then a good, genuine and available order for the payment of 5*l.*, and was then of the value of 5*l.*; by means of which false pretence the prisoner did unlawfully attempt to obtain a sewing machine. The evidence was that the prisoner bargained for the purchase of the sewing machine for 35*s.*, and said that a friend had told her to get one, and had sent her the money to pay for it, and at the same time gave a worthless banknote for 5*l.* payable to the bearer, of the Devonshire Bank, which had stopped payment many years before. The prisoner knew at the time that the bank had stopped payment, and that the note was of no value :—Held, that the indictment, though inartificially framed, sufficiently alleged that the prisoner falsely represented the note to be a good and genuine note of an existing bank, and of the value of 5*l.*, and that the evidence supported the conviction. Reg. v. Jarman, 38 L. T. 460; 14 Cox, C. C. 48.

13. CHEATS.

Obtaining Money by Trick—Purse Trick.]—In support of an indictment for the larceny of three shillings and sixpence, it was proved that the prisoner had obtained possession of a shilling and then of a half-crown, from the prosecutor by means of what is known as the purse trick. That is to say, he had induced the prosecutor to give him a shilling for a purse, into which he had dropped three coins, by first showing the prosecutor three shillings, and then making it appear as if he had dropped them into the purse. In the same way he had induced the prosecutor to give him a half-crown for a purse into which he had made it appear that he had dropped two half-crowns. Having been convicted of obtaining the money by means of trick, upon a case reserved for the opinion of this court :—Held, that the prosecutor having parted with the property in his shilling and half-crown in exchange for the purses and their contents, the prisoner had been guilty, if at all, of obtaining the coins by means of a false pretence, and could not be convicted of larceny. Reg. v. Solomons, 62 L. T. 672; 17 Cox, C. C. 93—C. C. R.

Pretending to be a Merchant.]—It is an indictable offence if two effect a cheat by means of one pretending to be a merchant and the other a broker, and as such bartering pretended wines for hats. Rex v. Macarty, 2 East, P. C. 823.

Picture with spurious Name attached.]—If a man in the course of his trade, openly carried on, puts a false mark or token upon a spurious article, so as to pass it off as a genuine one, and the article is sold and money obtained by means of the false mark or token, he is guilty of a cheat at common law. Reg. v. Closs, Dears. & B. 460; 27 L. J., M. C. 54; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1309; 6 W. R. 109; 7 Cox, C. C. 494.

If a person knowingly sells as an original, a copy of a picture, with the painter's name imitated upon it, and by means of the imitated name, knowingly and fraudulently induces another to buy and pay for the picture as a genuine work of the artist, he may be indicted for a cheat at common law, by means of a false token; but he cannot be indicted for forging, or uttering the forged name of the painter; for the crime of forgery must be committed with some document in writing, and does not extend to the fraudulent imitation of a name put on a picture merely as a mark to identify it as the painter's work. Ib.

Wagering by Tossing with Coins.]—The prisoners were indicted and convicted under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, of obtaining by fraud and unlawful device and ill-practice in playing at a certain game or sport, to wit, in and by wagering on the event of a certain game or sport, a watch and other things from the prosecutor. The evidence was that the prosecutor was induced to go to a public-house and drink and toss for wagers with one of the prisoners, and the event was that the prosecutor lost, and the prisoners took away the property stated :—Held, that this was a sport, pastime or exercise, if not a game, within the meaning of s. 17 of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109. Reg. v. O'Connor, 45 L. T. 512; 15 Cox, C. C. 3; 46 J. P. 214.

Indictment.]—An indictment for obtaining money by selling an article which was marked with a spurious mark or token must contain an averment that it was by means of such false mark or token that he was enabled to pass off the article and obtain the money. Reg. v. Closs, Dears. & B. 460; 27 L. J., M. C. 54; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1309; 6 W. R. 109; 7 Cox, C. C. 494.

In an indictment under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, for winning money at cards by fraud, unlawful device and ill-practice, it is not necessary to state to whom the money belonged. Reg. v. Moss, Dears. & B. 104; 26 L. J., M. C. 9; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1196; 5 W. R. 49; 7 Cox, C. C. 200.

14. No Acquittal if Offence be Larceny.

False Pretences must be Proved.]—To prevent a person indicted for false pretences from being acquitted on the ground that the offence is that of felony, the false pretences laid must be proved, for under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88, he is to be found guilty of the misdemeanour. Reg. v. Bulmer, L. & C. 476; 33 L. J., M. C. 171; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 684; 10 L. T. 580; 12 W. R. 887; 9 Cox, C. C. 492.

15. Indictment.

a. Parties Indictable.

Where the offence is conveyed by words spoken by one defendant in the presence of others who are acting in concert together, they may be all indicted jointly. Young v. Rex, 2 East, P. C. 82, 833; 1 Leach, C. C. 505; 3 Term Rep. 98; 1 R. R. 660.

b. Form and Contents of.

To whom Pretence made—Advertisement.]—In an indictment for false pretences by an advertisement in a newspaper, an allegation that "S. did falsely pretend to the subjects of her Majesty the Queen . . . . by means of which said false pretence the said S. did then unlawfully obtain from one C. a certain valuable security," &c., is sufficient because it becomes an allegation of a false pretence to a particular person by virtue of the words which immediately follow. Reg. v. Sowerby (infra), distinguished. Reg. v. Silverlock, 63 L. J., M. C. 233; [1894] 2 Q. B. 766; 10 R. 431; 72 L. T. 298; 43 W. R. 14; 18 Cox, C. C. 104; 58 J. P. 788—C. C. R.

—— From whom Money obtained.]—In an indictment for obtaining or attempting to obtain money by false pretences it is necessary to state to whom the false pretence was made, and from whom the money was obtained or attempted to be obtained. Reg. v. Sowerby, 63 L. J., M. C. 136; [1894] 2 Q. B. 173; 10 R. 233; 71 L. T. 300; 42 W. R. 608; 17 Cox, C. C. 767; 58 J. P. 577—C. C. R.

False Pretence on one Person, Deceit on Another.]—An indictment for a fraud at common law, charging the false pretence to have been made to one person, and the deceit to have been practised on a different person, is bad. Rex v. Lara, 2 Leach, C. C. 647; 2 East, P. C. 819, 824; 6 Term Rep. 565.

"Feloniously" Pretend.] — An indictment on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences, is bad, if it states that the prisoner "unlawfully, knowingly, and designedly, did feloniously pretend," &c. Rex v. Walker, 6 Car. & P. 657. See Rex v. Howarth, 3 Stark. 26.

Prisoner's Knowledge of Fraud not Alleged.]—An indictment for obtaining money under false pretences must allege, that the defendant knew the falsehood; "falsely and fraudulently" is not enough. Reg. v. Henderson, 2 M. C. C. 192; Car. & M. 328.

In an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, it was alleged that the defendant "did unlawfully falsely pretend," &c.:—Held, that the omission of the word "knowingly" was no ground for arresting the judgment. Reg. v. Bowen, 4 New Sess. Cas. 62; 13 Q. B. 790; 19 L. J., M. C. 65; 13 Jur. 1045; 3 Cox, C. C. 483.

False Pretence must be Stated.]—An indictment charging the defendant with obtaining money by false pretences, is insufficient, if it does not show what the false pretences were. Rex v. Mason, 1 Leach, C. C. 487; 2 East, P. C. 837; 2 Term Rep. 581; 1 R. R. 545. And see 15 R. R. 282, n.

Sufficiency of False Pretence.]—A first count charged that the defendant unlawfully did falsely pretend to J. L. that he, the defendant, was sent by W. P. for an order to go to J. B. for a pair of shoes, by means of which false pretence he did obtain from J. B. a pair of shoes, of the goods and chattels of J. B., with intent to defraud J. L. of the price of the said shoes, to wit, nine shillings, of the moneys of J. L. The second count charged that he falsely pretended to J. L., that W. P. had said that J. L. was to give him, the defendant, an order to go to J. B. for a pair of shoes by means of which false pretence he did obtain from J. B. in the name of J. L., a pair of shoes of the goods of J. B., with intent to defraud J. L. of the same:—Held, that both of these counts were bad in arrest of judgment, as neither of them charged a sufficient false pretence. Reg. v. Tully, 9 Car. & P. 227. Sed quære, see Reg. v. Brown, 2 Cox, C. C. 348.

An indictment stating that, by the rules of a benefit society, every free member was entitled to 5*l.* on the death of his wife; and that the defendant falsely pretended that a paper which he produced was genuine, and contained a true account of his wife's death and burial, and that he further falsely pretended that he was entitled to 5*l.* from the society, by virtue of their rules, in consequence of the death of his wife, by means of which last-mentioned false pretence he obtained money, is good. Reg. v. Dent, 1 Car. & K. 249.

A false representation as to the value of a business will not sustain an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Williamson, 11 Cox, C. C. 328; 21 L. T. 444.

An indictment stated that A. did unlawfully attempt and endeavour fraudulently, falsely, and unlawfully to obtain from the Agricultural Cattle Insurance Company, a large sum of money, to wit, 22*l.* 10*s.*, with intent to cheat and defraud the company:—Held, that the nature of the attempt was not sufficiently set forth. Reg. v. Marsh, 1 Den. C. C. 505; T. & M. 192; 3 New Sess. Cas. 699; 19 L. J., M. C. 12; 13 Jur. 1010; 3 Cox, C. C. 570.

Truth of Pretences Negatived.]—The indictment must negative by special averment the truth of the pretences, and for want of such an averment the court reversed the judgment. Rex v. Perrott, 2 M. & S. 379 ; 15 R. R. 280.

An indictment for obtaining money under false pretences, averring that the prisoner obtained the money by means of certain alleged pretences, but, instead of negativing the truth of those pretences, negatived the truth of other alleged pretences, is bad, in arrest of judgment Reg. v. Kelleher, 2 L. R. Ir. 11.

Several Inducements.]—A man was convicted on an indictment charging that he did falsely pretend that he then lived at, and was the landlord of, a beerhouse, and thereby obtained goods The evidence was, that he said he was the nephew of a man in the prosecutor's employ, which was true ; and that he lived at the beerhouse ; but he did not say he was the landlord of that house. The prosecutor, in parting with his goods, was influenced both by the fact of his being the nephew of his servant, and the statement that he lived at the beerhouse, and that therefrom he believed him to be the landlord of the beerhouse : —Held, that it was immaterial that the prosecutor was partly influenced by the fact that the prisoner was the nephew of his servant. Reg. v. Lince, 28 L. T. 570 ; 12 Cox, C. C. 451.

Held, also, that the allegation that he lived at and was the landlord of the beerhouse was divisible, and that the part, "that he lived at the beerhouse," being false, he was rightly convicted. Ib.

Upon a charge of obtaining money by false pretences, it is sufficient if the actual substantial pretence, which is the main inducement to part with the money, is alleged in the indictment, and proved ; although it may be shown by evidence that other matters not laid in the indictment in some measure operated upon the mind of the prosecutor as an inducement to him to part with his money. Reg. v. Hewgill, Dears C. C. 315 ; 2 C. L. R. 630 ; 18 Jur. 158 ; 2 W. R. 278.

Averment that Money Obtained by Pretence Alleged.]—An indictment for obtaining money under false pretences, negativing the truth of certain alleged pretences, but not averring that the prisoner obtained the money by means of those pretences, is bad, in arrest of judgment. Reg. v. Kelleher, 2 L. R. Ir. 11.

"With Intent to Defraud."]—If in an indictment for false pretences the words "with intent to defraud" are omitted, the indictment is bad, and cannot be amended under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1. Reg. v. James, 12 Cox. C. C. 127.

Part of Money only Obtained.]—A., the servant of B., rendered an account to B. of 14*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.* as due from A. to his workmen, and B. gave A. a cheque for the amount. All that sum was so due except 7*s.*, which A. kept when he got the cheque cashed, and paid the workmen the residue. In one count of an indictment for false pretences it was charged that, by this false pretence, A. obtained the cheque of B. with intent to defraud him of the same. It was objected that the intent was only to defraud B. of a part of the proceeds of the cheque. A. was convicted ; and the judges held the conviction right, and that the evidence supported the count. Reg. v. Leonard, 2 Car. & K. 514; 1 Den. C. C. 304 ; 3 Cox, C. C. 284.

Averments as to Existing Fact.]—A mere overcharge for work done is not the subject of an indictment for false pretences. Where, therefore, an indictment alleging that the defendant falsely pretended a sum of money, parcel of a certain larger sum, was due and owing to him for work which he had executed for the prosecutors, is not an allegation of a false pretence of an existing fact, as the allegation might be satisfied by evidence of a mere matter of opinion, either as regarded fact or law ; and therefore the indictment is bad. Reg. v. Oates, Dears. C. C. 459 ; 3 C. L. R. 661 ; 24 L. J., M. C. 123 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 429 ; 3 W. R. 402 ; 6 Cox, C. C. 540.

An indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences must state the false pretences with certainty, so that it may clearly appear that there was a false pretence of an existing fact. Reg. v. Henshaw, L. & C 444 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 132 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 595 ; 10 L. T. 428 ; 12 W. R. 751 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 472.

In an indictment alleging that the prisoner pretended to A's representative that she was to give him 20*s.* for B., and that A. was going to allow B. 16*s.* per week, it does not sufficiently appear that there was any false pretence of an existing fact. Ib.

An indictment charged A. with falsely pretending to B, whose mare and gelding had strayed, that A would tell B. where they were, if B. would give him a sovereign down. B gave the sovereign, but A. refused to tell B. where they were :—Held, that the conviction must be quashed. The indictment should have stated that A. pretended to know where they were. Rex v. Douglas, 1 M. C. C. 462.

An indictment charged one Gregory with having obtained 30*l.* from prosecutor, Woodman, on the false pretence that he, the said Gregory, then wanted the loan of 30*l.* to enable him to take a public-house at Melksham ; by means of which said false pretences the said Gregory did then unlawfully and fraudulently obtain the said sum from the said Samuel Woodman with intent to defraud. Whereas the said Gregory was not then going to take a public-house at Melksham . . . . as he the said Gregory well knew. And whereas the said Gregory did not then want a loan of 30*l.* or any money to enable him to take the said house :—Held, not sustainable. Reg. v. Woodman, 14 Cox, C. C. 179.

—— Necessary Inference as to.]—The prisoner was convicted on an indictment charging that by the false pretence to the prosecutors that he "was prepared to pay to them or one of them" 100*l.*, he did then unlawfully and fraudulently induce the prosecutors to "make a certain valuable security," to wit, a promissory note for 100*l.*, with intent thereby to defraud them :—Held, that the indictment was good, as it must be taken by necessary inference to allege a false pretence by the prisoner of an existing fact, viz. that he was prepared to pay the prosecutors 100*l.*, and had the money ready for them on their signing the promissory note. Reg. v. Gordon, 58 L. J., M. C. 117 ; 23 Q. B. D. 354 ; 60 L. T. 872 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 622 ; 53 J. P 807.

Allegation of Ownership of Property.]—An indictment for obtaining goods by means of false pretences, with intent to defraud a specified person, was bad. unless it stated whose property the goods were, and the defect was not aided after verdict, under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21. Reg. v. Martin, 3 N. & P. 472 ; 8 A. & E. 481 ; 1 W. W. & H. 380 ; 7 L. J., M. C. 89 ; 2 Jur. 515. S. P., Reg. v. Norton, 8 Car. & P. 196. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88, which renders an allegation of ownership unnecessary.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 8, it shall be sufficient, in an indictment for obtaining property by false pretences, to allege that the defendant did the act with intent to defraud, without alleging the intent of the defendant to be to defraud any particular person. By s. 25, every objection to an indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face thereof shall be taken before the jury shall be sworn :—Held, that s. 8 did not render it unnecessary, in an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, to state whose property the money was, and that the omission was not a formal defect within s. 25. Sill v. Reg., Dears. C. C. 132 ; 1 El. & Bl. 553 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 41 ; 17 Jur. 207 ; 1 W. R. 147.

An indictment for false pretences, alleging that the prisoner obtained "from A. a cheque for the sum of 8*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* of the moneys of B.," is a sufficient allegation that the cheque was the property of B. Reg. v. Godfrey, Dears. & B. 426 ; 27 L. J., M. C. 151 ; 4 Jur. (N. S.) 146 ; 6 W. R. 251 ; 7 Cox, C. C. 392.

In an indictment framed upon 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, charging that the prisoner, by fraud in playing at cards, did win from A. to B. a sum of money with intent to cheat A., it is not necessary to allege that the money won was the property of A. Reg. v. Moss, Dears. & B. 104 ; 26 L. J., M. C. 9 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1196 ; 5 W. R. 49 ; 7 Cox, C. C. 200.

But an indictment for a conspiracy to obtain goods by false pretences, not stating whose property the goods were which it was the object of the conspiracy to obtain, is bad, in arrest of judgment. Reg. v. Parker, 2 G. & D. 709 ; 3 Q. B 292 ; 11 L. J., M. C. 102.

An indictment, charging (in substance) "that N. W. and others did conspire by false pretences to defraud of large sums of money all such persons as should apply to or negotiate with them for a loan of money," was, on a writ of error, held bad for vagueness and uncertainty. White v. Reg., Ir. R. 10 C. L. 523 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 318.

Effect of Vexatious Indictments Act.]—B. was summoned before justices for aiding and abetting S. to obtain money by false pretences, and both were committed to take their trial, S. on the charge of attempting to obtain money by false pretences, and B. on the charge of aiding and abetting S. to commit that offence. At the sessions an indictment against S. and B. for jointly attempting to obtain money by false pretences was preferred, without the leave required by the Vexatious Indictments Act (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), and found by the grand jury, upon which they were tried jointly, and S. acquitted and B. found guilty. At the trial the objection was taken and overruled, that the indictment having been preferred against B. for an offence upon which he had not been committed for trial, the indictment should be quashed :—Held, that the Vexatious Indictments Act, s. 1, was inapplicable, as that applied only to the offence of "obtaining money or other property by false pretences," and not to the offence of "attempting to obtain money or other property by false pretences." Reg. v. Burton, 32 L. T. 539 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 71.

False Cheque.]—Precedents of counts in an indictment for presenting a false cheque and obtaining money thereon. 11 Cox, C. C. App. xi.

Weight of Goods.]—An indictment alleging that the prisoners falsely pretended to A. that some soot which they then delivered to A. weighed one ton and seventeen cwt., whereas it did not weigh one ton seventeen cwt., but only weighed one ton and thirteen cwt., they well knowing the pretence to be false, by means of which false pretence they obtained from A. 8*s.* with intent to defraud, is good and sufficiently describes an indictable false pretence. Reg. v. Lee, L & C. 418 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 129 ; 10 L. T. 348 ; 12 W. R. 750 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 460.

Aider by Verdict.]—An indictment charging that the defendant, contriving and intending to cheat W., on a day named, did falsely pretend to him that he, the defendant, then was a captain in her Majesty's fifth regiment of dragoons : by means of which false pretence he did obtain of W. a valuable security, to wit, an order for the payment of 500*l.*, of the value of 500*l.*, the property of W., with intent to cheat W. of the same ; whereas, in truth, he was not, at the time of making such false pretence, a captain in her Majesty's regiment ; and the defendant at the time of making such false pretence, well knew that he was not a captain,—is a good indictment after conviction and judgment ; for it was not necessary to allege more precisely that the defendant made the particular pretence with the intent of obtaining the security ; nor how the particular pretence was calculated to effect, or had effected, the obtaining ; and the truth of the pretence was well negatived, it appeared sufficiently that the pretence was, that the defendant was a captain at the time of his making such pretence, which was the fact denied ; and it was unnecessary to aver expressly that the security was unsatisfied, at any rate since 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21, the objection being taken after verdict, and the indictment following the words of the statute creating the offence. Hamilton v. Reg., 9 Q. B. 271 ; 16 L. J., M. C. 9 ; 10 Jur. 1028 ; 2 Cox, C. C. 11.

An indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 95, for "unlawfully receiving goods which have been unlawfully and knowingly, and fraudulently obtained by false pretences with intent to defraud, well knowing that the goods had been obtained by false pretences with intent to defraud as in this count before mentioned," omitted to set out what the particular false pretences were :—Held, that the objection, not having been taken before plea, was cured by the verdict of guilty. Reg. v. Goldsmith, 42 L. J., M. C. 94 ; L. R. 2 C. C. 74 ; 28 L. T. 881 ; 21 W. R. 791 ; 12 Cox, C. C. 479.

Indictments under Particular Circumstances.]—See previous sub-divisions of this head.

16. Evidence.

Who Admissible as a Witness.]—B. was charged in a first count with obtaining money from the trustees of a savings bank by falsely pretending that a document presented to the bank by the wife of D. had been filled up by the authority of D.; and in a second count, he was charged with conspiring with the wife of D. to cheat the bank. The evidence of D. was received, in proof of the first count, to show that he had given no authority to fill up the document or to withdraw the deposit. The jury found him guilty on the first count, and not guilty on the second count:—Held, first, that the evidence of D. was properly received in proof of the first count, his wife not being indicted, although she was alleged to be one of the parties to the conspiracy charged in the second count. Reg. v. Halliday, Bell, C. C. 257; 29 L. J., M. C. 148; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 514; 2 L. T. 254; 8 W. R. 423; 8 Cox, C. C. 298.

Held, secondly, that finding him guilty on the first count was consistent with finding him not guilty on the second count. Ib.

Two were jointly indicted for obtaining money by conspiracy and by false pretences. On being arraigned, one pleaded guilty, and the other not guilty. On the trial of the indictment, the one who had pleaded guilty was admitted as a witness against the other, although it was objected that the evidence of a co-conspirator could not be received under the count for conspiracy. The jury found him not guilty on the count for conspiracy, but guilty on the counts for false pretences:—Held, that the co-conspirator was admissible as a witness, and that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Gallagher, 32 L. T. 406; 13 Cox, C. C. 61.

Alleged False Pretence must be Proved.]—On a trial of an indictment which charged the prisoner with obtaining a horse of the prosecutor by falsely representing himself to be the servant of Hardman, of Stickley, the evidence was that the prisoner at first represented himself as a servant of Hardman, of Stickley Farm, but that afterwards, learning that the prosecutor had mistakenly supposed that he had said he was the servant of Harding, late of Benwell Lodge, he adopted that view, and virtually said that he was the servant of Harding, late of Benwell Lodge, and now of Stickley Farm. It was proved that the prosecutor parted with his horse in the belief that the prisoner was the servant of Harding:—Held, that the conviction could not be supported, as the real pretence that operated on the prosecutor's mind was not alleged in the indictment. Reg. v. Bulmer, L. & C. 476; 33 L. J., M. C. 171; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 684; 10 L. T. 580; 12 W. R. 887; 9 Cox, C. C. 492.

From whom Money obtained.]—A prisoner was indicted for obtaining money from A. by false pretences. A.'s wife, by her husband's direction, delivered the money to the prisoner in the absence of her husband:—Held, that the money was obtained from A. Reg. v. Moseley, L. & C. 92; 31 L. J., M. C. 24; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1108; 5 L. T. 328; 10 W. R. 61; 9 Cox, C. C. 16.

The money of a benefit society, whose rules were not inrolled, was kept in a box, of which E., one of the stewards, and two others had keys. The prisoner, on the false pretence that his wife was dead, which pretence he made to the clerk of the society in the hearing of E., obtained rom the hands of E. out of the box 5*l.*:—Held, that, in an indictment, the pretence might be laid as made to E., and the money, the property of "E. and others," obtained from E. Reg. v. Dent, 1 Car. & K. 249.

By the rules of a friendly society the families of deceased members became entitled to certain moneys on presentation of a certificate to the secretary; a forged certificate having been presented to the secretary and money having been obtained under it, the indictment charged the prisoner with having made the false pretence to the secretary and obtaining the money from him; the evidence showed that the secretary accompanied the defendant to the treasurer from whose hand the defendant received the money:—Held, that, as the secretary was the responsible party and the treasurer was merely a mechanical medium the indictment was good. Reg. v. Rouse, 4 Cox, C. C. 7.

Goods obtained from B. "and Others"—Evidence only as to B.]—A. was charged with an attempt, by false pretences made to "John Baggally and others," fraudulently to obtain goods the property of the same parties. The evidence was, that the representation was made to John Baggally alone:—Held, that there was no variance, as the words "and others" might be rejected as surplusage. Reg. v. Kealey, T. & M. 405; 2 Den. C. C. 69; 20 L. J., M. C. 57; 15 Jur. 230; 5 Cox, C. C. 193.

Continuing Pretence.]—Upon an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, where it appears that statements were made on different occasions, it is a question for the jury whether they are so connected as to form one continuing representation. Reg. v. Welman, Dears. C. C. 188; 22 L. J., M. C. 118; 17 Jur. 421; 1 W. R. 361; 6 Cox, C. C. 153.

Proof of Falsity of Pretence.]—The defendant, who was agent to an insurance company, and whose business it was to collect the annual premiums from persons insured in the company, collected from one Vellam, in 1883, the annual premium then due for renewal of Vellam's policy of life assurance. The defendant did not account to the company for this premium, but appropriated it, and notified to the company that Vellam had failed to renew his policy. The company thereupon treated the policy as lapsed. On the 7th of April, 1884, the defendant called on Vellam for his annual premium as usual. Vellam was unable to pay the amount on that day, and requested the defendant to call later. The defendant came again on the 21st of April, and received from Vellam a sum of money on account of the annual premium. It was for obtaining this amount that the defendant was indicted, the indictment charging that by falsely pretending to Vellam that his policy was then in full force, and that the current year's premium thereon was then due and payable, and that he, the defendant, was then authorised to receive the same, he induced Vellam to pay the amount. On the 21st of April the days of grace within which the premium had to be paid had expired. Vellam was aware of this, but the defendant told him that the payment would be effectual:—Held, by a majority of the court, that there was evidence for the jury in support of the indictment. Reg. v. Powell, 54 L. J., M. C. 26; 51 L. T. 713; 15 Cox, C. C. 568; 49 J. P. 183—C. C. R.

A postman falsely pretended that the sum of 2*s.* was payable on a post letter intrusted to him for delivery, whereas 1*s.* only was payable:—Held, that the offence was complete when he made the pretence, and therefore the absence of any evidence to show positively that he did not pay over the extra 1*s.* to the superior officer was quite immaterial to his guilt or innocence. Reg. v. Byrne, 10 Cox, C. C. 369.

An indictment alleged that the prisoner obtained goods by falsely pretending that a person who lived in a large house down the street, and had had a daughter married some time back, had asked him to procure the goods. The prisoner made the statement alleged to a shopkeeper in a village, and thereby obtained the goods; but the only evidence to disprove the truth of the statement was that of a lady who lived in the village, whose daughter had been married a year previously, who stated that she had not sent the prisoner to the prosecutor's shop for the goods. The jury having found him guilty:—Held, that the conviction might be sustained. Reg. v. Burnsides, Bell, C. C. 282; 30 L. J., M. C. 42; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1310; 3 L. T. 311; 9 W. R. 37; 8 Cox, C. C. 370.

On an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, if it is consistent with the evidence for the prosecution that the object of the false pretence was something else than the obtaining of the money, the charge will not be sustainable. Reg. v. Stone, 1 F. & F. 311.

Whole of alleged Pretence need not be Proved.]—It is not necessary to prove the whole of the pretence charged; proof of part of the pretence, and that the money was obtained by such part is sufficient. Rex v. Hill, R. & R. 190. S. P., Brenning v. Stevens, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 48.

Admissibility—Opinion upon Letter sent to Prosecutor.]—Upon an indictment for false pretences, where the false pretence alleged consists of an untrue statement of the prisoner with reference to his position and occupation, the opinion of the person defrauded as to the position and occupation of the prisoner, formed upon a letter received by him from the prisoner, is admissible as evidence of the belief of the person defrauded in the truth of the false pretence, although it is not necessarily conclusive. Reg. v. King, 66 L. J., Q. B. 87; [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 75 L. T. 392; 18 Cox, C. C. 447; 61 J. P. 329—C. C. R.

Proof that Goods or Money parted with on Faith of Pretence.]—On an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences, the false pretence charged and proved being that the prisoner was daughter of a lady of the same name, residing at a certain place, there being no evidence that the goods were not delivered to the prisoner before her name and address were asked for:—Held, that there was no sufficient evidence to sustain the indictment, it being essential on a prosecution for obtaining goods by false pretences to prove that the goods were delivered on the faith of the false pretence charged. Reg. v. Jones, 50 L. T. 726; 15 Cox, C. C. 475; 48 J. P. 616—C. C. R.

H. offered drapery stock to R. for a sum, stating it was all right, and not encumbered, and R. paid the money and took possession. It was discovered that a third party held a bill of sale for double the sum paid, and he entered and seized the stock. H. being indicted for obtaining money under false pretences:—Held, by a majority of the court, that the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as it did not sufficiently appear that the money was parted with in consequence of the false pretence. Reg. v. Hazlewood, 48 J. P. 151—C. C. R.

The prisoner went to the house of the prosecutrix and requested to be taken in as a lodger. After having lodged with her for a day or two, he stated that he had come from another lodging where he had left some of his clothes, and requested to be furnished with board as well as lodging, for which he promised to pay. The prosecutrix, believing his statement as to his clothes, agreed to supply him, and did supply him, with meat and drink as a boarder. A few days after the prisoner decamped without paying for his accommodation. At the trial of an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences the jury were directed that they must be satisfied that the pretence was false; that it was acted on by the prosecutrix in supplying the articles in question; and that it was made by the prisoner with intent to defraud. The jury having found a verdict of guilty, the question was reserved for the court, whether upon the facts the prisoner was entitled to an acquittal:—Held, that the direction was substantially accurate; that upon the evidence the jury might fairly infer that the prosecutrix had acted on what she believed; and that from the facts stated it was to be inferred that the jury meant she so acted because she believed to be true the statement of the prisoner, which was in fact false. Reg. v. Burton, 54 L. T. 765; 16 Cox, C. C. 62—C. C. R.

Onus of Proof—Consent—Sale of Farm Stock subject to Bill of Sale.]—S. was tenant of a farm, over all the live and dead stock on which, and all other live and dead farm stock which at any time thereafter should be in or about the premises, he had granted a bill of sale. In the ordinary course of business S. would have been at liberty to sell stock on the farm, but two months after the granting of the bill of sale he sold all the farm stock which was upon the farm, without anything being said as to the ownership of the stock, or as to the existence of the bill of sale. No evidence was given by S. at the trial of an indictment against him for false pretences to prove that he had obtained the leave of the bill of sale holder to the selling of the stock in question:—Held, that the onus lay upon S. of proving that he had leave to sell the stock, and not upon the prosecution; that S. had by the act of selling the stock represented himself as being the absolute owner thereof; and that the prosecutor had paid for the stock in the belief that S. had authority to sell the same, and was guilty of the offence of obtaining money by false pretences. Reg. v. Sampson, 52 L. T. 772; 49 J. P. 807—C. C. R.

—— Master of Vessel.]—An indictment charging defendants with obtaining money under the false pretence that they were the master and mate of a vessel then lying in a certain port is proved by showing that no vessel had arrived in that port, or had been heard of answering the defendants' description. Reg. v. Baroisse, 5 Cox, C. C. 559.

Evidence of guilty Knowledge.]—Bonds which had been stolen in 1883 were found in the prisoner's possession in 1890. Under an assumed name, he was dealing with them and selling them to innocent purchasers:—Held, that there was evidence of guilty knowledge, on which a magistrate in this country might commit the prisoner for trial; and that, on the assumption that he knew that the bonds had been stolen, his conduct amounted to a false representation of their genuineness, which could not be cured by the fact that, the bonds passing freely from hand to hand, the innocent purchaser from whom he obtained the money would be able to get it back again. Pinter, In re, 66 L. T. 324 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 497.

Admissibility of other Cases to show Intent.]—C. was indicted in four counts for obtaining money by false pretences from four persons named, the false statements alleged being the same in all these counts ; in a fifth count for inserting, with intent to defraud the Queen's subjects, an advertisement in a newspaper containing the false statements mentioned in the previous counts and obtaining money thereby. It was shown at the trial that he had inserted in a newspaper an advertisement containing statements found to be false, offering permanent employment in the preparation of carte-de-visite papers, and adding, "Trial paper and instructions, 1*s*.," and giving an address. Six envelopes were found in his possession on his being apprehended, each directed to the address given, and containing an answer to the advertisement, and twelve postage-stamps. Two hundred and eighty-one other letters were produced by a post-office clerk. These letters had been addressed to C. under the address given in the advertisement, and had been received at the post-office like the other letters ; but having been stopped by the post office authorities, none of them had ever been in his possession or custody ; nor was any proof adduced that they were written by the persons from whom they purported to come. Each letter had been opened at the post-office before production at the trial, and each contained twelve stamps. The two hundred and eighty-one letters were admitted :—Held, that, under the circumstances, the letters were rightly received in evidence. Reg. v. Cooper, 45 L. J., M. C. 15 ; 1 Q. B. D. 19 ; 33 L. T. 754 ; 24 W. R. 279 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 123.

On the trial of an indictment for endeavouring to obtain an advance from a pawnbroker upon a ring by the false pretence that it was a diamond ring, evidence was admitted that two days before the transaction in question the prisoner had obtained an advance from a pawnbroker upon a chain which he represented to be a gold chain, but which was not so, and had endeavoured to obtain from other pawnbrokers advances upon a ring which he represented to be a diamond ring, but which, in the opinion of the witnesses, was not so. The ring was not produced :—Held, that the evidence was properly admitted. Reg. v. Francis, 43 L. J., M. C., 97 ; L. R. 2 C. C. 128 ; 30 L. T. 503 ; 22 W. R. 663 ; 12 Cox, C. C. 612.

A. was indicted for obtaining a specific sum of money from B. by false pretences. He was employed by his master to take orders, but not to receive moneys, and he was proved to have obtained the specific sum from B. by representing that he was authorised by his master to receive it. Evidence of his having, within a week afterwards, obtained another sum from another person by a similar false pretence, such obtaining not being mentioned in the indictment in any way, is not admissible for the purpose of proving the intent when he committed the acts charged in the indictment. Reg. v. Holt, Bell, C. C. 280 ; 30 L. J., M. C. 11 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1121 ; 3 L. T. 310 ; 9 W. R. 74 ; 8 Cox, C. C. 411.

S. and H. were jointly indicted for false pretences, and for a conspiracy. S. was convicted for false pretences, and both for conspiracy. The evidence was, that they were ostensibly carrying on business as publishers under the name of B. & Co., and that H. was the author of a book published by them. To force the sale of the book, S. got M. to write letters purporting to come from a titled lady ordering a copy of the book, and to address them to country booksellers. These letters were delivered by M. to S., and found their way by post to different country booksellers, and inclosed with them was a printed circular from the firm, offering reduced terms for an order of seven copies or more. At the trial two witnesses produced a number of such letters, some of which had been given to them by the booksellers (other than those named in the indictment) who received them, and some came to them from such booksellers by post. There were no counts in the indictment alleging any intent to defraud these particular booksellers. It was also proved that H., after the frauds charged, had represented himself as B. & Co. :—Held, that the letters were admissible without calling the booksellers who actually received them. Reg. v. Stenson, 25 L. T. 666 ; 12 Cox, C. C. 111.

Representations made after Fraud committed.]—Representations of the accused after the frauds charged, are admissible. Reg. v. Stenson, 25 L. T. 666 ; 12 Cox, C. C. 111.

Evidence is admissible of false pretences distinct from and made prior to those charged. A reiteration by the defendant of the false pretence alleged, made subsequently to obtaining the money, and to persons other than the prosecutor may be proved in evidence. Reg. v. Hamilton, 1 Cox, C. C. 244.

Letter Written by Prisoner's Solicitor—Privilege.]—A letter written by a solicitor for a client making a claim for a lost parcel alleged to contain valuable articles, is not inadmissible on the ground of privilege in a criminal case. But in order to make a client criminally responsible for a letter written by his solicitor it must be shewn that the letter was written in pursuance of the instructions of the client. A letter by a solicitor written "in consequence" of an interview with his client is not equivalent to a letter written by the instructions of the client, and is not admissible in a criminal case against the client. Reg. v. Downer, 43 L. T. 445 ; 14 Cox, C. C. 486 ; 45 J. P. 52.

Letter Lost—Parol Evidence of Contents.]—When a false pretence is contained in a letter which is lost, the prisoner may be convicted, if parol evidence is given of the contents of the letter. Rex v. Chadwick, 6 Car. & P. 181.

Deed put in—Parol Evidence of Representations not Excluded.]—A. was indicted for obtaining 200*l*. by falsely pretending that he had obtained from Lord S. the appointment of emigration agent, which was worth 600*l*. a year, and that for 200*l*. he would give the prosecutor one-third of the agentship. The prosecutor proved that he gave the money on this pretence, which was false ; but that, before he parted with his money, the prisoner prevailed on him to execute a deed of co-partnership with him, in which the consideration was stated to be 200*l*., and in which nothing was said of the agentship, or how it was obtained:—Held, that the putting in of this deed on the part of the prosecution did not exclude the parol evidence of the false pretences; and that, if the deed was a part of the scheme to effect the fraud, the prisoner should be found guilty. Reg. v. Adamson, 1 Car. & K. 192; 2 M. C. C. 286.

Letters—Duty of Prosecuting Counsel to have them Read.]—On an indictment for obtaining money by a false pretence that a parcel contained all letters written by the prosecutrix to the prisoner, and which he had promised, in consideration of the money, to give up, the counsel for the prosecution is not bound to have the letters read, although the counsel for the prisoner may cross-examine as to the contents of any of them, and have any read for that purpose. Reg. v. Colucci, 3 F. & F. 104.
